Lively Arts

Drama, Music, Journalism Aid Creativity

By Michel Janicot

IT WAS TOLSTOI who said, "Art is a human activity having for its purpose the transmission to others of the highest and best feelings to which men have risen."

Students with the urge for self-expression in the fine arts as well as the applied arts and the lively arts, can achieve this release here on campus by participating in the many diversified programs offered by the college.

But by far the most popular form is in the lively arts which have a cultural value at the same time that they stimulate and encourage local artists.

MUSIC ENRICHES

The College Orchestra gives formal concerts and performances throughout the year, offering students the opportunity to practice and perform all styles of musical works, ranging from classical music to "soul" jazz.

The A Cappella Choir, Chamber Choir, Men's Glee Club, Women's Choir, and vocal soloists take part in two annual vocal festivals and present choral concerts throughout the year. In addition, these groups provide off-campus concerts for community organizations.

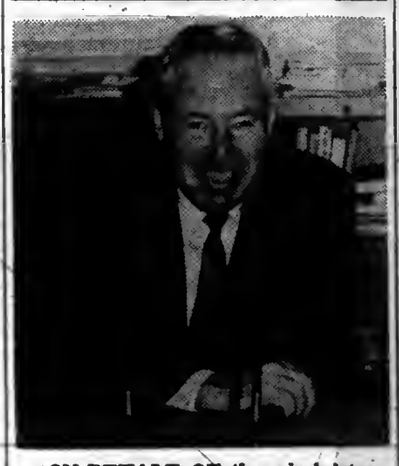
The department of music and the Associated Students also present the fall and spring Concert Series, featuring outstanding professional ensembles, instrumentalists and vocalists. The department also presents the annual Christmas concert.

DRAMA TRAINS, ENTERTAINS

The drama department offers training and experience in all the arts, crafts and techniques of the theater—and entertainment. Courses include theory and technique of acting, play reading, speech for the theater, theatrical make-up and stagecraft.

The drama department has been especially instrumental in the past year in producing numerous plays, such as Antigone by Jean Anouilh, Moliere's Tartuffe, Chekov's Marriage Proposal, and Ionesco's Bald Soprano.

For aspiring disc jockeys, the radio and television broadcasting department operates KCSF, the college radio station.



JOURNALISM INFORMS

The college newspaper, The Guardsman, is a member of the Associated Collegiate Press and has received 32 All-American ratings in 45 semesters of membership. The Guardsman is a weekly newspaper entirely produced by journalism students, who plan and direct all phases of the newspaper publication.

The Guardsman is a vital organ of communication of the Associated Students, serving the best interests of the college to its students. The newspaper also invites students' opinions through the letters to the editor column, the Ram's Horn.

FRESHMAN EDITION

This special edition of The Guardsman is published exclusively for entering Freshmen and is the result of joint efforts of both the outgoing and incoming members of the editorial staff.

ON BEHALF OF the administration and faculty, it is my pleasure to extend a most cordial welcome to the Fall, 1964, entering class. We are pleased that you have decided to continue your education here. May I assure you that we stand ready to assist you in every possible way.

YOU MUST REALIZE, however, that this is a cooperative undertaking to which you must contribute your full share if it is to be successful.

JUST A FEW YEARS AGO, students entering college could be quite certain that the world they were preparing to enter, upon completion of college, would not change much during their lifetime. This is no longer true for we are living in an age of change brought about by technology and automation.

CONSEQUENTLY, young people today must be better prepared than ever before if they are to succeed in this changing world.

THE PERSISTENT EXERCISE of a little extra effort is one of the most powerful forces contributing to success. This persistence will, no doubt, allow you to meet the challenges of this atomic, automated era.

Time And Place, Cost And Deeds Of Campus Life

For anticipators, worry warts and organizers, seven important items of interest come under the heading, What Every New Student Should Know.

For those interested in details, freshman registration for honor students will be held the afternoon of Tuesday, September 8; all others will register on September 10 and 11, and there will be no late registration.

For the chronic worrier and others who may wish to know the worst at the onset, the first midterm ends on October 23 and the second on December 4. Final examinations will be held from January 22 to 29.

Since it is not possible to learn without books and supplies, it might be helpful for all new students to know that the college bookstore, the Ramporium, is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. with the exception of Fridays, when it closes at 3:30 p.m.

Because the campus can be a cold and windy place in the fall, and because the cafeteria is not always the ideal place to study it might help also to know when the college library is open.

The library is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. during the day Monday through Friday, and from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays.

To broaden their education, students who do not have classes during College Hour, from 10 to 11 a.m. Thursdays, have an opportunity to attend class or club meetings in assigned rooms, lectures on various topics, to see films and to participate in rallies or dances.

The cafeteria in Smith Hall serves breakfast from 7:30 to 10 a.m. and sandwiches for lunch from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. when the snack section closes. The hot lunch section of Smith Hall, however, is open from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.

To accommodate a growing student population, Statler Wing, the annex to Smith Hall, opens this fall with hot entrees in vending machines. The wing is open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

'Big Six,' Council, Cabinet Play Important Roles In Student Government System

By Herm Kligerman

Student government at the college can best be explained by first noting three distinct groups which play a part in its makeup.

First, there is what is referred to as the "big six." Included in this group are the Associated Student President and Vice President, the Associated Men and Women Student Presidents and the Sophomore and Freshman Class Presidents.

Each is elected by the students-at-large semesterly. However, only one of the "big six"—the Vice President—may vote on the official governing body of the association.

STUDENT COUNCIL COMPOSITION

This body is known as Student Council. Its members, all of whom may vote and introduce formal motions, include seven representatives of the Freshman Class, seven representatives of the Sophomore Class and the Vice President.

Each is also elected by the general student body each semester.

The AS President presides over all meetings of council and may vote in the case of a tie.

RESPONSIBILITY, AUTHORITY

Student Council is responsible for and has final authority in the supervision of the affairs, policies, properties and conduct of the Associated Students of the college.

"Associated Students" means those registered students who have in their possession a current AS card available at the beginning of each semester for $5.

One of council's major duties is that of allocating funds to official budgeted organizations on campus for the semester succeeding its term of office. For example, last spring council allocated almost $38,000 to operate student activities for this semester.

TWENTY COMPRISE CABINET

After Student Council comes the third and final division known as cabinet.

Cabinet members may either be appointed or elected by the organization he represents at Student Council meetings, or appointed by the AS president. Like the Associated Men and Women Student Presidents and the Freshman and Sophomore Class Presidents, cabinet has a voice but no vote on the official body.

A question frequently asked is: Are the "big six," council and cabinet all that make up the college's student government system? The answer is no!

PARTICIPATION OPEN TO ALL

All students here are eligible and invited to take an active part in their student government system and are welcome to voice their opinions on campus issues at appropriate times in an appropriate manner.

Council meets from 12 noon to 1 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday in bungalow six, which is directly behind Cloud Hall and the nearest bungalow to Arts Hall. The doors are open to all interested students.

Many student leaders who attend council are enrolled in a special student leadership course, listed as student leadership G-10 in the time schedule. This is not a requirement, however.

ROBERT'S RULES PREVAIL

The twice-weekly meetings are held in accordance with Robert's Rules of Order and the AS Constitution.

The latter document is important in many ways. It cites the requirements for a student seeking any elective or appointive position in student government.

ON BEHALF OF THE Associated Students, let me take this opportunity to genuinely welcome you to City College. This is your forward step in academic life. This is your college, and it is up to you to make the most of the opportunities available.

OUR ACADEMIC PROGRAM is one of the best in the nation. Our activity program is unique—take advantage of it.

I WOULD RECOMMEND that you get "involved" as soon as possible. Belonging to a club and taking part in student affairs is most gratifying. Not to belong or show interest can cause you to lose association with the well-balanced program of our fine college.

YET YOU HAVE TO take the initiative to "join" City College.

THIS SEMESTER we have planned one of the most active schedules ever to be introduced at our college, and your officers have created many interesting events for you.

THESE OFFICERS ARE your fellow collegians and have your interests in mind. I urge all students not to overlook the importance of extracurricular activities in campus life.

Gary Ettin,
AS President

Hawaii Tops Out-Of-Staters

San Francisco, the mecca for west coast tourists, draws students here from all over the globe as well as from the city itself and California.

Enrollment last spring, for example, included students from 65 countries and 49 states other than California, plus Guam, Puerto Rico, Samoa, Wake Island and Washington, D. C.

Hawaii, the Aloha state, was represented by the greatest number, 34, of out-of-state students. Hawaii boasts of no two-year colleges as yet.

Alaska, the 49th state, was represented by two students.

Texas, the Lone Star state, usually first in everything, starred as the state with the second highest number of out-of-state students here, 28.

Thirty-one of 80 foreign undergraduates registered came from the Central and South American countries.

A total of 11 students came from Sweden, Belgium, England, France, Germany, Italy, Norway and Spain.

There were also students listed as "stateless," because their families are in the United States as political refugees. These students come from Red China, Hungary, Egypt and Cuba.

On the local scene, entering Washington High School graduates usually outnumber students from other high schools. Last Spring, however, Lincoln High School students topped those of Washington, numbering 787.

In second place, Washington High School was represented with 714 students.

Lowell High School was represented with 566; Galileo, 531; Balboa, 487; Mission, 339; Polytechnic, 307; John Adams and Commerce, 151 each; Gompers and O'Connell, 38; Continuation, 9; and Girls, 5.

From the private schools in this city, 867 students were represented. Five received their diplomas directly from the San Francisco Unified School District.

Students Adapt, Not Conform To New College Environment

THE TIME HAS COME when a high school education is not enough. Be it technological advancement or just plain status, employers now require a college education before they even give the job-seeking individual consideration.

Students do not usually like to admit that the reason they are attending college is to be eligible for better jobs and therefore more money. They prefer to quote the more lofty ideals of the desire to seek the Truth—or education for the sake of education alone. There are those who are actually here for this reason and no other, but they are few and far between.

But whatever a person's reasons for continuing his education, one dominant fact remains. He is doing it on a voluntary basis; the time of compulsory education has passed. Anybody on this campus can leave at anytime. He will not leave a gap. Annually increasing enrollments show that there will be two new students to take his place.

Entering college means entering a new environment. A person has to adapt to an environment—he does not have to conform to it. There are few rules and regulations to follow at City College, but these few must and will be adhered to.

The two-year college is the backbone of California's system of higher education. It offers relief to the already over-crowded State colleges and universities and it helps the student complete his lower division requirements of a college education with a minimum of cost. It makes possible the dream of a college education to all with the ability to receive one.

But when somebody foots the bill, it is only right that the receiver of the benefits recognize certain obligations. In the case of City College, the city of San Francisco takes care of the major burden of expenses with state funds taking care of the rest.

For their effort, the city and state ask but one thing—that the student receive the best education possible under existing circumstances. Upon graduation, the student is not required to pay back anything. He is not even required to remain a resident in the area that was taxed the heaviest for his education.

The two-year college is a tried and true route to the universities. The time will come when it will be the only route, because of increasing enrollments. A college education is here for the asking, but it is up to the individual to work for it. Learning is never easy, but that is what is offered here. Good luck.

Map Shows Areas For Student Cars

AS Members Have Parking Rights Here

By George Nelson

Approximately 1800 parking spaces are available for students driving to the college, provided that the cars parked in these areas have a valid parking permit on their windshields.

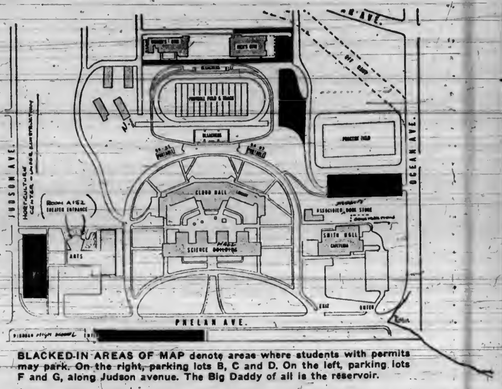
Parking permits are issued by the Campus Police department to those students who have joined the Associated Students. Cars parked in the student parking lots without the permit are subject to citations.

Five student parking lots east of Phelan avenue are as follows:

Parking lot B, the blacked-in area on the map between the football practice field and Smith Hall (cafeteria), is a student parking lot. Entrance to the lot is from Ocean avenue. Walking time from the center of lot B to the flag pole in the center of the main courtyard is three minutes and 20 seconds.

Parking lot C is the area between the football field and track and the practice field. Entrance to this lot is also on Ocean avenue and through lot B. Walking time from lot C to the flag pole is three minutes and 35 seconds.

Lot D is the area next to and along side the men's gymnasium. The spaces against the curb are for physical education instructors only. Students parking there will be tagged. Walking time to the flag pole is four minutes and 35 seconds.



Lots F and G encompass the area between Arts Hall and Judson avenue. Entrance is from Judson avenue. Walking time from the combined lots is clocked at three minutes and 25 seconds.

The "Big Daddy" of all campus parking lots is the north reservoir.

From the reservoir, across Phelan avenue, it takes four minutes and 40 seconds to walk to Science Hall.

All other lots are for faculty or guest parking.

Although the ticket is issued by the Campus Police, it is the same as any citation issued by the regular San Francisco Police force. The fine is payable to the Hall of Justice.

BLACKED-IN AREAS OF MAP denote areas where students with permits may park. On the right, parking lots B, C and D. On the left, parking lots F and G, along Judson avenue. The Big Daddy of all is the reservoir.

Sights To See Around Roller Coaster Campus

City College, located on San Francisco's Hill 29, has seven permanent buildings, only one of which, Science Hall, dominates the top of the incline.

Although true, this is little consolation to the incoming student who may have a high registration number yet a comparatively late registration hour.

And a typical class schedule can pose problems.

At 8 a.m. the young student finds himself in front of Science Hall, the major building on the crest of the hill. He proceeds to climb the three flights of stairs to his first class on the third floor.

The 9 a.m. carillon rings, and he dashes from his third floor class and realizes that he has only 10 minutes to reach his next class—physical education.

He then staggers down the three floors of Science Hall, walks out the east door and finds himself in a large courtyard with Science Hall behind and Cloud Hall directly in front of him.

He continues to walk east through Cloud Hall and finds himself at the crest of a downward hill which will eventually take him to the men's gymnasium. Upon descending the incline beyond the stadium, there are two large buildings in front of him.

Coeds enter the building on the north, so he assumes that the place for him is the structure on the south.

At long last, 10 a.m. rolls around and he notices that he has a long-sought-after break. Where does he go?

He decides he needs nutrition and begins to climb the hill from which he descended just 50 minutes earlier.

At the top of the incline, he turns south and walks down a hill where he finds Smith Hall and the new Statler Wing directly to the left of it and set further back.

After sipping a cup of coffee in the fountain section of Smith Hall and somewhat rested, he decides to explore. Outside he finds to the immediate east the Ramporium, the Associated Student bookstore. This structure is not considered permanent because of future building plans.

At the chimes for the 11 a.m. class he realizes that he has to trudge to Arts Hall.

Now, he makes an about-face, turns to the north and starts the journey back up the hill that took him to Smith Hall, across the middle of the courtyard and then down the hill on the north side of Hill 29.

There, sitting in front of him is Arts Hall.

His college day ends here at noon.

Redwood Ram Stands Guard At Main Campus Entrance

The Redwood Ram, the best known symbol on campus, stands guard at the main approach to the campus, serving as a meeting place for students and a reminder of college spirit.

Created in 1939 by sculptor Dudley C. Carter, the Ram made its debut under the admiring glances of the crowds visiting the California Handicraft Exhibit of San Francisco's Golden Gate International Exposition of 1939 on Treasure Island, where it was carved.

Following the fair, the Redwood Ram was formally presented in 1940 to the late Archibald J. Cloud, then president of the college, by the late architect Timothy Pfleuger as Carter's gift to a new and expanding institution.

After an unfortunate five-year stay in the men's gymnasium, forced there by lack of a suitable place to display its beauty, the Ram was moved from place to place as new buildings came and temporary ones went. When the West Campus was abandoned to become reservoirs, it was decided that the present spot was best.

There, on January 3, 1956, at about 10 a.m., the Ram was permanently mounted on a specifically designed pedestal provided by the engineering department.

Carved from a redwood stump, the figure took about 16 eight-hour days of work to complete, and it was carved with a double-bladed axe, some chisels and lots of skill. The complete statue, which was painted Red and White, the college colors, in 1947, weighs about a ton.

Recently, because of an excess of paint that had been splattered on the Ram, his standard Red and White color has been chipped off.

Its future is still to be determined.

Priceless Rivera In Arts Hall

College Boasts 'Biggest, Best'

By Don Patten

A masterpiece by the late Mexican artist, Diego Rivera, self-described as the "biggest and the best," adorns the east wall of the theater lobby in Arts Hall, after lying hidden for nearly two decades before a fitting site was found.

This great masterpiece, a mural, entitled, Marriage of the Artistic Expression of the North and South On This Continent, was given to the college after being painted as part of the living arts displayed at the Golden Gate International Exposition of 1939 on Treasure Island.

While being moved to the college at the close of the fair, the mural was insured for $50,000 with Lloyd's of London. It is now insured for $125,000. In the art world, however, "priceless" would be the expression used to indicate its value.

When it arrived at the college, no facilities were available to accommodate the huge mural which is 22 feet high and 75 feet long.

The mural was placed in a protective case and stored in sections near the men's gymnasium where it lay for 18 years.

As the plans were being drawn in 1958 for what is now Arts Hall, provision was made for the mural to be mounted in the theater lobby of the building.

And so with the completion of Arts Hall, the outstanding mural, which is a priceless property of the college, was again displayed after its long period of dormancy.

The mural is divided into panels and in the center one is a serpent-fanged machine god. Around it are inventors, statesmen, personal friends of Rivera and shots from some of his favorite movies.

In the far left panels of the mural, Rivera has created an Aztec motif.

Moving to the right, such great men as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln are painted.

The Ram was moved to its present location in 1956.

Rivera also placed dictators Stalin, Mussolini and Hitler in his mural.

Twice Olympic diving champion Helen Crlenkovich, then a City College student, is in the mural as she seems to glide silently above the bay waters and the city of San Francisco.

Finally, on the extreme right of his masterpiece, Rivera showed inventors Thomas Edison and S.F.B. Morse, and Robert Fulton and his steamboats.

The overall theme of the mural was to, and does, depict Pan-American units.

When asked why he painted himself holding hands with movie star Paulette Goddard, Rivera explained, "It means closer Pan-Americanism."

Success Story — The History Of City College

San Francisco The Campus For 1470 Argonauts In 1935

City College of San Francisco (then named San Francisco Junior College) became a reality August 26, 1935, when the first student body met in the War Memorial Opera House to be addressed as "Argonauts."

Between opening-day formal speeches, 1470 students and 72 faculty members read a newspaper bearing the name Emanon — (try it in reverse).

A high point in the speeches was to become a familiar reminder from pioneer President Archibald J. Cloud: "A college is more than buildings..."

There were many buildings, yet each was borrowed.

Morning classes met in the University of California's Extension Building at 540 Powell street, afternoon classes in Galileo High School, where administrative offices also were located. Beyond these bases, classes requiring special facilities found them in from 18 to 25 buildings throughout the city.

An automobile tour of 18 of these sites, made in 1938 by an Associated Student President and a Guardsman reporter, clocked two hours and 35 minutes driving time exclusive of parking mileage and stops at the 18 locations.

Thus, without a campus of their own, the early student bodies could rightly call the city itself their campus, Union Square their recreation center between classes, cable car rides around and over Russian Hill to Galileo a stimulating diversion.

Within 30 days after opening ceremonies, the Argonauts had organized the Associated Students, drafted a constitution and elected officers; named their newspaper The Guardsman; adopted a mascot, the Ram; chosen colors, Red and White, and adopted a motto, Ut Adolescentes Vitae Educantur which, translated from the Latin, means That Youth May Be Educated To Life, all through the democratic process — the vote.

One year later, 40 acres of Balboa Park were acquired as the site for a permanent campus, and on April 25, 1937, Science Hall construction, in the form of ground-breaking, began.

A special bond issue, necessary to qualify the school department for federal funds was passed by San Francisco voters — and the two gymnasiums were assured. So, in 1940, 3000 students occupied their own campus — soon to be dubbed pneumonia hill by the more cynically minded.

For three semesters the new campus, the college's own campus after five years of wandering, was at peace, or at least fighting only for familiar items such as adequate parking facilities.

Until December 7, 1941.

Although enrollment ebbed to fewer than 1000 in 1943, the war years saw the college not only maintaining its two basic curricula, university parallel courses and technical training programs, respectively, but also meeting wholeheartedly every effort to aid in the World War II effort.

Summer sessions were inaugurated, victory gardens of vegetables dotted the campus, evening classes were established, and a variety of specialized programs was provided to service units in San Francisco as the need arose.

Through it all, even though necessarily on a limited basis, the traditions, the activities, the spirit established by the Argonauts in 1935 of accepting any challenge continued.

Campus Hits Big Time With 'Lee' Miss America

Although the college had previously made news nationally, notably when it was listed by Look Magazine as one of the top ten two-year colleges in the country, nothing put it on the map more dramatically than the triumph of Lee Meriwether — City College student, 1954 — Miss America, 1955.

The two years marked the trek eastward to the college's permanent campus, a move that had visual evidence shortly after Louis G. Conlan "came home" as President of the college where he had been a member of the pioneer faculty.

Within two years after his appointment, President Conlan led a building program that was to stretch to the present time. The "war babies" were soon to reach college age, and at City College, as well as throughout the nation, accommodations were being made for their education.

The two-year college, largely a product of California, had proved itself and proved to the nation that every person was to be afforded the opportunity of a college education without tuition.

Construction and occupation were the earmarks of the period started in 1954. Cloud Hall: curiously, dedication ceremonies on April 25 marked an anniversary — 17 years to the day after ground had been broken for the construction of Science Hall.

Smith Hall construction, to house the famed hotel and restaurant department and the cafeteria it operates, was started not only in the Cloud Hall dedication year but also in the same month.

Completed in 1956, and already outgrown as a cafeteria what with steadily increasing enrollments, Smith Hall occupancy was followed in 1959 by the start of construction of Arts Hall and the college stadium.

Arts Hall, 1961 — for the first time City College had a real theater, not too large, it is true, but nonetheless a theater, possessed of the most modern equipment possible — and comfortable seats.

Music, art, closed-circuit television, ceramics — each had quarters conducive to carrying on the tradition of artistic achievement bravely begun by the Argonauts in 1935.

Building of a sort not anticipated by San Francisco's school department created a minor furor in 1962 when a freeway tentacle chopped off a corner of the campus. The corner just happened to be the site of the horticulture center, built in 1947.

Last April, however, a new center was completed along with its greenhouse and room for 30,000 plants rescued from the old greenhouse.

Students entering this Fall, 1964, will push the total number of students who have enrolled here past the 130,000 mark.

From Powell street and Galileo High headquarters to Balboa Park and the temporary West Campus — City College is the San Francisco School Department's top Success Story.

The West Campus — 1946-1954

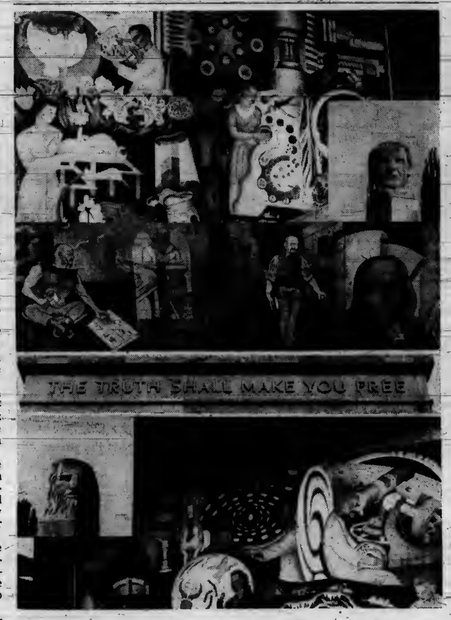
City College had a West Campus from 1946 to 1954.



Buildings, 14 including a gymnasium-turned-auditorium all originally constructed for Navy Waves and situated where the south reservoir across from Science Hall now stands, were used by the college.

With ex-GIs swelling enrollment past 5000, the West Campus era saw major events in college history.

Foremost was the change of name. The hated "Junior" was officially killed and on February 12, 1948, it was City College of San Francisco.

Activities were at their height. Music — Christmas concerts drawing capacity crowds in 1000-seat auditorium... drama — Shakespeare, top-drawer... Man Who Came To Dinner the same... Ramporium established... The Guardsman published twice a week... campus-wide participation in the music-drama production of Vagabond King... 4000 total attendance.

And Archibald J. Cloud, retiring as President in 1949, gave this thought in a valedictory message: "Education is not a destination — it is a journey — always, we are en route."

Works Of Art Adorn Campus

MANY ORIGINAL WORKS OF ART adorn the walls and halls of City College in addition to the Diego Rivera mural and the Redwood Ram.

Usually the first to catch the eye of the visitor because of their location just inside the main entrance to Science Hall, are the twin murals by artist Fred Olmstead, depicting a student engaged in study, (top left and bottom right).

Painted in 1940 and 1941, these impressive works were, almost unbelievably, finished by Olmstead in his "spare time," while he concurrently worked on two stone sculptures now in the courtyard leading to Cloud Hall.

The two figures, among the last commissioned by the Federal Work Projects Administration, were set in place in 1941, shortly after completion of Science Hall.

Facing each other, they are the heads of Thomas Edison, (top right), and Leonardo da Vinci, (lower left), meant to represent Theory and Science.

For the record, Edison is on the north side of Science Hall's courtyard, while da Vinci stands on the south side of the court.

In keeping with the impressive murals created by Olmstead, is Stanley Sadler's mural depicting the evolution of type and journalism from the invention of type by the Chinese to the latest presses and newest processes, (top center).

The mural is fittingly mounted in room 345 of Science Hall, near the graphic arts laboratory, the advertising art department and the office of The Guardsman, official publication of the college.

Not exactly an art treasure but deeply revered by faculty and students is the college's motto, The Truth Shall Make You Free, from the New Testament, John, VIII, 32.

Other works of art adorning the college's walls include two 40 by 50 foot mosaics by Herman Volz, outside the north and south walls of Science Hall, a portrait of Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, first President of the college, located just inside the entrance to the library in Cloud Hall.

IF ARTS HALL in the above shot appears as one winding ramp — it isn't. This optical illusion was created by pasting the picture in the upper left-hand corner over the large one. Clear? — sure!

Football, Soccer Lead Fall Sports

RETURNING FULLBACK JOE SOBECK breaks away at the start of his 29-yard run that set up the Rams' first score when Pat Lewis bolted over from three yards out to give the Rams a 6-0 lead in their opening game last year. The Rams went on to beat Chabot, 12-9.

Elston's Eleven Seeks Title After Seven Lean Years

The Ram football team will be competing again this semester for a championship title that has eluded the gridders for the past seven years.

The last Ram title came in 1957, when former grid mentor Grover Klemmer piloted his team to the old Big Eight championship tied with Santa Rosa, Modesto and Stockton.

Since the inception of the sport here in 1935, the Rams have won or tied for titles in 1937, '40, '46 and '48. In 1948 the Rams posted the second undefeated season in the history of the old Northern California Junior College Conference.

Currently, the Rams are members of the Golden Gate Conference which was founded in 1962 and is composed of Contra Costa, College of San Mateo, Chabot, Diablo Valley, Foothill, Oakland and San Jose.

Contra Costa is the ruling champion since the Comets have posted two undefeated seasons in the Golden Gate Conference.

Last year the Rams posted a 3-3 record. Their final game, against Foothill, was canceled. It had been scheduled for the afternoon when the late President John F. Kennedy was assassinated.

Leading the ground attack last year were halfbacks Pat Lewis and Oliver Mitchell, and fullback Joe Sobeck, while sparking the air attack were quarterback Henry Scott and end Henry King.

Up front for the Rams, Bob Hector led the offensive and defensive charge as he, the Lineman-of-the-Year, went both ways with his teammates Bruce Marovich, Rod Someya and Frank Smith.

Injuries were the Rams' biggest foe in 1963, for 32 members of the 60-man squad were injured seriously enough to be unable to play.

Of the original starting eleven, only two were still playing in the last game of the season. A ward of St. Mary's Hospital was virtually set aside for the Ram football team, and each week new members were added to the "alumni" at St. Mary's.

At season's end, Hector, Lewis and Rudy Lapera were selected as All-Conference, and Hector was named the Most Valuable Lineman.

Piloting the Ram assault this year will be coach Art 'Dutch' Elston.

As a player Elston, upon graduation from the University of Southern California, joined the original San Francisco 49er squad in 1946. Elston, despite his seemingly small size of 5-10, 190 pounds, starred as a center and linebacker for three years, before turning to the coaching profession.

OUTSTRIDING DEFENDERS Chip MacDowell (84) and Gary Titchenal, the Rams' leading receiver last season, Henry King, grabbed this Henry Scott aerial for 48 yards. San Jose went on to win the game on an intentional safety, 8-6. Both King and Scott will return this semester.

Rams Boast Long Line Of First-Rate Soccer Squads

That the Rams are undoubtedly the "best two-year college soccer team in the country," was the statement made by University of California soccer coach Bob DiGracia after the Rams beat the Bears, 5-2, ending an undefeated and untied season in 1961.

It was not the first time the local soccermen clinched the title shutting out all four-year colleges in the Bay Area.

Since 1959, the Rams, the only team representing a two-year college in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer League, were the top contenders in the league and never gave up first place except in 1960 and 1962 when they finished the season tied for first place with the University of California Bears and the Stanford Indians, respectively.

In 1963, a City College-defeated University of California team summoned the other four-year college teams to "battle," and it was decided that City College could no longer participate in the league.

Consequently, in 1963 City College's "own league" was formed, the Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference, composed of College of San Mateo, Menlo College and Diablo Valley College.

The Rams emerged undefeated last year with the title, and in addition took the first State Junior College championship, when they downed the Southern California titlist, Victor Valley 4-1.

Every year City College produces more All-American soccer players than any other two-year college.

Intra Cage League Invites Amateurs

Each semester, the Associated Men Students offer intramural basketball competition within three leagues, Inter-Fraternity council, Club and Independent.

To participate in the games, usually played Tuesday and Wednesday nights, the teams must comply with specific regulations.

These rules specify that all players must have Associated Student cards, that teams must file petitions, and all players and teams must observe any additional rules posted by Associated Men Student officers throughout the season.

At the season's end, winning teams and individuals are awarded trophies and medals on Sports Night.

Last year, winners of the individual leagues were the Filipino Club in the club league; Zeta Phi Sigma, fraternity league, and the Divine Ones in the independent league.

Cross-Country Teams Mark Trail Of Successful Seasons

Cross-country competition has had a relatively successful history at the college. Although they placed third in 1962, and only fourth in last year's assault on the Golden Gate Conference title, the Rams' past record has ranked them on top several times.

In the 1961 season, cross-country mentor Lou Vasquez, who has been responsible for the teams since his arrival here in 1957, coached a squad of "ailing spikers" to a championship.

He duplicated the feat the following year in what was considered one of the toughest conferences in a decade.

Vasquez is a graduate of City College and of San Francisco State College. His first coaching job was at Presidio Junior High School, and after one year there, he was moved to George Washington High School.

The year 1959 was slightly gloomier for the Rams, because they could eke out but a third place, despite consistent efforts to overcome injuries and other hindrances. Perhaps the biggest deficit in that year's squad was the absence of super-star Paul Patton; one of the greatest Ram spikers of yesteryear.

Patton led the cross-country assault of 1958, posting the fastest time in Northern California for the season and romping to a great but short-lived college record of three miles in 15:10.

Vasquez' comments on the teams to come to show enthusiasm. "I have hopes for the future as I have had for the past," he said.

RA Offers Twelve Sports Activities

The college's Recreation Association offers at least a dozen different activities each semester to interested students and recognizes outstanding participants in each sport with block, shield and star awards at its semi-annual banquet.

Among the activities offered are coed archery, badminton, bowling, folk, social and modern dancing, fencing, golf, swimming, tennis, volleyball and men's and women's basketball and softball league competition.

The RA fencing team has fared spectacularly in competition, including last semester's Western Intercollegiate Conference when a student won the saber competition.

RA members also attend regular sports days with other Northern California two-year colleges.

Frances Galloway, of the women's physical education department, is coordinator of the RA program here.

RAMBLINGS College Athletics Help Screen Champs

By Fred Wales

ONE OF the purposes of this or any other two-year college is to eliminate the "excess" students. Because of the unfortunate law of space, which poses a problem in the modern university, some students must inevitably fall along the wayside to make room for superior ability.

This rule applies to athletics as well as academic aspirants.

Each semester the All-City winners from each high school enroll at City College with the idea of using this college as a stepping stone to a scholarship or even as a springboard to a professional career in sports.

Here is where the problem arises. There are ten high schools in this area and all ten have teams in the respective sports. Out of these ten teams, only one will emerge as the Rams' representative.

The chances for the City College athlete are good. Many have become champions.

In football everyone will recognize the name of Ollie Matson and someone a bit more recent, Gary Lewis. The latter played for the Rams in 1961 and has been drafted as a red shirt by the San Francisco 49ers.

In soccer, this college has become one of th strongest in the nation, boasting two members of the 1964 Olympic team. Goalie Gary DeLong and center forward Al Korbus made names for themselves while playing for coach Roy Diederichsen's Rams.

OLLIE MATSON heads the list of football greats from the past.

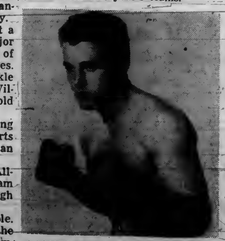
In basketball, coach Sid Phelan has emerged as one of the nation's top cage mentors. He has led his teams to conference championships for three years straight and has his alumni sparking cage teams from San Francisco State to Creighton University.



Baseball here has become almost a course in preparation for the Major Leagues. Last spring two members of the Ram nine were bonus babies. Butch Bussanick and Don Kunkle were added to the list of Walt Williams, Rich Farrell and Rich Nold who inked contracts last year.

What all this means to the entering students is plenty of good sports action available for the price of an Associated Student card.

At the Ram stadium a host of All-City picks will unite to form a Ram eleven which will represent each high school in the city.

Soccer action is also available. Balboa stadium, which lies across the freeway from the men's gymnasium, will be the site of many a Ram victory and a sure title.

The action should prove fast and exciting. The opportunity to witness it is available. Attend the games and try to predict who will be the future greats from this year's teams.

Cycles, Scooters Come Under Parking Regulations

Motorcycles and scooters are now required to have parking permits.

Paul Robin, campus police chief, said today that as of this week all parking regulations have been and will be fully enforced, including the new section of the regulations requiring permits to be displayed on motorcycles and scooters parked on campus.

By placing the two-wheeled vehicles under permit regulations, the college police force will be able to exert greater control over them, especially regarding parking of the cycles and scooters.

Robin added that there are several other points student-drivers should know to avoid traffic citations while parking in the campus parking lots.

Keys should not be left in vehicles, he warned, and patrolmen may cite vehicles with keys still in the ignition.

Permit decals should not be taped on but properly applied according to instructions. If the permit falls off or is not visible in the lower right hand corner of the windshield, tickets will be issued.

Lots for students with regular permits are B, C, D, F, G and the reservoir, besides the A lot by the cafeteria for cycles. All other lots are for faculty and special parking.

Free permits are available daily between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. in C-119, Robin said, adding that Associated Student card, driver's license and vehicle registration must be shown for the permit.

To those who do not have permits Deputy Chief John Fusselman emphasized that the old tricks of leaving notes saying, "I'll be back in a moment," or, "Just bought car, have had no time to get permit" will not work.

The placing of a used citation on the windshield to avoid another ticket is also very unsuccessful.

So far this fall, approximately 1700 permits have been issued; whereas, last year at this time there were only 1200.

Of course, with the increase of students here, the size of the Campus Police force has gone up from 32 men last year to 46 men this fall.

Assisting Robin, chief, and Fusselman, deputy chief, are Michael Phalen, assistant deputy chief; lieutenants John Bussanick, David Kannisto and Mario Piazza; sergeants Richard Longshore, Walter Potter and George Rudometkin.

Also, police officers Ben Cademarti, Raymond Chezik, Paul Coke, John Conlon, James Dean, Daniel Foley, Keith Hooper, Arnold Rosales, Frank Villalon, Henry Wesch, Stephan Willis and Zed Wish.

This semester's rookies are Sidney Ancar, Daniel Cabrera, Larry Crocker, Edward Goon, Wayne Gordon, Robert Harrah, Craig Martini, James McHenry, Larry Muir, Robert Nasise, Gerald O'Donnell, William Palmini, John Ribotta, Richard Seguine, George Toller and James Welch.

—Police clerks are Valerie Hoeft, Mai Larsen and Barbara Johnson.

Six Instructors, Fourteen Substitutes Join Faculty To Cope With Big Enrollment

City College has an additional 20 members on the faculty to cope with heavy enrollment. Six of these new instructors are substituting for faculty members on leaves of absence, and 14 are probationary instructors.

The English department has five new members on the faculty. David Spears is a probationary instructor who earned his M.A. from the University of Chicago.

Eileen Rossi, a long-term substitute for Diane Fairchild, has her B.A. from the University of California. Robert Berman, a long-term substitute for Merritt Beckerman, was formerly teaching on the east coast. He earned his M.A. from Columbia.

Paul Cagnacci is a probationary instructor who earned his M.A. from San Francisco State College.

The business department has three new instructors, Arthur Evans, Joseph Lasky and David Spence. Substituting for Lewis Mottley is Evans who earned his M.B.A. from Stanford University.

Lasky, a long-term substitute for Dale Pombo, attended San Francisco State College where he earned his M.A.

Spence is a probationary instructor who attended University of California to receive his M.B.A.

Robert Rosser and John Sheldon are new additions to the chemistry department. Earning his Ph.D. at the University of Colorado, Rosser formerly did research work in chemical development. Sheldon earned his Ph.D. at Cornell University. Both men are probationary instructors.

Paul Crowely is a probationary art instructor. He earned his A.B. from San Francisco State College.

William Grothkopp, probationary instructor in the music department, attended University of California where he earned his M.A.

Probationary instructor in the foreign language department, Howard R. Packham, earned his M.A. from Northwestern University in Illinois. Formerly he taught for three years at the University of California.

Paul Hewitt, substituting for Elmer Broad in engineering, earned his M.S. from Utah State University. He was formerly teaching in Utah.

Ernest Nackord, a counselor, earned his M.A. from San Francisco State College after which he taught in various San Francisco schools for 16 years.

Edward Taylor, probationary instructor in Social Science, earned his M.A. at Stanford University after which he taught in San Francisco for eight years.

In hygiene, Jack Madigan is a probationary instructor with an M.A. from Stanford University.

James Longo, a probationary instructor in hotel and restaurant, earned his A.A. from City College of San Francisco. He was then assistant manager to the Western Hotels for 14 years.

Phyllis Vasquez is the probationary instructor in the women's physical education department.

Campus Expansion Depends On Votes For Proposition B

Proposition B, the $31,465,000 school bond issue, will be put before San Francisco voters November 3. Funds earmarked for badly needed construction and modernization at City College comprise $2,028,000 of the total.

College President Louis G. Conlan stated, "The greatest importance of the bond issue to us is to provide the funds to enable us to complete the campus."

Day attendance is expected to increase from the present 7628 to 9000 students in the 1966-67 school year, straining presently overcrowded facilities. President Conlan expects that regulations concerning academic probation and dismissal will need to be tightened to meet the expected enrollment if the bond is not approved.

A projected 300,000 voters are expected to participate in the election, and 200,000 of them must support Proposition B to achieve the necessary two-thirds majority. No organized opposition has been detected.

The money is needed to construct 13,000 square feet of additional classroom space needed to accommodate the increased enrollment. One building will be built to house counseling and registration activities, as well as classrooms. Extensive modernization and remodeling of existing facilities is needed, and will be done if the bill passes.

Premiere Of TV Series Moves To October 11

The first in a series of half-hour weekly television programs entitled City College Close-Up and presented by the college and KPIX-TV, will be pre-empted Sunday and moved to October 11, Sylvia R. Leff, speech instructor at the college and producer of the series, disclosed last week.

The October 11 program, concerned with counseling, will be presented in cooperation with the administration, testing and counseling departments.

Host of the 11 to 11:30 a.m. production will be Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction at the college.

The series will include a total of 13 programs.

Today Is . . . WHAT?

Thirty days has September (usually), April, June and November. All the rest have 31 except for February which has 28 during the regular year and 29 during Leap Year.

But this year September has 29 days.

In their combined effort to produce this semester's Activities Calendar, students in Journalism 26A-B, and the graphic arts, advertising art and design and photography departments forgot to include September 30. That's today, or it was supposed to be.

But it's not on the calendar so it's possible that today isn't.

Aside from creating the first 365-day Leap Year, these students have put together an easily understandable list of the semester's activities, clubs and organizations as well as some of the college yells and their operating instructions.

Jim Wyatt Joins Staff As AS Adviser

Former Student And Track Great Fills Post Vacated By Elworthy

FORMER STUDENT Jim Wyatt returned to the college after 16 years to guide student leaders.

Former trackman and graduate of City College, Jim Wyatt, this semester was named student government adviser and director of student affairs, a post previously held by Sherm Elworthy.

As captain of the track team here in 1948, Wyatt ran the half mile and set a new conference record in that event.

After graduating from here, Wyatt went to the University of California to continue his education and proceed to graduate work for his teaching credential.

"City College," Wyatt said, "gave me everything that Cal could have given me my first two years in college. Perhaps more, because Cal is a research college concerned mainly with upper division work where City College is strictly a teaching college. Besides it would have cost me $120 each semester at Cal."

Upon completion of his graduate work, Wyatt taught at Oakland High School for one semester then went to Bancroft High School in San Leandro for a year.

His next 13 years were spent at Abraham Lincoln High School where he was coach and counselor but primarily student government adviser.

When it was learned last spring by the administration that Elworthy was going to resign his position as adviser to return to teaching English, a new adviser had to be appointed. Because of his experience at Abraham Lincoln, Wyatt was asked to fill the vacancy. He accepted "gladly."

It will be Wyatt's job to coordinate and direct all student activities as well as to build up interest among the students. Wyatt intends to do this by "saturating" all the available communications media on campus.

"My main concern," Wyatt said, "is that of building up more student pride in City College."

Kappa Rho Takes Top Honors At IFC Opener

Alpha Kappa Rho took top honors for scholastic standing among the six fraternities on campus when it was presented with a trophy last night at the semiannual Inter-Fraternity Council Open House held in Smith Hall.

The event also marked the opening of this semester's rushing activities on campus.

The evening's entertainment consisted of a film on the San Francisco Seals Ice Hockey team during which the men present enjoyed refreshments provided by the Associated Men Students.

IFC President Dennis Whooley informed the prospective rushees about the merits of fraternities in general and also of the requirements the college has established for pledging.

He also disclosed that each pledge must carry a minimum of 12 units and maintain a grade point average of no less than 2.0. The president of each fraternity then described the benefits of membership.

The six fraternities represented, Phi Beta Delta, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Tau, Alpha Kappa Rho, Zeta Phi Sigma and Alpha Phi Epsilon, had tables set up for the purpose of displaying fraternity possessions.

"Judging from the interest here at the college and the attendance at the Open House, I believe this semester's pledge classes will be among the largest in the history of this college," Whooley commented.

Pledge Week will begin Monday, November 2, and continue through Friday, November 6, to be climaxed by a dance sponsored by Beta Tau fraternity.

For those men students who did not attend the Open House but are interested in joining a fraternity, sign-ups will be taken at the desk located in front of Smith Hall, Whooley said.

AMS also had a table at which President Ray Chezik accepted sign-ups for the AMS-sponsored intramural basketball tournament.

Special Election Slated October 6

One resignation and five council vacancies prompted Election Commissioner Dan Christian last week to slate Tuesday, October 6, as the voting date for the special election of the Student Council members and an Associated Men Student President.

There are three sophomore and two freshman member openings on council, and anyone eligible may petition.

To be eligible for AMS President a candidate must have completed at least 30 and not more than 60 units with an over-all grade point average of 2.2 prior to his term of office.

Sophomore candidates must have completed 28 and not more than 60 units of work at the time of taking office.

Freshman candidates must have completed at least 12 and not more than 27.5 units of work at the time of taking office.

"Although Ray Chezik is the acting AMS President, he too must petition and be voted on by council," Christian stated.

Dates to file petitions started on September 22 and will run through this Friday.

Christian urged all eligible students to file petitions in Bungalow 5.

College Enrollment Hits All-Time High Of 9660

The highest enrollment record in the history of the college has been recorded this semester by Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

A total of 9660 students is enrolled in classes here. This represents 7628 day students and 2032 night students. It is an increase of 784 students over last semester's enrollment, and an increase of 589 students over the Fall '63 enrollment.

The complete tabulation of registration statistics will be available later in the semester, according to Miss Learnard. At that time, the breakdown of the ratio of men to women students, as well as the number of freshmen students from each high school, will be announced.

San Mateo Hosts AWS Meet On Jobs Saturday

Blueprint For The Future is the title of the 12th Alta California Associated Women Students' Conference which will be held on the College of San Mateo campus Saturday.

The conference will emphasize various career opportunities for young women, and group workshops will meet for further discussion.

Coffee will be served at registration, beginning at 9:30 a.m. There will be a general meeting at 10 a.m., during which time the keynote address, Tomorrow And Tomorrow, will be given by Ruth Church Gupta, attorney. Participants will then adjourn to their specific workshops, and meet later for lunch. The conference will close at 1:30 p.m.

Barbara Kontis, this semester's AWS president, will head the San Francisco contingent.

Last year this campus was host to the annual conference of two-year college Associated Women Students, the theme of which was, The Young Wife Plus. Representatives of 11 two-year colleges met here at that time.

The conference is open to all Associated Women Students, but reservations must be made in S-150, Dean of Women Mary Golding said. A charge of $1.50 is required to cover the luncheon costs.

Transportation will be either by private car or by Greyhound bus. Representatives taking the bus can leave San Francisco at 8 a.m. and arrive in San Mateo at 8:52 a.m., where they will be met by representatives from the College of San Mateo.

Collegians' First Task To Ask Questions And Find Answers

MANY AN entering college student asks the inevitable question, OK I'm in; what do I do now? Oddly enough the question is in part the answer. The first task of any college student is to question. All accumulated beliefs should be hauled from the recesses of the mind, closely examined and then either reinforced or discarded.

Religion is a favorable starting point because it is one of the strongest beliefs and also because of the precarious position it occupies in a number of required college-level courses.

The wise student inspects all the doctrines of his faith and then compares them with those of other faiths. Once this is done, belief is either reinstated, now stronger and surer and ready to be defended, or discarded as an outgrown habit to which he has been paying lip service.

If the latter is true then the student should search for a new belief to guide his actions, one that he can honestly follow in its entirety.

Once religion is stabilized the queries begin again on the next topic—government. Put our system of government to the test. Compare it to the other forms marking its advantages and disadvantages. By doing this a student will come to a fuller appreciation of the freedoms he is now enjoying and with this in mind will utilize history and political science classes to become a better citizen and build a better country.

Now the pendulum of questions swings even closer to the student when his vocation is put on trial. The entering student has either chosen or is considering a major field of study which will prepare him for a career. Question the reasons behind the choice and the choice itself.

First of all does he enjoy the work or is he pursuing the title that goes with it? Is the choice his own or was it imposed on him by relatives or friends? Is there a demand for people in this field or are experienced men already out of work? Does the job fit in with plans for the future? Will it enable him to travel?

How will it effect family life? Consider the wages and chances for advancement and whether they support plans for the future. Once all this is taken into consideration and a career or vocation is established, it becomes a guide for selecting classes in order to get the most out of college work.

Finally, question individual abilities recognizing personal capabilities and using them to advantage. If strong in English but weak in science, take more English and as little science as needed. If a course is required in which a student is weak, space it between classes where he is strong thus providing more time for "weak" subjects.

Know how much time you need to prepare for a test or assignments in each of your classes. Question your stamina. How many units can you take and do well in? How much time do you need for study? Question your health. How nervous a person are you? How late can you afford to study? Are you strong enough for a full college program? Keep in mind that full-time college is equivalent to a full-time job. After you have completed your inventory use it as a guide to your daily schedules.

When a student is through with all his questioning he has completed the first step in college life. The second step is the answers. To find the answers is your goal at college. However take into consideration "4" means nothing without "2 plus 2 equals? in front of it. Before you can find the answers you have to find the questions.

There Is Hope — Proposition B

THIS SEMESTER at City College of San Francisco a new phenomenon was witnessed. Students were turned away. As a result of the record enrollment, many were not allowed to enter their fields of study, many could not get courses that were required, many were forced to settle for a single class late in the afternoon, and some were not able to register at all.

If you were one of the cheated many, if you were denied entrance, if you are concerned about next semester, if you are worried about younger brothers and sisters being able to enroll, if you are interested in strengthening all levels of education in San Francisco and alleviating the overcrowded facilities, then get ready.

Proposition B is coming soon!

Campus Mourns Buffy

An old and respected friend of City College is dead.

Buffy Browne, an 18-year-old toy cocker spaniel, died last month in Los Gatos. She served for many years as an assistant to Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne, who retired in 1959.

Buffy's duties while at the college included carrying mail and other important messages around the first floor of Science Hall. She never once lost a piece of mail in her possession, according to Uriel Furlong, secretary to the Dean of Men here.

When Dean Browne retired to his Los Gatos home in 1959, so did Buffy. But it wasn't complete retirement for her, as she continued her work here for some time.

Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman is another of the many persons who will miss Buffy. "She was a tremendous help during our annual Blood Drive," says Hillsman. "She would carry a sign around the campus reading, 'On my way to donate—follow me,' and really cheered up the donors who were either giving blood or waiting to give."

All persons who knew Buffy usually make the same comment: that she brought happiness to all she met and made everyone's day a little brighter.

How many of us can claim that?

I Say!!!

THE POOR CHAP IN THE MG is about to engage in the new fun game at the college called musical cars. The rules are simple and anybody can play. Just try to park your car.

The car pictured is at the entrance ramp of the reservoir and has just passed GO. From here the driver will proceed up and down the alleys in a fit of mild hysteria. Two gallons of gas and ten minutes later he will find his way back to the ramp and drive off in order to park next to a hydrant and dash for class. Counselor Makes Dream Come True

Helen Huffman Returns After Year Of Travel Through Dark Continent

By Don Patten

Dream became reality last year when Helen Huffman, counselor at the college, embarked on a one year's escapade that would take her to Africa, Russia, Europe and the Middle East.

Mrs. Huffman had planned such a trip in 1957 but instead of seeing Africa, she toured Europe because of the Suez Crisis visas were denied.

Leaving in June, 1963, Mrs. Huffman and a friend traveled across the continent via the Canadian Highway and then down to New York City. From there, a telescope-type cabin camper and its two passengers traveled by Norwegian freighter to Liberia.

Leaving the ship on the Ivory Coast of Africa, the two women plunged into the jungle roads that were "nothing more than tracks."

In the heart of Africa, they entered the country of Dahomey. As they neared the capital, they saw many persons walking toward the center of town, and because of the crowded streets, they had to shut the city.

"We thought some type of religious ceremony was being held but learned later that this had been a revolution and as such, the government had been overthrown," Mrs. Huffman said.

From there, the two traveled north through Nigeria and up to Chad, a country located in the Sahara Desert. An annual camel corps show consisting of Arab men of the French Army was to take place on November 11 in the city of Mousuro, in Chad.

"The trip through the desert to Mousuro took 11 hours instead of the nine hours we were told it would take. We had to use a compass as there were no roads at all," Mrs. Huffman said.

"After traveling all day, we still couldn't find Mousuro. We went to bed, and early the next morning we heard a clump-clump sound outside. We got up and saw at least 1000 camels with mounted Arabs dressed to the hilt."

It so happened that these men were the ones who were to participate in the camel show so the two women followed them right into Mousuro.

Because this was a very important affair, Mrs. Huffman described the governors and heads of state present, saying, "Arabs stood on top of camels at full gallop and shot at passing targets. They were excellent marksmen and it was a fascinating thing to see."

From there, the travelers were to go to Kenya and Tanganyika. Not wishing to travel through the revolution-torn Congo, they applied for visas to cross through the Sudan.

They found that Sudan also was in the midst of civil war so they had to travel through the Congo.

"We literally bribed our way across Africa with our American flags and Polaroid camera. Only by giving a border guard four flags at the entrance to the Congo were we able to get into the country.

"All the people we gave flags to thanked us for the 'table cloth,' 'shower curtain' and 'closet lining from vermin.' None of them knew what a flag was and some hadn't even heard of America," Mrs. Huffman added.

She explained that cities in the North Congo were abandoned. People who once had inhabited the cities went back to tribal life.

"The Belgians mistreated them for a long time," Mrs. Huffman explained. "One man told me that for sport on Sundays, Belgian soldiers used to go and beat men in jail until they were unconscious."

Upon leaving the Congo, the two travelers entered Uganda. Mrs. Huffman describes it as "beautiful" with sunrise colors lasting until 10 a.m. and sunset colors beginning at 3 p.m.

Uganda is bush country. The jungle ends with the Congo and Mrs. Huffman explained that the first sa:e roads on the whole trip were found here.

Driving through Uganda one day, the two came to a sign which read, "Elephants have right of way." Still laughing at what they had just seen, they rounded a turn and in front of them appeared a herd of more than 75 elephants.

"We had to wait 30 minutes while the elephants crossed the road," Mrs. Huffman said.

In Tanganyika, the two women visited Serengeti National Park and Mrs. Huffman disclosed that one can see as many as one-half million animals in a single day.

From there, they boarded a Nile River steamer and shipped the truck to Cairo—and a visit behind the iron curtain.

HELEN HUFFMAN—back at the counseling desk.

Election '64

Youth Interest Accelerates To New Heights

By Boyd Burtnett

AS WITH the rest of the nation, the approaching presidential election has aroused more than the usual amount of interest among the younger population. College students and persons of the same age group have formed their opinions and are ready to express them.

According to the registration rolls across the country, more 21 to 30-year-old citizens will probably vote in 1964 than ever before in recent history.

BATTLE OF PHILOSOPHIES

One reason for the renewed interest in national politics is that this year the voters will be casting their ballots for more than just a candidate with flashing capped teeth who says about the same thing as his opponent. This year political philosophies are involved.

The conservative-liberal battle is further heightened by the personalities of the two major candidates, tight-lipped Republican Barry Goldwater and drawling Democrat Lyndon Johnson. The two men are as unlike as their basic political beliefs.

ROUGH CAMPAIGN

Bipartisan experts are predicting an extremely rough and dirty campaign. The mud-slinging, these experts say, will probably not come from the principal candidates, but rather from various groups supporting them.

Like most Americans, college students cannot agree on the exact meanings of conservatism and liberalism. To some, conservatism is the same as fascism and to others, liberalism is another word for communism.

POLITICAL LABELS REVERSED

In the strict political science definition, a liberal advocates change while a conservative strives to keep everything status quo. These definitions would make Johnson the conservative and Goldwater the liberal. Nobody, however, will agree with this.

It is said that conservatism becomes a stronger force during times of prosperity. Except for individual cases, American college students have never known anything but prosperity.

Born at the tail end of the depression or during World War II, the average student grew up during the post-war boom that has continued on to the present day.

CONSERVATISM IN COLLEGES

Because of this, a great conservative pool has built up in the traditionally liberal colleges and universities. It could be noted during the Republican convention that the most avid supporters of Goldwater were young.

Contrary to the conservative-prosperity "law," however, the organization called Youth For Johnson and its affiliates have become a power to reckon with, proving that the American college student has far from rejected liberalism.

TACTICS OF CANDIDATES

Of the two candidates, Johnson identifies better with the common man. Accomplished through the use of barefoot daughters, long-eared hound dogs and "you all's," the Texan never lets it be forgotten that behind all of that corn there is a shrewd and able politician.

Goldwater, on the other hand, is busy trying to correct an initially bad public image and is using his political philosophy as his greatest vote-getter. The Senator is trying to sell his ideas more than he is trying to sell himself. This makes him different than most candidates of the past.

INFLUENCE OF YOUTH

Both candidates are well aware of the influence within the colleges and universities. This is evidenced by the fact that both men have at least hinted about abolishing the draft, a topic near to the very souls of most male students.

Another great pool of youth besides the institutions of learning is the armed forces. Johnson has just allotted two military pay raises and Goldwater promises even more.

The young people of today are more interested in politics and politics is more than interested in them. Whether the majority of the college students are liberal or conservative, observers hope that the 1964 election signals the end to the past apathy and ignorance youth has shown to the American political scene.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

STATISTICS recently released by a leading magazine indicated "more than two hundred thousand people a day have been going to the New York World's Fair."

As in most places of interest, fate always manages to disrupt one tourist's visit to the Fair. In this instance, the unsung heroine of the day is a person named Mildred.

Actually, Mildred, can't exactly be classified as a tourist. (Well most New Jerseyites really don't consider themselves tourists just because they visit the Fair.) In reality, Mildred is an adventure-seeking mother out for a fun-filled day at the Fair. And to say the least she is far from disappointed.

Weather-wise, it's a typical muggy, New York summer day. Even as our heroine arrives at the Fair bright and early, the temperature is already hovering close to the 100 degree mark.

Does this bother Mildred? Not in the least—until she stands in line for over two hours in the hope of seeing the Vatican Pavilion.

Emerging from the pavilion somewhat uplifted spiritually speaking, Mildred, herself, feels a bit lighter. A quick glance downward, reveals no trace of her son, who entered the pavilion with her, but obviously is no longer at her side.

A frantic search around the Fairgrounds proves futile until she looks upward. Low and behold, there is her son riding casually through the air high atop the Swiss Sky Ride.

Immediately, Mildred races to the ride, purchases a ticket and before too long is airborne—when what to her wondering eyes should appear—her son riding the same ride but going in the opposite direction! After a few scenic tours over the Fair, mother and son are together—for awhile.

To say the least, this ordeal has taken its toll and our heroine proceeds to find a table at which to eat. After an hour long treasure hunt, at last there appears an empty table. Scurrying madly, Mildred narrowly edges out another hungry competitor. Seated just long enough to rest "her weary bones," she again discovers something is missing.

Not only has her son vanished, but her box lunch has also strangely disappeared!

Another turbulent search around the Fair, finds her son exploring the Monorail. Within a few minutes, both remember where they left their box lunch.

(Who knows, right at this very moment some lucky person may be eating our heroine's sandwich—stale as it may be, as they enjoy their delightful Swiss Sky Ride over the Fair.

By this time, darkness is approaching, so Mildred heads back to the bus. Upon reaching the tranport station area, she beholds a frightening sight. Her bus is pulling away from the curb, and in it her son!

Weary and exhausted, Mildred finally catches another bus and arrives home in New Jersey safe and sound, however, a bit shaken.

Is our heroine bitter about her day at the Fair? Is she upset and disgusted? No sir. In her own words, "I must return to the Fair—ALONE, because it is beautiful, just absolutely, positively beautiful!"

(As The Guardsman was going to press, it learned that our heroine had been spotted returning to the "scene of battle.")

Song Girls Win Plaque At Foothill

The college's pom pom girls, Penny Brown, head of the group, Peggy Parham, Marilyn Erkkilla, Marily Vierucci and Carol Anselmi, won a plaque when they placed second in the Golden Gate Conference pom pom competition at the Foothill College Rally Clinic September 19.

The judges, Associated Student presidents of conference colleges, selected winners on the basis of timing, originality, coordination and spirit. In a routine to the James Bond Theme with an added twist, Oakland City College's pom pom girls won first place.

The competition was followed by a steak barbecue and a dance. The swim contest held at the dance was won by Miss Parham, song girl here, and Sal Zagari, yell leader. They were presented with a drum stick and a cup autographed by the band.

ISC Tea Initiates Statler Wing Use

Sorority Members Greet New Coeds

The Inter-Sorority Council of City College held its opening tea last Sunday, marking the first student function to be held in the new Statler Wing of Smith Hall.

Purpose of the tea was to acquaint new women students with the two sororities, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau, at the college.

This Sunday, October 4, Theta Tau will hold its first Fireside at the home of President Geraldine Maloney, and Phi Beta Rho's first Fireside will be held next Tuesday, October 6, at the home of President Randy Herting.

Rushing has started, and women students wishing to register may do so in S-150, Dean Mary Golding said, adding that women having no D or F grades in their junior and senior years in high school are eligible.

H&R Addition Now Open For Business

The Statler Wing, new addition to Smith Hall, which was built at a cost of $400,000, is now in use, according to Louis Batmale, coordinator of Technical-Terminal Education.

The new addition which was built with funds from a $100,000 grant from the Statler Corporation of New York, and $50,000 from local hotel and restaurant owners, as well as alumni, contains bigger and better facilities to be used in the hotel and restaurant department training program.

Though the addition is now being used, formal dedication ceremonies will be held on March 1, 1965, at which time Mrs. Alice Statler, widow of the late hotel owner, and Ward Arbury, chairman of the Statler corporation, are expected to be present, Batmale said.

This date marks the anniversary of the initiation of the hotel and restaurant department 28 years ago.

John Longo, a graduate of the college's H & R program, has been added to the department to work in front office and store-room procedures.

Card Sales Soar Past 3000 Mark

Associated Student card sales have surpassed the goal of 3000 set for the semester, Card Sales Chairman Mary Maurer announced today.

"This is the highest number of cards sold in the recent history of the college," Miss Maurer said, extending a special vote of thanks to all the salesmen for the time and effort they spent.

A limited number of cards is still available at the silver pole in Science Hall between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. Cards may also be obtained in Smith Hall.

Miss Maurer reminded new students that in addition to receiving considerable discounts throughout the city, AS cards afford them many other privileges including free admission to dances and football games and makes them eligible for parking permits.

Film Series To Begin Tomorrow

High Road To Yosemite will be the first of this semester's College Hour film series to be shown during College Hour tomorrow in S-136, according to Madison W. Devlin of the audio visual department.

Scenery of high country, including lakes, waterfalls, rivers, valleys and wild game, are among the many sights to be shown in tomorrow's film.

Future films will cover such topics as the Peace Corps, industries, travel and many other subjects of general interest. The films will be shown every Thursday during College Hour and their titles will be posted weekly on the bulletin board by the silver pole and on the door of S-136.

There will be no admission charge, and the theater will be open to all interested students and faculty members, Devlin said.

"This will make a total of 36 film series to be shown during College Hour for the past 27 years," Devlin commented. He further stated that one of the main purposes of the series is to give students who are not members of any college organizations, a chance to participate in a campus activity.

Scholarship Requests Now Being Accepted

Applications are now being accepted from those students who are eligible for the California Scottish Rite Foundation Scholarship and the Lucille Lesser Scholarship, Dean Mary Golding announced today.

Any student who has graduated from an San Francisco high school in either February or June of 1964, and has a superior high school record, is eligible to apply for these scholarships before Thursday, October 15.

The California Scottish Rite Foundation Scholarship provides approximately $550 each semester for several recipients of these scholarships.

The Lucille Lesser scholarship is awarded to two men students in the amount of $1500 each and extends over a four-year period.

Dean Golding also announced that last semester 104 scholarships, totaling $24,000, were awarded to students.

Rabbi Alvin Fine Lectures On Universal Human Rights In Little Theater Series Here

By Bea Takeuchi

Rabbi Alvin Fine, member of Mayor John Shelley's Committee on Human Rights, cited schizophrenia as a problem bothersome to basic concepts of human rights in a lecture here last Thursday.

"There is schizophrenia in our thinking of human beings in terms of human rights. We never quite get together and agree when we talk of human rights," he said.

The distinguished San Franciscan defined the Judeo-Christian concept of "inalienable human rights." These rights, he said, are born within every individual human being, and cannot be taken away from him, whether or not they are accepted by society in general.

"It is inconceivable to me to think of human rights in political terms. I think there are certain presuppositions we must accept, or we're in a lot of trouble," he said.

Fine explained that human beings conceive of this right as a "source from God," and that "life is sacred because of its source." Fine believes that there are "certain basic concepts, the idea of the creator, of human brotherhood, the sanctity of life and of a human being being born free and with the right to be free.

"We often forget ideas that are imbedded in the Declaration of Independence," Fine said. He cited that Thomas Jefferson himself emphasized that certain rights are endowed by God—that "there is a creator mentioned, a source of a being higher than himself, meaning that human values are superior to all others."

Fine described the goal of Mayor Shelley's Committee on Human Rights. "We are trying to effect changes in an orderly and constructive fashion, to eliminate causes of violence in human relations," he said.

Fine emphasized that the committee is trying to develop job opportunities so that men may enjoy these rights. "Man must eat, and he must have a job in order to eat."

Another thing in trying to work in practical ways, is the need for development of decent housing, and a good program in education, to re-educate those who need jobs, Fine said.

The committee is initiating programs in bringing younger people together, to have this social interaction, so that someday the community may become a better place to live in.

"The law itself is an instrument of instruction. A person is free to be what he wants to be, but he is not free to hurt me in the process," he said.

Fine emphasized that law is a necessary thing in order to bring about the concept of universal human rights. The American idea of law, ordinance, rule and regulation are important.

"It is a long, slow process, this function of law to create social atmosphere and substitute discipline in lieu of voluntary action."

"You cannot teach love by war. There are consequences," Fine said.

"We are inseparable from one another, however you may take this cliche. No man is truly free, and no man can escape human destiny. Everyone is wrapped up in his own," he emphasized.

The next event of the Student-Faculty Lecture Series is scheduled for Thursday, October 22, during College Hour.

Student Council Pledges Support To School Bond Issue

By Ann Weill

Enthusiasm and more interest in campus activities are goals of the new administration headed by Associated Student President Gary Ettin. Last week's Student Council meetings appeared to prove this aim.

Ettin and James Wyatt, new student government adviser who succeeds previous adviser Sherm Elworthy, are working together to strengthen student leadership and participation in campus affairs.

Student Council is in full support of the AS President. After taking their oaths of office, both council and cabinet members offered many ideas pertinent to gaining campus support.

Following a talk by Louis J. Conlan, president of the college, concerning the School Bond election, slated for November 3, student Public Relations Chairman Arnie Kamrin proposed a number of ideas to help the passage of the bond, Proposition B, which, when passed, will add new campus buildings.

Kamrin proposed organizing at least two rallies, to be held downtown, a mimeographed letter concerning the bond issue to be sent to parents and other adults, discussion periods explaining the bond issue in classes, bumper sticker brigades and three car caravans.

Kamrin also plans more cooperation between Council of Organizations and Student Council.

It was also revealed that Stan Angel has sold the most cards to date.

Student Council meetings are held from noon to 1 p.m. noon on Tuesday and Thursday in B-6. Ettin urged all interested students to attend.

Gridders Stun L.A. Valley, 18-7

Gianquinto To Helms Aerials Win Opener

By Mike Smith

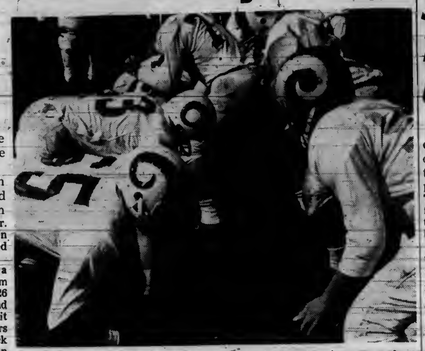
Two passes from Bill Gianquinto to John Helms sparked the Rams to an 18-7 victory over Los Angeles Valley Monarchs here last Friday afternoon at Ram Stadium.

The first was a 37 yard pass from Gianquinto to Helms which set the Rams up on the LA 20 yard line. Dennis Sullivan and Oliver Mitchell carried the ball in a series of three plays from LA Valley's 13 yard line to the four. On the next down, Sullivan went in on a right end sweep. The Rams tried for the two points but failed.

In a 91 yard goal line march, a second aerial covering 60 yards from Gianquinto to Helms put the ball 26 yards away from the Rams second TD. For a few frustrating moments it looked as though the local gridders weren't going to make it. Fullback Nansfield Walker charged 10 yards on the outside and fumbled the ball three more yards down field and out of bounds.

On the next play Ransom dashed over the goal line, but the play was nullified due to an offensive holding penalty against the Rams. In the next two plays, Mitchell and Ransom carried the ball to the Monarch two, and Gianquinto drove it in from there on a quarterback sneak. Once again they tried for the two points and failed.

When the clock was ticking off the last minute of the game, the Monarchs were deep in their own territory due to a 43 yard punt by Ron Fassler. Dudley Schusterick, the Valley quarterback, tossed a soft sideline pass which was intercepted for a 16 yard touchdown by defensive halfback Fassler. Again the Rams missed the two point conversion.



Mueh of the credit for the Ram win belongs to the defensive team, especially Suase Malae, Mike Taylor, and Chris Davis who were in on the Monarch passers all afternoon. Rudy Lapera and Davis came up with one of the biggest defensive plays of the day when they smeared Schusterick for a twenty-three yard loss.

In the defensive secondary, Henry King, Eurual Smothers, Fassler, and Oliver Mitchell halted Monarch drives by knocking down several key passes and intercepting one.

The offensive linemen also had a share of credit in this victory. On the Rams 91 yard touchdown drive in the third quarter, tackle Joe Ross, guard Bernard Mordret, and center Tony Blazar all threw key blocks.

In the first quarter, the only one which the local eleven failed to score, Ransom surged 40 yards upfield to the Monarchs 25 and put the team in scoring position. But the Rams immediately lost the ball on an alert interception. The Monarchs proceeded to march 65 yards downfield for their first and only touchdown of the day, as Terry Paddack sneaked through the Ram line.

Tomorrow night (8 p.m.) the Rams will meet San Joaquin Delta College at Stockton for their last pre-season game of the 1964 season.

14 Ram Grid Vets Bolster Fall '64 Football Prospects

The Ram football team, with 14 veterans, looks forward to a season which could lead them to the Golden Gate Conference championship.

Coach Dutch Elston declared yesterday that this team has improved both defensively and offensively from last year's spirited but injury-ridden team.

The Ram gridders have some outstanding veterans from last year's team led by speedy Oliver Mitchell, 5-10, 170-pound halfback; Henry King, 6-4, 210-pound end; Levi Byrd, 6-0, 211-pound guard; Bernard Mordret, 5-11, 200-pound guard; Tony Balzar, 6-1, 185-pound center, and All Conference linebacker, Rudy Lapera 5-10, 190 pounds.

Blended with these veterans, coach Elston is hopeful of getting outstanding performances from John Helms, 6-0, 170-pound halfback; Ron Fasseler, 5-11, 170-pound halfback from Sacred Heart; Mike Taylor, 6-4, 237-pound tackle from Mission; Suaese Malae, 6-2, 200-pound tackle from Balboa; Joe Ross 6-2, 270-pound tackle from Washington, and Eural Smothers 6-1, 185-pound end.

Heading the quarterback duties will be Bill Gianquinto, a strong passer from Sacred Heart who is 5-11, 180 pounds, and veteran Henry Scott, an excellent ball handler, who is 6-1, 170 pounds. These quarterbacks will be leading a multiple type offense with the wing T.

There are other fine veterans and many former high school stars who are fighting for starting assignments and eager to help the Ram football team to a successful year.

To gain a conference championship the Rams must contend with highly regarded Contra Costa, Chabot and San Mateo. Contra Costa has won the league title the last two years.

Helping head coach Elston mold this team into a strong contender are Ernie Domeueu, line coach; Alec Schwarz, line coach; and Larry Lawson, end coach. The Rams have already had numerous pre-season injuries because of what the coach calls "poor conditions" on the lower field next to Ocean avenue.

Golden Gate Invitational Is Key To Cross Country Hopes

For all intents and purposes, the season-opening Golden Gate Invitational cross country meet this Saturday in Golden Gate Park will serve as the key to whether Lou Vasquez's Rams can bring a third cross country conference title in four years to City College.

The only two returning cross country veterans are Rich Klemmer and Mike Conroy. The rest of the squad is new, but many of them show good potential although they won't reach their maximum eapacity for another season or so.

Outstanding individuals among the new crew are Les Arnold, Gil Kroeger, Joe Singer, Bob McGuire, Dennis Shea and Rich Cuadra. Coach Vasquez thinks that Singer in particular has an unlimited potential.

Even with what appears to be a potentially strong club, there are no strong individual stand-outs such as appeared on the championship teams of 1961 and 1962. But in all respects this club is superior to the fourth-place club of last season.

The powerhouse of the Golden Gate Conference at this stage in the season is San Mateo, which has four members of its first five returning this year. Any team which obtains the conference title must first pass San Mateo.

It is coach Vasquez's belief that from now on the league will get stronger each year.

San Francisco has definitely been bypassed in development of its track and cross country programs. At one time San Franciscans were leaders in this field but they have let leadership slip away to the point that they could be completely outclassed by other Northern California colleges.

Because of this weakness in San Francisco track and cross country programs, any win by these 1964 Rams will be a vast team effort. However, for the first time in some years, Vasquez has depth which wasn't evident on his latest championship squads.

There was no one to back up his first club so it was quite a feat to win the conference title and lose the Northern California title by one point.

If the Rams are in contention, this very valuable depth will greatly enhance the club's chances in the late going when illness and injuries take their toll. If all of coach Vasquez's hopes and predictions come true, his green club should be very much in contention for the Golden Gate Conference title.

The Walnut Creek meet last Saturday served as a tune up for the season-opening Golden Gate Invitational in Golden Gate Park. This will be coach Vasquez's first chance to see his club in action and will give him his first real idea as to how his club will do this season.

The Sacramento State Invitational will be the next meet, at Sacramento on Saturday, October 10, followed by the Chabot meet at Chabot on Thursday, October 15. San Mateo and Diablo Valley will be met October 22, Foothill and San Jose on October 29, Oakland and Contra Costa on November 5, Golden Gate Conference Meet on November 13, and the Northern California Championships November 20.

Special Meeting Tomorrow Starts Block SF Season

Starting a new season of activities, the Block SF society will have an important meeting during College Hour tomorrow in C-260.

At the meeting new officers will be selected and a tentative activities schedule will be drawn up. Also at the meeting vendors will be chosen to handle the concessions at the upcoming football games.

The schedule of the remaining meetings will be posted later.

This year the Block SF will start its "new look" as entertainment will be provided by each sport at respective meetings, and plans for a dance or day at the beach are also up for discussion.

Representatives from each of the respective sports are required to attend the meetings if the sport is to be eligible for awards.

All members are asked to attend and participate but are required only to pay their dues.

The Block SF is composed of the college's athletes who have won letters in their respective sports and fulfilled the requirements for admission.

At the end of each semester the Block SF holds an awards banquet at which letters and jackets are presented along with the most-valuable-player trophies for each sport.

RA Officers Invite All Students To Participate In Semester Activities

Participation in activities sponsored by the Recreation Association Council is open to all students of the college, according to RA officers.

Modern dance, tennis and fencing are among the sports in the RA coeducational program.

"Fun nights," dinners and sports days are additional functions offered by the club.

The RA is an organization designed for students who like to participate in sports for recreation, and plans for the near future include a play day, October 13, at Diablo Valley College. All who are interested may sign up with Edna Pope, RA adviser, in the women's gymnasium.

Newly elected RA officers are Donna Lleces, president; Joan Hassler, vice president; Carol Wong, secretary; Irma Tabares, treasurer, and Pam Maul, historian.

Soccer Squad Tangles With USF Tomorrow

Members of City College's soccer squad will take on University of San Francisco for their next-to-last preseason game at 3:15 p.m. tomorrow at Balboa Stadium. The Dons went to the national semi-finals in 1963, and they are expected to turn in a repeat performance, or better, this year.

The probable starting line-up for the game will be Joe Marin, goalie; Christopher Wager, left fullback; Alan Mould, right fullback; Louis Bolanos, left halfback; Mike Beltran, center half; Alfredo Fernandez, right halfback; Carlos Cortes, inside left; John Kazavis, inside right; George Fernandez, left wing and John Fromer at right wing.

Next Tuesday, October 6, the Ram soccer squad will tangle with San Francisco State College for the last preseason match before the regular season begins.

This event, at Balboa Stadium, marks the first time the two local rivals will meet each other this year. The Rams will meet the State team again on October 29. Last fall in preseason action, the City College booters squeaked by the Gators, 4-3.

Only three members of last year's championship Ram team will be returning for another season with the club. Out of these three, just one, Beltram, was a first stringer. Although very few veterans are returning, head coach Roy Diederichsen suspects that he has some bright new rookies on hand.

There is former prep star Fromer; coach Diederichsen plans to place him at the halfback position. Another possible "find" could be ex-Lowell star, Alex Mendieta. City College's soccer coach also believes that the number of good foreign students is an important factor in the team's success.

Coach Diederichsen is somewhat skeptical of the Rams' ability to repeat last fall's performance, but he does think that the squad should have a better than average season.

Listed as the home games, Balboa Stadium, of the present season: San Francisco State, October 6; College of San Mateo, October 16; Diablo Valley, October 29, and Menlo, November 13.

Monday Set As Deadline For Intra Petitions

Acting Associated Men Student President Ray Chezik announced today that petitions for entry in the AMS intramural basketball tournament are due no later than next Monday, October 5.

There are three divisions in the league, the Inter-Fraternity Council teams, club teams and independents.

To join the league a minimum of ten members must be enrolled in a club and all must be Associated Student members, Chezik said.

The first game is scheduled for Tuesday, October 13, in the men's gymnasium.

Chezik stipulated that all rules must be adhered to or the campus organization violating a rule will be immediately disqualified.

The program calls for a championship game at the semesterly AMS Sports Night. These Sport Nights usually feature films as well as several other types of competition. Chezik and his assistants, John Vanderburgh and Bob Higginbotham, plan to offer a most-valuable-player trophy in addition to the trophy for the tournament championship.

Petitions are available at the silver pole in Science Hall, as well as in the Cloud Hall library, Chezik said.

Last spring the intramural basketball competition saw the Divine Ones race through an undefeated season in the independent league, intramural's biggest conference. The Filipino Club proved to be the best of the Club League and Zeta Phi Sigma won the Fraternity League.

The Divine Ones are reigning intramural champions after their sports-night win over the Filipino Club.

RAMBLINGS

Ex-Rams Turn Pro; More On The Way

By Mike Smith

IT'S A LONG jump from City College into the elite of the professional arena. There are some who have made it, and there are others on their way.

A couple of Sundays ago, in a game against the Forty-Niners, a 34-year-old Ollie Matson ran the ball up the line for seven yards. Several plays later, this future National Football League Hall of Famer grabbed a pass for a reception of eight yards. At one time, Ollie played for City College.

Another former Ram is Lloyd Winston. Last fall when Winston played for the Forty-Niners, he led the team in rushing with a 4.7 average. But the local prospectors let him go because they felt Winston didn't play good like a football player should.

This year Winston is on the roster of the San Diego Chargers who are expected to repeat their 1963 performance of copping the American Football League's Western Division title.

Looking into professional baseball, we find several possible future stars who played for the City College Rams. First of all, there is Russ Kunkle (City College, 1964) who batted a .350 clip for the Sarasota White Sox in the Florida Sarasota Rookie League.

Former Ram Rich Nold set a New York-Pennsylvania League record of 268 strikeouts in 242 innings pitched. Nold reached his record on September 6 when he whiffed the league's 1963 champions, the Auburn Mets, eleven times.

While pitching for the Geneva Senators, the native San Francisco fireballer was also the league's only 20-game winner. Nold accounted for about a fourth of the Nats 79 wins, and he lost only eight.

Walt Williams, who played for the Rams last year, compiled a .318 batting average for the Winnepeg Cardinals of the Northern League. Williams was recently purchased from the Houston Club by a promising St. Louis club.

There is always room in sports for another star, especially from City College.

The Glorious Mistake

There will be no classes next Monday because 472 years ago a fearless Italian set out on a new route to India and only made it halfway, much to the everlasting gratitude of North, Central and South America.

Christopher Columbus was his name and he never realized his mistake. Had he, there is speculation as to what the colonists arriving years later would have called the Indians. Something unorthodox, like Americans perhaps.

Columbus was looked upon as something of a nut in 15th century Italy. He went around expounding extremist ideas about the world being round instead of flat. Not until he succeeded in conning Queen Isabella was he able to put her money where his mouth was.

Sailing with three ships and not-so-anxious crews, Columbus set out across the Atlantic in search of a passage to India.

Midway in the Atlantic, an incident happened aboard his flagship that has made an impact on every dining table in the civilized world.

The crew was growing impatient with meat and maggots and was mildly worried about dropping off the edge of the world. Then an impetuous sailor threw a table knife at the Captain, and missed. This disturbed Columbus and he had all of the points on all of the knives broken off.

Today, because of Columbus' solution to his problem, table knives have no points.

Meanwhile, back on the ocean, land. The date, October 12, 1492.

Because of the courage, conviction and fortitude of the now legendary Itallan, a Texan, President Lyndon Johnson, will lead a parade in his honor through North Beach next Monday. —B. B.

SF State, UC Move Up Date For Transfer Applications

Transfer enrollment application dates at the University of California and San Francisco State College have been moved up, the counseling staff here announced today.

At the University of California, applications are being accepted starting last Thursday for the fall semester of 1965. March 1 1965 will be the last possible day to submit applications. These dates apply to all University of California campuses.

Eligible students will be accepted in the order that applications are received, on a first come, first serve basis, according to the admissions staff.

For students who plan to transfer, transcripts of work and progress reports are to be sent to the University of California after the first mid-term and the final transcript at the end of the semester.

All personal grade and grade point information can be requested from the registrar. Information of spring progress is also expected to be provided so that the university can inform the student of acceptance on or by April 15, 1965.

Students planning to transfer to the University of California in Fall, 1965, were advised to consult their counselors as soon as possible for details and application cards.

Chances of U.C. transfer in Spring, 1965, appear to be very dim, and counselors said applications should be submitted immediately. Acceptance will be determined by how full quotas are at various campuses. The present deadline for spring transfer applications is December 15.

San Francisco State College reported that Spring, 1965, applicants should also apply immediately, for there is only limited space at the college.

Any "border-line" student whose eligibility depends on removing grade-point deficiencies this semester will not be considered until final grades are received by San Francisco State.

Istvan Nadas To Appear Tomorrow At C-Hour Concert

Istvan Nadas, world renowned concert pianist, will present a series of four piano compositions during College Hour tomorrow in the theater, according to Meyer Cahn, chairman of the concert series.

Nadas, presently on the faculty of San Francisco State College, was born and educated in Hungary and studied piano with such masters as Kodaly, Weiner and Bartok.

Tomorrow's concert will include the Italian Concerto by Bach, Sonata in A-Flat Major, Opus 26 by Ludwig van Beethoven and Ballade by Chopin.

This is the same program on a lesser degree, that Nadas followed when he appeared at the Curran Theater in November of last year.

Nadas, who has a Ph.D. degree from the University of Budapest, has a repertoire that includes 32 concertos and comprises 27 complete recitals.

In 1958 the New York Times selected his recording of the Hammerklavier Sonata, by Beethoven, as one of the ten best records of the year. He has also been acclaimed by the New York Times music critic as a "superb keyboard craftsman."

On November 5 the Borodin Quartet, in the United States on a limited engagement from Russia, is scheduled for the College Hour concert series in the theater. This will be one of the quartet's three public appearances listed for California.

Admission to the concert series is free, Cahn emphasized, and all concerts begin on time.

Free Hour Form Deadline Nears

Programming for the Spring, 1965, semester starts approximately the middle of October and appointments for students are now being prepared.

Students who have not submitted a free hour form to their counselors must do so at once, Walter J. McCloud of the counseling staff warned last week.

"It is also important that each student keeps the assigned appointment as there will be only one appointment for each student," McCloud added.

Any student who is unable to keep the appointment given him must notify his counselor two days before it is due so that his time may be given to another student and a new time arranged.

Second year students will recieve their registration numbers on the basis of the total number of units completed plus grade point average achieved.

Also important to the new student, McCloud explained, is the difference between his counselor and his semi-professional adviser.

The counselor assigned to him will remain to help him with his programs throughout his stay at the college.

Card Sales Re-Open After Record High

Because of the record sale of Associated Student cards this semester, an additional 2000 cards have been ordered and are now available at the silver pole in Science Hall, between 8 a.m. and 2:30 p.m., and also in Smith Hall.

"The semester goal of 3000 has been surpassed by 381, and is expected to rise even higher," Mary Maurer, card sales chairman, stated today.

Miss Maurer emphasized the benefits of card ownership which include parking permits, free admission to athletic events, dances and drama productions; participation in all clubs, sororities and fraternities on campus as well as numerous commercial discounts listed on the back of the card.

Miss Maurer also extended a special vote of thanks to Carol Jiminez, card sales co-chairman, and "to all the salesmen for a job well done."

Proposition B To Benefit Schools Throughout City

By Mike Barber

Schools throughout San Francisco, including City College, will benefit if Proposition B, the November 3 school bond issue, gains voter approval.

The 130 schools of the San Francisco Unified School District have an annual enrollment of more than 100,000 students. Many school buildings, some of which date back to the turn of the century, need to be replaced or renovated.

Population increases, due to people changing neighborhoods within the city as well as new arrivals to San Francisco, have placed heavy demands upon the present school structures and created a demand for new ones. Both needs would be satisfied if Proposition B is passed.

Schools slated for major construction projects, and their estimated costs, are Bret Harte, $660,000; Burnett, $715,000; Cabrillo, $1,320,000; Diamond Heights Elementary, $660,000; El Dorado, $725,000; Grattan School, $1,320,000; Paul Revere, $842,000; Starr King, $1,040,000, and City College, $2,028,000.

Two junior high schools, one at 19th and Carolina streets, and the other at Raymond avenue and Elliot street, will be constructed at a proposed cost of $3,410,000 each. An estimated $5,830,000 will be spent to erect a high school at O'Shaughnessy boulevard and Portola drive.

Replacement of temporary classrooms at several schools will cost $1,500,000. An additional $8,005,000, of which City College is to get $265,000, would be spent on modernization and rehabilitation of existing buildings.

Campus Police Clamp Down On Parking Regulation

More than 275 parking citations have been issued this semester by the Campus Police, Paul Robin, chief of police, stated last week.

He disclosed that the greatest number of citations issued was the result of students parking in the faculty areas, and that these areas would be under close surveillance in the future.

When asked if other problems relevant to parking had arisen during the semester, Robin replied, "Cooperation of the students in this phase of campus law enforcement has been excellent," but added, "it would make me very happy if they stayed away from the faculty parking lot as this will lead to further citations."

The Chief further revealed that an automobile theft ring is operating in and around the campus and warned students to lock their cars and keep the windows closed. Two automobiles have already been stolen this semester, he said.

Requirement of valid parking permits for students desiring to use campus parking lots, went into effect September 28. Permits may be obtained Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon in C-119.

Marine Corps Officers To Recruit Here Today

Marine Corps flight training programs will be discussed with interested students from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today in the courtyard.

Interviews will be conducted and aptitude tests administered by Captain Wayne R. Hyatt, U.S. Marine Corps. Captain Hyatt, a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, recently returned from duty in Viet Nam where he was awarded five Air Medals for 106 support missions.

Men with 30 units of 2.0 work, enrolled in their first-semester sophomore year, can enroll immediately for assignment to flight training upon completion of the full 60 units.

City College Close-Up Opens Sunday With Story Behind Testing, Counseling Work

Premiere of City College Close-Up, a new fall TV series produced in cooperation with the college and KPIX-TV, will be presented from 11 to 11:30 a.m. this Sunday on Channel 5. The first program, according to the producer, Sylvia R. Leff, will explain testing and counseling procedures at the college.

College President Louis G. Conlan, along with his administrative staff, will join with Director of Testing Thomas Nesbitt and a group of counselors to explain the purpose and types of psychological and aptitude tests given to each student preparing to enter the college.

Also included in the program, according to Mrs. Leff, will be a demonstration on how the test results are evaluated and how the subsequent information is then used by counselors.

Mrs. Leff disclosed that each program is to be divided into three parts.

A brief discussion by employers and other professional persons in a particular field covering job opportunities, personnel requirements and the value of two-year college training opens the program.

Second is an explanation and demonstration by the college's faculty members and students concerning the content of courses offered in the field which will be covered. Emphasis will be placed on skills and aptitudes a potential student should have for success.

The third segment includes conversations with working graduates of the college concerning their jobs, how they got them and the extent to which their training assisted them in finding these jobs.

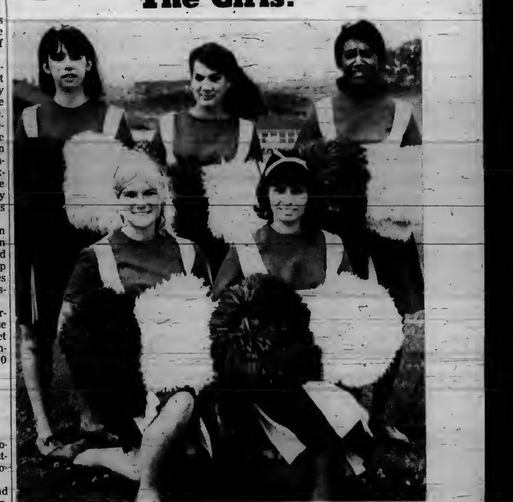
Mrs. Leff, in coopceration with Caryl Coleman, public affairs director of KPIX-TV, are producers of the series in which more than 150 industry leaders, students, working graduates, Bay Area educators and college faculty members participated.

Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction at the college, will act as host for the initial program.

Former Student's Mural On Display At White House

On display at the White House Harvest Festival is the award-winning mural by former City College student Kunio Tsuneyoshi.

The mural, entered in the California Seed Association-sponsored mural contest here last April, won first place in a field of 61 entries.



The Harvest Festival display at the White House department store will close Saturday, and from there the mural will go on display at the Orange Festival in San Bernardino, then in the spring to the Oakland Flower Show and the Pacific Seed Association Convention in San Diego.

William Davis, head of the advertising art department here, said that the mural was given first place "... because it showed great vitality and strength. The striking colors and bold design exhibited sure-fire growth and strength."

The design of the mural had to incorporate the idea that the seeds produced in California are the most disease-free and virile seeds produced anywhere in the world.

Tsuneyoshi received $35 for his winning mural.

Continuing Excess Population Deprives Future Generations

A PROBLEM OF LESS CONCERN than it merits is eluding today's college students and the populace in general. This is the confused term overpopulation.

When people think of overpopulation they foresee wall-to-wall people. This is something that will inevitably happen — 100 or 200 years from now.

What these people don't realize is that the effects of overpopulation are being felt today. Every day, buses and highways are packed with humanity. In the winter the snows turn into waiting lines for skiers, and in the summer the beaches become more and more crowded.

Take a ride into the country. Ten years ago the country was just down the Peninsula or just north of San Rafael. Now buildings are forming a chain past San Jose. To the north valleys and knolls are filled or covered with houses. Looking at the East Bay one sees nothing but a skyline of homes.

Where the homes sprout, the ugly black and grey snakes of highways and roads follow. Almost likes scales the rows of cars adorn the highways.

The problem increases with the realization that the children who are crowding the schools today will be worsening the problem as they grow older. School needs are far ahead of school bonds. More and more students are being turned away from the universities and colleges because there just isn't room for them. The expansion of two-year college programs is helping, but even they are turning away students.

In industry there is already a surplus of labor, and yet the present crop of teenagers must find a way of making a living in the near future. To use an industrial term to consider an industrial problem, overpopulation is coming to mean overproduction. There are more people than there are jobs.

In order to provide for the large populace machines are needed, but automation puts more people out of work. Industry needs educated workers to run the machines, but the people with the majority of children are in the lower income brackets and are the ones who rarely make it to college.

At one time large families were needed to fill in the wilderness of the continent. Large families were needed to build communities.

Then a family with more than 10 children was commonplace, but as the years have gone on the necessity for large families has dwindled and so has their number. Today parents who have more than four children are considered to have a large family, and those with more than eight are a novelty.

In the future it can be predicted that to have more than three offspring will be morally wrong. Two children to replace the parents and one for posterity.

Granted that in the future science and government will find a way to clothe and feed its masses, what more will they be able to provide? Even now it's not the necessities that are being strained but the luxuries.

What it boils down to, whether the generations of the future will just be here fed and clothed or whether there will be fewer of them enjoying the aesthetic luxuries now available.

Every "excess" child would be cheated and simply by being, cheating his siblings. With our present birth rates feeling the boom of the war babies and our schools and housing starting to show the signs, it is time for our present college students to take the problem into consideration when planning the size of coming families.

Too many children mean one less hill to gaze and lounge upon, one more hour to wait at the bank, store, dentist or restaurant, one less snow trip or day at the 'quiet' beach, one more river literally swallowed up, one more lake filled with garbage, one more forest gone for frames of houses, one more bay filled in, one more freeway, and one more soot-emitting car.

This is the fateful choice to be made for the future. Consider the wonder of a newborn child; if he is the fourth, is the price worth it?

Graduate Harvard Bound

Dan Graney To Specialize With Electron Microscope At Ivy League University

By Bea Takeuchi

Daniel Owen Graney, former student here, will be admitted to Harvard University this month. Graney, a research biologist, completed his Ph.D. degree thesis at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco last month.

His hard work and dedication to science made this achievement possible. His specialty is electro microscopy, a new field in biology.

Graney hopes to study more about animal tissues, and become a professor in a medical college someday.

Like a little boy who is both proud and delighted with his pet toy, Graney operates a huge, complicated electron microscope in a dark room. "It is a thrill to operate this.

"The red and green lights are glowing in the dark, and I feel as though I were in a Buck Rogers room. 'The Monster,' as some of colleagues call it, costs $35,000.

"It projects minute things onto a television-type screen by means of electrons," Graney explains.

For the benefit of The Guardsman, he went about his laboratory, pointing out each expensive and intricate scientific device, went back to the electron microscope and added, "The boss sent me to this big microscope with an instruction booklet. I learned how to operate it myself two days later."

Graney explained that a scientist must be versatile, and pointed out that he does most of his own photographic work.

In 1954 and 1955, Graney attended this college, and received some training in the liberal arts courses.

"It is no important for a scientist to take advantage of the liberal education as early as possible in his college career, because of the demanding course requirements that come later.

"Why, nowadays to be able to vote intelligently, one must have some knowledge of political science! Your education becomes narrower and narrower when you specialize in one field. Then you won't have the time to broaden your education later," Graney said.

Graney remembers that he wrote an English 1-A composition for Donald Snepp's class, entitled, "How to get a liberal education."

"I remember Mr. Snepp as an inspiring person and teacher who had the rare quality of being able to bring out the best in a student," he said.

"I was most inspired by Mr. John Ear[illegible], who taught me courses in zoology. In many cases the better teaching today is done in two-year colleges. In many of the universities professors are involved in their own research and administration responsibilities, and even problems off campus," Graney said.

Graney, 28, has covered ten years of college instruction. He has earned the following degrees: from City College his A.A. in 1957, and the University of California at Berkeley his A.B., 1958; M.A., 1962; Ph.D., 1964. He has assisted in the instruction of anatomy and has presented numerous publications.

When asked why he did not study to become a physician, he said, "I prefer research, because I'm so interested in this field. Besides, as a doctor, I would have to split my time and listen to everybody's gripes.

"I'd do it all over again, except I'd work a little harder," he concluded.

DANIEL OWEN GRANEY, research biologist, with the Siemens "monster," an electron microscope.

Election '64

The Big Issue: Who Gets The Panic Button

By Boyd Burtnett

RARE IS the college student who can remember a time when he did not have a nuclear armed missile pointed directly at him from some faraway place. Rarer still is the student who can remember a time when it took more than one bomb to destroy a city.

In the days before Hiroshima, the victims of a bombing attack had the law of averages on their side, a running chance and good shelter possibilities. No more.

ONLY ONE MISTAKE

Because it is conceivable that a full scale nuclear war could destroy mankind, the control of atomic weapons is the most prominent responsibility that faces the leaders of today's world. One mistake, one irrational act of anger can produce holocaust.

Today a President, Premier or Prime Minister holds the life or death of the human race, indeed, of all living things, at the tip of his finger which is poised at a button.

It is no wonder that people are concerned over whose finger is near and has access to that button.

Presidential control of nuclear weapons is a prime campaign issue in the 1964 election. It was not so in past elections since World War II because the candidates more or less agreed on the subject. The President has and always has had full and absolute control of weapon systems employing atomic energy.

And now, today, there are criticisms to this practice.

LIMITED CONTROL VIEW

Republican candidate Barry Goldwater is the main dissenter to the status quo in nuclear weapons control. His argument is that, even with the modern day ultra rapid communications, the President may not always have instantaneous contact with his military leaders in various parts of the world.

Goldwater states that the top military commanders should be given control of the low yield tactical atomic weapons. He does not advocate that the President relinquish his control of the giant retaliatory weapons in the megaton class.

ABSOLUTE CONTROL VIEW

Democratic candidate Lyndon Johnson wants to keep the President in absolute control of all atomic weapons. His argument for this "conservative" viewpoint is that the more men who share the responsibility, the more the chances for that one mistake or irrational act.

In other words, too many cooks could spoil the world.

A Sword of Damascus hangs over every major city in the United States, Russia and Europe, and neither system of control as put forth by the major presidential candidates will remove it. They are only suggesting ways to keep the [illegible] from breaking.

The issue is important, the candidates differ and the voter has to make a decision that could possibly affect not only his own life, but the lives of all of his kind.

But what happens when every little nation from the Congo to Costa Rica has an atom bomb?

Coed Hopes For Future Career In Peace Corps

With the recent furor over the antics of college students, it is refreshing to see that there are still some who not only can be serious students but also are dedicated humanists.

Such a person is Theresa (Terry) Murphy, a 17-year-old freshman coed here. Miss Murphy, a graduate of Star of the Sea Academy, is a Pre-medical major and intends to enter the Peace Corps.

Recently Look Magazine, in the September 22 issue called attention to her vocational plans, and the fact that she was to attend classes here.

This is the second time that the college received mention from Look. In 1948 the magazine ranked this college as one of the top ten two-year colleges in the country and called attention to the growing importance of the two-year college in education.

Miss Murphy, one of eight children, had this to say about her vocational plans. "I'm interested in people and in helping them. I would like to become either an obstetrician or pediatrician."

Commenting on the picture which appeared in Look, Miss Murphy said, "They (the reporters) were interested in our school for their article (The Class of '68); I was chosen because I was among the top ten in my graduating class and because my intended profession seemed out of the ordinary to them."

Returning once again to her plans to enter the Peace Corps, Miss Murphy stated, "This is my eventual goal, not something that I will do right away. I have a lot of work ahead of me, seven or more years. When I'm finished I want to go where I can be of the greatest help."

Mrs. Huffman's Travels Penetrate The Iron Curtain

By Don Patten

Helen Huffman, in an interview last week, stated that what amazed her most on her recent trip to the U.S.S.R. was the great love the Soviet people have for Americans.

"One can't imagine the great friendliness these people show toward Americans. Teenage individuals were constantly throwing bouquets of flowers on our camper truck and singing songs to us," she said.

Mrs. Huffman and a personal friend recently returned from a year-long trip that took them to Africa, the Middle East and Holy Land, Asia, the U.S.S.R. and most of Europe.

After having their truck loaded on a flatcar in Kars, Turkey, they traveled 12 kilometers (about 7.5 miles) to the Soviet border. There the truck was loaded onto a Soviet flatcar which was necessary because of the different railroad track gauge found in the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Huffman explained that the reason for this difference was to prevent other nations from invading the country by rail.

From the border, the two women traveled by Soviet railroad to Leninikan, Armenia, which is also in the Soviet Union.

She stressed the fact "the Soviet people were extremely interested in the American way of life. The two questions that they most often asked were: Does the American working man really own a car and does the American working man own his home and can he move without government permission?

"We must have shown thousands of people through our truck and they all told us there was nothing like America."

Poor quality of roads was another point emphasized by Mrs. Huffman. She indicated that two-lane roads, which caused monumental traffic jams, were found even at the approaches of large cities.

Of her visit to the Kremlin in Moscow, Mrs. Huffman described the museums and cathedrals as "fantastic."

"We also visited Lenin's tomb which is viewed by thousands of people weekly. Lenin's body, which is laid in a glass coffin, looks like wax it has been embalmed so many times."

Shopping in the Soviet Union, Mrs. Huffman told of the low quality merchandise and high prices. "Meat runs $2 per pound and the meat is only mediocre.

"With the high prices of food and the average person only making about $80 per month, the cost of living is balanced by government-owned housing. A Soviet family would only pay about $8 per month for home and utilities."

Leaving the Communist bloc in Berlin, Mrs. Huffman and her friend traveled to Bremen, Germany, then flew home.

Asked if she would like to return to the Soviet Union again, Mrs. Huffman replied, "No, I would not go again. It was very different from what I thought and I'm glad I went. After having traveled through most of the world, I came to realize that we Americans cannot know how rich we are until we see how other peoples of the world live economically."

(Mrs. Huffman is scheduled to speak on the African part of her tour tomorrow during College Hour in S-100 for an International Relations Society program open to all students.)

VISITING THE New York World's Fair can be a tremendously satisfying experience. (After all, not all tourists are fortunate enough to be unsung heroines or heroes as the case may be.)

It seems to follow a general consensus that certain sites around the Fair unquestionably fall into the "what you must see" category.

"Industrial exhibits such as General Motors, Ford, General Electric, Johnson's Wax and I.B.M. are free, vary in quality, and are usually impossible to get into except at dinnertime, when the Fair's restaurants are impossible to get into."

The Spanish Pavilion is perhaps the most worthwhile structure to view. In addition to a rare display of jewelry designed by Salvador Dali, "the dollar admission goes to the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association, and the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation."

Tourists seeking culture and enlightenment may find both at the African Pavilion. Various art treasures, a documentary film, and performances of music and dancing beckon countless visitors daily.

A bit less "enlightening," but a shade more refreshing is the Coca-Cola Pavilion. "There are always large crowds walking through or waiting to walk through, Hong Kong, Cambodia, Rio de Janeiro and other places, re-created with supposedly authentic scents and bottles of Coke in typical settings."

Walt Disney's popularity is not restricted to California in general, or Disneyland in particular. Fair-goers are captivated by Disney's "Small World" presented by Pepsi-Cola. "A delightful boat ride ushers tourists past Disney-animated dolls dressed in native costumes who sing, dance, and play musical instruments."

The time-conscious individual finds the Time Capsule quite interesting. "Visitors to the site of the 1939 Westinghouse capsule may sign their names in a book in order to have their signatures microfilmed and buried in the 1965 capsule."

Equally exciting as the Fair itself, is the transportation available to tourists. Trains, subways, buses, boats and helicopters offer convenient and comfortable services daily.

If there can be such a thing as good advice to heed concerning the Fair it might be something like this: "Go to only one important exhibit a day, between 6 and 9 o'clock in the evening. If that is impractical, arrive at 9 in the morning in order to have a good place in line by the time the exhibit opens at 10."

All things taken into consideration, the New York World's Fair is definitely worth seeing, seeing, seeing. To quote one Californian, "What isn't at the Fair just can't be too important."

Advertising Art Offers Award This Semester

The William J. Eckert Art Scholarship is available this semester to students majoring in advertising art and design.

The scholarship, in the form of a substantial cash grant, is to be used by the deserving student as an aid to the pursuit of the advertising art major at any State College or accredited art school.

In order to be eligible for this scholarship a student must demonstrate artistic ability, the desire to further his education in this field, and financial need. Applications for this scholarship can be filed with William W. Davis, departmental adviser, in S-243.

The scholarship honors William Eckert, advertising art instructor here who retired in 1963.

The college's advertising arts course is a terminal program, however, the credits are transferable to state colleges and art schools. As for the potential purveyors of pictorial and verbal alchemy, they are very much in demand upon their graduation from the two-year curriculum.

John O'Brien of the advertising arts staff disclosed that the demand for available graduates often exceeds the supply, particularly in the case of women graduates. The opportunities in this field are as unlimited as the graduate's imagination, he said.

Honor Society To Conduct Tutoring Service In C-Hour

By Hugh Haworth

The tutorial service conducted by Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, will be continued again this year, Jim Doudiet, AGS president, announced today.

"Any student who needs help in any of the subjects taught at the college can probably be helped by one of the society's tutors," he said.

Free aid can be obtained on a limited basis for an hour or two, and for the recommended fee of $1.50 per hour, an unlimited service is available. To get tutor help, desiring students can consult William Richardson, adviser to Alpha Gamma Sigma, in S-140.

On the planning table are several projects for the club, Doudiet declared. The possible re-opening of a study habits clinic, for three sessions after the coming midterm, is one project.

Many students find that after the initial shock of midterm examinations they have need of improving their study techniques. Therefore, the study clinic will open if there is enough student demand and club support behind it.

Another project is the proposal to support the re-opening of the college library stacks.

Also on the agenda for discussion is the coming annual statewide spring Alpha Gamma Sigma conference, which the honor society members hope will be held here this year.

One qualification for membership in the honor society, Doudiet explained, is that all freshmen who became life members of the California Scholastic Federation in high school are automatically eligible for membership. Those who have kept a B average or better in studies in college are also qualified.

Of the 271 persons meeting the grade average requirement for membership, only 40 or 50 are active members.

Doudiet urged all qualified students to join the honor group. He noted that an increase in numbers and enthusiasm can bring many activities to the club, such as speakers and the spring state conference.

The club meets during College Hours in S-214. This semester's officers of Alpha Gamma Sigma working with Doudiet are Donald Kemper, vice president and Joan Brannigan, secretary-treasurer.

KPFA Radio Subscription Offer Expires Friday

A special student subscription to The Folio, a biweekly pamphlet listing scheduled programs on radio station KPFA, is being offered for nine months duration at $7.50. The offer expires Saturday, a KPFA spokesman announced last week.

Financially supported by listener contributions and an occasional grant, KPFA has also been presented with the Peabody Award for excellence in broadcasting.

The station, which has been in existence for 15 years, differs from other stations, including educational stations, by broadcasting more experimental and controversial programs.

KPFA is located on the FM dial.

The Hotel and Restaurant Foundation of the college awarded a total of $4750 in scholarships this semester to 16 students majoring in hotel and restaurant operation.

Four Harvey M. Toy scholarships, worth $500 each, were awarded to Raymond Miller, second semester student; Nathaniel Haines, third semester student; Vincent Kikugawa, chef, and Donna May Payne.

A $250 Harvey M. Toy scholarship was awarded to Richard Bianco. Jean Molinari received a $250 Borden's Dairy Delivery Company scholarship, and George Gunderson won a Confrerie De La Chaine Des Rotisseurs for $250.

Ronald Perry was given $100 from Spreckels-Russell Dairy; Western Hotels Hardware Corp. presented $100 to Janielle Naauao; and Kenneth Lazeri received $100 from Roberts Turkey Brand.

The International Edge Tool Company presented a cutlery set to Douglas Dodd for being an outstanding student.

Ex-Guardsman Editor Becomes Judge

JUDGE Donald B. Constine

Donald B. Constine, former editor of The Guardsman, recently became the college's first graduate named to the position of a municipal judge.

After being graduated from the college in 1945, Constine immediately entered Hastings School of Law. He completed his studies there in 1949, took the bar examinations in October and was admitted into the profession in January, 1950, at the age of 23.

Constine became an assistant United States attorney in 1950, a position he held until succeeding Superior Judge Joseph Karesh as United States Commissioner in 1961.

He also served as a special investigator to California's Governor Edmund G. Brown when Brown was San Francisco District Attorney, and later was counsel for the Public Housing Administration before joining the United States Attorney's office.

Grad Petitions Deadline Friday

All students eligible for and expecting to graduate this February must file petitions in the registrar's office no later than Friday, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, warned today.

Forms may be obtained in the registrar's office from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Students failing to petition, Miss Learnard said, cannot expect to graduate.

Although these students will have completed their studies here in February, they do not receive the Associate in Arts degree until after the commencement awards assembly held in June.

During this assembly, students will be presented with scholarships and various awards for outstanding achievements. The Associate in Arts degree will then be mailed to them sometime in July, after evaluation of semester grades, Miss Learnard said.

Council Abandons Routine To Take Examination About Rules Of Parliamentary Law

By Peter Dorn

In a switch from usual council routine last week, a test on parliamentary procedure was given to all student government leaders by council adviser Jim Wyatt.

Wyatt announced that testing on parliamentary procedure will be a weekly event in Bungalow 6 for Associated Student officers.

Mary Maurer, card sales chairman, announced that an all-time high in recent years has been reached in the sale of AS cards.

"To date, 3381 cards have been sold, yielding an income of $16,379. Miss Maurer also informed council that 2000 additional AS cards are available. As cards are selling very well, there is great optimism that these additional cards will find homes in students' wallets.

The Frosh Ball is scheduled for Friday, October 30, and the Freshman Class is preparing the arrangements with the Hilton Hotel for this affair.

Poster regulations were broken last week, and council members were reminded that all posters must be submitted to the Publications Board Chairman Fred Wales in S-304 for approval prior to posting.

Stan Angel, representing the Proposition B committee, announced a newly-conceived promotion campaign. Approximately 2000 pamphlets explaining Proposition B are to be distributed by volunteer council members. These pamphlets will be placed under the left windshield wipers of automobiles parked in close proximity to the college.

Dean Ralph Hillsman previously pointed out the post-rally litter problem to Wyatt, who told council that it is expected to produce some solutions to this problem.

A group of recently appointed officers was sworn in last week. They included Arleen Segal, corresponding secretary; Joe Fanucchi, parliamentarian; Ernie Walker, activities chairman; Dan Sorbi, KCSF head; Jim Stull, head yell leader; Kathy Lively, student-faculty relations chairman, and Jim Soletti, publicity committee chairman.

The Frosh Premier Dance, which was held September 25, was reported as "very successful." Wardene Oliver, social committee chairman, announced that dance attendance surpassed the 700 mark. The profit from this "most social of events" was in the vicinity of $230.01.

Wyatt has a number of certificates that entitle students to reduced rates at the Geary and Curran Theaters. Wyatt's office is in Bungalow 5.

Certificates for reduced prices will be for such performances as the Gilbert and Sullivan classic H.M.S. Pinafore, Sophocles' Electra and Euripides' Medea.

Reduced rates for students will be available only until Saturday.

African Trip Topic Of IRC Lecture

The International Relations Club will have Helen Huffman, counselor here, as its featured guest speaker during College Hour tomorrow in S-100.

Mrs. Huffman intends to describe her recent trip through the African continent, a brief account of which was published in The Guardsman last week.

"The IRC hopes to have interesting guest speakers each College Hour for the benefit of those students whose interests are internationally oriented," Joseph Jacobson, adviser to both foreign students and the IRC, said.

In addition to presenting interesting speakers, the IRC has other plans for the semester, the "most important" of which is the annual International Fair, November 6 and 7, scheduled this year for the campus theater.

The fair is actually three shows in one: a variety show in which the members of the IFC perform dances and offer other types of entertainment representative of their native countries, a display of trade and art goods, and a buffet of food representing approximately 20 countries.

The IRC will also present an international tea-dance in Smith Hall, Friday from 3 to 7 p.m.

Ray Hackett and his orchestra will be featured at the dance, compliments of the American Federation of Musicians Union, AFL-CIO. Dress is formal and there is no charge, Jacobson said.

Previously, the fair had been scheduled for Lowell High School.

ASSOCIATED STUDENT President Gary Ettin completed his appointment of officers to fill top student government cabinet positions.

Ettin Completes Appointments For Official Cabinet

Gary Ettin, Associated Student president, completed his official cabinet appointments last week.

Naming of a new Associated Men Student president was on the Student Council schedule yesterday.

Cabinet officials appointed by Ettin are Mary Maurer and Carol Jiminez, Card Sales chairmen; Sandy Sager, Campus Affairs coordinator; Bob Higginbotham, Men's Athletic and Awards commissioner; Dan Christian, Election commissioner; Loralee Lando, Finance Committee chairman;

Terry Ellis, Cultural Affairs coordinator; Lori Klein, recording secretary; Arlene Segal, corresponding secretary; Kathi Kidd, presidential secretary; Joe Fanucchi, parliamentarian, and Mary Ann Ducommon, State Information chairman.

Honorary appointees include Tom Duff, Rally Committee commissioner; Dennis Whooley, Inter-Fraternity Council president; Fred Wales, Publications Board chairman; Paul Robbins, Campus Police chief; Jim Soletti, Publicity Committee chairman; Donna Lieces, Recreation Association president; Randee Herting, Inter-Sorority Council president and Kathy Lively, Student-Faculty Relations officer.

Sophomores To Finish Bulletin Board This Year

The Sophomore Class is currently completing construction of the new Associated Student bulletin board which is located on the southern part of the campus, adjacent to Cloud Hall. The redwood-frame construction will be used to give information of student and college activities.

The bulletin board was started last semester by Freshman Class President Terry Cloney and his cabinet. Cloney, now sophomore president, has been constructing the board with the help of Gary Freund, current freshman president.

The bulletin board will be the sophomores' only activity this semester. Money is the reason. The glass-enclosed bulletin board will have four-inch plastic letters to be placed on the walls.

One side of the structure has been completed and the second side will be finished later this semester, Cloney said.

The structure itself is six feet high and eight feet wide with a ten-foot concrete foundation.

For a club or class to post information on the board, a petition must be submitted for approval to Jim Wyatt, student government adviser, Cloney emphasized. Preference, he added, will be given to clubs governed by AS.

The redwood bulletin board will accommodate five advertisements at once. Costly posters and banners will no longer be necessary for advertising, according to Cloney, because the bulletin board will eliminate this expense. Cloney emphasized that the savings on advertisements can be used for other activities.

Mendieta Scores Three As Undefeated Booters Surprise USF Dons, 4-1

By Michael Sarao

City College's Ram soccer team pulled one of the major upsets of the season last Thursday by dumping the University of San Francisco, 4-1, in an interleague practice contest at Crocker-Amazon field.

With a win from a team of USF's potential the Rams go into their first league game with Diablo Valley confident of a league victory over the Vikings. Although Diablo is not a championship contender, Diederichsen feels that they have two unknown German halfbacks who could give the Rams some trouble in the game.

The Rams meet Diablo Valley today at Concord.

Going into the USF game, Ram coach Roy Diederichsen commented, "You always like to feel that you're going to win the game, but with a team of USF's caliber, you have to worry."

Throughout most of the first and second quarters, the contest was a nip and tuck battle with both clubs just missing near goals. It seems as though the Dons held the upper hand until about the end of the half.

At that time the Rams began to move, and with just about five minutes left on the clock, the Rams scored.

On a pass from the left wing, halfback Alec Mendieta booted the ball into a pile of green and red shirts, the goalie was then pushed into the net along with the ball giving City College its first score of the game.

After a few good attempts by Diederichsen's club to extend the score, a perfect pass from Al Fernandez into the middle of the field again gave Mendieta the chance to score. Mendieta made good his attempt, which raised the tally, 2-0, at the half.

From that time on the Ram defense tightened up. While the defense held, the offense added more points.

Midway in the third stanza, rookie Jon Fromer scored on a pass from the outside to give him his first score of the season and the Rams a 3-1 lead.

The Rams added one more in the latter part of the period, the score came on a pass from the wing Fromer to Carlos Cortes and then to the high point of the day, Mendieta for his third score and the Rams' fourth.

Booters Open Year With 8-5 Tally Over San Quentin

In their first preseason game, September 27, the Ram soccermen stormed the gates of San Quentin and overthrew the penitentiary's booter team by a score of 8-5.

Carrying the offensive load for the Rams were Carlos Cortes, who led the squad with four goals, Alex Mendieta and Alex Volikovsky who each scored two goals.

Coach Roy Diederichsen's Rams have been playing the San Quentin inmates for four or five years now, and the coach reiterated that "they give us a physical beating every time we play, and they are getting stronger because of the greater number of foreigners in the prison."

After the match the Rams were given a tour of the prison including the "little green room" and were served lunch as a finale.

The Rams are weaker this season because only three veteran members returned from last year's squad. There are standouts among the new players in Jon Fromer, a former All-City player, Mendieta, at center-forward and Al Fernandez who plays right wing.

Band To Perform At All Ram Grid Games

The Pep Band will be attending every football game, home and away this semester, according to John Dunn, band adviser. Dunn pointed out that the 50-member band performed at the first game without a practice session when the request of attendance at all games was issued.

This semester's drum major is Jim Hazlett, and returning baton twirler Clemmie Thompson will be band leader.

Doug McCrea is band manager and Art Lindholm student coordinator.

Again the Pep Band has been invited to the Junior Rose Bowl on December 12, which this year will be televised nationally as will the band's field performance, Dunn said.

Usually the band rehearses on Friday's between 2 and 4 p.m. in Smith Hall.

Fire Brand On Ice Film For Tomorrow

Fire Brand On Ice, starring professional hockey star Stan Mikita, is scheduled for showing during College Hour tomorrow in S-136, Madison Devlin of the audio-visual department announced.

Actual shots of Mikita and his team in action will highlight the movie with special emphasis on training and technique.

"It's a fast-moving and exciting game," Devlin said, and added that Mikita is one of the best hockey players in the country.

Penalties, Tough Defense Stop Ram Comeback, 13-6

By Mike Smith

A 45 yard Mustang pass from Bob Rosso to Joe Reeves and two penalties were the key factors that were responsible for the Rams 13-6 defeat at the hands of San Joaquin Delta College last Thursday night at Stockton's Pacific Memorial Stadium.

RAM'S LONE TOUCHDOWN

The San Franciscans only scoring came early in the first quarter when Joe Reeves' fumble was recovered by Rudy Lapera on the Mustang 18 yard line. Dennis Sullivan, following up on a 14 yard run by quarterback Bill Gianquinto, plunged four yards up the middle for Cain College's lone touchdown. Henry Scott tried for the one point conversion, but his kick fell several feet short of the cross bar.

San Joaquin came back in the second quarter on an 87 yard march in eight plays to tie the Rams 6-6. The long charge downfield began with a 45 yard pass from Rosso to Reeves, and ended with a three yard run by Reeves. Joe Garcia missed the conversion kick.

It was the penalties that hurt the local gridders more than anything else. The Stockton team received the opening kick in the second half, but was forced to give up the ball four downs later.

The Rams immediately marched 53 yards upfield to the Mustang 20 yard line. Oliver Mitchell sparked the drive with 17 and 14 yard runs, Mitchell's first run on the drive, a 12 yarder, was called back on an offensive (offside) penalty.

GREAT PLAYS NULLIFIED

From the Mustang twenty, Gianquinto tossed a 20 yard pass to Eural Smothers. The six foot-one Ram end literally spun out of the grasp of two Mustang defenders before he went in for the score. But the red flag had already gone down, and the great play by Smothers was wasted by a back field in motion penalty against the Rams.

Gianquinto went to the air two more times, and Mitchell tried to run for daylight two more times. But the Mustang defense, now on the alert after a second chance, stopped the Ram attack cold.

Without a doubt, the penalty that nullified a great play by Chris Davis late in the fourth quarter was the turning point of the game. The Mustangs had possession of the ball on the Ram 42; Davis stormed through the San Joaquin line and smeared quarterback Rosso for an 18 yard loss.

But the curse of the red flag was once again upon the local gridders. An obviously large Mustang loss was nullified on a penalty against City College. In the next two plays San Joaquin went all the way to the Rams' six yard line on a 15 yard aerial from Rosso to Larry Anderson and a four yard run by the Mustang quarterback. Then John Cooper swept around end six yards for the deciding touchdown of the game.

Despite the 13 to 6 loss, the Ram defense did not really play that bad a game. Frank Papi played an alert game all day, especially when he recovered a fourth quarter fumble by Reeves.

Lapera and Suase Malae once again were in on the passes; just before the end of the first quarter, the Ram linebackers threw the Mustangs for their second 18 yard loss of the day.

Orrie McRae played a good game, particularly when he caught Rosso two yards behind the line of scrimmage.

FIRST MEETING SINCE 1961

This was the fourteenth time the two rivals met. The last time was in 1961 when they were members of the old Big Eight Conference; in that year the Rams edged the Stockton team 7-6.

Now the Mustangs are members of the Valley Conference, and the Rams belong to the Golden Gate Conference.

In all, the Mustangs lead nine games to four. The biggest slaughter came in 1951 when San Francisco clobbered San Joaquin 46-7. The only shutout occurred in 1952 when the Mustangs smeared the Rams 20-0; and the only tie came in 1954 with a 13 up score. But the San Franciscans have won only one game in the past eight games the two teams have played.

In the Valley Conference, which consists of College of Sequoias, Sacramento City College, Fresno City College, American River Junior College, and Modesto Junior College, San Joaquin finished in last place with a 1-4 record. Despite this, they never lost by more than one touchdown, and four of those games were lost in the closing minutes of the game.

RAMS READY FOR SEASON

Now with their last pre-season game out of the way, the Rams will play for keeps. Their first league game will be with the Foothill College Owls this Saturday night (8 p.m.) at Foothill. If the Rams can keep away from the penalties and put a halt to the long bomb, they should give the Owls a run for their money.

The Rams will not come home until October 23 when they will clash with the Oakland Thunderbirds.

After Two Years Rams Collide With Foothill

By Stamus Cocoles

Ram gridders will meet Foothill College in their first Golden Gate Conference game at 8 p.m. this coming Saturday at Foothill Stadium.

The Rams showed great potential in their opening practice game against Los Angeles Valley and hope to display a strong passing and running attack against Foothill.

Foothill, led by coach Bill Abbey, has ten veterans returning from last year's team headed by their quarterback George Wagner and fullback Frank Lynch. Foothill claims to be strong defensively and will display a balanced attack on offense.

Two weeks ago the Owls were defeated by Sacramento's American River College, 20-14.

In this game the Owls were outrushed, 195 to 126, and out-passed, 133 to 62. Foothill completed five of 13 passes.

Last season Foothill had four victories and two defeats in the Golden Gate Conference, just ahead of the Rams in third place. Last year's Ram-Foothill game was cancelled because of the tragic death of President John F. Kennedy.

Two years ago, in their initial and only meeting, the Owls held on to a 19 to 8 victory over the Rams after leading 19 to 0.

The Ram defense looks strong, especially with the play in the Los Angeles Valley game by Suaese Malae, guard; Mike Taylor, tackle, and Chris Davis, end. Also bolstering the defense is linebacker Rudy Lapera and defensive back Ron Fassler, who also does the punting.

The Rams have a solid running attack with veteran Oliver Mitchell and first year men, Chris Ransom and Dennis Sullivan. Ransom showed good speed and running ability in the Los Angeles Valley game and just might be a real sleeper this coming season.

The college's line looks solid with guards Levi Byrd and Bernard Mordret, center Tony Balzar and tackles Joe Ross and Taylor.

Foothill can't concentrate on the Ram running game because of a man named Helms. John Helms caught two key long passes in the Los Angeles Valley game, and quarterback Bill Gianquinto hopes to connect with the same target against Foothill. He also has a capable receiver in Henry King, end.

The injury situation for the Rams so far has not been serious. Defensive tackle George Koniaris had to leave the Los Angeles Valley game in the first quarter with a knee injury but most likely will be ready for Foothill.

Fullback Joe Sobeck, who has been out with a preseason injury, should also be ready to go against Foothill.

The remaining conference schedule calls for the Rams to play Chabot on October 16, Oakland on October 23 here, Contra Costa on October 30 here, San Mateo on November 7 at San Mateo, San Jose on November 13 at San Jose and Diablo Valley on November 20 here.

San Mateo Hosts RA Volleyball Tourney Oct. 21

A combination volleyball tournament and "fun night," arranged by the Recreation Association and the corresponding club of College of San Mateo, will take place at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, October 21, at San Mateo.

RA President Donna Lleces stated that the semiannual affair has become a tradition with the two colleges which alternate their meeting place each semester. Next semester City College will invite the San Mateo sports club to this campus.

Monterey Peninsula College is the site of action Saturday, October 24, when the RA takes part in a playday presenting competition in numerous sports.

Last Saturday the RA competed in its first sports day of the fall semester which took place at Diablo Valley. Social dancing, fencing and badminton were on the agenda.

Grunt 'N Groaners Go Way Back To Pharaohs

By Mike Smith

A WIDE AREA of competitive sports dates back long before this country was ever conceived. Some are still with us today, and others have quietly slipped away. But none of them, with the possible exception of boxing, dates back further than wrestling.

We have definite evidence of actual records of wrestling events in the years 700 to 750 B.C. Wall paintings, around some 5000 to 6000 years old, have been found in the tombs of ancient Egyptians showing that they knew every hold we now know.

Wrestling gradually crept into the ancient Greek civilization, and the Greeks introduced it to the Olympic Games, thus giving the sport exposure to the existing world some 2700 years ago. In these early days, wrestling was developed and improved in the games. From these developments some of the world's greatest wrestlers arose.

When time sped up on the world and grabbed it in the Middle Ages, most of the competitive sports had disappeared, but wrestling hung on as one of the few representatives of the sports world. In these times, England and France engaged in international wrestling tournaments; and when parties or celebrations were held in the king's courts, a wrestling match was often one of the highlights of the evening.

Around the time the New World was discovered, the colonists brought wrestling with them on their journey to North America. When they landed, the future Americans found that wrestling was a very old and very popular sport among the Indians.

But on the Golden Gate Conference wrestling schedule for the 1964-65 season, City College of San Francisco is not listed. Last year the college's wrestling team was forced to fold because of lack of interest.

Last season coach Dutch Elston's wrestling team began with 18 men and ended with two. Forty or more wrestlers are needed this year (the season begins in December and runs until March) to fill the team's ten weight divisions ranging from 115 pounds to unlimited.

Five thousand years ago the ancient Egyptians knew practically every wrestling hold we know today, and the Rams cannot even get a team on the mat.

Bond No Threat To Taxpayers

TERRY CLONEY, sophomore president.

Proposition B To Derive Funds From One Per Cent Of Sales Tax

By Mike Barber

Property taxpayers won't have to worry when San Francisco voters decide on Proposition B, the $31,465,000 school bond issue, November 3.

Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management at the college, stated, "We are extremely fortunate in San Francisco that voters put into the city's charter the stipulation that the one per cent sales tax is earmarked for necessary capital improvements.

"Accordingly, with a very strict control of projects allowed in the various departments of the city, the city controller can arrange so that all municipal and school building bonds passed in San Francisco never become a burden on the local property taxpayer.

"Not a single cent increase on the tax rate will be made to make the payments on the present bond issue proposed," he said.

San Franciscans, by putting one cent out of the four cents sales tax on the dollar into the city's fund for capital improvements, collect approximately $20 million a year.

Bond issues, by allocating a proportionate amount of this money to their schools, allow the people of this city to enjoy one of the lowest tax rates of all the major school districts in California.

This tax rate is below the maximum, so San Francisco schools will not be eligible for state aid through the proposed Proposition 3, which will also be on the November 3 ballot.

Proposition 3 is a state proposition which will allow state loans to be made to those school districts which have reached the maximum rates of taxation and bonding capacity.

If proposition B is approved, the college will receive an additional $500,000 from State Proposition 2.

Better Education Official Goal Of Proposition B

Yes on B = Better Education will be the slogan on all material and information in the campaign to pass Proposition B, the aid to education bill, which will be on the ballot this November.

All clubs on campus are pledged for participation, Terry Cloney, sophomore class president, reported last week.

At a recent planning meeting, the Sophomore Class volunteered to distribute the work to seven groups formed to coordinate campus activities for support of Proposition B.

Group 1 will write 8500 letters to the parents of the students of the college. This responsibility was accepted by the Student-Faculty Relations Committee.

Group 2 plans to use 2000 bumper strips, and the Student Council will distribute them.

Group 3, led by the Inter-Fraternity Council, will label all available store windows with posters containing the slogan's simple equation.

Group 4 is the Rally Committee's responsibility and will include rallies on campus which will be extended to reach many sections of San Francisco.

Group 5 is Council of Organizations' plans to place cards on buses and in terminals.

Group 6 will be composed of 60 Associated Women Students who will institute a telephone campaign, a method to which many election campaigners have attributed their success.

The Inter-Sorority Council leads Group 7 which will coordinate publicity and write news releases to newspapers, television and radio stations.

Cloney said that students who would like to help in the campaign can volunteer to clubs on campus. He added that anyone who has friends or relatives in public relations fields could be very helpful to the Publicity Committee.

Paramedics Next On TV 'Close-Up'

City College Close-Up presents its second program in the series, 11 to 11:30 a.m. Sunday on KPIX-TV, featuring the paramedical services curricula at the college, Sylvia R. Leff, producer of the series, stated last week.

The fields of medical assisting, X-ray technology and nursing will be examined by leading professionals and working graduates in the fields.

Emphasis will be placed on job opportunities in these areas. Faculty members Harryjean Tieselinck, William E. Hoskins and Ganelle Griffin will appear on the program. Also appearing will be Elizabeth Louise Park, a part-time instructor here.

These persons and students will explain and demonstrate the courses leading to certification.

Amori Cites Job Opportunities For Christmas

Employers throughout the city have listed many job opportunities with the college Placement Center this past week, Joseph A. Amori, director of placement, stated today.

Jobs now available fall into many categories ranging from candy dippers to Santa Clauses, but students who demonstrate experience in one or more of the following positions will be given a definite placement priority, Amori said:

Sales, wrapping, cashiering, bookkeeping, mail sorters, bakers, shipping clerks, delivery drivers, bartenders, floristry and others.

Recruitment for the Yuletide season begins during the Thanksgiving vacation week and continues until about December 10, when many students will be needed on a full-time basis, Amori said, adding that stores have stocked huge inventories for the Christmas season and expect to top last year's sales record by at least 10 per cent.

Amori further stated that students should register as early as possible since employers are demanding more extensive investigation of each applicant, thereby taking up more time than in previous years.

All the larger stores use tests for screening and selection, eliminating those who have bad driving records, dismissals from previous employment or poor scholarship.

The pay will be up about five per cent this year in most categories, with a high of $2.35 for post office employees while stores are paying an average of $1.50 per hour, he explained.

Amori reminded students seeking Christmas employment that they should not wait until December 10 to apply for a job, but to keep in touch with the Placement Center in the weeks ahead.

College Takes Part In Monterey Show Of Retail Florists

Retail floristry students at the college participated in the California State Florists' Association Convention in Monterey early this month.

The students will participate in another design school the first week of November when the annual Christmas Show is held at the San Francisco Flower Market.

Jack Connell, a student from Columbus, Ohio, will chairman that event, and Charlotte Eberhard will act as co-chairman.

Maryhope Jacks, retail floristry instructor, said that nine students attended the Monterey convention held at the Mark Thomas Hotel. The convention included a Design School where students engaged in floristry work and sat in on sessions of retailers and wholesaler meetings.

Previous to the Design School, some of the students made up corsages for the convention delegates and helped with decorating the hotel. On Sunday, all of the intermediate and advanced students staffed a booth which was set up outside of the main Design School.

Several students at a time designed flower arrangements for one hour each, turning out such things as wedding, funeral and corsage displays. Students George Gagna and Larry Janzen were co-chairmen for this event and programmed the display which was put on. This activity gave them experience in putting together buying lists and organizing other student work, Mrs. Jacks explained.

The State Association of Retail Florists hosted the students for a luncheon on Sunday.

Besides gaining experience in the field, floristry students can obtain scholarships to help them along financially. Scholarships, Mrs. Jacks said, are available to anyone enrolled in horticulture classes who has a good academic standing.

Permit Violations Head List Of Traffic Citations; Drivers Pay $600 Each Week To City

By Hugh Haworth

Permit violations continue to lead the list of traffic citations given by the Campus Police, Deputy Chief John Fusselman, announced today.

The breakdown on the different offenses show that approximately 85 per cent of the violations are for parking without permits or parking outside of assigned lots. Five to ten per cent are for time zone violations, and the remaining five per cent for parking outside the stalls.

SKI CLUB PRESIDENT Ken Ouellette announced details of the club's first dance scheduled for Smith Hall on Friday.

"Parking violations have recently been averaging about 60 tickets per day," Fussleman noted. "Which means that student drivers are paying about $600 a week to the city for citations."

During the leniency period through September 28, 384 tickets were given, mostly to student cars parked in faculty areas.

700 TAGS ISSUED

Since the clamp-down on parking regulations, 300 more violations have been added, bringing the total citations to date to approximately 700.

"There are several problem areas in the parking lots that the students should know about in order to avoid being cited," Fussleman stated.

Cycles and scooters have only one area for parking—A lot next to Smith Hall. As of Friday, October 16, "any cycle out of A lot will be tagged," Paul Robin, Campus Police chief, warned.

By keeping all cycles and scooters in one section, A lot, the Campus Police can keep a closer eye on them. To date one cycle has been stolen and one cycle thief has been caught.

ROOFTOP PATROL

As further protection against auto theft, the Campus Police have started to survey parking areas with binoculars and two-way radios from the roof of Science Hall, Robin disclosed.

The access road between B and C lots below the Statler Wing, is excessively narrowed by cars parking out on the roadway leaving little room for passageway. Recently, one Volkswagen turned over at that spot, going up the embankment in an attempt to avoid an on-coming car.

For those having a problem finding parking space in B and C lots, Fusselman advised drivers coming up Ocean avenue to continue into the reservoir area where parking is far less crowded.

SPEED LIMITS CHECKED

Another area that should be noted, Robin added, is D lot. D lot along the curb next to the men's gymnasium is for faculty parking only. The rest of the lot is open to students. Both one-way streets running along the gymnasiums are also off limits for parking.

Some problems concerning moving violations that students have overlooked are speed limits and reckless driving. On campus the speed limit is 10 miles per hour. Students will be cited if they drive over that speed in the lots," Robin emphasized.

Cloud circle is not a thoroughfare, and student drivers who use the circle to let out passengers or for other reasons will be cited.

Fusseman predicted that drop-outs will leave many more spots for parking. He noted, however, students will still risk being tagged to get spaces in unauthorized areas. For example, one student totaled 120 tickets last year, and the Campus Police expect as many from him again this year.

Ski Club Hosts First Dance In Smith Hall Friday

Plans for the Ram Ski Club's first campus dance, scheduled to start at 8 p.m. Friday in Smith Hall, were announced today by Ken Ouellette, club president.

The theme of the dance will be 'Til the Snow Comes, he said.

Dress for the dance will be semi-formal, Ouellette stated and admission will be $1 for members, $1.25 for Associated Student members and $1.50 for all other students.

"We are going all out to make sure that our first dance will be a great success," Ouellette emphasized.

In addition to the dance the ski club has made plans for two snow trips, which will be held during the semester's December vacation.

In addition to the dance and snow trips, plans are also being made to purchase a ski lodge which will be used solely by ski club members and their guests.

Ouellette is also planning to organize a college ski team which would enter team competition with other college teams in the Bay Area. In addition to skiing, many of the club members also water ski and ice skate to keep in form.

Other club officers are Vice President Ray Holstead, Treasurer Pam Carlyon, Secretary Jackie Reed and Social Chairman Kathy Blum. Adviser to the club is Robert Quigley.

This year all members will receive membership pins and Ouellette invited students who are interested in joining the club or taking part in the club's activities to attend meetings held during College Hours Thursdays in A-302.

Four Grads Regents Scholars At UC

Four City College graduates were honored this semester as Regents Scholars at the University of California for 1964-65.

Frank L. Kinder, dean of educational relations at UC, named James Chan, Allan Joseph Flach and Isabelle Lim as the recipients of the scholarships. Dean of Women Mary Golding added the name of the college's recent Regents Scholar, Betsy Jacqueline Erkkila.

Regents Scholarships were initiated last year by the University of California in an attempt to compete with other universities in attracting outstanding students.

The scholarship consists of a $100 honorarium at registration and stipends ranging from $1000 to $1500. Miss Erkkila received the full subsistance of $1470 this year.

This money is not a loan; it is a cash grant to aid the student so as to make it unnecessary for him to seek employment during the college semester. In addition to the stipend, Regents Scholars have the privilege of living in University residence halls.

The Regents Scholarship is renewable yearly. Eligibility for renewal is subject to the maintainance of a minimum "B" average in courses that number 12 or more units.

Applications for the scholarship can be filed at Dean Golding's office, S-150. If the applicant is found to be worthy of the scholarship, a letter of recommendation is forwarded to the University. The Committee on Undergraduate Scholarships and Honors at UC determines all appointments.

Chan, Miss Lim and Flach were majoring in pharmacy at City College; they are now attending UC's medical center. Miss Erkkila, however, chose English as her major at City College where she was graduated with Highest Honors.

Passage Of Proposition B Hinges On Student Support

ALTHOUGH the coming national elections will be of interest to all college students, the city elections will have special significance to City College students.

Proposition B is on the November 3 ballot and this college stands to gain much needed and overdue improvements.

What the bond issue intends to do is complete the campus.

At present the Dental Assisting, Graphic Arts, X-ray and Photography divisions are no more than extensions of temporary improvisions.

The counselling offices in S-160 and S-143 were originally designed as drafting laboratories. The Registrar and Coordinator of Student Welfare offices were originally a classroom and laboratory and are now partitioned into temporary offices occupying an area of 3000 square feet. This area is to store all student records as well as transfer and selective service information.

The testing office was a classroom and is not equipped to handle correctly the numerous requirements of the Director of Testing, Research and Guidance Office.

This same story is true of the Placement Office as it occupies what was to have been faculty offices with no waiting rooms.

The IBM offices now occupy two classrooms and are in dire need of more space in order to handle adequately their increasing demands.

In the area of student government the needs are also apparent. At present the government adviser and the Associated Student officers occupy plywood stalls in Bungalow 5, while the finance and accounting offices are tucked away from everyone in Smith Hall.

To alleviate the above situation, funds from Proposition B will be utilized to construct an Educational Service Building, conveniently located on the corner of Ocean and Phelan avenues. This building will provide adequate and permanent facilities for all student services from counseling to placement.

The student government adviser and student officers will have their own offices and close by will be the finance office.

Testing and placement offices will also be established in the new building. Once completed, all registration and transfer information can be secured there without further inquiries all over the campus.

The vacated areas in Science Hall will be reconverted into much-needed science laboratories and tiered lecture classrooms. A section of the old offices will be remodeled to accommodate the deans' offices with proper space for files and conference rooms.

Chemistry laboratories and laboratory space will also be converted from the vacated space.

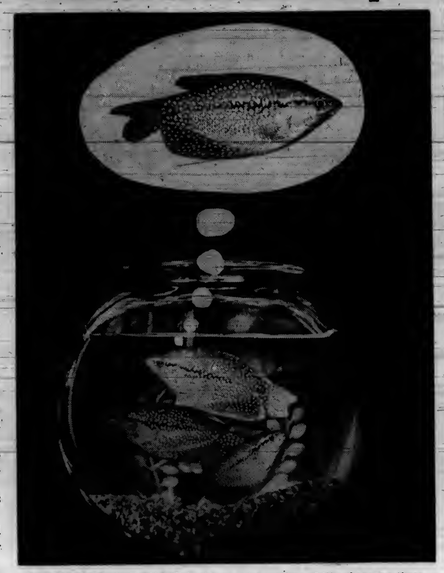
Taking over C-350 and C-349 along with a Dental Technology Laboratory will be a completed Dental Assisting program.

All the lighting in Science Hall is at present below acceptable standards and the classrooms have no acoustical provisions. These two deficiencies will also be handled under the modernization section of the bond.

Another building will be constructed as an extension to Arts Hall and will be located in the space east of Arts ramp just south of the Horticulture Center. This building will house proper facilities for two growing curricula, Photography and Advertising Art and Design. At present the photography department occupies what was to be a storage space in Cloud Hall while the Ad Art and Design are situated on the third floor of Science Hall.

In addition to the two new structures and the remodeling of Science Hall, will be space for 200 additional lockers in the women's gymnasium and a campus improvement section which includes landscaping, additional benches and construction of roads, steps and parking area.

All this and more is contained in Proposition B if only students will take the initiative to push the passage of this most important bond issue.



The facilities students here are now enjoying came as the result of long hours of campaigning by former students. In 1948 Cloud and Smith Halls were added to the campus by a bond issue that was passed thanks to the cooperation of all the students and their parents. As recently as 1956 when the passage of Proposition A gave the college additions to the gymnasium and Smith Hall as well as constructing Arts Hall and the footbal stadium, it was the students who rallied support behind the important issue.

Now it will again be the job of the students to get behind Proposition B and push for its passage.

Although there is presently no organized opposition to Proposition B, it is estimated that 200,000 voters will cast a no vote just because it is a money bond issue. The bond needs a two-thirds vote for passage and this means 400,000 yes votes just to cancel out these expected dissenters.

For Proposition B to pass, it will have to be brought to the attention of the public and the only force large enough to reach the mass of voters needed is the WHOLE student body. Explain the bill to relatives and friends and defend it against any opponents. Students enrolled now are enjoying the results of hard campaigning by former students. This debt can only be repaid in kind. The future of this college and its students depends on it. PROPOSITION B MUST PASS!

Where Is Pearl Baby?

SOMEWHERE, OUT THERE in that great aquarium of life, there are three extremely lonesome males who desire female companionship. They don't even care if the girls look like fish; as a matter of fact, they would prefer it.

Yes, these three are actually little fishies themselves; technically known as the pearl gourami, a tropical variety.

THE WOULD-BE MATCHMAKER is Robin Crizer, 17-year veteran mechanical drawing and machine shop instructor as well as adviser for the technical drafting program here. His hobby is fish, collection, that is, and therefore he is a natural as keeper of the warm-water bachelors.

Crizer placed the following plea in a recent President's Bulletin to the faculty: "Young vigorous male pearl gourami wants to meet vivacious girl pearl gourami. Object-matrimony." These fish are getting desperate.

FOR THE LAST 15 YEARS Crizer has collected all types of tropical fish. This is his first experience in raising the pearly ones, though.

Crizer now boards 50 different swimmers in ten tanks. He has discovered that egg-laying fish, such as the gourami, are much harder to breed than the live-bearing varieties because the male of the species may be inclined to eat the eggs.

GRIZER WISHES MORE PERSONS would take an interest in the tropical fish hobby because it is not only interesting, but relaxing and rewarding. He has found that the interest in tropical fish is growing all over the state.

As a final plea, anyone knowing the whereabouts of a female pearl gourami is asked to notify Crizer in S-4a. His water-logged friends would appreciate it.

Horticulture Student Voices Solution To Famine In Asia

Samuel L. Lewis, ornamental horticulture student here, believes that he may have the answer to Asia's food problems.

Lewis, a student here from 1949 to 1951, majored in horticulture and chemistry. Several years later, in 1955, he received a legacy which gives him a continuous income for the rest of his life. It was at this time that Lewis began his world travels.

According to Lewis, who has returned here to do further research in horticulture, all the answers to Asia's food problem can be found here in California.

Turning to an account of his travels, Lewis said, "In 1956 while I was in Karachi, I saw 600,000 refugees without food. It was then that I decided to abandon my previous mission of demonstrating methods of ornamental horticulture and devote my time to world food problems.

"The basic theme of my plan," he emphasized, "is that California has set up standards which countries of similar soil conditions and climate could adopt, and staples like dates, citrus, truck garden vegetables and fruits be planted."

Commenting on his years spent here in training, Lewis stated,

"This college offers training that is not available anywhere else. The head of the department, Harry Nelson, is now recognized by many leading universities as a leader in his field. In fact, Nelson and his students have long been working on a series of sprays and pesticides that are not harmful to animal life."

Continuing along the same line of thought, Lewis added, "A student at this college can receive a varied education, unavailable to him in the specialized universities of today, and a varied and liberal education is very important in today's world.

"I am working toward establishing world peace and so the people of Asia will have 'freedom from want'," he emphasized.

Mr. Novak 'Serves' At Tennis Benefit

James (Mr. Novak) Franciscus, television's most popular version of the school teacher, will take part in the 1:30 p.m. Tennis Extravaganza Sunday at the Olympic Country Club.

The extravaganza will be presented by the Youth Tennis Foundation of Northern California whose slogan is, "Children on the tennis courts are not in juvenile courts!"

Franciscus will appear with other movie, television and news personalities to participate in a number of net sets for the benefit of the Youth Tennis Foundation.

In addition to being a sometimes controversial TV personality, Franciscus is also a "weekend tennis player" with his wife, Kitty.

In addition to Franciscus, other celebrities to appear at the Extravaganza will be Charlton Heston, Dinah Shore, Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., John Gary, MacDonald Carey and Jim Brown (Lt. Rip of the Rin Tin Tin TV series).

Local celebrities appearing at the benefit are Fred Goerner (KCBS), Craig Harrison (KCBS. Jim Baker of KGO-TV will play a grudge match with Herb Caen of the San Francisco Chronicle and Paul Speegle will MC the show.

General admission is $5 and tickets are available through faculty member Barbara Rosenthal in S-350.

Election '64

Hottest Issues Lost In Name-Calling Smoke

By Boyd Burtnett

THE LOFTY expectations that most observers held for the 1964 presidential campaign are not coming true. They are feeling disappointment and disgust because they expected too much from the candidates who had so much to offer.

Newspaper coverage of the principal candidates, Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson and Republican Barry Goldwater, has dropped to such a point that an interested reader (there are some) has to turn to page 3 in order to find out how the campaign is progressing.

FENCE-TOP CHAT

Former President Eisenhower and Goldwater decided to have a televised chat over the top of a fence at Gettysburg a couple of weeks ago. It was here that many persons could have gained some insight to Republican politics.

However, the majority of the viewing public preferred to watch an oversexed soap opera on a different network.

CANDIDATES' RESPONSIBILITIES

This is not entirely the fault of the public. It is the responsibility of the candidates to keep the voters interested in the campaign, not the other way around.

Ah, but it is nice to think about what could have happened.

The civil rights issue between Johnson and Goldwater could have developed into a classic struggle. One man stands for civil rights, the other stands for property rights, or at least this is what the image makers have led the public to believe.

TIPPY-TOE IN BOOTS

But instead of a struggle, both sides are going around tip-toed in hob-nailed boots. The issue is getting lost in terms of white backlash and 20-year-old land deeds barring Negroes.

One man screams bigot, the other yells hypocrite, and then they both retire to shake somebody's hand.

CONSERVATISM vs. LIBERALISM

Another classic struggle that could have developed is one between conservatism and liberalism, but now all liberals are communists and all conservatives are war-mongers and the name-calling continues.

Other issues that seem to have been lost amid the shouting are nuclear weapons and foreign aid.

PERSONALITY STRUGGLE

So now, unless something or someone changes things, the campaign is going to be a not-so-classic struggle of personalities, and the candidate who can smile the widest and talk the longest will be the next President of the United States.

The population can now look back in misty-eyed nostalgia to the Kennedy-Nixon debates with their above-board and out-in-the-open issues.

PRELUDE TO SELECTION . . .

People tend to forget that what is happening now is not a personality contest that just happens along every four years. It is a prelude to the selection of a man who will mean prosperity or ruin, freedom or slavery, life or death to every man, woman and child in the country.

The college students of today are being taught to see through this fog of name-calling and to perhaps see the real issues in back of it. It is hoped that they care about whom they want to call Mr. President.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

THE stereotyped picture of Joe College—the average college student—certainly has changed through the years.

Twenty years ago, for example, Joe ~~looked something like this: He was~~ usually single, owned an older car (a jalopy to be perfectly honest) and perhaps held down a part-time job for the purpose of acquiring spending money only, for his parents most supported him.

Joe did what might be referred to as an average amount of studying, and for this he was rewarded with average grades.

FUTURE WAS PROMISING

His outlook for the future was promising; in fact, it was bright and he knew it. Times were pretty good for Joe. He acted like a kid, but then there really wasn't any pressure to grow up in a hurry.

The single difference between the Joe College of yesterday and the Joe College of today may be simply stated in a compound sentence. Yesterday Joe was sent to college to grow up; today he is here to grow.

In these hectic and turbulent times Joe can't afford too many luxuries. Quite often he is not only a husband, but a father as well.

JOB NEEDS CAR

Joe owns a car (perhaps a new one) but he needs it for his job. Yes, Joe holds down a full-time job. He has no choice, because his parents just can't manage to support two families!

Joe can't afford just to get by or, for that matter, to be an average student in the strict sense of the word. The competition in the business world is staggering. In short, the average Joe merely exists; the "Good Joe" is the fellow who really lives!

While it is true that opportunities are more numerous today than in years gone by standards and qualifications also are high—very high—too high.

FUN vs. RESPONSIBILITY

Joe can't remain a kid for any great length of time nowadays. He's busy rearing and teaching his own children to be adults. This in itself is a full-time job. Realizing this, Joe must sometimes exchange fun for responsibility.

Perhaps this is one reason why Joe doesn't have the time to participate in campus extracurricular activities.

The portrait shown in the hallowed halls of collegiate institutions mirrors two images of Joe College—the past and the present. There is still another image—the face of tomorrow.

Most everyone can speculate about the future destiny of Joe College, but fate alone will deal his hand. Regardless of how the cards are stacked and who's holding the aces, one fact is almost for certain: college is not for kids; NOT ANY MORE!

Model Tryouts Start Tomorrow For AWS Show

Tryouts for women students who would like to model in the Associated Women Student fashion show will be held during College Hour tomorrow and next Thursday in C-259.

The tryouts, Dean Mary Golding said, are open to all women students. She added, however, that there is a required minimum height of five feet, five inches, and models are required to wear 10, 12 or 14 proportionate dress sizes.

Women interested in modeling must be full time students, carrying a minimum of 12 units.

Deposit boxes for sign-up sheets will be located at the Silver Pole, women's gymnasium, S-150, A-201c and the library reference room.

Invited to act as judges for the tryouts are faculty members Dora Garibaldi, Edna Pope, John O'Brien, Anka Ohman, Gloria Dunn and Emmett Smith; also, Susan Schwampe, who was chosen the best dressed coed on campus last year.

The fashion show and tea, entitled Coed Carousel, will be held on Thursday, November 5, in Smith Hall.

At the AWS Conference, held in San Mateo October 3, in the keynote address by attorney Ruth Church Gupta, she stressed the relation between career opportunities, education and marriage. Mrs. Gupta's advice for obtaining a husband: "If you find the right man, grab him!"

Bach's Magnificat Major Work Of A Cappella Choir

The Magnificat, by Johann Sebastian Bach, a religious piece with orchestral accompaniment, will be the main work this semester for the A Cappella Choir, William Grothkopp, the new director of college choir and the Men's Glee Club, disclosed.

The musical repertoire of the choir will include both sacred and secular music in preparation for the three scheduled fall appearances.

The performances will be at a vesper service Sunday at the Hilton Hotel for the Association of School Business Officer, a choral concert for College Hour on December 10 and the Annual Christmas program to be given here on December 11.

Grothkopp believes that his 60-member choir of 22 men and 38 women "are keeping up the same high standards they had under Galen Marshall, the former choir director." He also said, "From what I've heard, there are quite a few good soloists in the group."

(Marshall resigned at the end of last semester and joined the music department staff at College of San Mateo.)

This semester's choir officers are President Jack Lyon, Vice President Kari Brockmann, Secretary Eleanor Searcie, Robe Chairman Terri Ellis and Librarian Chris Scales.

Two other singing groups will appear in the December 10 and 11 performances. They are the Men's Glee Club and the Women's Choir.

The Men's Glee Club of 20 men, also under the directorship of Grothkopp, will have a wide diversity of numbers with more of the shorter pieces, like Randall Thompson's Spanish work, Tarantela.

As for the Women's Choir of 16 members, director Richard Fenner plans to emphasize the works of contemporary composers like Bartok, Persichetti and Irving Fine. "This semester's choir," Fenner remarked, "is an improved one; a fine choir."

To all of those who enjoy singing, and have some musical ability, the opportunity to join one of the choirs is still open, Grothkopp announced.

State Scholarship Applications Available Through October 24

Applications for the California State Scholarship are available through October 24 in S-150, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced today.

The California State Scholarship provides students with funds for tuition and laboratory fees at any private and public college or university in the state of California. A total of 5120 annually renewable scholarships ranging from $300 to $1500 is available for the 1964-65 competition year.

Applicants are required to take a scholastic aptitude test which will be given both on November 7 and December 5 at Lincoln High School, San Francisco State College and University of San Francisco.

To be eligible for the scholarship the student must be a resident of California, under 24 years of age, a United States citizen or permanent resident, and in need of scholarship assistance.

Because the last day for first application was October 10, students applying for the California State Scholarships between now and October 24 must pay a $2.50 late fee in addition to the regular fee of $5, Dean Golding said.

Tomorrow is the last day to file applications for the California Scottish Rite Foundation Scholarships and the Lucille Lesser Scholarships.

Both scholarships are available to students who graduated with above-average records from San Francisco high schools either in February or June of this year. The Lucille Lesser Scholarship is awarded to men students only.

The total Lesser Scholarship fund of $33,000, begun in Fall 1962 and available for nine more years, is of two awards made annually, one in the fall and one in the spring.

Funds are distributed on a three point basis. Candidates must be graduates, with superior records, from a San Francisco high school, must spend four semesters here and must transfer to a four-year college or university to "earn" a total amount of $1500.

Scholarship winners receive $125 in each of four semesters.

Phi Beta Delta Presents Ram With 'Overcoat'

Refinishing of the Redwood Ram in the form of a new overcoat was completed last Saturday by the members of Phi Beta Delta fraternity.

For this and other service projects, Phi Beta Delta was awarded the Inter-Fraternity Council service trophy. This is the third consecutive semester the fraternity has won the award.

Presentation of the service trophy was made by IFC President Dennis Whooley at the IFC Open House, held September 29.

Among the facets under consideration in awarding the service trophy are service to the community and college and participation in college activities.

Pledge Week will take place Monday, November 2, through Friday, November 6.

Among the activities during Pledge Week will be participation by all fraternities in supporting Proposition B, a bond issue allotting approximately $31 million to the San Francisco Public School System, of which the college will receive $3 million.

Certain phases of each fraternity's on-campus initiations will take place in Smith Hall Wednesday, November 4, through Friday, November 6. During College Hour on Thursday, November 5, the "pledge games" will be held on the football field. Whooley said that these games will include pie-eating contests, balloon-blowing contests, three-legged races and egg throwing.

Non-Residents Pay Fee

Certain non-resident students are paying $153 for tuition this semester at City College because Senate Bill 647 was adopted at the last regular session of the California State Legislature, Robin Dunn, instructor in charge of out-of-state registrants, said today.

The bill, which became effective July 6, 1964, provides that "... the governing board of any junior college may adopt uniform rules and regulations to admit students who are non-residents; however, if admitted, certain non-resident students must be charged the non-resident fee."

Non-residents are those who have not been a legal resident of the state of California for a period of one year immediately preceding the opening day of the semester in which they enroll.

Non-resident students are not required to pay any tuition fee if they are enrolled in six or less units. Non-residents enrolled for six and one half or more units will be charged $10.20 per unit.

These students must therefore pay a minimum of $66.30. No fee is charged for units in excess of 16, with the maximum $153.

When applicants for the current semester were being screened by the Registrar's staff, approximately 800 of them were asked to answer, under penalty of perjury, questions concerning their residency. About 400 of these applicants were found to be non-residents.

Student Apathy Forces COO, Social Committee Merger

By Prudie Johnson

Because of student apathy, the Council of Organizations and the Social Committee have joined this semester to try to create student interest in campus activities, Wardene Oliver, Associated Student vice president and chairman of the two groups, said today.

Participation and interest in COO, both on the part of club representatives and the Associated Students, has been poor thus far and Miss Oliver attributed much of the apathy to a lack of student knowledge as to how clubs benefit when they are active in COO.

WARDENE OLIVER, AS vice president and chairman of COO, urges more interest in campus activities.

Clubs which are active in COO benefit from the Social Committee by learning how to organize their events in relation to other campus activities. The Social Committee helps clubs keep campus events from conflicting and gives an impartial evaluation and discussion of events on the campus social calendar.

The COO chairman is a member of the President's Cabinet and is better able to represent the clubs because she is in a position to speak for them on the Student Council and has a vote on council, Miss Oliver explained.

Miss Oliver expects club representatives to remember that if they don't attend COO meetings they are unable to set up membership tables at the COO dance or the Homecoming game.

In addition, if a club representative misses four consecutive meetings, COO may vote the club out of the organization and then Student Council can declare them off campus, which means they can not publicize on campus and are no longer a recognized club.

Only by petition to the Student Council may they again participate on campus as a City College club.

Social Committee and COO meet on Tuesdays from 1 until 2 p.m., and COO meets Thursdays from 1 until 2 p.m. in Bungalow 6 which is located east of Cloud Hall. Meetings are open to all interested students.

Miss Oliver explained that a COO social calendar has been set up although some of the dates and events are not confirmed. The COO Dance, scheduled Friday, November 13 from 9 p.m. to midnight, Miss Oliver considers definite.

COO Homecoming takes place Friday, November 20, at the home game against Diablo Valley College. A COO rally on Thursday, November 19, during College Hour, will present the coeds who are running for Homecoming Queen.

Officers of the COO working with Miss Oliver are Carol Wong, vice chairman; Mike Leotta, treasurer, and Lani Vance, secretary. All officers, excepting Miss Oliver, are from campus clubs. Students can only hold an office if his club is a member of COO.

COO and Social Committee seek to benefit all the students, but they are only worthwhile if all students show an interest and participate, Miss Oliver emphasized.

Hong Kong Subject Of Next College Hour Film

Hong Kong, A Free Port, will be the second of this semester's series of films to be shown during College Hour tomorrow in S-136, Madison W. Devlin of the audio visual department, announced today.

The film surveys the lives of the people of the city and shows how they exist. It will also depict Hong Kong as a great shipping and duty-free port as well as a port where people fleeing from Red China come to take refuge.

Devlin encouraged students to attend the films.

Special Election Causes Big Snafu In Student Council

By Pete Dorn

Election time predicated promises, affirmations and more promises at last week's Student Council meetings, when five vacant government posts were filled in a special election.

Although there were two freshman and three sophomore vacancies on Student Council, only the freshman seats were filled because of the absence of a majority vote.

Therefore, Election Commissioner Dan Christian slated tomorrow's meeting for another special election to fill the remaining sophomore seat.

The newly elected officers were freshmen Arnie Kamrin and Chuck Largaespada and sophomores Kathie Lively and Nina Jacobs.

Only one petition was submitted for the office of Associated Men Student President, that of Ray Chezik, who had been acting AMS President until this time. After receiving the unopposed position, Chezik voiced hopes that there will be some competition for this cabinet office at the next election.

Secret ballots were cast by the then 10-strong council members.

Because some members had abstained from voting for certain candidates, a revote was ordered by AS President Gary Ettin. After a discussion pertinent to the right of abstention and the legality of a revote, a second ballot was cast.

In other council business, Mike Phalen, representing the Campus Police, announced that the supply of parking permits was exhausted. The original supply of 2050 permits has been issued but additional permits have recently been acquired and are available in C-110.

A trophy awarded to the college by station KSOL was displayed by Wardene Oliver, AS vice president; the trophy was an acknowledgment of an outstanding radio program produced by the college.

A representative was sent to council by Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman to ask that council make a formal request to Oscar Anderson, coordinator of educational management, for assistance in finding additional parking space.

Phalen declared that there are no immediate plans to ask that the city open the second reservoir for parking because of the extensive overhaul that would be required to make it usable. Both reservoirs are property of the Public Utilities Commission.

Furthermore, it has been the observation of the Campus Police that an additional 150 to 200 spaces become available after the first midterm period of each semester.

As to budgets, AS card membership lists must be submitted by Tuesday, October 20, Finance Chairman Loralee Lando reported.

Question arose as to which organization is responsible for the up-keep of the bulletin board located near the courtyard entrance to Cloud Hall. Kamrin proposed that a committee be formed to decide this issue.

It was also announced that students interested in joining the now-forming Election Committee should indicate their interest to Commissioner Christian.

Guardsman Wins ACP First Class

The Guardsman received a First-Class rating last week from the Associated Collegiate Press for the Spring, 1964, volume.

This rating is second only to an All-American or superior rating. In 46 semesters of membership in the ACP, The Guardsman has earned 32 All-American awards and 14 First-Class ratings.

In his evaluation, the ACP judge particularly noted the excellence of the paper's editorial and feature page and the main news page.

Professional men and women journalists, working from the ACP headquarters at the University of Minnesota, evaluate member-college's newspapers semiannually.

Owls Clip Rams In League Opener, 15-13

Fassler-Blocked Punt Gives Foothill Margin Of Victory

By Mike Smith

Despite two touchdown aerials by Bill Gianquinto, Foothill's 68 yard touchdown drive, climaxed by a 28 yard pass from George Wagner to Bill Thomson early in the fourth quarter, proved to be the measure of difference in the Ram's 15-13 defeat at the hands of the Owls in Los Altos last Saturday night.

San Francisco's first scoring came on a 38 yard Gianquinto bomb to John Helms. Mike Dugan kicked the conversion to tie the Owls 7-up with a little over three minutes remaining before half-time.

Foothill had taken an early 7-0 lead in the first quarter when defensive end Tom Bjornson blocked Ron Fassler's punt on the Ram's own ten yard line, picked it up and carried the ball in for the score. The conversion kick was made good by Don Coppinger.

Henry King enabled the Rams to jump to a 13-7 third quarter lead when he recovered an Owl fumble of a Ram punt in mid-field. On the next play, Glanquinto connected on a 52 yard pass to Eural Smothers for San Francisco's final score of the night.

In the fourth quarter, King recovered a second Owl fumble, again on a Ram punt reception, on Foothill's 26 yard line. Glanquinto tried to repeat what he did in the previous period, but an alert Foothill defender, Bill Thomson, picked off the pass intended for King.

Perhaps the turning point of the game came in the fourth quarter. The Rams had the ball on their own 28 yard line with two to go on third down. With some seven minutes on the clock, Glanquinto went to the air, but his pass was broken up by safety Bill Lerch. Fassler then punted, and the Owls let the ball roll to a stop near their own 20 yard line rather than chance another fumble.

The Los Altos team had control of the ball in the fourth quarter until the last 44 seconds of the game when a Frank Lynch fumble was snatched up by Aubrey Holmes on the Rams 35. Glanquinto went to the air once more, but Thomson grabbed his second interception of the night and erased all hopes for San Francisco.

Rushing was the key to the Owls victory as Frank Lynch churned out 154 yards for a 4.6 average, a new Foothill Stadium record.

The Owls gained a net total of 218 yards on the ground as compared to the Rams' 110. Chris Ransom turned in 70 yards in eight carries for an 8.6 average, and Oliver Mitchell gained 28 yards in seven carries for a 4.0 average. This kind of running can hardly be faulted.

Although the San Franciscans were outgained in total yardage by 271 to 234, they were far behind in ball control. The Rams had the ball for 48 plays from scrimmage and were forced to give it up eleven times. But the Owls controlled the pigskin for 78 times, and relinquished it seven times.

COACH "DUTCH" ELSTON, a member of the original 1946 San Francisco 49er squad, enters his third year here as head grid coach.

Men's Athletic Commissioner Describes Duties

Robert Higginbotham, newly appointed Men's Athletic and Awards Commissioner, stated yesterday that his "biggest complaint is the poor attendance at all athletic events.

"It's a big lift for all athletes to have a crowd encouraging them. This type of spirit would encourage more athletes to try out for the teams," he said.

Higginbotham was appointed to his cabinet post by Associated Student President Gary Ettin with the approval of the Student Council. As the Athletic Commissioner, he is responsible for communication between the athletic department and Student Council.

Some of his duties are working with the coaches and Student Council for budget allocation. He is the liaison for any disagreements or problems that may arise between either group.

He demonstrated his interest in the athletic program here, when at a home game such as the Los Angeles Valley-Ram football game, the commissioner assisted in the preparation of team rosters distributed in the stands by the song girls.

Gridders Face Strong Chabot In League Meet Saturday

By Stamus Cocoles

Chabot will be one of the stronger teams in the league. This is how coach Dutch Elston summed up the Ram gridders' next opponent this coming Saturday at 8 p.m. at Chabot.

Last year Chabot was second in the Golden Gate Conference with a 5-2 record. One of its two losses, by a score of 12-9, was at the hands of the Rams who finished fourth in the league.

The Chabot Gladiators, coached by Athletic Director Ed Hart, have nine lettermen on this year's squad, which has won both preseason games, edging Yuba College, 12-8, and Sacramento City College, 18-7.

Chabot is led by an outstanding player in Jim LeMoine, 6-2, 240 pound offensive end and defensive tackle. He was a high school All-American from Alameda and played in the North-South Shrine game.

Coach Elston, commenting on the early season standings, stated, "Our team will be a contender. In two preseason games we have a win and a loss. Penalties helped lose the game against San Joaquin at Stockton. But they were penalties of commission instead of omission."

Asked to clarify "penalties of commission instead of omission," Elston replied,

"When a man is blocking, there is always a chance he might be holding; if you're downfield, knocking a man down, there is always a chance of clipping; if a man tries to block a punt and hits the kicker, a penalty is called. These are examples of penalties of commission.

"Penalties of omission are not from aggressiveness but from mental errors. Some examples of these are too much time in the huddle, linemen going downfield to block when there is a pass play, and players being offside not because they are eager, but because they might have forgotten what count the ball would be snapped on."

The Rams have reliable guards in Levi Byrd and Bernard Mordret, a consistent center in Tony Balzar and an outstanding halfback in Oliver Mitchell. If fullback Dennis Sullivan, halfback Chris Ransom, and quarterback Bill Gianqtiinto can come up with a good game, the Rams will have a potent attack.

First string defensive halfback Joe Callan twisted his knee in the game against San Joaquin and will be lost for an indefinite period. He may be replaced by Robert McDill, Aubrey Holmes or Henry Scott.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Smith

SOME PERSONS have suggested that pro football will soon become a game in which only 200, or even 250 pounders, can survive.

It is predicted that football's popularity will then diminish just as basketball's popularity diminished when the seven-footers made it almost impossible for an average-size player to become a super-star.

These same persons also argue that football will eventually suffer overexposure from too many televised games, and they warn that attendance records will drop because of it.

The fact that Los Angeles and Dallas could not support two grid teams, and that Chicago could no longer keep her only NFL team, does not do much to disprove that argument.

Others say baseball is becoming a novelty, and that fans are interested only in the new team or the winning one. Several decades ago five of eleven major league cities supported two teams, one in each league.

Now these cities larger in populations, can support only one, with the exception of New York, while several others, like Milwaukee, Kansas City and Cleveland, want to move. The Angels have broken ties with Los Angeles and will hit the road at the end of next year.

In the past few years there have been numerous articles published in magazines attributing boredom to the country's number one sport.

If a person had so insulted baseball in the twenties, thirties or forties, he would have been accused of mocking motherhood and Old Glory at the same time. But now it can be done, because many agree.

All the fans need is a winner, they say, and they will support the team all the way down the line. But why can't they get behind the team for the reason of sports for sport's sake?

The Ram basketball team went to the state finals, but most students here would rather support a pro team than some "two-year college team." A 49er team in last place would probably be of more interest to City College fans than their own team even if they were in contention every year.

But the two-year college teams put in as much effort, and practice as many plays and techniques, as do the professionals. A great play or a great run is the same whether it is made in front of thousands of fans at Kezar or a small handful at City College.

No matter what the level, the great and enthusiastic fans create a great team. A sport and a team are only as blase as those who follow it, no more.

Ask the Met fans who have a team in last place if they would trade their team for the Yankees.

There will always be big sports and little sports, and people tend to expect a winner and a super-star every time they turn around. It's a shame that two-year college champions seem to enjoy their glory alone, for there is just as much excitement and tension in their sport as in one at any other level.

Soccer Squad Trounces Vikings, 12-1

By Michael Sarao

Coming off a very impressive preseason schedule, coach Roy Diederichsen's soccermen won their first league contest over the Diablo Valley Vikings by an overwhelming score, 12-1, at the opponents' turf last Wednesday.

The tilt against Diablo Valley was a one-sided contest from the opening face-off.

The Rams gained control of the game at once, and the first score came midway in the first period on a pass from Alex Volikovsky to Alex Mendieta after which the Rams kept the lead for the rest of the game.

The Vikings' only goal came after the score by Mendieta on a penalty kick from the left side of the field when the Vikings' inside left put one past goalie Joe Marin.

John Kazavis booted one in from 30 yards out to issue the Rams their second tally. Both Mendieta and Kazavis scored again to give the club a 4-1 halftime margin.

The second half proved to be more fatal than the first for the Vikings. The Rams added eight more goals to wrap up their first league victory. It seemed as though everybody on the squad scored at least one time.

According to the stats, Mendieta pumped five shots into the Viking net, followed by Kazavis and Al Fernandez each stuffing two goals. Others who scored were John Fromer, Louis Bolanos and Carlos Cortes.

Most of the Ram scores were set up by Volikovsky of whom Diederichsen said, "He plays a good game; if we had had him against Stanford, the game might have been different."

Before entering their contest with the Vikings, the Rams had played two exhibition games with San Francisco State and Stanford. City College took the first contest by whipping the Gators 3-1; halfback Cortes was the big gun in the game, placing two kicks in the opposition's net.

Their next appearance with the Indians was a completely different story. Stanford knocked off the Rams, 8-2. This was the second loss for Diedrichsen in five years.

According to the Ram pilot, "You really can not blame the team. I let everybody play, including some who had never played before."

In their next game, against San Mateo Friday, the Rams are expected to be slight favorites over the Bulldogs. Last year the Rams won the championship by walloping San Mateo, 8-2.

Featured against San Mateo last year were the league's Most Valuable Player, Hector Olaya, plus Waldon Hom, Peter Huebner, Tony Losada and Ruben Hernandez. None is with the team this year.

With a scoring threat like Mendieta, it is not impossible for the Rams to run away with it. Mendieta has already tallied for more than ten goals in the early part of this season.

Although the Rams are slight favorites, coach Diederichsen can't help being worried. As he put it, "San Mateo has a lot of students from foreign countries who should give us a run for the money."

Harriers Fifth In Invitational

In their first real contest of the new season, coach Lou Vasquez's cross country squad turned is a disappointing performance in the season-opening Golden Gate Invitational meet at Golden Gate Park.

Coach Vasquez blamed the squad's poor fifth place showing behind powerhouse teams San Mateo and Foothill, and Sequoia and Menlo on the minor injuries that kept Allen Sullivan out of the race. The fact that not everybody could be there also hurt the club's chances.

In tomorrow's meet against Chabot, Vasquez believes, "We should beat them again in another close one." According to Vasquez, the two powerhouses, San Mateo and Foothill, should weaken as the season progresses while the Rams should be stronger; most of the future meets should be close.

Rich Klemmer and Mike Conroy, two returning veterans, turned in the best performances for the pea green squad. Klemmer finished eleventh in the race.

RA Bowlers Win At Diablo Valley

Second prize was won by the Recreation bowling team at the Diablo Valley sports day, held October 3.

RA delegates also took part in badminton, tennis and social dance at the Diablo Valley play day.

A recent meeting of the RA officers resulted in plans for a sports day which will be held here Saturday, November 7. Representatives from other colleges have been invited by the RA officers and their adviser, Edna Pope, to participate in the competition.

A free round-trip bus ride will be furnished for those taking part in the sports day at Monterey Peninsula College set for Saturday, October 24.

"Details concerning the type of competition at the Monterey play day have not been received yet," Donna Lieces, RA president here, explained, "but they will be posted soon in the women's gymnasium."

Ettin Lauds AS Participation

Student participation in campus activities is three times better than it has been in recent years, Associated Student President Gary Ettin stated today.

Ettin said that since orientation, student leaders have been suggesting the casual attitude toward college spirit, indicating participation in campus activities is "the thing to do."

This approach has brought fine results, Ettin declared, and attendance at dances and games has been excellent. The Frosh Premier Show and Dance broke an all-time record of attendance. The number present, 700, far surpassed the previous record of 500 students set in Fall, 1963.

Another cause for increase in participation in campus activities is the turnover in student government, Ettin commented. The new student government is composed of persons who are in the general swing of campus activities.

He cited Rally Commissioner Tom Duff, AS Vice President Wardene Oliver, Yell Leaders Jim Stull, Chuck Versaggi and Sal Zagari, and song girls, Marily Vierucci, Carol Anselmi, Peggy Parkham, Marily Erkkila and Penny Brown as those seriously assuming responsibility in making campus activities lively.

"We call our administration the New Slant. We feel that it is a new slant in student government in which spirit is the key," President Ettin said.

Another spirit raiser is the College Hour Rally. This year the live entertainment composed of good combos and the City College pom-pon girls and yell leaders attracts students in large numbers.

Ideas to increase spirit are exchanged by many Bay Area colleges. Student leaders here have been receiving complimentary student card and activity passes from other colleges and send representatives to these activities to exchange ideas on increasing spirit.

Future plans to increase participation further here include the manufacture of red vests with the college insignia for students involved in all kinds of student activities to wear, Ettin said, distribution of little multicolored megaphones to students attending games and the organization of competitive yelling groups.

Rumford Act To Be Topic Of Public Debate During C-Hour

By Hugh Haworth

Should The Rumford Act Be Repealed will be the topic-question for tomorrow's "public debate" on Proposition 14 to be held in the theater during College Hour, counselor Herbert E. Davis disclosed.

Lecture number two of the Student-Faculty Lecture Series will be a debate between John F. Delury, executive secretary of the Commission on Social Justice of the Catholic Archdiocese of San Francisco, and Gale F. Lane, a representative from the speakers' bureau of the Committee for Yes on Proposition 14.

On the topic for discussion, Davis commented, "There is much heat and less light on this subject." This will be an informative debate for many, he added.

Davis remarked that he had heard Delury speak before on this subject and his presentation was "cool and clear." He expects that Delury will probably talk about the reason for only a few cases coming before the Fair Housing Commission and the amount of public awareness of the Rumford Act's effectiveness.

Delury is a graduate of the University of San Francisco, and he has worked on post-graduate studies at the University of California at Berkeley.

In the past, he has held such positions as the Area Supervisor of the Southern California State Division of Fair Employment Practices; Staff Assistant to State Senator J. Eugene McAteer, and Executive Director for the Council of Civil Unity in San Francisco.

The opposing side will be represented with points given by Lane, speaker from the Committee for Yes on Proposition 14, Davis commented.

Lane is head of a development company and he owns a chain of service stations. Also, he is a member of the American Legion and Toastmasters Club, International.

The debate will consist of a ten minute initial argument period from each side, a three to five minute rebuttal from each, and a fifteen-minute period of extra rebuttal time allowance and questions from the audience.

Moonlight On The Shore Theme Of Freshman Ball

The Continental Ballroom of the San Francisco Hilton Hotel will be the scene of the Frosh Ball which is slated from 8 p.m. to midnight, Friday, October 30. The theme for the evening is Moonlight on the Shore.

The students of the Freshman Class who turn out for the ball will have the distinction of being the first students from this college to sponsor any kind of social function at the Hilton.

Gary Freund, Freshman Class president, said that he hopes that at least 1000 turn out for the event.

He has high hopes because 700 students attended the Frosh Premier Show and Dance held at Smith Hall September 25.

Previous high attendance at a Frosh Ball was 600, and that under the class leadership of Gary Ettin last semester.

Wali Tolleson and his band will provide the music.

Freund stated that the band will play any song requested, provided the song title is submitted in writing before the ball.

Students may also cast their vote for The Cutest Couple contest. Winners of the contest will be announced at the ball.

Bids may be obtained free with an AS card, Freund said.

Tickets may be purchased at the door for $2.50 per couple, if students do not have an AS card.

Wrought Over Ring

There's a young married man on campus who is in plenty of trouble, domestically.

It is a commonly known fact that NOBODY loses his wedding ring after only two and a half months of marriage. He may misplace it for a short while if there is a pretty girl in the vicinity, but never any further than this.

Unfortunately, this young man did, breaking all of the laws necessary for blissful matrimony.

His wife is the understanding sort, even though she has taken to glancing at him out of the corner of her eyes now and then. The situation has, however, put undue strain on an otherwise happy situation.

Now this student would like his ring back, for reasons observable to all. He is willing to pay a reward for its return.

The fact that the ring cost $250 is nothing to the sentimental value this student places on it, and therefore he said the reward would be very substantial.

The ring was lost in the first floor men's room of Arts Hall and is described as gold with a setting of three diamonds. Anyone finding it is requested to turn it in to the lost and found department in C-303 or to The Guardsman in S-304.

The Guardsman would like to publish the name of the unfortunate young man who lost the ring, but it came to pass that the ace reporter who interviewed him got all of the facts except one. His name.

Poll Demonstrates Complete Support Of Proposition B

All students polled here last week gave full support to Proposition B, the $31,465,000 city school bond issue that will be on the November 3 ballot.

Typical of students' replies to "How will you vote on Proposition B?" were the following:

Joe Donohoe, sophomore chemistry major, "I'll vote yes. I think it's a worthwhile issue. Higher education pays for itself."

Tom Howard, sophomore English major, "Yes. I'd vote on it regardless of where the money came from, but I like the sales tax angle. It's a painless way to pay for it."

Joe Miller, sophomore political science major, "We have to keep up with the expanding school population. Also, we're not going to get anything out of State Proposition 3, even if it passes, so we've got to put up our own funds. I'm going to vote yes."

Previous voter support of state and city bond issues has given City College most of its present campus buildings. Arts Hall and the football stadium and many of the present parking facilities are recent additions that came about as a result of the passage of Proposition A in 1956.

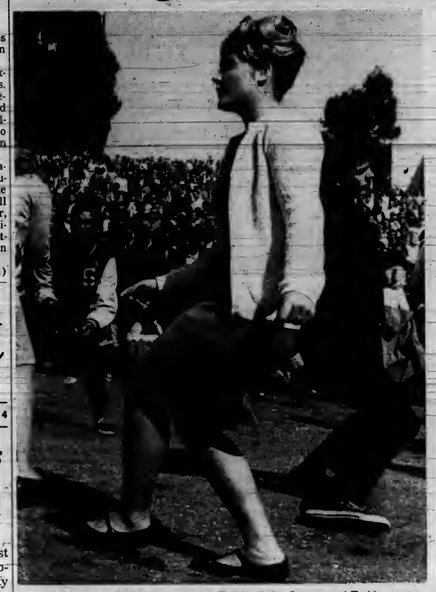
Bond issues dating back to before 1950 have presented most of the other permanent structures. Passage of Proposition B would allow City College to realize finally the long-awaited completion of the campus.

Two new buildings need to be constructed to provide space for the educational services and an additional 13,000 square feet of classrooms.

One building, to be located adjacent to Smith Hall, would be used for classrooms and offices for the Registrar and staff, Coordinator of Student Welfare, Directors of Testing and Placement, and members of the student government and their adviser.

Also located in the same building would be the testing, placement, finance and accounting offices. A second building, with proposed location near Arts Hall, is needed to house advertising art and design, graphic arts and photography laboratories.

TV Show Features Dental Technology



Courses in dental services offered at the college will be the subject of this Sunday's City College Close-Up from 11 to 11:30 a.m. on KPIX-TV, producer Sylvia R. Leff announced today.

Courses offered here leading to certification as dental assistants or dental lab technologists will be explained and illustrated by students and by faculty members Ruth Inskipp, Betty Park and Frank C. Szehner Jr.

Opportunities in these fields and qualifications necessary for success will be discussed by local professionals, employers and working graduates.

Louis F. Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education, will host this program.

Dancing In The Street

THIS FAIR LASS IS a part of what Teddy of the George and Teddy group calls the "groovy, swinging" crowd that danced to their music at the rally last Thursday. In the background stand the crowds that covered the hill to catch the performance.

ANOTHER RALLY PRIOR to the game between Oakland's Merritt College and the Rams will be held during College Hour tomorrow at the Ram.

IN CASE OF BAD WEATHER, the rally will take place at the same hour in the men's gymnasium.

ENTERTAINMENT WILL feature vocalist Troy Dodds and his group, recording stars of recent rock 'n roll hit Down In Tennessee. The college pom-pon girls and yell leaders will also be present to add the proper amount of vim, vigor and vitality.

"APPROXIMATELY 2000 STUDENTS attended the last rally," Carole Bargagliotti, of the Rally Committee stated today, "and this time we expect an ever larger, louder and livelier attendance."

The game will be held at 2:30 p.m. Friday in the college stadium.

H&R Grads Hold Key Posts On Olympic Food Committee

Five key posts on the Food Service Committee for the Olympic Games in Tokyo are held by alumni of the hotel and restaurant department here.

Yoshi Masuda, on loan from Tokyo's Imperial Hotel, is the cafeteria manager for the United States. Masuda was enrolled in the hotel and restaurant department from 1962 to 1964.

Ichiro Inumaru is holding the post as Vice Chairman of the Olympic Games Food Services Committee. Inumaru graduated from City College in 1952 and did his practice work at San Francisco's Hotel Mark Hopkins.

Yasu Kume, graduate of the class of 1957 who did his graduate work at the Hotel Plaza and the Tokyo Ginza Hotel, is manager of all Olympic village cafeterias.

Kiyoshi Kobayashi is the foods service personnel director on leave from the assistant managership of the Maunnouchi Hotel. Kobayashi was graduated from here in 1956.

Hiroshi Suzuki, of the Imperial Hotel where he is credit manager, is serving as the general secretary for the Olympic Games Foods Service Committee.

Mickey Shibata has been employed by the Dali-Chi Hotel in Tokyo for the past year to conduct classes in American customs and basic English for Tokyo hotel employees.

The hotel and restaurant department has trained 24 Japanese students in the past twelve years. Seven more are currently enrolled in the hotel and restaurant department.

22 To Represent AS Government In San Jose Saturday

Council representatives from the nine Area Six colleges will gather at San Jose City College Saturday morning to discuss more effective means of improving student government, Gary Ettin, AS president said today.

Among the 22 council and cabinet members expected to attend the workshop conferences from this campus with Ettin are Art Gershman, Associated Men Student President; Barbara Kontis, Associated Women Student president; Terry Cloney, Sophomore Class president, and Freshman Class President Gary Freund.

Robert Waterbury, AS president of host San Jose City College, will preside over the conference and the president's workshop.

Two applications for workshop chairmanships are allowed each participating college. Cloney and Charles Largespada, freshman member of council, have made the application from this college.

Area Six colleges also participating are Chabot, Contra Costa, Diablo Valley, Foothill, Merritt, Peralta and San Mateo.

The purpose of the conference is to discuss various aspects of student government and activities.

In addition to the delegation from this college, Dean Mary Golding and James Wyatt will accompany the group as advisers.

Air Force Academy Exam Deadline Nears

Men students interested in competing for entrance into the Air Force Academy next year must act soon to qualify.

"This is the opportunity for young men to get a full college education and at the same time finish their military requirements as an officer," Joseph Jacobsen, who has information about admission, stated.

City College Grad On His Way Up

Dondero Acting Contra Costa Head

By Bea Takeuchi

A native San Francisean and former geology major here is now acting President of Contra Costa College in the East Bay.

Ray Dondero received his A.A. degree here in 1949 and transferred to the University of California, Berkeley, where he received his B.A. degree in 1950, his secondary teaching credential in 1952, and his M.A. degree in 1953.

GEOGRAPHY THE START

In Fall 1953, he taught in Fullerton, California, then in 1954 started as a teacher of geography at Contra Costa College.

By 1959, Dondero was named Dean of Instruction, and in July of this year, acting President.

"I attended Galileo High School, and was no red hot student, let me tell you. It wasn't until I returned from the service that I was motivated into working hard," Dondero recalled, adding,

"Dr. Grant Marsh, now retired from City College, was the instructor who motivated me most. He taught the first classes in navigation, and I remember spending many hours on this fascinating subject.

"I also remember George Green, another retired instructor. He and Dr. Marsh made me extremely interested in geography.

"However, it was George Baffico, who is still with City College, who steered me into that field. In his quiet but effective manner, he convinced me that I should seek to make geography my profession," Dondero said.

CHARTING THE SOUTH PACIFIC

During World War II, Dondero served as a United States Navy Lieutenant. There, in the Hydrographic Service, he put his studies to good use. He not only charted the South Pacific, but also assisted in preparing charts that were used by the amphibious forces for all major battle areas including the Solomons, New Guinea, Philippines, Okinawa and Japan.

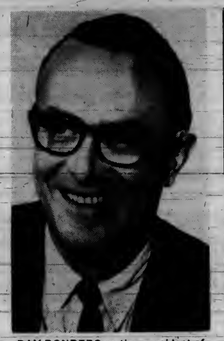
"Frankly, I was speechless when they named me Dean of Instruction here and overwhelmed when they named me acting President," Dondero commented.

Contra Costa college, a vocationally oriented two-year college, is located in San Pablo, on a spacious campus of 90 acres.

"It is astonishing that the district has managed to develop to its present situation without the use of tax overrides or bonds. We have 22 buildings.

"One of the most serious problems confronting our college district today is how to finance the rapidly increasing enrollments which are projected for the near future," Dondero emphasized.

ARBORETUM ENTHUSIAST



He referred to landscape gardening with great enthusiasm, and pointed out that his college has an arboretum with about 250 different kinds of trees.

"It is a substitute for tranquillizers; a wonderful place to relax when administration problems get too worrisome," Dondero commented.

Dondero is a sort of Johnny Appleseed. He collects seeds from the world over, and exchanges seeds through the mail. "When I retire, I hope to combine traveling with the distribution and collection of tree seeds."

OLD SALT AT HEART

An old salt at heart, Dondero has also studied at the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point. He is in the USNR, and holds the rank of Commander.

RAY DONDERO, acting president of Contra Costa College in San Pablo.

"I love gardening," he said, "and planting trees, especially. No, I don't believe in dwarfing trees. I believe that they should be allowed to grow in their natural form."

In one succinct statement referring to career preference, Dondero said, "If I had to make a choice between landscape gardening and going to sea, I guess I'd still teach."

College Enjoys New Burst Of Spirit In Student Activities

SOMETHING NEW has come to City College of San Francisco along with the record-breaking enrollment. Call it enthusiasm, spirit, concern or just plain participation, whatever its title, it is a welcome relief.

A disease that plagued the college's recent history was that of constant apathy that seemed to overcome new students within their first semester. As recently as last semester, only one office in student government was contested and it took all of last semester to fill seats on Student Council.

Attendance at football games averaged in the 20s at off-campus games and at home games hit as high as 80 on a warm day—which, by the stipulation of warm, was seldom. At last semester's Homecoming game Chabot College matched the home crowd in attendance, and the car parade prior to the game was composed of one car circling Cloud futilely waiting for the rest to follow.

This semester there seems to be a whole new outlook on campus. One of the results or maybe a possible cause is the "new look" in the Rally Committee. There have been three rallies so far and all three have drawn students over the 1000 figure. Granted that this many students have appeared at a rally in the past to watch hired celebrities, such as at the Swim Rally last semester, never have they appeared so consistently and with so much enthusiasm.

The three rallies held so far have been set up by the Rally Committee with volunteer groups performing along with the Ram pompon girls and cheer leaders. As an added feature the students have danced to the music in the area by the Redwood Ram while the other students look on from the hillside.

Despite the numbers and the student participation, the rallies have been orderly and the Campus Police though sometimes embarrassed have had no complaints.

Although the successful rallies in themselves are an accomplishment, the results are even more praiseworthy. The rally held prior to the Foothill game built up enough spirit to last until Saturday night when more than 200 students traveled to Foothill to cheer for the underdog Ram football team.

Student activities in general are more lively and promotion of the club meetings and dances has added to the growing feeling of student activity.

Many feel that the change is due in part to the greater freedom students are now enjoying when planning their activities.

A definite asset to their renewed spirit is the influx of new students with their fresh ideas seasoned by veteran planners on the Rally Committee and other organizations.

Another positive reason is the absence of the static die-hard groups that dominated activities and student government in general over the semesters. Behind a good deal of this initiative is student government adviser, Jim Wyatt, who will have to receive some of the credit for the spirit his followers have been able to generate.

Whatever the sources, the fact remains that City College of San Francisco is enjoying a burst of student enthusiasm unequaled in the recent history of the college. Now it is up to the Student Council to utilize this resource for the benefit of the college and the students themselves.

At last the student leaders will have something with which to work. The Guardsman is confident that much will come from it.

Cream Of Wheat, Scrambled Eggs Breakfast Favorites

By Ann Weill

Industrious Hotel and Restaurant students, 225 strong, prepare the breakfasts and lunches for almost 400 hungry scholars here five days a week.

When Smith Hall opens at 7:30 a.m., it is immediately stormed by 1000 or more students each morning. According to Pierre Coste, chief chef, scrambled eggs are the most popular breakfast dish.

The best-liked cereal is Cream Of Wheat, most often given the milk and sugar treatment.

Among the other popular dishes served at breakfast are waffles, french toast and all types of juices. Coste added that it goes without saying that coffee is consumed at an extremely fast pace, so much so that recently the supply ran out at 9:30 a.m.

While the last breakfast dishes are being washed, the rush begins for lunch. Almost 3000 students are served a variety of their favorite foods each lunchtime.

On the hot lunch side of Smith Hall, students gobble a total of 25 pounds of spaghetti daily. This alone nets at least $200 each day.

Favorite entrees are lamb stew, corned beef and cabbage and chicken. Coste believes that no food served is really unpopular, but chili con carne and ham jambalaya (ham cubes with pineapple and bell peppers in sauce) do not enjoy the popularity that roasts and good hearty meat dishes boast.

With the entrees two vegetables are always served, one a green vegetable and the squash, corn or beets and potato. Mashed and hash browns are most popular.

No fewer than six kinds of salad are prepared daily. Each is served in its own bowl for about ten cents.

The Bake Shop, operated by 24 students, is under the supervision of Chef George Mueller. These 24 bake all the cookies, pies, cakes, bread, rolls, puddings and other "goodies" most students like.

At least 300 rolls are made each day, 60 pies, 60 cakes and most of the bread used for sandwiches.

On the fountain side of Smith Hall the tuna sandwich is king. Up to 1000 of them are prepared daily. Running a close second is the bacon and tomato concoction.

Every noontime, 300 to 400 hamburgers and 200 hot dogs are sold to pacify ravenous lunchers. In addition, 300 to 400 bags of french fries are sold each day.

The 225 students currently enrolled in H&R must "go through the mill" by rotating through all phases of hotel and restaurant operation in three-week cycles.

This program of instruction is open to coeds, and at the present time six are enrolled. This is a ratio of 36½ men to 1 woman.

Types of jobs done in each three-week cycle include instruction and operation in the Bake Shop, general food preparation, waiter and busboy service in the faculty dining room, breakfast cooks, entree cooks, sandwich makers, salad makers and beverage and ice cream servers.

New Law Adds Another Asset For Turning 21

By George Nelson

Turning 21 has its advantages. One can now vote, enter establishments that were previously out of bounds, and also stop taking physical education—perhaps.

Through a recent change here, 21 year-olds no longer are required to enroll in physical education.

Over-crowded physical education classes are the reason, but lowering the age requirement does not seem to be the complete solution. Students are still required to take a minimum of two units of physical education if they are under 25 and intend to graduate from a California state college.

Laurine Bergin and John Gaddy, physical education department heads here, commenting on the new rule here, said, "Teacher shortage isn't the reason for the overcrowded classes; there is no place to put additional instructors where they could conduct their classes."

There are 83 more students enrolled in physical education this fall than were enrolled in physical education last fall—enough for two more large classes. But the percentage of the total enrollment taking physical education now as compared to last fall has decreased 2.1 per cent. Therefore, the solution to the enrollment explosion has been only 2.1 per cent effective.

Physical education is also no longer required for graduation here if the student is 21 or over. However, the student must take ½ unit each semester until he becomes 21.

Though this college has lowered its age requirement the California state colleges have not lowered theirs. They still require that all students under age 25 take a total of two units of physical education.

If transferring from a two-year college, the student must have one-half unit of physical education for each of his semesters in that college.

The only students who will benefit from the change are those who are between the ages of 21 and 25 who don't care for physical education and who intend to discontinue their education after graduation from here and those who intend to transfer to University of California.

Becoming 21 has its advantages, but it also has its befuddling disadvantages as in the mysterious physical education age change.

Election '64

Veeps Add Spice To The Campaign

By Boyd Burtnett

IF THE TWO presidential candidates seem to be lagging in their responsibilities, at least their vice-presidential running mates are making a good old-fashioned slug-fest out of the campaign.

Hubert Humphrey and William Miller are at opposite ends of almost every political standard. One is open, warm and friendly while the other is cool, tight-lipped and efficient looking.

Both the Republican and Democratic nominating conventions made no effort to heal liberal-conservative splits by picking their candidates from each political philosophy.

PERFECT RUNNING MATES

Lyndon Johnson is a Southerner and a liberal. Humphrey, a Northern liberal, is the perfect running mate. Barry Goldwater is a Westerner and a conservative. Miller, an Eastern conservative, is another fine geographic choice.

Humphrey is sometimes so liberal that he makes Johnson look conservative. He has been an outstanding champion of civil rights his entire political career, unlike many other public officials who adopted the cause only when it became popular to do so.

It was civil rights that almost destroyed Humphrey. When he first entered the Senate in 1948, he was an idealistic firebrand. He absolutely refused to compromise on the issue. So violently did he anger the senior members of the Upper House, composed mostly of Southern senators, that one time when he rose to speak on a bill the entire body walked out on him in a crushing rebuke!

But Humphrey demonstrated the capacity to learn: He learned so well that earlier this year he was perhaps the leading Democrat responsible for the passage of the Civil Rights Bill. Had he not learned to compromise, he would have encountered just another stone wall.

Miller, a congressman from New York, almost completely agrees with Goldwater's political views. Unlike his running mate, however, he voted "without reservation" for the new Civil Rights Bill.

PERSONALITY-PLUS FAMILY

Miller looks more like a young business executive than a politician. His natural coloring is more than off-set by a personality-plus family that the voter can find easy to identify with.

The campaign has brought a touch of scandal to Miller concerning his using the legislature to further his private interests. If it truth or smear, it is doubtful if it will affect the republican chances one way or the other. Voters in the past have tended to overlook scandal when choosing public officials.

Goldwater described Miller as "a real gut fighter" and Miller's semi-official campaign slogan of "This time WE'll count the votes in Chicago!" seems to prove this.

But even if the vice-presidential candidates seem to be adding a little life to an otherwise dull campaign, they too are side-stepping the real issues and playing the personality game. Maybe this is the new way to run a modern campaign; keep the public ignorant.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

COOKING is all but a long lost art. The modern chef is faced with a mere two challenges—opening a can and depositing its contents into a pan.

(No offense intended for the students in the Hotel and Restaurant department.)

While it is true many factors have contributed to the decline of the grand culinary art, college students haven't exactly rallied around the stove to help the cause any.

To begin with, cooking presupposes an abundance of money, time and patience. Automatically, a student has three strikes against him before he ever steps foot in the kitchen.

Take the first obstacle for example—money. By the time a student pays his tuition, purchases his books, buys clothes and other college incidentals, there usually isn't too much of the lean green left to be spent for food.

THE GROCERY SHOPPER

Obviously when he grocery shops, the items that find their way into his shopping basket are the least expensive and sometimes the least tasty.

The second barrier a student encounters in regard to cooking is perhaps more costly and crushing than the first. While time doesn't seem to phase most people, to a college student time means money. After a nerve-shattering day at class, a student usually goes directly to a part-time job.

Upon completion of this task, he is pooped—too pooped to pop—but unfortunately he is hungry too.

The last thing a student is about to do is to take a great deal of time preparing his meal. Instead, he whips a TV dinner out of the freezer and into the oven. The end result isn't exactly the greatest thing he's ever eaten, but at any rate it will hold him until breakfast—at least he hopes it will.

PATIENCE WEARS THIN

After filling up on all sorts of canned and frozen goodies during the week, a student's patience is worn rather thin by the time the weekend rolls around—and upon being informed by his mother that she won't be able to accommodate him for Sunday dinner, he is somewhat unfit to live with.

What little patience he had left is now thrown to the four winds, and in complete desperation he goes to a lively drive-in for dinner.

The saddening decline in the prestige of cooking can hardly be blamed completely on the college student. It just seems the stepped-up pace of living is minimizing the famous "good old fashion dinner."

If nothing else, some good has come out of all this great cooking revolution—for the average college coed that is. No longer must she fuss and fret and worry about her seemingly deficient knowledge of the culinary skills.

Her big problem will probably come in, when the cans go out!

Home Economics Coeds Hold Annual Convention

The annual Home Economics College Clubs State Convention will be held on Friday and Saturday, Frances Lloyd, Home Economics instructor here, announced today.

The first part of the convention will be held on the San Francisco State College campus and will be in the form of a luncheon, she said.

That evening a banquet is scheduled at the Four Seas Restaurant. The climax of the affair will be the breakfast at the Bellevue Hotel on Sunday morning in the Riviera Room and a bus tour of San Francisco landmarks on Sunday afternoon.

Library Installs Photocopier

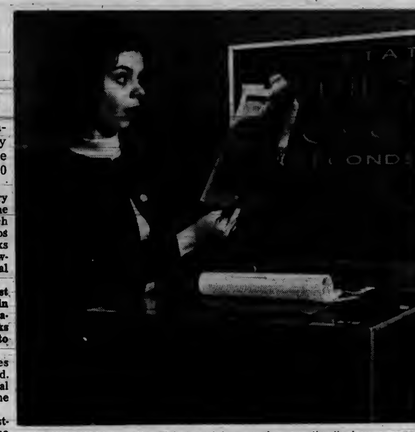
Docustat Makes Exact Copies In 30 Seconds Flat

A Docustat photocopying machine was installed in the library early this month for student use with the cost to students only 10 cents per page.

Since March, 1962, when library stacks were closed to students, some means has been sought through which they could get copies of charts, maps and the like from reference books without spending long hours redrawing or worse, tearing the material needed out of the book.

The closing of the stacks almost three years ago was one of the main reasons for installation of the machine. When stacks were open, books began to get out of order and even to disappear.

Often there were not enough copies of a much-needed book to go around. Students would tear out the material needed rather than check out the book.



"It is hoped," Claude Silva, assistant dean of instruction, said "that the photocopier will alleviate both the damage to and the loss of often valuable books."

The photocopier has been in operation for a little over two weeks and it "looks like it's going over well," Silva said.

The Docustat is located just opposite the card catalogue in the library in Cloud Hall. It is easily operated with only a few simple instructions to follow which are printed right on the machine. It takes only 30 seconds to get a photostat.

The photocopier reproduces papers, magazines and books up to a size of 10 by 14 inches. This includes maps, charts and even opposing pages of books at a single time. It gives an 8½ by 11 inch copy.

To copy, the original material is placed face down on the glass at the top of the machine. A dime is then inserted in the coin slot, the button is pressed which indicates the size of material being used and in 30 seconds the copy rolls out.

"IT WORKS!" Lynette Fishel exclaims as she proudly displays a page made in 30 seconds on the new Docustat photocopying machine.

Tutoring Eases Exam Cramming

Four tutoring sessions conducted by the Honor Society to help students prepare for midterms will start tomorrow during College Hour in S-133, William Richardson, Alpha Gamma Sigma adviser, stated last week.

Other sessions will be held November 5, 12 and 19, and subjects to be discussed are methods of taking notes, reading chapters in a book, preparing for lectures and taking examinations themselves.

Dorothy Hill, counselor, stated that she believes "it is best to keep up in the beginning, instead of cramming the night before the midterm." She suggested these few pointers that have been tried and proved by AGS members:

- Keep up notes and study.
- Keep a notebook with notes from book on one side and lecture notes on the other side.
- It is best to review often.
- Keep a list of questions on material as the course goes on for easier review.
- Keep quizzes and go over these to correct, then use them to review.
- Listen to what the instructor emphasizes; this will give hints on what to review and study most.
- Never leave anything not understood too long; ask the instructor.

Winslow Boy Cast Enters Final Week Of Theater Rehearsals

By Jerry Pando

The Winslow Boy makes its debut next Wednesday, October 28, in the college theater, and the cast has stepped up its final week of rehearsals. Scheduled to close the following Saturday, the two-act play will run from 8 to 10 p.m. nightly, with a short intermission between acts. The announcement was made by Walter C. Krumm, drama department instructor and Winslow Boy director.

Robert Rushalk, appearing in his first role here, portrays the 13-year-old Ronnie Winslow, accused of stealing money from a military school.

"The play is based on an actual incident," Rushalk said, "and is developed in very realistic manner." He added that although he is a pre-pharmacy major, he has always been interested in the theater.

Portraying the parents, Grace and Arthur Winslow, are Joan Grant and Al Hughes. In addition to being active in the theater for several years, they are both drama majors.

Hughes began his acting career in 1944 and turned professional in 1955. His last professional appearance before coming to the college, took place at the Margo Jones Theater in Dallas, where he worked as an actor and production assistant.

He has appeared here in the production of the Beggar On Horseback and Tartuffe. In summarizing The Winslow Boy, Hughes stated simply, "It is a testament for right and justice."

John La Zar, portraying Dickie Winslow, is a first semester student and is also majoring in drama.

"The play was written in 1945," Ray Lynch commented, "and was made into a movie in 1948 with Robert Donat and Sir Cedric Hardwicke." Lynch portrays Sir Robert Morton, a distinguished lawyer retained by the Winslow family to defend their son.

"The play is shaping up very well," Krumm said, "and promises to be a good show." He added that admission to the production is free to Associated Students and $1 to all other interested persons.

Others in the cast include Andrea Fulton as Catherine Winslow, Ann Crichton as Miss Barnes, Phyllis Melmon as Violet, Nelson Cole as John Watherstone, Henry Cabrera as Desmond and John Marden as Fred.

New Telephone Switchboard To Improve Service

Dial 9 System, to provide more and better telephone service to the college and enable the operator to take in more calls simultaneously, will be ready for service around Christmas, Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, announced last week.

Anderson, in charge of physical operation of the campus, stated that at present the college telephone service has 90 extension lines and with the new system, 120 extensions, or a 30 per cent increase, will be available.

With the new system, long distance calls will be cleared automatically through the operator and as a result, it will no longer be possible for anyone to call out of the city for personal reasons, Anderson stated.

San Francisco has approximately 80 different digits for area codes. When someone at the college dials an out-of-town number, if the number does not correspond to one of these city digit numbers, the call is clicked to the switchboard operator for checking.

Pay phones located around campus are available for personal use.

There is a shortage of phones for faculty members, Anderson said, and Dial 9 will alleviate this problem. Some department heads, but not all, will have phones.

Ellen Blake, telephone operator at the college, has worked with the Dial 9 System previously and so will start working with the new system as soon as it is ready for use, Anderson disclosed.

Ken Bryant, mail distributor at the college, relieves Mrs. Blake during her lunch hour and on breaks. He operates the switchboard from 4 to 5 p.m. each day after which time the switchboard is closed.

Student Tickets For SF Symphony Season Available

By Hugh Haworth

Reduced-rate season tickets for 19 Wednesday night performances by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra are now being sold at the Finance Office in Smith Hall.

Meyer Cahn, music instructor here, said that through the efforts of the Symphony Forum, a music-interest group extending throughout many Bay Area colleges, these season passes are available at a 50 per cent discount, with prices ranging from $19 for balcony seats to $31.50 for orchestra circle seats.

On the schedule of performances for the Orchestra, which start December 2, are the World Premicre of Kirke Mechem's Symphony No. 1, and the West Coast Premiere of Leonard Bernstein's new symphony, Kaddish, which will be narrated by Bernstein's wife, Felicia Montealegre.

John Pritchard, Paul Paray and Georges Pretre, "distinguished international guest conductors," will fill in on three occasions for maestro Josef Krips, director of the symphony.

Also appearing will be Rudolf Firkusny, "world-renowned piano virtuoso," presenting Stravinsky's Capriccio for Piano and Orchestra, and Maureen Forrester, Canadian born contralto, presenting Mahler's Songs Of A Wayfarer.

Tickets will be sold at the Finance Office until November 2, Cahn said.

To the student who does not have the money for a complete series ticket or does not choose to attend all performances, Cahn recommended joining with others who might be interested in sharing the cost and the separate passes of the season ticket.

Those who would like to buy half-season tickets can make such arrangements through Cahn.

Because of limited space at the Saturday executive meetings of the Symphony Forum, only a few representatives from each institution can attend the lectures or talks with music critics, reporters or symphony director Krips.

The three members of the City College committee for the Symphony Forum are Muza Kenning, chairman; Roger Christiansen and Ilse Sauerwald.

Scenes from Wagner's Die Meistersinger are listed for the final program.

Council, Cabinet Appoint Six To State Convention

By Peter Dorn

A combination council and cabinet vote during last week's Student Council meetings, completed selection of student delegates to the California Junior College Student Government Association Convention, scheduled for November 19, 20, 21 at Allan Hancock College in Santa Maria.

Previously, six delegates from the college were expected to attend the statewide convention. This year, three of them will include Associated Student President Gary Ettin, AS Vice President Wardene Oliver and State Information Service Chairman Bob Roddick.

Council and cabinet voted from a choice of eight students eligible to complete the slate of delegates to the convention; the results of the secret ballot will be revealed this week.

The elected representatives will be the voters' selection of students capable of bringing back the most information from the convention.

Student representatives, accompanied by Jim Wyatt, student activities adviser, will fly to Santa Maria on Thursday, November 19. The group will tour Vandenberg Air Force Base that day and attend the opening convention meeting that night.

A special election was held last Thursday to fill one remaining vacant council seat. The proceedings of this "election" were not untypical of Student Council. The election went like this:

Three petitions were filed for the sophomore post, those of Paul Coke, Nancy Hughes and George Quick. To be elected, one of these candidates needed a majority of eight votes from a voting council of fourteen.

The outcome of the first election was six for Coke, six for Quick and two for Miss Hughes.

A second vote was held to decide between Coke and Quick. Coke won six votes, Quick seven and one council member abstained from voting. This brought about a discussion during which the anonymous abstainee was denounced for "wasting time." Another vote was called.

While the candidates remained outside throughout the entire election process, the third vote gave Coke and Quick six votes each with two abstaining.

This put an end, temporarily, to any more attempts to fill the 15th council seat.

Arnie Kamrin, newly elected council member, requested that students interested in entering their automobiles in the Proposition B car parades scheduled October 29, 30 and November 2 leave their names at Bungalow 5.

Kamrin mentioned that convertibles are at a premium in this promotion campaign.

Wyatt informed council that Assemblyman and alumnus, Charles Meyers will attend a council meeting in the near future to present a plaque to the college for its successful blood drives.

Rotary Sponsors International Tea, Dance Here Friday

City College's campus will be the site of the Fifth Annual International Student Tea and Dance from 4 to 7 p.m. Friday in Smith Hall, and all students are invited to attend.

The invitation was extended by Nagel T. Miner, chairman of the International Committee of the Rotary Club of San Francisco.

This dance is sponsored by the San Francisco Chapters of the Rotary Club and American National Red Cross.

Although designed primarily as a social event for international students, the dance is open to all college and university students in the Bay Area.

Dress for the occasion will be informal, but foreign students are urged to wear native attire if possible.

Music for the event will be furnished by the Ray Hackett orchestra, through the courtesy of Local No. 6, American Federation of Musicians, A.F.L.-C.I.O. and the Union's Trust Fund.

Approximately 500 students attended a similar event last year.

League-Leading Soccer Team Takes To Road Friday For Clash With Menlo College

The Ram soccer squad will clash with the Menlo College Oaks Friday at Menlo in a league game of the Northern California College Soccer Conference.

Thus far the City College booters are undefeated in league play in the two-year old soccer conference.

In a practice game October 11, Mendieta chalked up a total of five goals to lead the City College soccermen to a 10-1 victory over the University of the Pacific.

Inside right Cortes, right wing Fromer, and center half Mike Beltran each contributed two points to the Rams' overwhelming victory.

In all the practice and league meets thus far, the local booters have lost only one. That defeat came in an exhibition game and was a losing 8-2 battle against the Stanford Indians.

The Stanford team has defeated the highly-rated University of San Francisco Dons, 5-2, who have beaten such teams as University of California, 7-0, and San Jose State 6-1, but coach Diederichsen's soccer squad upset the Dons, 4-1.

18 Teams Enter AMS Intramural Basketball League

A total of 18 teams has definitely entered the Associated Men Student-sponsored Intramural Basketball League competition which started last night in the men and women's gymnasium. AMS President Ray Chezik expects two more teams to participate.

Tonight in fraternity league action, Alpha Kappa Rho plays Zeta Phi Sigma in the men's gymnasium, and Beta Tau meets Alpha Phi Epsilon in the women's gymnasium.

Next Tuesday night's competition features The Guardsman opposing H&R in the women's gymnasium, while the Filipino Club takes on the Newman Club in the men's gymnasium.

A minor change in this semester's schedule calls for the Independents to play on Tuesday and Wednesday nights instead of Wednesday only. Club teams will play on Tuesdays and fraternities will play on Wednesdays at 8 p.m. only.

Six teams are now entered in the club league. They are Lawson's Ten, The Guardsman, Filipino Club, Newman Club, Hotel & Restaurant, and a bye or an additional team.

Six teams are also entered in the fraternity league. Alpha Kappa Rho, Zeta Phi Sigma, Phi Beta Delta, Beta Tau, Alpha Phi Epsilon and a bye or an additional team.

Although Chezik announced that there are eight teams in the independent league he has not released the list of names as yet.

Team captains can pick up copies of the game schedules in Bungalow 5 or the men's gymnasium.

The playoff for the top teams in each league will be on December 2, Chezik said, and winners will meet for the championship at the AMS Sports Night.

Boxing matches will also be held at the Sports Night.

Cal Request For Ram Soccer Trophy Refused

A representative of the University of California two weeks ago asked Coach Roy Diederichsen for the City College of San Francisco soccer trophy his teams had won when they were members of the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference.

The Californian spokesman was refused his request.

Until the end of the 1962 season, the Rams were the top soccer team in the NCISC. They battled such teams as USF, Stanford, San Jose State, S.F. State, and UC. In the four years previous to 1962, City College, the only two-year college participating in the league, had either won or tied for the title.

At the end of the '62 season, the University of California succeeded in throwing the Rams, who tied with Stanford for the title, out of the league. The California people claimed that soccer was a major sport at their university, and to continue playing a "junior" college would "jeopardize" their program.

RAMBLINGS

Teddy' Responsible For Offensive Play

By Mike Smith

ONE OF the big strong points of the Ram gridders' offensive attack is the passing arm of Bill Gianquinto. In the game against the Foothill Owls two weeks ago, an Owl coach was heard crying fearfully, "Watch the pass! watch for the pass!" But Ram halfback John Helms grabbed the flying pigskin and galloped in for the touchdown.

The 200-plus City College of San Francisco fans who made the trip to Los Altos Hills that night of October 10 went wild while witnessing one of the most exciting plays in the game of football, the forward pass.

Oddly enough, the type of play that opened football's offense was indirectly started by the twenty-sixth President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt.

In the "Happy Warrior's" day, the big play in the grid game was the wedge. Suitcase handles were sewed on to the seats of the pants of players; the ball carrier would then get into a pocket of a vee of teammates, each of whom held on to the handle in front of him.

It was a terrific blocking formation, and many a defender actually suffered fatal injuries trying to get to the man with the ball.

Then in 1905, President Roosevelt threatened to abolish football entirely because of the rising mortality rate.

Teddy was far from being a sports hater; he participated enthusiastically in such sports as boxing, fishing, hunting, jujitsu, riding, shooting, tennis and wrestling. So the Republican President really was concerned about football's high death rate.

Almost immediately following Roosevelt's threat, the wedge was outlawed and the pass made legal so that the game would be opened up and the chance of injury lessened.

So the forward pass was added to football not so much as a device to make the game more exciting, but primarily as a safety measure. Then Pop Warner and Knute Rockne proved that a forward pass could mean more to football than had been originally intended.

But without a crowd, a pass is a pass and football is football. An empty stadium is just that.

Crowds have inspired teams to play over their heads, as the saying goes. Ask any coach, and nine times out of ten he will say that the sight of a jam-packed stadium is the next best thing to winning, for which, of course, there is no substitute. What follows is a well-played game, and that is a great thing to see.

Maybe if enough people will form a, you know—bigger crowd?—maybe then the team will really catch fire; and maybe we'll find a Joe Perry, an Ollie Matson, a Burl Toler or a Johnny Unitas out there.

Then we'll have a tradition, and we'll get some recognition and so will Dutch Elston, and some day, we could become a commissioner—at least with a small "c."

Gridders Tackle T-Birds

Oakland Clash Promises Duel Of Speedsters

By Stamus Cocoles

Coach Dutch Elston's gridders clash with Merritt College (formerly Oakland) Thunderbirds at 2:30 p.m. Friday in a Golden Gate Conference encounter in the Ram stadium.

There is promise of a wide open game since both teams have a lot of speed. Merritt, coached by John Anastasia, lost its opening pre-season game to Bakersfield, 38-0, came back to wallop Sierra, 30-0, then soundly defeated the San Mateo Bulldogs, 18-6, in its opening league game.

Merritt is led defensively by McArthur Lane, 6-2, 215-pound linebacker, whom coach Anastasia calls "the finest player on his team."

The offense is led by quarterback James Sharpe who leads a wing T type offense, using the quarterback run-lateral option. Merritt has speedy backs in Glen Fuller and Alton Brumfield.

The Rams have been using a wide-open attack, and, although bogged down at times, they strike like lightning on long passes by quarterback Bill Gianquinto. Gianquinto's biggest targets have been flanker John Helms and end Eural Smothers.

There are few better open-field runners than Chris Ransom in this league, and if the line will open some holes both Ransom and speedy Oliver Mitchell can be expected to eat up yardage.

The Ram backfield has in Joe Sobeck a fullback who can get those crucial short yardage gains when the situation calls for it. The San Franciscans were stopped on offense many a time this season when they had a third down and short yardage-to-go situation.

Defensively the Ram gridders are hurting because of an ankle injury to tackle Suaese Malae in the first quarter of the Foothill game. Coach Elston blamed Malae's band ankle on the very poor conditions of the lower field on which the Rams practice.

He said Malae originally injured his ankle on that field and reinjured it during the Foothill game.

The injury to Malae is one reason why Foothill's line dominated the Ram line and eventually beat the Rams, 18-13. Malae had been an outstanding lineman in the two preseason games and his loss hurt the defensive unit.

When coach Elston was asked what had happened in the Foothill game, he explained, "When two teams have a battle in the line, each trying to handle its opponent, the winner of this tremendous battle is usually ultimate winner in the score. Foothill just outplayed us in the line."

The Ram line has great potential and should rebound against Merritt College. During the Foothill game defensive halfback Robert McDill, linebackers Levi Byrd, Rudy Lapera, and Orrie McRae and ends Chris Davis, Frank Papia and Audrey Holmes played some good hard-nosed football.

Against Merritt the Rams play their third league game, a 'must win' game, if the Rams hope to capture a championship in what looks like a balanced conference race.

Ram's Ransom Runs It, 19-12 As Pritchard's Pitches Fail

By Mike Smith

Chris Ransom racked up 152 yards in 26 carries to lead the City College gridders to a 19-12 victory over the Chabot Gladiators last Saturday night at Castro Valley High School.

Coach "Dutch" Elston's squad based their entire offensive attack on their three running backs, Ransom, Oliver Mitchell and Joe Sobeck. Between the three, they gained 232 of the Ram's 253 total rushing yardage. The win over Chabot dropped them into last place with an 0-2 record, and the Rams evened their Golden Gate Conference mark at 1-1.

The local gridders jumped to a first quarter lead on a 33 yard touchdown drive in six plays which was highlighted by a 17 yard run by quarterback Bill Gianquinto, and an 11 yard dash by Oliver Mitchell. Ransom took the ball in from Chabot's two yard line for the score. Mike Dugan kicked the extra point, his only one of the game, that was to give the Rams a razor-thin 13-12 half-time lead.

Chabot roared back some three minutes after the Rams first touchdown. Quarterback Jerry Preston Pritchard pitched a 30 yard aerial for the six pointer. Pritchard attempted the two point conversion by passing, but failed.

Rudy Lapera carried the following kick-off back nine yards to San Francisco's own 34 yard line. Then Gianquinto fed the ball to Ransom three straight times; the 5-10 halfback responded with a total of 60 yards.

In the latter run, Ransom steamrolled 53 yards downfield to Chabot's six. For a moment it looked like a Gladiator defender was going to nail him at the 20, but Henry King threw a key block to knock the man out of the play. Sobeck followed up with a six yard touchdown run.

Trailing 13-6, the Chabot Gladiators drove 24 yards upfield in seven plays to the Ram 24. With only a little over two minutes remaining on the clock before the half, Pritchard rolled out to the right side and ran the ball 24 yards down the sideline for the Gladiator's last score of the night.

The local gridders final touchdown came in the remaining three minutes of the game. Mitchell ran a Chabot quick-kick back 14 yards to the 48. Then Ransom and Sobeck combined for a 33 yard march, aided by a 15 yard unnecessary roughness penalty against Chabot, for the Ram's third and final TD of the game. Sobeck carried the ball over the goal on third down from the two yard line.

Chabot threatened to come back in the last minutes of the game, when John Taylor tromped 17 yards upfield to the Ram 47 yard line. But one play later, Lapera grabbed Pritchard's pass intended for Eddie Munic, and thus the Gladiators last minute hopes went down the drain.

The Ram defensive team played a terrific game in the second half. In all, they forced Chabot to give up the ball five times, twice on interceptions grabbed by John Helms and Lapera.

Pritchard lost 26 yards attempting to pass. Chris Davis was responsible for 18 of the lost yardage. Rich Colombo and Orrie McRae were in on the other plays.

RA Travels To San Mateo For Volleyball Meet

A program described as offering "fun, food and friendly competition" is scheduled for the college's Recreation Association when it travels to College of San Mateo tonight with events scheduled to start at 7:30 o'clock.

Among the events of the semi-annual affair are the traditional volleyball tournament between the RA and the College of San Mateo sports club to be followed by a dinner.

"We're on a friendly basis with San Mateo," Edna Pope, RA adviser here, explained, "and what we're really going over there for is to eat."

Donna Lleces, RA president, cited last November 7 as the date of an illustration of the philosophy that "it's always good to win." She recalled that San Francisco's RA volleyball teams beat the San Mateo teams, winning six of the six games played.

Miss Lleces declared, however, that competition is not considered "serious."

Players on the first team are Joe Marin, Roy Wong, John Yuen, Fran Richardson, Rosemary Donaldson and Wilhelmina McLorin. The second team includes Joyce Hicks, Chenty Fonseca, Jim Torpis, William Chow and Denny Chu.

Ram Harriers Place Eighth In State Invitational Meet At Sacramento

Lack of experience was once again cited as the big factor in the City College harriers' poor showing in the Sacramento State Invitational Meet, held October 10.

The Rams placed eighth as a team in a meet of 213 entrants. Veteran Rich Klemmer once again turned in the best performance for the squad with a twenty-fifth place finish, followed by Bob McGuire in forty-second place.

Mike Conroy, Bill Long and Les Arnold trailed far back in the pack.

Coach Lou Vasquez felt that inexperience in such a large meet hampered the team's chances for a better showing than eighth behind American River, San Jose State Frosh, Stanford Frosh, San Mateo, California Frosh, Sequoia and Fresno.

Tomorrow the squad will take on San Mateo and Diablo Valley in a meet scheduled for 4 p.m. in Golden Gate Park. "San Mateo will be the winner as we just aren't in their class," Vasquez stated; "it should be very close between Diablo Valley and San Francisco, but all we can hope for is second place.

"Inexperience has hurt us the most so far, but we should do better in meets with only one college," Vasquez said.

Golden Gate Conference title cofavorite San Mateo finished fourth behind American River and the San Jose and Stanford Frosh squads. It appears to be just a struggling battle for second or third place for the Rams, since no one, including themselves, can come even close to San Mateo and Foothill this season.

Perhaps next year, with a season of experience behind them, Vasquez' runners can make a stronger bid.

Campus Police Crack Down On Thefts In Parking Lots, Keep Watch From Rooftops

By Hugh Haworth

The cities of Brisbane and Pacifica could envy the City College Police Force.

First of all, the college has the biggest force of the three. Second, it has many extras not found in small town forces, such as undercover women, rooftop patrols, walkie-talkies on the regular beat, and just as unenviable, the problems, too — auto thefts, "boosting" (stripping parts from cars), disorderly conduct charges and parking nuisances.

There is a total of 46 "special" police officers, sworn in by San Francisco Police Chief Thomas Cahill, to control "traffic problems and security" on campus.

In doing so, the Campus Police have three to five men on patrol every hour morning and afternoon, including an extra which is not part of many police forces — compact two-way radios for some of the patrolmen.

—Deputy Chief John Fussleman noted, "Our problem with stripping (stealing parts from cars) and thefts is negligible as compared with another campus here in the city." A result of having a uniformed man in sight from any point on campus — a good deterent against auto "stripping."

THEFT PRECAUTIONS

The rooftop patrol, formed last semester to stop similar problems occurring over the numerous lots, is another extra feature which has proved very effective, he added. Most thefts and burglaries are by persons who are not students here; therefore, they are unaware of this special observation.

One problem with which the Campus Police cannot cope unless students lock their cars is auto thefts by the "pros." Campus Police Chief Paul Robin warned that an expert can step in a car as if it were his own, "hot wire" it in less than a minute, and he's gone.

The only real defense students have is to lock their cars. To date there have been four auto and three cycle thefts. One of each has been recovered.

WOMEN ON SPECIAL DETAIL

The undercover women are actually the three police clerks, also on call for collecting information where only a woman would be inconspicuous.

Only one occasion arose last semester when they were asked to investigate a case of suspected men intruders in the women's lounge. This semester, however, is the first time they have been considered for regular duty along this line, Robin disclosed.

POLICE COOPERATION

The college police force works in close cooperation with the San Francisco department. For instance, several "hot" cars "dumped" in the crowded campus lots have been recovered in the past by campus patrolmen and turned over to city authorities.

Another example is Steve Willis, one of the campus patrolmen, who was cited by San Francisco Chief Cahill for clearing away a traffic jam by directing cars stopped around a four-car collision that took place during the rush hour downtown September 11.

INSPECTIONS STARTED

Beginning this semester, the police force, at the request of Chief Robin, will command personal and equipment inspections to check the readiness and appearance of all men. The first inspection was conducted last Thursday.

There is the lighter side to police work also. The patrolmen who keep order at dances report having to turn away men students for not wearing ties who try to come back with women's scarves or even tissue paper around their necks as substitutes.

'Winslow' Opens Fall Drama Season Tonight In Theater

Opening the campus drama season, The Winslow Boy makes its first appearance tonight in the college theater after four weeks of rehearsals and preparation.

The two-act play is scheduled to run from 8 to 10 p.m. nightly with a final performance Saturday.

Andrea Fulton, a third semester drama student and no novice to the theater, portrays Catherine Winslow, a girl ready to sacrifice her own future happiness in order to seek justice and truth.

"It is a highly moving play," Miss Fulton said, "and I find my role challenging and exciting."

Miss Fulton made her debut here in the production of Impromptu, and since then has appeared in Bald Soprano, Beggar On Horseback and Tartuffe.

The play is based on an actual incident and was written in 1945 by Terrence Rattigan. In 1948, it was made into a movie with Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Robert Donat in the lead roles. This will be its first presentation at the college.

Roles are spread out equally among all the players, giving the production plenty of variety and interest, Walter Krumm, dramatic instructor and director of the play, commented.

The players are Robert Rushalk as Ronnie Winslow, Al Hughes as Arthur Winslow, Joan Grant as Grace Winslow, Miss Fulton as Catherine Winslow, John Lazar as Dickie Winslow, Ray Lynch as Sir Robert Morton, Anne Crichton as Miss Barnes, Phyllis Melmon as Violet, Nelson Cole as John Watherstone, Henry Cabrera as Desmond and John Marden as Fred.

Sets were designed by Paul J. Crowley of the arts department, and built by students in Drama 19 and Victor Vaio, technical adviser for the fine arts department.

In charge of costume selection is Robert Johnston, designing major and designer for last year's production of Tartuffe.

Admission to the production is free to Associated Student cardholders and $1 for all others wishing to attend the productions. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Commenting on the play as a whole, Krumm said, "Rehearsals have been going very well and we have every reason to believe it will be a success."

Other plays for the rest of the season are No Exit by Jean Paul Sartre, and Goodwoman Of Setzuan, by Berthold Brecht.

ANDREA FULTON appears as Catherine Winslow in the drama group's four-performance production which opens tonight.

Freund Sees Record Turnout For Freshman Ball At Hilton

Gary Freund, Frosh Class president, expressed hopes today for a turnout of at least 1000 couples at this Friday night's Freshman Ball to be held from 9 p.m. to midnight in the Continental Ballroom of the San Francisco Hilton Hotel. In the first four days of ticket sales more than 200 bids were distributed to members of the Freshman Class, Freund added.

The ball, entitled Moonlight On The Shore, will feature a Cutest Couple contest in which competing couples will dance to a slow number for the presiding judges. Winners will be selected on the basis of best personality and will be awarded trophies, flowers and certificates for dinners free of charge.

The theme song for the evening will be Stranger On The Shore and the dress semiformal. Music will be provided by the Walt Tolleson orchestra, which will play any song requested, Freund declared, if the title is submitted in writing before the ball.

Deadline for purchasing tickets for the ball is 2 p.m. this Friday at the Silver Pole in Science Hall. Tickets are free for Associated Student cardholders and may also be bought at the door for $2.50 by students not having AS cards.

Union Square Scene Of College Rally For Proposition B

A gala rally in support of Proposition B is scheduled to start in College Hour tomorrow in the vicinity of the Redwood Ram. At 11:15 a.m. the rally will travel to Union Square via a car parade where it will continue for the benefit of San Francisco citizens.

Arnie Kamrin, chairman of rallies and car parades for the Student Proposition B Committee and organizer of tomorrow's event, promised that entertainment would be supplemented by professional performers, but was unable to disclose any names as The Guardsman went to press.

While at Union Square, students in support of Proposition B will distribute throwaway pamphlets and bumper stickers with hopes of swaying some last-minute minds before the election next Tuesday.

That City College students are concerned about educational needs for the future and the passage of Proposition B was shown in a poll taken here last week.

Pete Sherwood, sophomore social welfare major, "I'm for what is beneficial to the community, in the future as well as the present.

"For instance, I'm from Pacific Grove, where the people, who are mainly retired, or young servicemen, don't like to support things which won't directly benefit them. I saw the whole community suffer from the lack of good instructors and educational facilities because there were no funds to pay for them."

Mrs. Betty Bekgran, freshman English major, "Well, at the rate I'm going, I may still be here if and when the new improvements are made. However, students shouldn't think of only themselves, but of society as a whole.

"The whole community will benefit, if the bond passes."

Cornelis Portegies, sophomore engineering major, "I'm afraid the students here will vote for it because they think they're the ones who will get the new buildings. They don't realize that future students will get the most from it if it passes."

Harry Osibin, freshman television and radio broadcasting major, "Maybe I'm idealistic, but I believe in voting for things which will help tomorrow's citizens as well as today's."

Lois Page, freshman pre-law major, "I feel that giving more money to the schools will raise the general level of education, which will in turn help to raise the standard of living."

Close-Up Closes Up Until November 15

Because of network conflicts to be encountered in the next two weeks, the next scheduled program of City College Close-Up will be on November 15. This production will cover the field of photography.

Sylvia R. Leff, the show's producer, announced that students at the college as well as faculty members Beverly Pasqualetti, Charles Lamp, Ken Molino and Emmett Smith will explain and illustrate the content of the courses offered here in this field.

Employers and working graduates will discuss the opportunities available in a career in photography.

Landscaping Plans For Horticulture Center In Progress

Plans are now in progress to landscape and beautify the new horticulture center, according to Harry Nelson, department head.

The fence which surrounds the area will be covered with a variety of vines, Nelson said, and horticulture students will gain experience identifying the different vines.

Plans have been submitted by students in the landscape design class for the landscaping of the area in front of the horticulture building. Members of the landscape construction class will do all the actual labor of laying pathways, building fences and installing sprinkler systems.

Greenhouses are being built to shelter some of the 30,000 to 50,000 plants which the center normally has.

There are several categories of training available in ornamental horticulture. If a student so desires, he can even specialize in one particular plant. Horticulture training includes the growing, selling and care of plants and also landscape design and construction.

Students are given guidance in selecting the area of horticulture study, and when they graduate they are placed in jobs by the center. A graduate student is able to classify a minimum of 600 plants.

Recently a nursery owner, who was one of the first students of the horticulture department, donated 19 different species to the department.

Phantom Returns Ring

Peace has once again returned to the Malepeai household.

The trouble all started when Fa'Aofia Malepeai, a student here from Somoa and a newly married man, committed a grave error that puts a strain on the blissful happiness of matrimony. He lost the symbol of his captivity, his wedding ring.

Because the ring was lost on campus, Malepeai began to haunt the halls of the lost and found department, waiting in vain for somebody to return the piece of jewelry that he considered valuable from both a sentimental and material standpoint.

Finally, in desperation he turned to that Friend Of The Friendless, that Light In The Darkness, that Tracer Of Lost Wedding Rings, The Guardsman.

Lo and behold, the day after The Guardsman published the story of Malepeai's plight the ring was turned in. It was enough to restore faith in the most advanced cynic.

But the story does not end here.

As published in The Guardsman last week, the Ace Reporter who interviewed Malepeai got all the facts except his name. Now the problem was to notify him that his lost property had been returned.

No sweat. The same Ace Reporter just went out and mingled with the 8000 or so students enrolled here and in 20 minutes found Malepeai.

Now the same Ace Reoprter decided to interview the student who turned in the ring. Not wishing to make the same mistake twice, the reporter asked the student his name the first thing. The student refused to divulge the information and dissolved into the crowd.

Fate Of Proposition B AND Students At Stake Tuesday

TODAY CITY COLLEGE of San Francisco is overcrowded. The college has surpassed its planned capacity of 7000 day students by 800, and the future looks darker.

The expected enrollment for 1967 is 9000 day students. This semester the addition of late afternoon classes picked up some of the overload but didn't stop the inevitable, for registration was closed and the remaining students turned away.

Next semester and the following semester is spilt milk.

There is nothing that can be done about next semester and probably for the Fall of '65. Students numbering in the hundreds will be turned away through no fault of their own, and many more will settle for any courses or course once their major is closed.

Although it will be over a year before the actual construction will begin to alleviate the classroom shortage, at least there is hope for the future.

Fortunately for this college and its future students this classroom deficit could be restricted to these two semesters only. Next Tuesday, November 3, may be the start of a race to stop the milk from spilling.

Proposition B, the $31-million school bond issue is on the block waiting for the starting gun. Every student eligible has an obligation to vote YES on B. Students not yet 21 have just as pressing an obligation to get their parents and friends to vote YES.

All students should be aware of the arguments for Proposition B and be acquainting neighbors and friends with the following points:

1. Proposition B is for all the overcrowded schools from elementary to college level in all the sections of San Francisco.
2. Proposition B will not as some have reported raise the city tax rate 25.5 cents per $100. School bond money in San Francisco has been derived from the City and County Sales Tax since 1947 and does not increase the sales tax.
3. Proposition B will cover school construction for a period of no less than five years.
4. No group has come out with opposition to Proposition B.
5. Proposition B is long overdue and completes the construction plans from the last school bond issue in 1956.

Despite these strong reasons in support of the bond, it is estimated that 200,000 will cast "No" votes just because it is a bond issue or because they are ignorant of the above facts.

In order to pass, Proposition B needs a two-thirds majority, which means 400,000 "Yes" votes. Staying home, therefore, is equivalent to voting No.

To insure passage of Proposition B, students will have to "get the vote out." It's bad enough that construction will not follow for at least one year.

If it were to be delayed another year, or even worse not to come at all, the results would be felt throughout the community.

Tuesday the race begins. Already more than half the present student body will not be here to see the finish. If the gun doesn't sound on Tuesday there won't even be a race — just a long line of hopeful students with empty registration cards.

Unbeatable IBM Brain Scores Examinations

By Don Patten

Students who may have thought they could beat the IBM testing system by blackening in all the spaces on an answer sheet are in for some unfortunate news.

IBM 1230 Optical Scorer, a new test correction machine that scores 1200 answer sheets per hour and discourages students from trying to beat the system, is now in full working operation at the college.

Thomas Nesbitt, director of testing, research and guidance, explained that with the use of the machine's Multi-Work Switch, any answer sheet put into it with more than one space filled in per number, automatically rejects the sheet and files it in a special compartment that means only trouble to the student.

This can result in that grade of failure if the instructor wishes to take such action, but, Nesbitt stressed, if for some reason, more than one space is filled in by the student accidentally, this would be taken into account as long as it didn't happen too often.

The new machine can score 800 more answer sheets per hour than the test scoring machine previously in use at the college.

Instructors, Nesbitt explained, submit tests for correction with a "correct answer" key. The machine is cleared so that it is free from answers used in a previous test scoring, and then the key is put into the machine.

The machine "remembers" the correct answers provided by the key which has just passed through it. A control sheet is then placed into the machine and "tells" it what to record in the way of scores at the side of the answer sheet.

The IBM marvel, to be used exclusively at the college for midterms, finals and entrance test corrections, will score approximately one quarter of a million answer sheets annually — that's 225,000!

When IBM announced the availability of the new machine, Nesbitt requested approval for one at the college through President Louis G. Conlan.

Rented on a monthly basis, it is one of the first to appear on the West Coast. Nesbitt disclosed that at present, he knows of only two in this area. One is located at the College of Marin and another at the Educational Testing Service in Oakland, which indulges in mass scoring procedures.

When asked if special pencils were needed when taking a test scored by this machine, Nesbitt added only that "number two pencils are definitely preferred."

So, with the arrival on campus of the mechanical genius of IBM on August 24 of this year, dreams of straight A grades through filling in all the blank spaces must be forgotten.

No one can beat a machine anymore.

Success Story Series

City College Graduate Runs $79 Into Half A Million With His Little Brownie

By Bea Takeuchi

A gross income of one half million is nothing to sneeze at, especially when it belongs to a 30-year old man who started with only $79.

In a busy suburban shopping center in San Lorenzo, California, Frank R. Denevi, 1954 City College graduate, owns and operates a lucrative photography business. Present quarters include some 4000 feet, built by Denevi and his employees.

Outward appearances may deceive the passerby, because a small retail camera shop occupies the front part of the building. In the back, many employees busily develop and process snapshots and portraits.

BUILDING AT NIGHT

"We built this complete plant in 30 nights. We operated out of the old location, which was only 500 square feet, during the day, and built this at night. I take good care of my employees, and everyone helped," Denevi said.

Denevi, a busy young man who is always smiling, "likes to treat his customers like kings," he said. "And I never ask any employee to do something I can't do myself.

"This includes sweeping the floor or cleaning the rest room. I work right along with my employees, and they are loyal. I have the same crew with me that started with me 10 years ago," he added.

PROCRASTINATOR

Denevi combined his technical knowledge and experience into building up his business. "One person I'll never forget is my counselor, Mr. Howard Schoon. The first words he told me at City College were, 'You are a procrastinator.'

"Since that day, I've always strived not to be one. He said I was too interested in photography only, and I had the habit of setting aside my other studies. I realize now what he meant.

"In this business, I have to be salesman, bookkeeper and a jack of all trades. The more subjects you learn in college, the better," Denevi emphasized.

Denevi was a Guardsman photographer, and was instrumental in Lee Meriwether's becoming Miss America, 1954. "She was very sweet. We took pictures of her, and submitted them at a contest in Sigmund Stern Grove.

"We had no idea she would win, although she photographed beautifully. Well, she won the Sigmund Stern contest, and you know the rest," Denevi related.

ASSIST FROM H & R

Denevi made publicity shots for the hotel and restaurant department, and when he was married, the department arranged for a wedding suite at Catalina Island. The crew at the photo lab shot the Denevis' wedding pictures.

In 1954, Denevi received his Associate in Arts in photography here and was drafted into the U. S. Army. Because of his knowledge and ability, he was placed in critical positions, enabling him to exercise his education and experience in photography.

Besides being in charge of photo labs, and being a photography instructor, Denevi was assigned as the General's photographer. Among those V.I.P.'s he photographed were Generals Dwight Eisenhower and Maxwell Taylor.

"The experience in the service, in working with executives and political people gave me additional poise. It was quite valuable to me," Denevi reminisced.

When Denevi was discharged from the Army, he had $79 and his old camera, which he paid for by working part-time after school for a wholesale photographer.

GAMBLE PAYS OFF

A family man, and the father of two children, he gambled with his last few dollars to start his own business. He rented a little building in San Lorenzo and set up a portrait studio. There he was called upon to take wedding portraits.

"The first month I grossed $333. From then on it grew. At first it was a one-man operation. I did the pick-up, photo finishing and delivery. I fought big-time competition. It was quite difficult," Denevi related.

Denevi encourages students who are interested in their own photography business with one bit of advice, "Regardless of how good you think you are, there's always someone better. You must work for it. Having been in college isn't enough."

Borodin Four Descendants Of Gifted Line

By Hugh Wilson

The Borodin String Quartet of Russia which will appear here during College Hour next Thursday, are musical descendants of the gifted line of Russian String Players which include such names as Heifetz, Elman and Rostropovich.

The group is the foremost string quartet in Russia today.

Originally called the Moscow Philharmonic Quartet, the name Borodin was bestowed by the Soviet command in 1955. The group is named after Alexander Borodin, recognized as the "father" of Russian quartet music.

Specializing in the works of Russian composers, the Borodin Quartet has in its repertory more than 100 compositions, including not only the entire Russian literature, but most of the classic and romantic, as well as modern composers such as Debussy, Ravel and the American composer Samuel Barber.

The quartet was founded in December, 1945, at the Tchaikovsky Conservatory where the four young men were students. The ensemble played many concerts and gained public acclaim.

Their success was established at a concert in 1947 when they performed the Third Quartet of Shostakovitch. Since that time they have toured throughout the Soviet Union.

Soon they became known as the finest string quartet in Russia and began tours in East Germany and other Iron Curtain countries.

Historically quartets fostered chamber music composed by the nobility, were indigenous to the old Russian society. This musical heritage dates back to the time of Catherine II.

At the beginning of the 19th century, chamber music combinations were formed in the Russian aristocratic society and as a result produced the phenomenon of the aristocratic-musician, characteristic of Russia of that time.

Best known of the aristocratic sponsors were the Princess Galitzin and Rasoumovsky. Rasoumovsky, ambassador to Vienna, was friend as well as patron to Ludwig van Beethoven, who dedicated his Opus 59 to him.

The Borodin quartet, composed of Rosticlav Doubinsky, first violin; Yaroslav Alexandrov, second violin; Dimitri Shebalin, viola, and Valentin Berlinsky, cello, will give only four concerts in California.

One is a private concert, two are at the University of California and the third here.

Election '64

Nikita Exile, China Bomb Can Sway Vote

By Boyd Burtnett

BEING AN active member of the Soviet government means playing a dangerous game. Nikita Khrushchev played the game, played it well for over 45 years, but then finally lost.

For the most part, Khrushchev was as popular with the American people as a Russian premier can get and his "retirement" to Siberia has understandably caused much concern in this country.

THE ONE-TWO PUNCH

Then, in a classic one-two punch of international fright, Communist China exploded her first atomic bomb. The people of the United States are supposed to take comfort in the fact that this was just an itsy-bitsy bomb of the stone age variety—like the one that leveled Hiroshima in 1945.

And then, just to make certain there would be enough copy for the newspapers, Great Britain held an election and one of President Johnson's aides got himself into a jam.

ACCIDENT OR DESIGN?

Whether by accident or by design, all of this happened within one month of the national election in the United States. There can be no doubt that the recent events will affect the election, but the big question is will the effect be enough to make any difference?

It is difficult to say which presidential candidate will reap the profits of the political flip-flop in Russia and the mushrooming cloud in China. Spokesmen for each major political party are pointing to their men and saying, "See, we told you so!"

BEAR NOT SMILING

The Russian Bear is not smiling any more and he may be getting ready to do a little snarling. The Chinese Dragon has grown a new tooth to bite with. The man who has been saying that he can snarl and bite right back is Barry Goldwater.

The voters going to the polls next Tuesday may decide suddenly that a "get tough" policy is just what the country needs.

MODE OF THOUGHT

This is not to say that Lyndon Johnson does not have the capacity to get tough, but Goldwater is the candidate who has aligned himself with this mode of thinking.

However, in the past the voters have been reluctant to change administrations when the nation was faced with a grave crisis resulting from outside sources. The citizenry may decide to keep Johnson in rather than change horses.

REAL THREAT DOUBTFUL

Actually, the recent international and domestic developments will probably only have bearing on the undecided voters, and there are very few of them this late in the game. It is doubtful if there are enough to go around to constitute a real threat either way.

Tuesday is the day of reckoning and it will all be over sometime Wednesday morning. Johnson is still ahead in the recent polls, but the polls had Rockefeller winning in the California primary also.

It still might be an interesting evening on television.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

MOST individuals at one time or another have had visions of being someone else, even if the change could last but a single day — or night.

Next to impossible? Perhaps, until someone decided to celebrate the night of October 31 with fun-making and masquerading. More precisely, practically impossible until Halloween came into existence.

"Wonderful," the adults cry, "but hasn't Halloween always been thought to belong to the kids." Kids? Who is a kid? Isn't everyone, regardless of his chronological age, really just a kid at heart? But of course!

Just think how tremendous it can feel to shed ones cares, problems and responsibilities for a little while and to re-live childhood dreams and ambitions. And the best part of the idea is the cost.

For a nominal fee, which usually is reasonable, any number of costumes ranging from the sublime to the ridiculous may be rented.

Embarrassed? There's no reason to be. Who is going to know? And furthermore, who is really to care? Why, most individuals are too busy suiting up themselves to stop and stare and wonder about anyone else.

Even if for no other reason, it is a charming way to legitimately get out of the house (married men please take note) and what's more, to stay out for a long while if so desired.

What's that? Say you're "henpecked"? Well in that case, suit up the Mrs. and both go out. Surely, no reasonable wife will object to a night out. (And men, if the wife must come along there is always a chance she'll get tired walking before you do — and boy, that's where the fun really comes in.)

If the idea of prancing around dressed as Astor's pet pony doesn't exactly grab an individual the right way, then do the obvious. Phone a group of friends and invite them over for a party, that way it's for sure everyone will have a good time.

Or as a last resort, if all else fails then by all means volunteer to accompany some neighborhood child who might not otherwise be able to show off his costume. (It usually helps to select a child who normally fatigues rather easily — and early, if there is such a "dear" left.)

At any rate, whatever form of entertainment an individual decides upon for October 31, be it masquerading around the town or eating pumpkin pie by the fireplace one sound will be inevitable. As one young man reminisced:

The voice I heard said, "Trick or treat,"
Which brightened up the scene.
My hand then to my pocket went,
For it was Halloween.

Eleven Enroll In Library Technology Curriculum Here

By Gregory Frazier

A pioneer course in library technology is being offered by the college this semester under the direction of Amerigo Ciani, college librarian.

The following 11 students are currently enrolled in the class: Walter Asbey, Pearl Berkelman, Ronald Bernardini, Ruth Browns, Larry Bryant, Jeanie Chooey, Janice Grimm, Martina Klaver, Michael Shortridge, Carolyn Tummins and Daniel Vizzard.

The two-year course of study includes instruction in principal phases of library work, such as circulation procedures, magazine handling, library filing, arrangement of books, pamphlets, serials and other materials.

Also included is instruction in book ordering and acquisition, classification and cataloging, use of audio-visual materials and use of library equipment and machines.

Advanced library practice, a course for second-year students, gives practical experience in the operation of the college library and public and special libraries off campus.

Graduates of the curriculum in library technology are qualified for employment as library technicians, persons employed in public and special libraries to perform duties requiring a combination of some of the technical skills of the librarian and the clerical worker.

"There are excellent career opportunities for our graduates," according to Katharine Pedley of the library staff.

"The demand for semiprofessional library personnel far exceeds the present supply, especially in school libraries where textbook clerks are desperately needed.

"Employee salaries range from $300 to $600 per month, depending on skill, experience and length of employment," she said.

Mrs. Pedley emphasized that the first semester in library technology is open to all students. Mrs. Pedley will teach the class next semester.

Students satisfying the requirements for graduation from the college and completing the curriculum with an average final grade of C or higher receive an achievement award, the certificate of proficiency in library technology.

The department of library technology recommends for employment all students who receive this award and, in conjunction with the college placement service, makes a special effort to find positions for them in public and special libraries.

The class meets at 2 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday in C-257. For further information, students may consult their counselor or any member of the library staff.

The Great Pumpkin

YES, LINUS, there is still a Great Pumpkin and he "pumpke" about each and every Halloween.

PUMP IS a rather friendly chap, contrary to popular belief. And the only reason he looks so sinister lighted on windowsills is that he is trying to ward off his arch enemy — Peter Peter Pumpkineater.

THAT SINISTER fiend Pumpkineater had a wife and couldn't keep her so when she ran out on him, Peter took to pick'in on pumpkins to relieve his pent-up feelings of having been done wrong.

THE GREAT PUMPKIN'S greatest fear is that of becoming a pie. So each Halloween the good people of the town gather all the available pumpkins and carve macabre faces on them and put a candle inside, after cleaning out the stuff that pumpkins are made of.

THIS SCARES heck out of Peter Peter and he goes searching for coconuts.

Ski Club To Rent Lodge For Winter

The Ski Club is planning to rent a ski lodge in the vicinity of Tahoe City this semester, according to Ski Club President Ken Ouellette.

"It was the general opinion of the club members that they would like to have a place to stay during snow trips without spending too much money," Ouellette explained.

The idea of renting a lodge originated last semester, and a number of club members are putting up the money for the rental, which is estimated to amount to around $100 per month.

The club's president said that it will cost each member approximately $2 for each night spent at the lodge, and each member is allowed to bring one guest.

The Ski Club is now planning two major snow trips, one over the Christmas vacation and one during the semester break in January.

Skiing instruction will be given by qualified club members, one of whom is Joe Hewyler, a student here who teaches skiing at Soda Springs.

Kamrin Withdraws Threat To Halt Car Parades When Council Pledges Full Support

By Peter Dorn

A threat to call off the Proposition B car parade, scheduled tomorow, Friday and Monday, was withdrawn by Arnie Kamrin, Student Council public relations chairman, during last week's council meeting.

The reason for the threat to call off the parade, Kamrin said, was the absence of Student Council participation. Kamrin declared that before the student body is requested to assist in the paarde the council members should set an example by joining their own cause.

Jim Wyatt, Student Council adviser, suggested that other sources of student participation be exploited.

When Associated Men Student President Ray Chezik informed Kamrin that the campus fraternities would assist in the Proposition B parades, Kamrin decided to give the parade another try.

Seven supplementary budgets were passed last week with approximately $2533 allocated.

The largest request, also the most controversial, was that of the Pep Band. Dean Ralph Hillsman was present at council to speak in behalf of the proposed $1446 and trip to the Junior Rose Bowl.

The band's trip, Wyatt explained, is to be a reward and an incentive for their cooperation in past athletic events.

Associated Women Student President Barbara Kontis reported that 25 coeds were chosen out of the 50 who were present at the tryouts.

The three elected delegates to the California Junior College Student Government Association convention to be held next month are Miss Kontis, Lori Klein and Dan Christian. Christian was tied with Chezik for the position, which he won after a revote.

More than 200 bids to the Frosh Ball have already been distributed, Gary Freund, Frosh Class president, announced. The Frosh Ball will be held at the Hilton Hotel from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday.

The Ski Club dance, held last Friday night, was "very successful with an attendance of more than 350," according to Wardene Oliver, Associated Student vice president.

A Council of Organizations talent show is scheduled Friday, November 13. All clubs can enter contestants for this venture. The contestants, who do not necessarily have to be club members nor college students, must be amateurs, Greg Moore, publicity chairman, declared.

All clubs must audition their own talent, and entrants must be registered by November 4.

Stan Angel pointed out to council that the minutes of September 29 showed only two were sworn in of a group of officers elected that week. Gary Ettin, AS president, told Angel that these officers will be sworn in next week.

Holiday Job Rush Forecast By Amori

Competition for Christmas jobs during the holiday season will be intense, according to Joseph A. Amori, director of placement.

All qualified and interested students should file their applications with the placement service before Friday to receive consideration, he warned.

Thousands of San Francisco Bay Area high school and college students will be competing for the available job openings, and those with experience in the labor market can expect first preference. Amori emphasized that beginners will face difficulty in finding employment.

The San Francisco Post Office Department, within the city limits and at the San Francisco International Airport, is expected to hire the most workers, and veterans will be given preference.

All applicants must be American citizens, reside in San Francisco, and be at least 18 years of age upon filing for the job openings.

Available jobs range from mail sorters to supervisory work, and base pay is $2.29 per hour.

A demand for experienced sales personnel, cashiers, gift wrappers, packers and shipping clerks is expected, according to Amori. These jobs are for both men and women and pay ranges from $1.45 to $2.98 per hour.

Associated Student Card Sales Expect To Hit 4000 Mark

Sale of Associated Student cards has continued to soar and is expected to reach a total of 4000 by the end of this month.

According to Mary Mauer, card sales chairman, the number of cards already sold is 3700 as of last Wednesday.

Miss Mauer reminded everyone that the cards which had been available at the Silver Pole in Science Hall now can be purchased at the bank and, for a limited time, in bungalow 6.

In previous years, prizes have been given to the student having the highest number of sales to his credit. This year, however, Miss Mauer said the committee is not emphasizing the competition.

Instead of a radio, the usual token of appreciation, new arrangements will be made so that all who have put an effort into the sale will participate in a reward of a different type.

Keep Counseling Dates—McCloud

Counselors began student programming for next semester on October 12 and will continue doing so until the middle of January.

Walter E. McCloud of the counseling staff said that many students have already received postcards notifying them of their appointments.

"It is important for students to inform their counselor or the counseling office, S-160, at least two days in advance if they cannot keep their appointment," McCloud said.

Registration numbers for second year students will be assigned on the basis of the total number of units completed plus the overall grade point average achieved.

First semester students will be assigned registration numbers for Spring 1965 on the basis of first midterm grade point average.

Free hour forms are available in the counseling office, McCloud stated.

He emphasized that any student who has not submitted a free hour form will not be given a registration number.

Students who have not been given an appointment by January 8 were advised to check with their counselor.

The counselor assigned when the student enters remains to help and advise him throughout his career here.

Theater Site Of Annual IRC Fair

Colorful costumes and exotic music and dancing will be featured in the two-hour stage show which highlights the International Relations Club fair beginning at 8:15 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, November 6 and 7, in the City College theater.

The fair will include participation of approximately 100 foreign students, each representing his homeland.

Eight major acts will be presented in the stage production and examples of entertainment to be expected are a Japanese Kolo player, a Samoan knife dancer and a Thai folk dancer.

Following the performances displays of foods and goods characteristic of each represented country, will be shown in Arts Hall.

The committee presenting the best performance and/or display will have the name of its country and committee chairman inscribed on the plaque which hangs in the IRC office.

Tickets may be purchased in S-155, and admission will be 75 cents for students and $1.25 for the general public.

Rams Clash With Comets Friday

Merritt Scores Late In Game For 14-14 Tie

By Mike Smith

Despite two touchdown plays by Bill Gianquinto, who scored one on a run and another on a pass, the Merritt College Thunderbirds hung on for a 14-14 tie in a Golden Gate Conference game played here last Friday, October 23.

City College acquired their first touchdown on a 64 yard drive in 14 plays with the help of an offside penalty against the Thunderbirds. The three big plays of the drive were a 14 yard pass from Gianquinto to Henry King, an eleven yard run by Oliver Mitchell, and a ten yarder by Joe Sobeck which placed the ball on the Merritt one yard line.

With some three minutes left on the clock before the end of the first quarter, Gianquinto plunged across the goal line to give the Rams a 7-0 lead. Mike Dugan kicked the extra point. Great blocking by Joe Ross was another key asset in the Ram drive.

The local eleven's second TD came early in the fourth quarter on a 23 yard march in four plays. King came up with the big play when he recovered Steve Wilson's fumble, which was jarred out of his hands by Orrie McRae, on the Thunderbirds own 23 yard line.

On the next play, Mitchell sped 16 yards toward the goal. Joe Sobeck picked up two more yards, after a three yard loss on a previous run. With eight to go for the touchdown, Gianquinto stepped back into the pocket, on third down, and shot a short pass to King for the local gridder's last touchdown of the day. Dugan kicked the conversion.

Oakland's Merritt College chalked up their first score in the second quarter. Mitchell fumbled a Thunderbird punt on the Rams' own 18 yard line. Merritt College didn't waste any time in scoring as they ran it over the goal in three straight plays; on two four yard runs by Dave Beard, and a 10 yard gallop by Wilson. MacArthur Lane booted the conversion to give Merritt College a 7-7 half-time tie.

The Thunderbird's second touchdown came on a fantastic 70 yard punt runback by Sam Germany midway through the fourth quarter. Trailing 14-13 after Germany's run, Merritt College went for the one point.

Although this was all the scoring in the game, the Rams almost scored early in the third quarter, only to be stopped by a strong defensive Thunderbird line three yards away from the goal.

Mike Dunne recovered a Merritt College fumble on their own 23 yard line. The Rams then moved the ball down to the eight yard line. With first and eight to go for the score, Ransom was sent through the line twice for only a total of two yards. Sobeck charged off to the left side edging in toward the goal for two more yards. On fourth down and four to go, Mitchell tried to cut the right corner but was stopped for a one yard gain.

Booters Remain Undefeated As San Mateo Tastes Defeat, 4-2

City College's soccermen rolled on to their second straight victory in league competition by knocking off highly-rated San Mateo, 4-2, two weeks ago at Balboa field.

The Rams' next league game is with Diablo Valley. In their first contest with the Vikings, they defeated Diablo, 12-1.

According to head coach Roy Diederichsen, this contest should prove to be just as tough for the Vikings as the last game; as he put it, "We know that it would be that way, and it should be the same type of game as before, but I don't feel that the score will be as high."

In the contest with the Bulldogs, Diederichsen expected that San Mateo would give the Rams a tough time.

Diederichsen's summary of the battle: "It was a hard played game, it was a rough, clean-played game; the next time we play them I won't be surprised if the tables are turned."

After taking an early lead of 1-0 on George Fernandez' goal in the first period, the Rams had to come from behind to pull the game out of the fire. Diederichsen's club held a slim lead until the third stanza.

At that point San Mateo went on the offense. On a pass from the outside the Bulldog halfback placed it past goalie Gil Benedict to tie the score, 1-1. It wasn't long before San Mateo scored again and took the lead for the first time in the game, 2-1.

Trailing, by one goal, the Rams went to work to put their names on the winner's roster. The San Mateans contributed to their own downfall when their goalie stepped outside the chalk line. This gave Ram Alex Mendieta a chance to tie the score, and his indirect kick was perfect.

The Rams then put the game on ice by a pass from Al Fernandez to the middle of the field where Alex Volikoky headed the ball into the center of the net, giving the Rams a 3-2 lead.

Chris Wager and Mendieta combined to add another goal to the Ram's tally.

Cagers Looking For New Blood

Basketball tryouts are still open for the 1964-65 season which starts December 1 under coach Sid Phelan.

Two rookies, forward Willie Jones and guard Roger Langlois, who both represented Lincoln on the All-City team last year, are expected to bolster the Rams, defending conference champions.

Jones and Langlois will be fighting it out with a dozen or so other All-City list members for a first or second string berth.

Jones, the stronger of the two, has the best chance of making the first club. He played two years of varsity ball and was the league's number three scorer with 155 points last year.

Jones is powerful and can muscle his way in to the goal while in traffic. He did this to perfection in Lincoln's 50-49 upset against Sacred Heart in the last eight seconds when he powered his way out of the crowd to score the final and deciding basket.

Langlois may have difficulty fighting for a first club berth.

He is not very tall, or heavy for that matter, and he could lose out because of these factors, even though he might conceivably be a much better ball player.

He ended the season with 117 points and hit 82 per cent from the line. Langlois was one of the most alert players on the Lincoln squad and was a better outside shooter than the statistics show.

Contra Costa Grid Team Hopes To Recapture Lead

By Stamus Cocoles

Contra Costa, defending Golden Gate Conference champions the past two seasons, face the Ram gridders at 2 p.m. Friday in the Ram Stadium.

This season, the Comets are again in contention in league competition, having beaten Chabot, 22-20, swamped Merritt, 43-25 and lost to San Mateo, 24-22.

Vince Maiorana, head coach of the Comets, stated, "We have an explosive professional type "T" offense, using the running and passing game equally effectively."

Offensively, the Comets are led by halfback Travis Williams, flanker McKinley Reynolds, and ends Charles Sadler and Joe Koontz.

In the past two seasons the Rams have not scored a single point against the strong Comets. The Rams have been shut out by scores of 12-0 and 23-0.

This will be a key game for the once-beaten Rams in their quest for a Golden Gate Conference championship.

They lost their opening league game to Foothill, 15-13, but came back to edge Chabot, 19-12. They played Merritt last Friday in their third league game. So far, Foothill is undefeated and in first place with three wins.

Against Chabot the victorious Rams came up with a sound running game, which netted 253 yards. They attempted only three passes for zero yardage. Chris Ransom, outstanding halfback for the Rams, led the attack with 152 yards on 26 carries.

Also halfback Oliver Mitchell was effective with 52 yards on 10 carries. Fullback Joe Sobeck, out since the beginning of the season because of an injury, also contributed valuable yardage and scored the second Ram touchdown against Chabot.

Ransom's longest run of 53 yards came on a 48F reverse, which set up the second touchdown for the Rams.

Strong blocking by Henry King, Bernard Burchfiel and Levi Byrd made the reverse successful.

When asked if the 48F reverse was preplanned just for the Chabot game, Ram coach Dutch Elston said, "It has been one of our regular offensive plays that we installed at the beginning of the season; we just haven't used it in earlier games."

"At the same time, Bill Gianquinto, the quarterback, fakes the ball to the left halfback Mitchell going to the right, and then hands off to Ransom, coming from his right flanker position, a yard behind the line of scrimmage just outside the right end.

"Then Ransom, with the ball, follows the two guards and the right end who are leading the interference around left end."

Gladiators Edge Spikers, 28-29, For Third Loss

After two very poor performances this season, the City College cross country squad came up with its best effort of the year but went down to a third defeat of the year, 28-29, to Chabot October 15 at Chabot.

This week the Rams come up against Foothill and San Jose in a meet they are not expected to win. Foothill, a cofavorite for the conference title, is the predicted winner, so all San Francisco should gain from this meet is experience.

Veteran Rich Klemmer, who has proved to be the club's number one runner, came in second, running 18:36 behind Chabot's Craig Reynolds at 18:25.

Klemmer, a vastly improved competitor over last year, is the squad's most consistent runner and has come in "first" teamwise in every one of the Ram meets.

Coach Lou Vasquez declared early in the season that his inexperienced club would do better in individual meets and this prediction has proved to be true. The squad's lowest placements were in the large Golden Gate and Sacramento State Invitationals.

Injuries and illness will cost the runners any chance of a victory again.

"Joe Singer was sick and has not been running as expected," Vasquez said, adding, "If he had been running well we could have beaten Chabot easily, and I had also hoped that our other men would improve as we went along, but it hasn't worked out this way. Instead our top men, Rich Klemmer, Mike Conroy and Bob McGuire, are greatly improved."

However, the squad's biggest problem has been the lagging fifth man. This has hurt the team greatly in every one of the meets.

The Rams placed second, fourth, fifth and sixth, but the number five man didn't come in until thirteenth position. McGuire was in at 19:42, Conroy at 19:46, and Bill Long at 20:22.

Rich Cuadra, fifth man, didn't come in until 22:30, two minutes and eight seconds behind the fourth man.

Singer, previously fifth man, has been way back in the pack. "If Singer starts performing as he did last spring, we could be the third best in the league," Vasquez commented.

Zeta Phi, Alpha Phi Epsilon Clash In Intramural Basketball Tonight

Competition in the Associated Men Students' intramural basketball slate continues tonight as Zeta Phi Sigma meets Alpha Phi Epsilon in the women's gymnasium, and Phi Beta Delta meets Beta Tau in the men's gymnasium with both games starting at 8 o'clock.

In the Independent League, the Peacocks take on the Chiefs in the women's gymnasium, and the Chancellors meet the Bay City Celtics in the men's gymnasium. These games will start at 9 p.m.

Last week saw The Guardsman forfeit to Lawson's 10 in the Club League. The Hotel and Restaurant and Newman's game was undecided.

The defending championship team, the Divine Ones, defeated a never-say-die Professional team by the score of 58-19. High point man for the Divine Ones was Avery Carter with 25.

Other Independent League action saw the Peacocks outscore the NBA Rejects, 67-41. The Peacocks' Bob Roehl, George Wells and Larry Curran scored 22, 15 and 15, respectively. High men for the Rejects were Leon Attabit with 11 points and Mark Conroy with 10.

Next Tuesday's club competition will pit Lawson's 10 against Hotel and Restaurant in the men's gymnasium, while The Guardsman tangles with the Filipino Club in the women's gymnasium. Both games start at 8 p.m.

Also scheduled for Tuesday are the Professionals against the Devinessians in the men's gymnasium, and the Chiefs versus the NBA Rejects in the women's gymnasium. These independent teams play at 9 p.m.

Last Wednesday's fraternity action saw Alpha Kappa Rho defeat Zeta Phi Sigma, 24-11.

The fraternity game between Alpha Phi Epsilon and Beta Tau was not played. It is not known which team forfeited.

The Chiefs squeezed by the Bay City Celtics, 36-35, and the Chancelors outshot the Devinessians, 33-29.

The Devinessian's Willie Wise was high point man for his team with 12 points. Chester Craft was second high man with 6.

Cross Country Loping Calls For Endurance

RAMBLINGS

Long Distance Runner Need Not Be Lonely

By Mike Smith

A LONG DISTANCE runner is an unique and respected figure in the world of sports. But much too often he is quickly forgotten in the public eye.

Very few persons know the name Paavo Nurmi of Finland. In his day he held the Olympic records in the 1500, 5000 and 10,000 meter runs.

Nurmi is possibly one of the greatest of all time. If the distance runners had a hall of fame, he would be on or near the top.

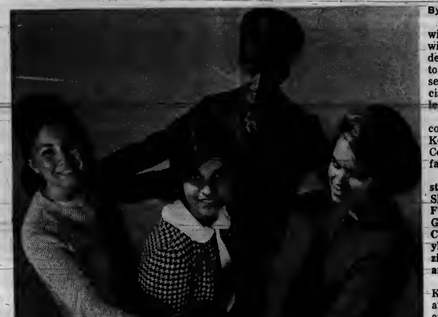
The marathon and cross country run is a sport that marked its beginning with the death of the marathon runner, Pheidippides. In 490 B.C. it was Pheidippides who carried the news to the city fathers of Athens of the Greek victory over Persia. Before he collapsed and died, he shouted, "Rejoice, we conquer."

As fame goes, Pheidippides is the only runner to have good publicity. Otherwise, there is neither fame nor fortune in distance running that there is in the major sports of America, including bowling and golf.

So why does an athlete go into this sport? One of the reasons probably is that he is an individual who is willing to pound his legs into the ground and practically push himself beyond physical endurance, all for that one big race.

It is also a strong determination of wanting to do it on the basis of sheer desire, not an inherited trait or so-called natural abilities. There is no such thing as the natural-born runner.

These requirements run all the way down the line. It also applies to City College's cross country team. Although it appears that the runners are not going to win the championship, there are a lot of them on that team who have the never-say-die attitude.



It was two weeks ago that the Ram harriers met Chabot College. In that meet, the San Franciscans lost by only one point.

In a case like this, and there are many, winning is not what is really the only important thing. But being on the team and sticking it out is nothing to be ashamed of.

Herein then lies the answer as to why a cross country runner does what he does. When he is running behind the pack, across a rugged terrain in the sweltering heat, he asks himself where he found inspiration.

When a runner crosses the finish line, not necessarily first, then he knows why he will try again. There is a strange exhilaration from the runner's conquest of himself.

Dean Mary Golding, indicated that a special feature in the program will be the presentation of a scholastic award to the freshman, from a San Francisco high school, with the highest grade-point average.

Hostesses will include members of the Recreation Association and other interested volunteers in addition to those who were runners-up in the modeling tryouts. They are JoAnne Conlan, Cathy Soden, Diane Rosina, Jean Baptista, Alice Ransom, Judy Baldwin, Karin Reed.

This is in addition to the appropriate amount of the inevitable tea.

Pouring duties will be taken over by faculty members Miss Garibaldi, Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. Pope and Ganelle Griffin.

More than 200 persons have aided in the preparations for the event which highlights the AWS activity schedule and to which all women students and faculty members are invited.

IRC Sponsors Two-Day Fair

Exotic Foods, Goods On Sale At Booths In College Theater

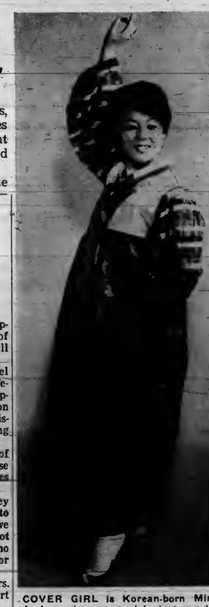
Displays of exotic foods and goods provided by foreign homes, consulates and business establishments will be part of the activities featured at the International Relations Club fair slated to begin at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the City College theater and Arts Hall.

About 12 booths will be set up in Arts Hall to accommodate the displays and sales of various foods being prepared by City College's foreign students.

Preceding the ethnic showings will be a two-hour stage production involving eight major acts. They include a Japanese Kolo player, a Samoan knife dancer and other authentic performances by students depicting phases of their country's culture.

Dr. Joseph Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here, revealed that he begins "talent scouting" at the beginning of each Fall semester to insure the best of entertainment City College's foreign students have to offer at each annual fair.

Especially interesting, Jacobsen added, should be the multi-colored costumes to be worn by the approximate 100 participants, including Kathleen Jacobsen, the faculty member's daughter, who will sing Irish folk songs in the show.



The committee which best represents its country through displays and/or performances will be recognized.

The committee chairmen are Dave Lewis, Latin America; Takashi Ogino, Japan; Guy Oei, China; Purita Pera and Resurreccion Bolfango, Philippines; Ruth Browne, Israel and Peggy Yates, Tahiti, Samoa and Hawaii. Mohammad Kowsar is the stage manager while Godfrey Pinder will preside as master of ceremonies. And music will be furnished by the City College music department.

Cover girl on the program is Min Ja Lee, a student here, who represented Korea in last year's IRC fair.

Tickets may be purchased in S-155 and admission will be 75 cents for students and $1.25 for the general public.

COVER GIRL is Korean-born Min Ja Lee who appeared in last year's IRC Fair and whose photograph graces the program this year.

Deadline For Dropping Classes Set For Today

Last day to drop classes without penalty is today. The procedure calls for consultation with the student's counselor, obtaining an official "drop" card, and filing it in the registrar's office.

After today, any student dropping a course will receive a grade of F.

Cleanliness In Statler Wing To Affect Food Cost

By Alice Zelaz

Unless students cooperate in keeping the Statler wing clean, prices of all foods in the vending machines will increase.

John Dunn, instructor in the hotel and restaurant department and cafeteria manager, said a meeting of representatives of the administration was held recently to discuss the disorder in which the tables in the wing have been left.

It was decided that if conditions of neatness did not improve, an increase of 5 cents per item in the machines will be necessary.

"This is the students' wing; they complained of not having a place to drink a cup of coffee and study; we added the wing, but now they are not helping to keep it clean. We have no choice but to raise prices to pay for clean-up service," Dunn said.

Statler wing houses ten vendors. Use of these has helped to solve part of the congestion in Smith Hall.

Two weeks ago Friday a change machine was installed; there is also a cashier available until 1:30 p.m. to change paper currency and pennies.

A new feature, to the advantage of students having night classes, is the fact that the wing is now open until 7:00 p.m. Monday through Thursday. During this time dinner is available in the machines.

This new service has been in effect only two weeks. Dunn is extremely satisfied with the results. "And, it will continue to get better as time goes by," he said.

Expected soon are new refuse receptacles which will be placed in strategic spots around the room.

Referring to these, Dunn stated, "When these arrive, very shortly, they may tend to help improve the trash problem and then, maybe there will be no reason to raise the prices of the food."

Registrar Forwards Progress Transcripts

Approximately 200 in-progress transcript requests have been received to date by the registrar's office and all will be mailed today, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

The transcripts are for prospective transfers to four-year colleges for the Spring 1965 semester.

Although students have requested that these in-progress transcripts be sent to the college to which they have applied for transfer, another request must be submitted for final grades.

There is no fee for the first two transcript requests, but additional transcripts cost fifty cents each.

Debaters Begin Contest Season At St. Mary's

The City College Forensics Association, having resumed activities after two years of quiescence because of student disinterest, will travel Saturday to Moraga to debate with representatives of St. Mary's College, according to adviser Michael Griffin.

Although the association has only four members now, it has divided itself into two teams. Bill Zuke has joined with Doug Akin, and Rosemarie Adams with Carol Powell, to represent City College in the competition.

The teams will be accompanied to the debate by Griffin, co-founder of the Northern California Forensics Association in 1947 when he first sponsored the campus' debate team.

The NCFA, which has chosen the topic for the debate, now numbers among its 48 members universities and colleges from the states of Hawaii, Nevada and Utah, as well as those in Northern California.

The topic to be debated is: "Resolved: That the federal government should establish a national program of public work for the unemployed."

Competitors are expected to speak in the following classifications, as well as in the debates; dramatic interpretation, extemporaneous, impromptu, original oratory and original poetry.

Membership in the Association, which meets on Thursdays at College Hour in C-219, is now open and the public is invited to attend its meetings.

The NCFA has planned for the future a debate to be hosted by San Francisco State College which will also award scholarships to the winners.

"The association gives students with interest and background in speech an excellent opportunity to compete," Griffin said.

City College representatives have in the past excelled against such competitors as Stanford and San Jose State, and according to member Adams, have won "almost innumerable awards."

In 1948 Forensics Association member Randy Street, who is now an officer of the San Francisco Youth Guidance Council, received the National Phi Rho Phi Award in an after dinner speaking contest.

This is the first time in over four years that the college has had any entrants in this sort of activity.

Borodin String Quartet Plays Barber, Beethoven In C-Hour Concert Appearance Tomorrow

By Hugh Haworth

Russia's "foremost string quartet," the Borodin, will appear here on its first American tour during College Hour tomorrow in the theater.

The program calls for the ensemble to play Opus II by the American composer Samuel Barber and Ludwig Beethoven's Quartet No. Four in C Minor from Opus 18.

This Russian ensemble has won world-wide acclaim in the press as the "most wonderful combination of musicians" (Glasgow), "one of the best we have ever heard" (Rome), "a miracle of utmost perfection" (Stuttgart).

Playing first violin for the Quartet is Rosticlav Doubinsky, second violin, Yaroslav Alexandrov; viola, Dimitri Shebalin, and cello, Valentin Berlinsky.

The performance to be given for College Hour is an extra in the Soviet group's first tour outside the continent. It will be during what was planned as a day off for the Russians to "rest and sightsee."

Marjedi Anders, American agent for the quartet and mother of a former student here, "buttonholed" the Borodin Four to make a special short concert at City College.

Going back before the conception of the Borodin ensemble to the reign of Catherine II, a significant history of the quartet can be traced.

Starting around the 1750's the Russian court patronized string quartet playing. By the 1800's there had developed such an aristocratic musicianship in this field of chamber music throughout Russia there was no comparison elsewhere in Europe.

The Borodin Quartet is the youngest and yet considered the most distinguished group of this Russian heritage. It contains descendants of a "fabulously gifted line of string players," including Heifetz, Elman, Ostrakh and Rostropovich.

The musicians first performed together in 1945 at the Tchaikowsky Conservatory in Moscow where the four were students.

Since then they have presented 1500 concerts in the Soviet Union and Europe over a 20-year span.

Guardsman Staff Takes Recess On Veterans Day

Because of the Veterans Day holiday next Wednesday, there will be no issue of The Guardsman until November 18. Instruction will resume, as usual, on Thursday, November 12.

November 11 marks the 46th anniversary of the cessation of hostilities in World War I and of the signing of an armistice between the Allies and Germany.

Immediately after the war, November 11 was set aside in the United States, Great Britain and France as a day of remembrance for those who had given their lives in the war. It was called Armistice Day.

President Dwight Eisenhower signed a bill on June 1, 1954, designating November 11 as Veterans Day and proclaiming it as an occasion for honoring veterans of all wars.

First Midterm Blues Remedy: Drop Class Today Or Study

NOW THAT midterms are finished and the grades are filed, many students wonder what happened. The new students can't figure out why they didn't get the C as they did in high school, and the returning students are wondering how they allowed themselves to get so far behind.

New students had better console themselves with the fact that the high token C is a thing of the past, like a teddy bear or toy pistol. The college curve is not drawn to supply as many C's as possible but to separate the class into A, B, C, D and F groups. Just as sure as there will be A's and B's in the class there are bound to be D's and F's.

Returning students, aware of these facts, are one up on the new students, but they are not immune to the lull that accompanies a summer vacation and often find their first midterm grades below par.

However, the veteran students are alert to what must be done to get back on the right track. Rereading of assignments and conferences with instructors can usually make up for wasted time during the first midterm, and early starts on coming assignments and TERM PAPERS can generally offset any first midterm slips.

If a student is completely lost and has no hope for passing the course, then the only alternative is to drop the course. Today is the deadline for dropping a course. Keep in mind that it is better to drop one course than to have all grades suffer. What is worse is having to take a leave of absence later on and negate all the work in the rest of the courses just to avoid an F in one class.

Now is the time for decision. Today is the deadline. Students who are behind in a course can receive help from the Alpha Gamma Sigma study clinic and if necessary acquire a tutor from AGS for a nominal fee. The primary task is that he settle down and start working. If a course is completely unmotivating and there is nothing better in sight, the first thing a smart student does is check with his counselor and find out if it is required. If the course is required or the student can't afford to drop it then harder study remains as the only choice.

Today is the last day to use the life preserver. Tomorrow starts the age old college policy—Sink or Swim.

Let Landscaping Expand

IT APPEARS that City College is out to undergo a slight face lifting. Harry Nelson of the horticulture department has announced that plans are now in progress to landscape the area surrounding the new horticulture center.

These plans include vines for the fences and landscaping layouts for the front of the building and the tiers along the sides.

Although the plans are limited to the area around the horticulture center, it is hoped by many that this will be the beginning of the beginning.

At one time the grounds surrounding the college added to the overall aesthetic beauty of the architecture and art work of the buildings on campus. Over the years, however, the landscaping on the college campus has fallen into a sorry state in some areas. Hardest hit of all is the area behind Arts Hall. Although there are areas set aside for flowers and shrubs all around Arts Hall, most of them are filled with wild grass and weeds.

The corner of Ocean and Phelan Avenues was once the cornerstone of the college and had CCSF "written" in shrubbery. Now the corner, along with several other areas, could well be called the wilds of City College.

Many groups, including the art department and The Guardsman, hope that when this present project is completed it will show up the rest of the campus to such an extent that somebody will do SOMETHING to restore the campus to its original beauty externally as well as internally. Student Council would do well to consider this as a constructive project for the future.

The Case Of The Frustrated Skunks

By Don Patten

City College became home sweet home last week to two unusual boarders with a built-in firing system that has quick, fast results for scattering people in all directions.

The Case Of The Frustrated Skunks, termed so by custodian Jack Attinger, began when two of them took up residence in room 19 of Science Hall.

Attinger deduces that they gained entrance through an air vent located in the south courtyard of Science Hall. Because a few skunks had been spotted recently in the area, screens were put over these vents.

It was too late. Two boarders were already inside and with the addition of the screens, they were trapped.

Some days later, Jim Owens, electrician at the college, was working in room 19 when he suddenly realized that he wasn't alone. One of the skunks was following him around as he worked.

Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals officials were called but refused to assist in the situation.

The biology department, being of course interested in all living things, sprang into action. A garbage can with food inside was placed in room 19 with a plank leading to it. The idea, explained Carter Baum of the biology department, was to lure the skunks into the can and thereby trap them.

Unfortunately, the plan didn't work out the way it was supposed to. Thursday night, October 22, one of the skunks "walked the plank," but sensing trouble, he let off steam in the only way a skunk knows.

The results of this course of action were evident Friday morning when room 19 was entered by one of the custodians. Windows were opened immediately and the room gradually became tolerable. However, the ventilating system picked up the skunk's "weapon" and promptly began circulating it to all the lavatories in Science Hall.

Late Friday afternoon, according to Baum, the trap finally fulfilled its purpose. One of the residents of the basement hideaway was captured. The following Monday he was transported to the Peninsula and released by faculty member Charles J. Stewart of the life science department.

The other member of the family presumably still occupies room 19. Only time will tell how long he remains a guest of the college but as long as he doesn't use his secret weapon, no real trouble can be expected.

Achievement In Education

Statler Wing Vending Machines Add Another Facet To H&R Training

By Ann Welll

As further training in the many aspects of the hotel and restaurant business, second semester students in the H&R program are now given the chance to learn vending machine operation—from the supply side.

The 50 students comprising the second semester H&R class are in complete charge of preparing the contents and filling and refilling the seven vending machines now in operation in the Statler Wing of Smith Hall.

This care of the machines is not a special course, according to Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal programs. The second semester of the H&R program includes the management of and service in the faculty dining room as well as this new area of practical application.

Batmale emphasized the desire of the H&R department to present as complete a program of study as possible, so that when students have graduated they may find employment in a good number of fields related to the restaurant industry.

The machines actually have to be filled only once a day at this time, but, since this is a new experience for the students, an eye is kept on the supply in the machines at all times.

The seven machines stocked by the H&R students include two coffee machines, one ice drink machine, one cold milk machine, one pastry machine, one cold food and one hot food machine.

The hot and cold food, as well as the pastry are all prepared by the H&R students and is the same type served in the main part of Smith Hall. As an example, the pastry machine holds 150 items.

These machines are all located on the right wall of the Statler Wing, opposite the windows. The list does not include the Radar-Range, which needs no special attention, or the two candy and one cigarette machines not supplied by the H&R department.

Bringing the list of mechanical wonders to a grand total of 12 is a change machine, which breaks down quarters and half-dollars.

The advantage of the vending machine system in the Statler Wing is that the evening class students may purchase a hot meal, warm it to the desired heat on the Radar-Range, which heats food to the boiling point in 15 seconds, eat the main course and then buy a doughnut for dessert.

Batmale also said that although this experience in vending machines and their supplies is not unique, this college is ahead of most in that area. Cornell University has a similar overall program, but no other college can claim this achievement in education.

Dean 'Steals' Mandolin Orchestra For Concert Here

By Prudie Johnson

Students here will have the rare experience in the November 19 College Hour of being able to attend a concert by the Keio Mandolin Club from Keio University in Japan.

The orchestra was formed in 1910 under the guidance of Adolf Salcoly, an opera singer from Italy. At present there are more than 100 members in the orchestra with ten different instruments involved—first mandolin, mandola tenore, string bass, percussions, second mandolin, mando-cello, flute, mandola contralto, guitar and clarinet.

City College is said to be fortunate to have the orchestra perform here, because it has a very tight schedule of appearances while in America, and it was only through the efforts of Rocky Pisano, science instructor at San Jose State College, and Ralph Hillsman, dean of men here, that the orchestra will be guests on this campus.

It was Pisano who managed to get the orchestra to appear in San Jose and who suggested to Hillsman that he get them to perform for students here.

"They were the main entertainment at this year's Olympics and we were lucky to get them to appear here. In fact, because of their tight schedule, we're stealing them," Hillsman said.

Keio Mandolin Club is under the direction of Professor Tadashi Hattori. Hattori was graduated from Keio University in 1930.

In the beginning the club played only the original Italian mandolin numbers because of the lack of special arrangements for mandolin orchestra, but when Professor Hattori became conductor the repertoire was increased by the professor, an accomplished composer as well as conductor.

MASAKO TODA, Japan's leading prima donna.

Hillsman was particularly pleased that Masako Toda, described by critics as the leading prima donna in Japan, will be appearing with the orchestral group.

"I have never had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Toda, but I've heard she is a lovely person with a beautiful voice," he commented.

Election '64

Another Time, Another Place, Another Loser

By Boyd Burtnett

THE shouting is over, the ballots cast and counted, and the American people have decided who will lead them through the next four uncertain years of history.

The two ex-candidates are now asleep in their beds this morning after a hectic night of waiting for election returns. Only one of them wears the smile of victory.

Now what happens?

In another time, another place, the man who lost the election could reject the will of the people. He and a few of his loyal supporters could take to the hills with their deer rifles in hopes of starting a successful revolution.

The loser would find support in almost every community and he could form an effective underground army which would stand ready until the time of a general uprising.

In another time, another place, the man who won the election could take steps to insure that the rebellion would not take place. He could order the FBI or some other government agency to go and collect his ex-opponent, take him out behind the woodshed, and shoot him. The winner could then institute a reign of terror against the loser's supporters and make certain that he would remain in office.

Each candidate said during the campaign that if the other was elected it would spell disaster for the United States. Either man might feel justified to initiate these extreme actions by wrapping himself in a cloak of patriotism. Nobody wants to see the country in ruins.

But this won't happen; not in this time, not in this place. Politics in this country do not follow along this line.

Instead, the losing candidate and his party will entrench and try again in 1968.

The man who will be called Mr. President for the next four years will begin taking steps to insure that the prophecies of his ex-opponent do not come true.

Granted, a lot of people consider that the wrong man has entered the office of the president and they will hold their breaths for a while, but the country is not in any danger of an armed uprising.

These are for some other time, some other place.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

OBSERVING a college student laboring over an exam can be quite a unique experience. Subconsciously all students, whether they consider themselves "amateur or professional," fall into a predetermined test-taker category.

First, Mr. Chronic Worrier: He is the fellow who worries two weeks before the test and works himself into such a frenzy he is unable to think straight. When the day of truth finally arrives he is so nervous he has difficulty holding the IBM pencil and ultimately "bombs out" in the test. (If nothing else, when grades are issued he has good reason to worry.)

Second, Mr. Confident: Here is the guy who brags to everyone how easy it is to pass an exam and therefore refuses to "cloud his mind with facts." Usually Mr. Confident continues on his merry way and then somehow after the first midterm period is never seen again on campus.

Third, Mr. Clock Watcher: This young man has a phobia for time. He watches the clock in all of his classes, but especially so on test day. The trouble arises when he stares at the clock longer than the answer sheet. Oh well! Time is a great healer.

Fourth, Mr. Anxious: Everything bothers this type of chap, like handing out papers, etc. When the test is finally in front of him he has an uncontrollable urge to proceed without directions. Being rather impulsive he gives in to this urge and "blacks out" the wrong section of the IBM sheet. When the grades are posted, Mr. Anxious is the first in line to see his grade—his grade of F, that is.

Fifth, Mr. Prayerful: The spirit is mightier and more powerful than the mind, at least that's what this boy believes. Following this "theory" he prays the week before the exam and never bothers to supplement his prayers by opening a book. End result—well let's say, miracles don't seem to be happening as frequently nowadays.

Sixth, Mr. Borrower: Regardless of what materials are needed for the test and how inexpensive they may be, this lad always comes to class unprepared. After borrowing a pen, a pencil and whatever else is required he realizes there is one thing he can't borrow—the answers!

Seventh, Mr. Would-Be Cheater: This guy believes he really has it made. "Why study when that cute gal who gets straight A's sits in front of me?" Highly optimistic about his grade, he arrives bright and early on test day only to find one dreaded thing, Miss Straight A is out sick. Upon reviewing the situation Mr. Would-Be Cheater rationalizes an honest F is much better than a borrowed A.

Eighth, Mr. Get Sick On Test Day: This fellow's diseases are well-timed, (at least he figures they are). Thinking he has beat the tester and thereby will have more time to study, he is quite happy until one strange thing happens. The instructor concerned offers no make-up test. (C'est la vie.)

Ninth and finally, Mr. Crammer: For some strange reason this lad stays up until the wee hours of the morning cramming for his test. He unfortunately overlooks one minor detail—setting the alarm. He sleeps until noon the next day, right through a 10 a.m. exam.

Despite the test-taker category all students regardless of how they look while slaving over a test have one thing in common. The will to pass is much greater than the desire to fail.

G.I. Bill Fades Away

Echoes of the last taps of the Korean War will fade from City College halls on January 31, 1965. From that date on all the Korean conflict veterans will be on their own, for the subsistence pay under the G.I. bill will have ended.

This will be the first time since World War II that veterans will not be attending City College with some aid from the government.

Presently there are approximately 25 men drawing full or partial assistance from the bill, counselor Robin L. Dunn noted. At the peak of attendance in 1958 by men on the Korean bill, there were 1500 veterans here.

The number has since died down from the 1958 peak to the last 25.

The college catalogue will lose those paragraphs of explanation on the G.I. bills, which have been a regular part of it for 18 years.

"Where a lot of the effect is going to be felt is in four-year public colleges and two year colleges," Dunn predicted. Public Law 550, the Korean bill, gave only subsistence pay and no tuition aid.

The G. I.'s naturally tended to populate the tuition-free or near-free colleges, whereas their World War II counterparts had both subsistence and tuition assistance, letting more men attend private schools.

So, unfortunately, at the end of this semester, the last 25 of this part of the college's history will be mustered off the rolls.

The G. I. Bill men left notable marks of expansion on the college. In the words of the college catalogue, "by 1947 the influx of high school graduates and veterans was so great" an expansion to off-campus buildings and evening courses was started.

The G. I. Bill subsistence pay is $110 per month for bachelors, $135 for married and $160 for men with children. Prorating gave part-time attendees smaller proportional amounts.

This is one pay line, long or not, the veterans will miss. —H. H.

Tryouts Underway For COO Talent Show November 13

Audition signups are now being taken for parts in a Council of Organization-sponsored talent show, entitled Alive In Autumn, to be held in the college theater starting at 8:30 p.m. Friday, November 13.

The announcement was made by Wardene Oliver, Associated Student vice president and COO chairman.

"Anyone wishing to participate in the show can sign up for an audition in bungalow 5 anytime before 5 p.m. any day this week," Miss Oliver stated. She added that the applications for parts in the program will be accepted through Friday.

Several prizes will be awarded to the participants in this talent show.

Foremost are a gold trophy for the first place award and an engraved plaque for second place; $25 worth of tickets for dinners at restaurants, bowling alley passes and other prizes will be presented to those from third place on down, Miss Oliver said.

Yodelers, drummers, guitar players, banjo pickers, horn blowers, kazoo tooters, contortionists, flame eaters, sword swallowers, rubber band twangers or those with any kind of talent are invited to audition for the program.

Miss Oliver emphasized the need for student participation in all campus activities and events especially this one, since it is the first event of its kind to be offered recently to the campus.

The Faculty Association is planning to present an act in order to build up student interest in the affair.

The program, according to Miss Oliver, promises to be one of "great enjoyment," not only for those who attend, but also for those who will participate in it.

"It could prove," she said, "to be a rewarding experience for those who desire recognition or merely practical experience on the stage."

Profits derived from the program will benefit needy families.

Tickets for the event may be obtained at the Associated Student office in bungalow 5, and admission is 50 cents with an AS card, and 75 cents, general admission.

Refreshments will be served free to those who attend.

Space Mystery Set For C-Hour

Mystery of Space, the film to be shown in College Hour tomorrow, features the capsule to ground course of astronaut John Glenn, Madison Devlin, of the audio visual aid department, declared today.

It shows the training of astronauts in simulated space conditions.

"There are views of the launching sites and of capsules as they are launched into space, and the Gemini, Saturn and Apollo programs are discussed.

In the November 12 College Hour, Traffic Around The World will be shown.

This film illustrates how the great increase of automobiles in all cities of the world has caused many problems and much confusion, particularly in the cities of Europe and Asia where the roads were not planned to accommodate traffic of any magnitude.

Views of cities such as Tokyo, Rome, Paris and London are featured.

Films will be shown in C-246 instead of S-136 for the remainder of the semester, Devlin said.

Number Of Parking Stalls Exceeds Number Of Vehicles

Although "dropouts" have to some extent alleviated the campus parking problem, many students still find it difficult to find stalls because they are too lazy to park in the reservoir area and walk to and from classes, Campus Police Chief Paul Robin stated yesterday.

"Approximately 1450 cars park on campus legally every day," Robin said. There are 1500 stalls. With this excess of 50 stalls, Robin secs no reason to ask that the second reservoir area be opened.

All the students want to park in the F and G lots, he pointed out, because they are closer to the class buildings.

In the G lot, behind Arts Hall, students tend to park out of stalls and along the curb. This is also the case in other lots. Such parking is illegal, the chief warned, and citations will be issued to offenders.

In the first midterm period, students were given 1273 citations and have paid about $2500 to the Hall of Justice. Most citations were issued to cars parked out of marked stalls.

Deputy Chief John Fusselman, in his first semester here, recalled that he tagged the same student's car every day, for one reason or another, for a long period of time. Asked what could motivate this indifference to the law, he replied that such behavior "...simply doesn't make any sense."

There is a group of students here who make artificial parking permits to stick on their windows, the chief revealed. To combat this, he said, he has officers trained to detect falsifications on sight.

The fine for this offense is quite high.

Earlier in the semester stripping of automobiles occurred frequently on campus.

Discount Tickets Now On Sale For Symphony Concerts

Tickets for the 19 San Francisco Symphony Orchestra concerts are now being sold on an individual as well as season basis at the Finance Office in Smith Hall, Meyer Cahn, music instructor, said yesterday.

This means, he explained, that a season ticket, already representing a 50 per cent discount through college membership in the Symphony Forum but still costing a minimum of $19, can be shared by 19 students, each paying $1 to attend one concert.

In the past, City College students and faculty have bought more than 100 season tickets at the 50 per cent discount. However, because the reduced-price tickets are limited now to students only, sale of the tickets has slowed considerably, particularly on the season basis, Cahn stated.

By offering the concert tickets individually, it is hoped the allotted number of 108 season books can be sold before next Wednesday to insure that the same number can be obtained next year.

Tickets will be sold at the Finance Office from 8:45 to 11 a.m. and from noon to 2:15 p.m. through next Tuesday.

Prices of individual passes are $1 for orchestra and balcony sides, $1.30 for balcony, and $1.70 for the orchestra-circle seats.

If the tickets are not sold here, Cahn said, they will be turned back to the Symphony Association and the prices tripled for the public.

On the schedule for the orchestra's Wednesday night performances are the world premiere of Kirke Mechem's Symphony No. 1, and the West Coast premiere of Leonard Bernstein's new symphony, Kaddish.

Beta Tau Dance Ends Pledge Week

Climaxing pledge week, Beta Tau fraternity will host a Moonlight Swim dance from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday in Smith Hall.

Eldon Cherniss, Beta Tau president, revealed that the purpose of giving this dance is to instill spirit and good relationship between fraternities and student body as a whole.

"We have broken tradition by inviting men students other than fraternity members to attend this dance," Cherniss said.

"By doing so," he added, "we hope to attain better student participation in college events."

Highlight of the evening will be a swim contest, the winners of which will receive albums.

Music will be provided by the Charles Price Quintet.

Tickets will be sold on campus and at the door, Cherniss said, and admission is $1 with an Associated Student card, $2.50 per couple or $1.25 stag without card.

Men must wear coats and ties, Cherniss emphasized.

Car Parade, Rally Cancel Thursday Council Meeting

By Peter Dorn

Student Council meeting was canceled last Thursday in order to insure council participation in the Proposition B car parade and rally in downtown San Francisco.

The parade, consisting of 18 automobiles and one motorcycle, was led out of the Cloud Hall circle by an F production Volvo equipped with stickers, decorations, racing stripes, two public address speakers and Arnie Kamrin, student public relations chairman and loudspeaker operator.

Union Square was the destination of the car parade, where the participating students put on a rally in an attempt to recruit favorable public opinion toward Proposition B.

At Tuesday's council meeting a letter accusing some council members and Associated Student officers of "poor cooperation" with the cheer leaders was read by Carol Anselmi.

The letter pointed out that some AS officers "find it more important to mingle with the opposite sex" than to cooperate with the yell leaders.

Arthur Lindholm, also a Freshman Class officer, defended the Pep Band from an accusation in the letter. He reminded council that the band is not a highly skilled professional group, capable of on-the-spot improvisation.

Therefore, Lindholm said, if the song girls want the band to play a particular song they should inform the band in advance so that the band can be prepared for a particular song.

The letter was signed by Jim Stull, and yell leaders Chuck Versaggi and Sal Zagari.

Karen Nordstrom replaced Loralee Lando as the Finance Chairman. Miss Lando resigned her position last week.

Kamrin informed council that he is hoping radio station KSFO disc jockeys will publicize the Council of Organization talent show which will be held in the college theater Friday, November 13.

Council voted unanimously to allocate $50 to the college debate club for a debate scheduled at St. Mary's College at Moraga. The club has been dormant some time through lack of student participation but has been revived recently.

Antigone First Of C-Hour Productions

Antigone, by Jean Annouilh, will be presented Thursday, November 12 in the theater as this semester's first College Hour drama production, James Haran, drama instructor and director of the one-act play, announced today.

Annouilh's adaptation of Sophocles' Antigone was presented originally in Paris in 1944 during the occupation. In the New York presentation, Katherine Cornell and the late Sir Cedric Hardwicke had the leading roles. Vivien Leigh and Sir Lawrence Olivier starred in the Greek tragedy in a London production.

The players in the College Hour production are Kathryn Knib as Ismane, John LaZar as Creon, Mohammed Kowsar as the messenger, Mike Dobrinsky as the guard. The chorus is by James O'Neil.

"We are also getting preparations underway for the season's next drama production. Goodwoman of Setzuin, and students wishing to try out for roles can audition from 2 to 4 p.m. November 12 and 13 in the theater," Haran said.

"Twenty men and 15 women are needed for Goodwoman and theater experience is not a prerequisite." Haran added that students cast in lead roles will receive two units of credit and in minor roles one unit.

Gridders Take On San Mateo In Tight Race For Conference Title

San Mateo's Bulldogs are the next opponent for the Ram gridders with kickoff set for 1:30 p.m. Saturday, on the San Mateo field. If the Bulldogs win this contest they will be in strong contention for the league title.

There isn't a team in the Golden Gate Conference that is undefeated, nor is there a team that hasn't won at least one game, in the tightest forming race this conference has ever had.

Merritt College of Oakland kept the Rams from being in a first place tie, when Sam Germany of Oakland ran a punt back 70 yards in the fourth quarter to tie the Rams, 14-14.

The Rams now hold a one win, two lost and one tie record. They trail league-leading Contra Costa and Foothill, tied for first place.

San Mateo lost its opening league game to the Merritt T-Birds, 18-6, came back to defeat Diablo Valley, 29-13, then upset previously undefeated Contra Costa, 32-30. This was the first league game Contra Costa had lost since 1961.

The Bulldogs, coached by Cliff Griffen, are led by quarterback Chuck Hunter, halfback Steve Ozard and lineman Fred Wenger. San Mateo has a strong passing attack to go with a fine running game.

Ram coach Dutch Elston summed up the 14-14 tie between the Rams and T-Birds of Oakland, stating,

"We did an excellent job in containing their offense on defense; but we broke down in the kicking game, when we fumbled a punt, and had poor punt coverage on another, to give them an easy 14 points."

In the Merritt game, the Rams had standouts in end Henry King, who caught four passes including one for a touchdown, strong running by fullback Joe Sobeck and bruising blocking by offensive tackle Joe Ross.

Injuries for the Rams are beginning to take toll. First string guard Bernard Mordret injured his knee against Merritt College and will be out for an indefinite time.

Defensive halfback Ron Fassler and defensive tackle Rich Colombo, each with a broken finger, played the entire game against Merritt. They should be ready for the Bulldog clash.

Coach Elston, asked to analyze the Ram season so far, replied, "Each team in this league is capable of winning any game, no team outclasses the other, nor is there a team that is exceptionally strong in all departments."

Proving this, coach Elston listed the scores of all the teams and totaled them. The figures show that Contra Costa, with two wins and a loss, had the biggest differential of points, and that was only 17. The Rams have a differential of 5, having scored 46 points to their opponents' 41.

After the Rams tackle San Mateo, they go further south to face the San Jose Jaguars, at 8 p.m., Friday, November 13, on the San Jose field. This will be the Rams' sixth league game.

Booters Rack Up Another Victory In Menlo Match

City College's defending championship soccer squad pulled another victory out of the bag by knocking off Menlo College, 3-1, October 22.

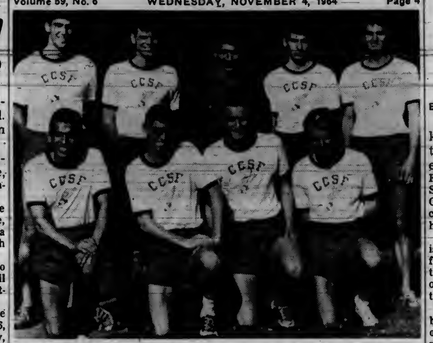
With only two league contests left, coach Roy Diederichsen's league-leading Rams may well be on their way to another title. San Mateo and Menlo College are the only two teams that block the road to the 1964 title.

"The game with San Mateo should prove to be a tougher one than the first, and they'll really be up for this one," he said. The last time the two teams met, Diederichsen's club came out on top, 4-1, after a late third quarter rally.

In the final league game, the Rams will host Menlo at Balboa field, and the Ram coach predicts that it will be a carbon copy of their last contest.

Their first match with Menlo proved to be one of the most unorthodox games ever played by Diederichsen's squad.

Diederichsen indicated that Menlo's club used eight men in front of the goal to prevent his squad from scoring. Even with the goal surrounded by the opposition, Chris Wager, Jon Fromer and Alex Volikovsky each managed to score a goal.



As far as the practice game with San Jose State College was concerned, the Rams found the tables turned. San Jose handed Diederichsen's men their third loss in three years.

Diederichsen stressed the fact that the factors contributing to the Rams' downfall was their loss of scoring potential when Alex Mendieta, Volikovsky and Fromer, missed the contest entirely.

Prior to the contest with the Rams, San Jose knocked off top rated University of San Francisco and took over the lead in that division. In the contest itself, Diederichsen felt that the Rams made anything but a poor showing considering the circumstances.

The Rams held their own until the last stanza when the Spartans iced the game by a 4-2 margin. All-American and last year's Ram Al Korbus, tallied three scores for the opposition.

Spikers Hope For Best In League Meet November 13

City College's harriers dropped their fourth straight league meet to the San Mateo Bulldogs, 16-47, and the Diablo Valley Vikings, 23-38, October 22, in a triangular meet held at Golden Gate Park.

Rich Klemmer turned in his best time of the year with a sixth place finish for a 15:27 time.

Mike Conroy, another standout was in 13th place at 16:07. Joe Singer turned in his best effort of the year, coming in 20th at 16:26. Following close behind him were the fourth and fifth men, Bob McGuire and Rich Cuadra in 23rd and 24th place respectively in a time of 16:38.

Tomorrow the Ram cross country team will take on the Contra Costa College Comets and the Merritt College Thunderbirds for their last conference match of the season.

In this meet, Coach Lou Vasquez sees a chance for the local cross country team to hold on to its fourth place spot in the Golden Gate Conference.

Outside of the top three teams, the league-leading San Mateo Bulldogs, second-place Foothill College and third-place Diablo Valley, fourth place is up for grabs among the remaining teams, Contra Costa, Merritt College, San Jose, Chabot and San Francisco.

The following Friday, November 13, all the Golden Gate Conference teams will meet at Stanford University for an all-league match. Coach Vasquez predicts that if Foothill goes into a slide, which could happen, the Rams could then wind up in third place.

The next week, November 20, the Ram harriers will travel to Salinas for the Northern California championships.

If they qualify, the City College cross country runners will end their season at Mt. San Antonio in Los Angeles for the State competition.

AMS Intramurals Continue As Divine Ones Meet The Celtics

By Bruce Klein

The third week of the Associated Men Students' intramural basketball starts tonight when the Divine Ones meet the Bay City Celtics in the men's gymnasium, and the Chancelors meet the Peacocks in the women's gymnasium with both games starting at 9 o'clock.

In the Inter-Fraternity Council league, Alpha Kappa Rho takes on Alpha Phi Epsilon in the men's gymnasium, and Phi Mu Beta Delta meets Zeta Phi Sigma in the women's gymnasium.

Last Tuesday's action saw the Bay City Celtics outscore the Professionals, 54-21. The Divine Ones forfeited to the Devinessians because most of the Divine Ones are on the football team. AMS President Ray Chezik said that the game might be rescheduled for another time.

Last Tuesday's independent action saw the NBA Rejects defeat the Professionals, 54-21.

High point men for the NBA Rejects were Lee Attabit with 16, and teammate Pete Calabro with 14. The big guns for the Professionals were Don Schaffer with 12, and Frank Sanchez with 5.

In the club league, the Filipino Club won its first game by smashing the Newman Club, 70-38. The big point getters for the Filipino Club were Bernard Piper with 20 and Larry Minnich with 15. The Newman's high point men were Ray Cummins with 16 and teammate Macgraph with 16.

In other club action, the manpowerless Guardsman team forfeited another game. The Hotel and Restaurant picked up the easy win.

Last Wednesday's Independent League action saw the Peacocks scalp the Chiefs, 46-22. High point man for the Peacocks was Bob Roehl with 12 while Rich Lanier was high for the Chiefs with 9.

In other independent action, the Chancelors squeaked by the Bay City Celtics, 59-58.

Beta Tau trounced Phi Beta Delta, 44-29, in a fraternity game. High point men were Milstein of Beta Tau with 24, and Mechetti of Phi Beta Delta with 11. In another fraternity game, Zeta Phi Sigma was defeated by Alpha Phi Epsilon, 42-37.

Next Tuesday's independent action has the Professionals meeting the Chiefs in the men's gymnasium, and the Bay City Celtics taking on the Devinessians in the women's gymnasium. The independent teams play at 9 p.m.

Also scheduled for Tuesday in the club league are Lawson's 10 playing the Newman Club in the women's gymnasium, while the Guardsman meets the Filipino Club in the men's gymnasium. These club games will start at 8 p.m.

This semester there will be a Most Valuable Player selected from each team. They will be chosen after every game, according to Chezik. The first week's MVP's were Holms of the Divine Ones and Wallace of Alpha Kappa Rho.

Voting for MVP's will be held at the end of the intramural competition. The winners will be awarded trophies.

Chezik hopes that more students attend the team competition on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. He said that everyone is welcome.

Contra Costans Push Rams From Lead Contention

By Mike Smith

Contra Costa practically knocked the Rams out of contention in the Golden Gate Conference by defeating them 14-0 last Friday afternoon at City College of San Francisco's home field. The Comet victory marked the third successive time, in as many years, they held the San Franciscans scoreless.

What started off like a very promising game for the local gridders, faltered into a shocking reality when the Rams were halted from scoring on the Comets own one yard line in the opening plays of the first quarter.

The Rams gained possession of the ball on Oliver Mitchell's interception of Scott Piegal's third down pass which placed the ball on Contra 37 yard line.

Joe Sobeck and Bill Gianquinto took turns in pushing the ball down to the seven yard line. On third down, Sobeck went off-tackle for five yards. Then on fourth down, and one to go for the score, Gianquinto's attempt to plunge through the middle on a keeper failed.

After the local gridders had been stopped, the Comets ran two plays in a vain effort to get out of the hole. Then from their own three yard line, on third down, halfback Travis Williams went to the right side of the field, waded through a mass of would-be tacklers, then broke loose and charged 97 yards upfield for the touchdown.

Ben Rogers' conversion kick was partially deflected by Dennis Sullivan, and went off to the right.

A 51 yard drive in 15 plays was the main ingredient of Contra Costa's second and last touchdown of the day. The biggest plays of the drive were an eleven yard pass from quarterback Bill Westernoff to McKinley Reynolds and a ten yard run by Jack Layland. Westernoff brought the ball in from the one for the score.

Williams cut the right corner for the two point conversion to give the Comets a 14-0 lead just four minutes remaining before the half.

Trailing in the fourth quarter, the Rams threatened to score by marching 32 yards down field to the Comet 35 yard line. But with six minutes and twelve seconds left in the game, the local gridders found themselves with a fourth down and six to go situation. After some conversation between the bench and the field, Ron Fassler punted.

City College of San Francisco did not see the ball again for the remainder of the game.

RA Sportsday Set For November 7

Spirit of Olympus will be the theme of the Recreation Association Sports day to be held Saturday in the women's gymnasium, RA historian Pam Maul announced today.

Events, scheduled to follow registration at 8:30 a.m., include bowling, volleyball, folk-dancing, tennis and badminton. The activities will close at 2 p.m.

Eleven two-year colleges have been invited to participate in the program, and students here with an Associated Student card may attend and participate, with the exception of the volleyball team, which has already been chosen by the Recreation Association, Miss Maul said.

Awards will be given for first and second place wins, and an award will also be given for the college accumulating the most points in all events. First place nets three points and second place two points to the individual college's total score.

Monterey Peninsula College was host to a Sportsday October 24 where San Francisco's volleyball team took first place.

Members of the winning volleyball team are Fran Richardson, Wilhelmina McLorin, Chenty Fonseca, Donna Lleces, Joyce Hicks, Larissa Diatschenko, Joe Marin, Alex Bondarenok, Rich Surabian and Jim Torpis. These players won over 9 teams in a round robin tournament.

RAMBLINGS

Unsung Hero Vital To Cagers' Success

By Mike Smith

IT IS ONLY a little under a month before the 1964-65 basketball season opens at City College of San Francisco. Last year the local cagers won their third straight title in the Golden Gate Conference. What's more, the Ram hoopsters went all the way to the State finals where they placed sixth.

That team was led by All-Conference team members Art Adams, who averaged 20 points a game and Jerry Chandler, who averaged 19.3.

This year coach Sid Phelan will be looking for two more players to replace the City College greats. If he is lucky he will find them very quickly.

But the Ram cagers will also be seeking another able basketball player on a different vocation; a sort of unsung hero of each team. He will, undoubtedly, not be a chronic shooter.

His role will be that of the playmaker, one of the least appreciated men in the sport of basketball. The playmaker must be willing to sacrifice his ability to score in favor of the team's big guns.

This player, whoever he may be, must call the plays and keep up the team's momentum throughout the game, and he must still retain the ability to score when the defense drops back.

There are no standard rules or techniques for the playmaker to perfect. Each one has his own style, suited to his particular skill but mostly to the needs of the team. Above all, he should know his players. He should at all times know where they are on the court, and at what shots they excell.

When a game is over where some guy named Jones dunked baskets all night, the fans will run their fingers down the statistics in the papers to check on how many points Jones racked up this time.

But that same fan will probably skip the "assists" column, if it is printed. Apparently the man who set up the plays for Jones is not considered an important factor in the team's machine.

But then, what would a football team be without a playmaker—the quarterback?

Ettin And Peers Attend CJCSGA In Santa Maria

By Margarita Botelho

Six City College delegates will participate in the California Junior College Student Government Association Convention, which meets in Santa Maria tomorrow through Saturday, Gary Ettin, Associated Student president, said recently.

They are Ettin, Wardene Oliver, AS vice president, Lori Klein, recording secretary, Dan Christian, election commissioner, Barbara Kontis, Associated Women Student president, and Mary Ann Ducommun, state information chairman.

Before the convention meets, two-year colleges in California meet in area conferences. City College is in Area 6. The convention itself is divided into two groups, colleges with an enrollment of under 25,000 and those with an enrollment of more than 25,000.

The purpose of the convention is to unite representatives of all two-year colleges in the state to discuss problems of common interest.

Area 6 is particularly concerned with "student survival," that is, the dropout problem. City College supports a program started by San Jose City College in which student counselors with advice from the psychology department members help students to stay in college.

To discuss college issues more effectively the delegates will be divided into various workshops.

Ettin will work in President Workshop, Miss Klein in Campus Activities Workshop, Miss Klein in Campus Attitudes Workshop, Christian in Campus Communications Workshop, Miss Oliver in Campus Organizations Workshop, and Miss Ducommun, whose job is to compile information about all colleges in the state, will meet with state officers.

After a traditional breakfast with President Louis G. Conlan and members of the administration today, the delegates will travel by plane to Santa Maria tomorrow.

They will be taken on a tour of the missile facilities of Vandenburg Air Force Base. Host college for the convention is Alan Hancock of Santa Barbara.

Selection Of 1964 Homecoming Queen Highlights Rally, Car Parade Set For College Hour

By Jamee Rauh

This year's Homecoming rally and election of Homecoming Queen will take place, weather permitting, in front of Smith Hall during College Hour tomorrow.

The announcement was made by Wardene Oliver, Associated Student vice president and Chairman of the Council of Organizations.

"The rally promises to be one of the best we have had at the college," Miss Oliver stated, "because of the great line-up of entertainment scheduled for the event."

Once again the COO has done a "fine job of recruiting good entertainment" for the Homecoming rally, Miss Oliver added. Heading the list of entertainment will be Rick and the Ravens, a rock n' roll group currently appearing at the Zanzibar on Ocean Avenue.

Although nothing definite has been indicated, plans are also being made to acquire the services of Troy Dodds, Capitol recording artist, who is now appearing at Big Al's in North Beach.

Along with the entertainment, the 1964 Homecoming Queen will be chosen at this rally. The election will be preceded by a car parade featuring all the candidates for queen, each one being selected by an on-campus organization to act as its entry in the competition.

All the contestants must be full-time students, entry rules stipulate, and enrolled in 12 or more units. Each organization sponsoring an entry is expected to provide a car to participate in the car parade and to chauffeur the group's contestant.

Furthermore, Miss Oliver said, candidates will be dressed in formals and judged according to poise, grace and appearance. The winner will be announced during half-time at the Homecoming game against Diablo Valley on Friday.

The new queen will receive a trophy and have her name enscribed on the perpetual trophy of the college. An award will also be given to the organization with the best decorated automobile in the car parade at the rally.

The responsibility of distributing petitions to enter the Homecoming car parade and of choosing a judging staff to determine the best decorated car has been accepted by the Inter-Fraternity Council.

The judges will be faculty members who will grade the cars on cleverness, neatness and uniqueness.

Posters, Trial Period May Aid Statler Cleanup

New signs will soon be posted in the Statler wing of Smith Hall to remind students to dispose of their trash.

A four-week trial, continuing until Christmas, is now in progress. If, at the end of this time, students are still leaving the premises littered, a five cent increase in food prices will go into effect.

With the addition of the signs and the trash receptacles, John Dunn, instructor in the hotel and restaurant department and cafeteria manager, hopes that the annoying clean-up problem will be solved.

Signs similar to those now in Smith Hall have been ordered. Dunn said, "We really need more artistic signs, that are both noticeable and catchy; many students will claim they can't read the signs and still leave the tables messy."

Dunn explained that the popularity of the Statler wing is steadily increasing, but so is the litter problem. "It is the students' responsibility and if they continue to avoid this responsibility they will suffer the consequences."

Newly Formed Forensics Team Wins Five Of Ten

By Mike Barber

The newly formed City College Forensics Association, in its first competition in over four years, emerged victorious in five out of ten rounds of debates held November 7 at St. Mary's College. Association President Rosemarie Adams termed the meet "a wonderful success."

The topic debated was: "Resolved: That the federal government should establish a national program of public work for the unemployed."

Miss Adams and City College teammate Carol Powell took three of five hour-long rounds by defeating teams from University of California at Berkeley, American River Junior College and San Joaquin Delta College.

San Francisco State College and University of California at Davis, which had beaten the coeds' team, were downed by Bill Zuke and Doug Akin, the members of the second City College team.

Overall winner in the Northern California Forensics Association sanctioned tournament was University of San Francisco.

Total membership in the City College chapter is now six, having just gained two new members, Mark Cummins and Rocco Chavez. The general public and those seriously interested in joining are invited to attend the association meetings, held Thursdays at College Hour in C-219.

Eight representatives from City College are being sought for an upcoming NCFA event to be hosted at San Francisco State College, according to President Adams. Three scholarships to State will be awarded to the winners.

Activities Clash Near Settlement

Conflict between rally schedules and club meetings has been partially settled, Jim Wyatt, student government adviser and director of student affairs, said yesterday.

Many of the clubs have complained that attendance at meetings has been poor because rallies and other campus activities coincided with the meeting schedule.

This difficulty resulted from the fact that the Council of Organizations had not yet received the athletic schedule when it prepared the social calendar last semester.

When the schedule arrived, athletic activities were found to coincide with other campus affairs.

"This places me in a very difficult position," Wyatt said. "My job is to get people to all these activities."

Because the clubs' meeting schedule cannot be changed, for the past three weeks there have been no rallies. It has been agreed by Wyatt and club leaders that clubs will be advised three or four weeks ahead of important campus activities in order to avoid further conflict.

(For editorial comment, see p. 2.)

Plans Begin For Construction Of Proposition B Additions

Plans for the construction of two buildings on campus, as provided in recent passage of Proposition B, are already underway, and actual construction is expected to begin within a year, Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, stated last week.

Architects have begun to map out the project and they will submit designs to the State Engineer's Office within the next six months. Work is expected to begin shortly after certification by the State and the anticipated completion of the program is 1967.

One building, to be located close to the Phelan-Ocean Avenue end of the campus, will be used for classrooms, and offices for the registrar's staff, counselors, Student Welfare, and Testing and Placement.

The space vacated in Science Hall by these offices will be converted into laboratories and classrooms, but a few offices may still be maintained to facilitate the expected increase in faculty members.

The second building, with proposed location near Arts Hall, will provide permanent facilities for the graphic arts, advertising art and design and photography laboratories.

The new buildings are expected to provide classroom facilities for an additional 1500 students and enable some departments, which are now hampered for space, to expand. The paramedics division will occupy the top floor of Science Hall.

Dr. Anderson further stated that his office is drafting plans to have the campus landscaped. Included in the plans is a proposal to have the North Basin parking lot covered, thereby providing additional parking space for students. The present estimate of the lot's capacity is 1100 cars.

Asked how he felt about passage of Proposition B, Dr. Anderson replied, "I am very pleased that it passed, and I want to especially thank the students who supported the measure, particularly those students and their parents who actively campaigned on its behalf."

Convention Next Tuesday Names AS Candidates

Petitions will be issued to City College political hopefuls in a nominating convention to be held Tuesday night, November 24, in Smith Hall, according to Dan Christian, election commissioner.

The petitions, enabling candidates to run in the January 6-7 Associated Student elections here, must be filed with the Election Committee by December 5.

Candidates for the 20 offices which will be open are required to meet certain standards set forth in the AS constitution.

Those seeking nomination for President and Vice President must have completed at least 42 but not more than 60 units, and have an overall grade point average of 2.3 prior to the term in office.

Associated Men Student and Associated Women Student Presidential candidates are required to have at least 30 and not more than 60 units at 2.2 overall average.

Sophomore Presidential and council representative candidates shall have completed at least 28 and not more than 60 units with a 2.0 overall average.

Those seeking the offices of Freshman President and council representatives must have completed at least 14 but not more than 27.5 units of 2.0 overall average.

Those candidates, when nominated by their parties, are required to file a campaign fee with the finance office. Presidential candidates must pay $2 and the fee is $1 for all other offices, according to Christian.

No political party may spend more than $125 on their campaign. The presidential candidates may spend no more than $50 and all other office candidates are limited to $25 for their campaigns.

All parties, independent as well as the United Student Party and the Student Representative Party are expected to represent themselves at the November 24 convention. —M. B.

International Club Fair Draws Gross Total Of $425

Gross proceeds of approximately $425 were counted after an estimated attendance of 600 at the International Relations Club annual two-day fair, held here November 6 and 7.

Joseph Jacobsen, foreign student and IRC adviser here, explained that after expenses involved in putting on the fair are taken care of, net proceeds should result in about $300. That will eventually be divided into three $100 scholarships for presentation to some selected foreign students.

Jacobsen also added, "This year's fair proved to be one of our best, due in part, to the aid of the drama department and hired technical help."

Three of the acts seen in the stage production performed as guest entertainers at a dinner meeting of the West Coast Registrars Association last Tuesday.

Students of City College were among the 350 foreign students who attended International Day, October 24, at the San Francisco Presidio during United Nations Week.

Last Friday, members of the International Relations Club met at the International Center to discuss plans for a city-wide foreign student athletic league. Facilities at the center, such as swimming pool and gymnasium, would be used for the project.

Japanese Mandolin Club To Play Tomorrow

The Keio Mandolin Club comprised of 100 artists from Keio University in Tokyo, Japan, will appear here in concert during tomorrow's College Hour in the theater. The orchestra will be under the direction of Professor Tadashi Hattori, with Masako Toda as soprano soloist.

Mrs. Toda graduated from the Tokyo Art Academy, then the Tokyo Music college in 1945, in 1946 she became a member of the Fujiwara Opera Company and she first visited the United States in 1953 as a prima donna in Madame Butterfly. She is called the top prima donna in Japan.

Keio Mandolin Club and orchestra is more than 50 years old and is considered by critics to be one of the leading music clubs in Japan. The orchestra has appeared in many performances on radio, television and for recordings in Japan.

With a repertoire of more than 500 numbers ranging from original mandolin numbers, classical music such as Strauss and Mozart arranged for mandolin orchestra to modern popular numbers like Sukiyaki, the orchestra has advanced considerably from its earlier beginnings.

After tomorrow's concert, the entire orchestra will be the guest of the college for a luncheon to be held in the main dining area of Smith Hall. This will be at 12:15 p.m. and Dean Ralph Hillsman invited students to attend the luncheon and meet the members of the group.

Another College Hour Necessary To Solve Conflict Of Interests

A NEW ASPECT of an old problem has arisen, and a final decision on the conflict is becoming more and more pressing. The problem concerns College Hour and its function.

This semester the Rally Committee has managed to lure thousands of students out of the cafeteria long enough to be instilled with spirit and entertainment at the same time. However, among these thousands are numerous members of clubs and organizations on campus who hold meetings during College Hour. The clubs noticed the absences immediately and voiced complaints when attendance at their meetings fell to almost nothing.

As a temporary solution to the problem, the clubs are now holding meetings every other week, while the rallies fill in the alternate Thursdays. This obvious compromise has just postponed the inevitable decision as to just what the purpose of College Hour is and how it is to be realized.

At present the 11 o'clock hour on Thursday is filled with meetings of more than 25 clubs, concerts, lectures, films, rallies and some classes. These activities are held for one or all of the following reasons:

1. To build spirit at the college and encourage game attendance.
2. To entertain the students.
3. To provide students with a break from classes.
4. To encourage students' outside interests and provide them with a well-rounded background.

Before any conclusion can be reached, the decision as to which goal is to come first must be made. If the primary goal is to promote spirit, then the rallies should rule supreme since they gather the most numbers and are considered THE booster of spirit at the college.

Should entertainment be placed first, then the rally programs should be changed to provide entertainment only, supplemented by concerts, lectures and the film series.

As far as providing students with a break from their classes is concerned, either all or none of the activities are needed since just having the free hour is enough.

However, if the purpose is to encourage students to pursue their outside interests by attending club meetings, lectures and films, then a real conflict arises and the rallies lose out.

Should the decision be left to the students, the rallies would probably take preference to the clubs since they appeal more to the whole student body. Despite this, even the most diehard rally supporter realizes the importance of both these aspects of college life and is reluctant to sacrifice one for the other.

To stop the rallies is to dampen the new burst of spirit at the college, yet to subordinate, or even worse, to eliminate the clubs and their films and lectures would be to hinder the intellectual growth and rounding out of educational developments.

As it stands now with the compromise, all the goals are being met but barely and at the expense of each other.

Club attendance is still off from its usual numbers, and the clubs can't function properly when their meetings span a period of two weeks. The attendance at the football games is good but also off from the numbers that gathered for the rallies, and the attendance at college functions is dropping off markedly.

It appears that the activities offered during College Hour have simply outgrown the lone hour break on Thursday. A second hour is needed.

This hour can either be Tuesday at 11 since there are fewer classes held at this time because of the Thursday "break," or a return to the procedure suspended last year of shortening morning classes by 10 minutes on Fridays in order to pick up extra time for a College Hour.

With the former suggestion the clubs could hold meetings on Tuesday to plan their activities for Thursday's College Hour, maybe even to provide entertainment at rallies. Concerts could be held on either day, depending on the preference of the music department. Lectures and films could be held on Tuesday unless a conflict between a meeting and an activity occurs.

Whichever plan might be utilized, the fact remains that the college needs a second College Hour just as other colleges in the Golden Gate Conference did. They have been provided with the second break; now it's San Francisco's turn.

A To Z In The Library

Any student seeking facts, opinions, statistics, just plain reading enjoyment or any information from Abstraction to Zoology has a treasure house of works at his immediate disposal in the college library.

The library has more than 55,000 volumes in its remarkably dust-free racks. The library also subscribes to 450 periodicals and there are 10,000 pamphlets and vocational catalogues available to interested students.

The reference room boasts an impressive array of 2000 titles, not including the numerous volumes of encyclopedias.

"It is interesting to note that our largest selection of books is in the social science category," notes Mrs. Katharine Pedley of the library staff.

"We have 8600 volumes on law, sociology, economics, political science and a host of other social sciences. You might say it reflects the interest of the college."

And for those scholars who, in the tradition of Lincoln, "burn the midnight oil," the library remains open from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday in addition to its daily hours.

By the way, that little slot at the front of the circulation desk isn't a mail slot. That's right, it's a book return slot — or slit, or shoot, or something.

Dean Of Engineering At UC Tells Of Fifty New Scholarships For Transfers

By Bea Takeuchi

George J. Maslach, City College graduate and dean of engineering at the University of California at Berkeley, announced the establishment of 50 scholarships for junior transfers in engineering.

"We have received an endowment of $322,000 and are fully committed to the Junior College system," he declared. "We feel that our freshmen are well taken care of and that scholarships are needed by incoming juniors.

"We rate City College right up amongst the top three colleges in the Bay Area. Your engineering students transfer here with no problem. Over 97 per cent of them who transfer do graduate," Maslach said.

"Professor" Maslach, as he prefers to be called, explained that the misnomer of "Doctor" is given him by many persons, although he keeps explaining that he does not have a Ph.D. degree.

Maslach says that he is "probably one of the few deans of a university who has a B.S. degree."

"I don't have a doctorate, but I have pushed graduate work. A Ph.D. is the mark of a promising young scholar. I'm not that. I've done it. I have no qualms, for I've done a dozen theses. I just prefer to be called 'professor'," Maslach emphasized.

He feels that he does not need the Ph.D., and for several years he has been a consultant for NATO in France, Italy, England, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden.

He was invited to lecture in French at the Sorbonne, and he has worked with the top world scientists.

Masiach is one of the scientists responsible for the wind tunnel. "Everybody laughed at it in 1949. Now the U.S. is a leader in world aerodynamics and satteiite aerodynamics. Every wind tunnel looks just like ours. They copied ours," Maslach related.

He emphasized that the key word to Big Science is "Engineering." "Engineering is a professional area which operates between science and society. Engineering interprets science, translates it so that this can be used to benefit society.

"Why dignify it in the college of space sciences? I feel very strongly about this. Everybody tacks on the word 'science' to everything when it's just engineering to begin with," Maslach said.

"The next era will be heavy with high level and exciting engineering. The time and era where the utilization of the word 'science' is finished. We're at the steady state and handling it well," he said.

Maslach was graduated from here in 1937, when classes were held at Powell Street and Galileo High School. He received his B. S. degree from U.C., Berkeley, in 1942.

After graduation from there, he participated in radar research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Since then he has taken a major part in numerous vital research projects and has taught.

Despite the demand for his knowledge in the field of research, he prefers teaching. "It is an individual process," he said.

An energetic man, Masiach has "raced every regatta in the Bay Area." He also skis, hikes and goes fishing. He and his wife have participated in at least ten political campaigns in the East Bay. "I don't plan to retire," he said.

H&R — Woman's Place Is In Home, Not Kitchen

By George Nelson

It's a kind of unofficial rule in the hotel and restaurant business that a woman's place is in the home and not in the kitchen.

Ten women are currently disregarding this "rule" having enrolled in the hotel and restaurant department here. Three have received scholarships.

Traditionally men have monopolized the role of chef in the "better" restaurants throughout the country. One H&R source says that there are only about four women in the United States holding the position of head chef. H&R student Eluwene Visser hopes to become the fifth.

Miss Visser wants to become a lady chef despite all the laughs from the men chefs. It seems that the idea of a lady chef is an inside joke among the male pot and pan set. But Miss Visser is disregarding the laughter and set upon being a chef — a good one, and she is going to do it the hard way.

She has already been offered a position as chef from her restaurant owner uncle in Hawaii but has refused, saying, "That would be the easy way."

Another field in which men have the upper hand is that of the dietitian. Donna Payne, another scholarship winner here, hopes to be a dietitian. This also produces laughter among the men. But in spite of it, Miss Payne is going ahead with her plans.

Miss Payne is to be married in June and right after the honeymoon she begins work as a dietitian.

Janielle Naauao, the third "underdog" on account of being a woman, is also a scholarship winner and she too wants to enter a field which is dominated by men — catering.

The battle of the sexes still goes on, it seems. And ironically, the women seem to be on the defensive when it comes to food preparation. Rather than chasing they are being chased out of the kitchen.

Pearl's Buddies Lovelorn Again

Untold tragedy has befallen those three warm-water buddies, the pearl gourami.

The Guardsman last month published the story of the plight of the love-starved tropical fish. Their guardian, Robin Crizer, machine shop instructor here, had issued an urgent plea for a mate for the three lonely ones.

Receiving no answer to the call for a female swimmer, Crizer broke down and bought a little girl fish, affectionately dubbed Pearl Baby, hopeful that she would someday be able to carry on the gourami name.

Unfortunateiy, Crizer didn't know all the tricks of the gourami trade. Pearl Baby laid hundreds of eggs, but it is the practice to remove the female of the species from the premises after the eggs are laid, or she may die.

But the worst part of the whole tale is that the boys are again lonely. If there is some fish out there to take Pearl Baby's place, Crizer hopes she will appear in S-4 and give those kids a decent break.

Election '64

Personality — A Man Called Sen. Murphy

By Boyd Burtnett

ONE OF the biggest upsets in the national elections and one of the brighter spots in a rather dreary Republican world was George Murphy's edging out of Pierre Salinger for the U.S. Senate post from California.

Salinger was a cinch to win; he had everything going for him. He was linked with the magic name of Kennedy, he had the powerful Democratic machine of a Democratic state in back of him, and he was the incumbent, having just been appointed by Governor Brown to fill out the remaining days of the late Clair Engle's term.

Three months ago Salinger would have won in a walk. For the most part, the voters of California had just a vague idea who Murphy was but the cigar-smoking Pierre had been almost one of the family since 1960.

So why did he lose?

Assemblyman Jesse Unruh of Southern California has already stood up and blamed the forces of Governor Pat Brown.

Governor Brown, on the other hand, is shrugging off Unruh's accusations and saying that it would have been a different story if HIS man, Allen Cranston, had been running instead of Salinger.

Salinger blames his defeat on the carpetbagger issue and his strong stand urging the defeat of Proposition 14.

Nobody, at least from the Democratic side of the fence it seems, is willing to give Murphy any credit for his win. Somebody just had to have goofed. Murphy did not win, they say; Salinger lost.

But some credit must be given to Murphy. It was no little thing to be identified as a moderate, a Goldwater man and a champion of labor at the same time.

Although the carpetbagger issue was hurting Salinger a little, the ex-presidential press secretary more than proved to the citizens of California that he was not ignorant of their problems and that he knew how to cope with them. Even Republicans had to agree to that.

But then history repeated itself. Salinger and Murphy debated on television as did Kennedy and Nixon in 1960. Salinger should have known better, because it was the 1960 debates that most observers feel put Kennedy in the White House.

While actually a good-looking man in real life, the camera is no friend to Salinger. On the debates he came out looking like a gangster while the ex-actor Murphy radiated poise and personality. The television camera also showed Murphy to be quite a bit taller than Salinger and that probably got the Republican an additional 10,000 votes right there.

In addition, people discovered that Murphy looked like a Senator should while Salinger looked like a sharple at the pool hall.

The debates proved to be the beginning of the end for Salinger. People became a little annoyed at his "name-dropping" and the suave Murphy, no stranger to cameras, came on strong.

This is not to say that Murphy is a laughing boy with a wide smile and no political ability, but it was not his political ability that put him in Washington.

The people of this country have always voted for the personality, not the ideas that the personality represented.

WITH the increasing amount of education needed to acquire most jobs, a graduating high school senior has very little choice regarding his future. College seems to be the only logical path for him to choose.

While the desire to further one's studies is noteworthy, even the most educated of persons realize not everyone can be a college graduate.

The big problem is obvious — exactly what is the fate of the student who has no desire, upon completion of high school, to continue his education?

"I'll get a job," argues the student. While this is a commendable suggestion, it poses a few unique questions. The age of specialization is here — here to stay, and no one realizes this more than industry. Most firms and corporations today are reluctant to hire unskilled employees.

Oh yes! Practically every company has training programs for the unskilled, but the demand far exceeds the number of available positions.

"Then I'll get married," retorts the still arguing student. While marriage is in itself a wonderful "institution," it too presupposes two things. Two M's. More precisely, money and maturity.

Therefore, it stands to reason, unless a student's parents are willing to support their offspring, a young newlywed 18-year-old couple is going to experience some rough sailing.

And just because two people (with high school diplomas only) are willing to work doesn't really solve the plight.

Two mediocre salaries (how much more can non-college graduates make) may be ample for a couple to barely get by on, but a third party (namely a little expensive bundle of joy) can destroy even the most balanced of budgets.

The second "M" to be dealt with is maturity. Being able to support a family is one thing but having the maturity and the will power to live within one's means is another story.

True, age isn't always an accurate measure of a person's maturity, but the odds have it an average 18-year-old really hasn't reached what might be referred to as "full maturity." How could he? Some adults never fully mature.

(And contrary to certain established beliefs, wisdom teeth have no bearing on the situation!)

Usually the most frequent "last resort" argument a student poses is, "I think I'll go to a trade school." Sometimes, this may not be a cureall. Not only do trade schools cost money, but they also are overcrowded and to alleviate the congestion seem to be selecting only the "cream of the crop."

A young person today without a college degree is certainly at a disadvantage. The problem he faces is not his alone. Big business and top educators are feverishly working toward a solution. But solutions too aren't always perfect — sometimes they may be easy to find, but quite hard to follow.

Diane Werthen Wins ISC Award

Freshman Diane Werthen, a June graduate of Lowell High School, was presented with the Inter-Sorority Council scholarship award at the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea on November 5.

Miss Werthen ranks as the freshman coed, from a San Francisco high school, with the highest grade-point average. She scored a 3.7, (A—) average.

The award presented to her by Dean of Women Mary Golding, in behalf of the ISC, is in the form of a gold charm bracelet inscribed with her name and the grade point average she attained.

A perpetual trophy is kept by the ISC and is inscribed with the names of each year's winners.

Past winners have been Marina Popoff, Kathryn Kafafian, Karen Kriete, Jan Meilach, Nicolette Balala, Joan Brannigan and Donna James.

Recognition of scholarship by the ISC in trophy and bracelet form was started here in Spring, 1961, as a feature of the AWS semiannual fashion show and tea. The sororities collected the necessary funds in an effort to encourage good scholarship among coeds.

New Statler Wing Site Of Winter Cotillion Ball Friday

Snow will decorate the Statler wing when the Inter-Sorority Council presents its Winter Cotillion there from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday.

The feature of this dance will be the introduction of the new pledges, and this semester 20 coeds will be presented to members and guests at the affair during the course of the evening.

Two "firsts" accompany the event as it is the first dance to be presented in the Statler wing and the first Inter-Sorority Council Cotillion to be open to the student body.

In addition to sorority members and their guests, 100 tickets are on sale to students. Price of the tickets is $2 and they are available at the Silver Pole in Science Hall or from sorority members. Tickets will not be sold at the door.

Maury Wolohan's orchestra will provide the music for the affair, and refreshments will be served. Dress for the occasion is either formals or cocktail dresses.

Parents of the pledges will be special guests, and sponsors for the affair are Mary Golding, Margaret Riordan, Theta Tau sponsor; Noreen Smith, Phi Beta Rho sponsor, and faculty members Don Cunningham and Frank Nardi.

Randee Herting, president of Phi Beta Rho, and Geraldine Maloney, president of Theta Tau, are in charge of the event and predicted the dance will be a big success.

This formal affair is held each semester soon after pledge week.

Yank At Oxford On Screen Tomorrow

The experiences of an American student, who wins a Rhodes Scholarship and becomes a student at Oxford in England is the subject of the feature of the audio-visual aid film theater in C-246 during College Hour tomorrow.

Speaking directly to the audience, the student takes them on a tour of his classrooms, the dining halls and his own quarters.

He explains and shows how he lives and how the tutorial system at Oxford works.

There are no teachers as such at Oxford, since all teaching is conducted by tutors, Madison Devlin of the audio-visual aid department, explained.

"This film should interest our students," he continued, "because the teaching methods and life of students there is so different, and of particular interest are the opinions of the American student about that method of learning."

The December 3 College Hour will feature two films, World Is Born, which has some sequences from the Walt Disney classic, Fantasia, and has a "very good musical score and color pictures," Devlin said, plus Dinosaur Age.

Note Taking, Reading Topic Of AGS Tutoring Session During C-Hour

Note taking and reading will be the subjects covered at the tutoring session during College Hour tomorrow in S-123, according to William G. Richardson, sponsor of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society.

"These discussions," Richardson said, "are to be very general and informal." He added that anyone is welcome and that similar discussions will continue during College Hour for another two weeks.

While these discussions are very general, more specific and more personal tutoring is provided by Alpha Gamma Sigma, Richardson stated.

Richardson advised anyone desiring help either to arrange an appointment with him or call any one of the 25 tutors whose phone numbers are posted on the bulletin boards outside Richardson's office, S-140.

Gary Ettin Proclaims Stricter Enforcement Of Procedure In Future Council Meetings

By Peter Dorn

A speech proclaiming a stricter administration of future student government meetings was made by Gary Ettin, Associated Student president, at last Tuesday's Student Council meeting.

Ettin said that the days of eating lunch and studying during council meetings will be no more. Also, each council and cabinet member will be required to submit a paper enumerating all individual endeavors in promoting better student spirit and advancing council cooperation.

Jim Wyatt, student council adviser, said that these papers will be used in calculating one half of the council member's grade; the other half of the grade will be based upon the member's attendance and participation in student government meetings.

In his "state of the union" speech, Ettin also denounced unconstructive criticism and "trite remarks" made about poor student morale and student government lethargy.

In Ettin's estimation, this is one of the best semesters for student government; he pointed out the record AS card sales and the excellent orientation of incoming freshmen this semester. He also commented on the fine Proposition B publicity campaign.

Although Ettin complimented council members on their work this semester, he encouraged them not to slack off. He expected members to be known as student officers in all their classes and to inform classmates of student activities and council progress.

Bob Higginbotham, Athletics and Awards commissioner, made the statement that the college's soccer team was the best in Northern California; he offered their unbeatable record as evidence.

The bulletin board in front of Arts Hall has finally found a home. Ettin will appoint a special cabinet officer whose sole occupation will be the care and maintainence of this board.

The college pistol team won second place at the meet in Richmond last week, Mike Phalen, Campus Police representative, announced.

The team was in competition with expert pistol shooters as well as with other campus teams; each member of the college team was awarded a medal for his performance.

The fact that the Campus Police have noticed the need for a map of the college was brought up by Ray Chezik, Associated Men Student president. Chezik said that a map would be a good service project for Student Council and it would be appreciated by incoming freshmen.

Stan Angel, active in Proposition B support, who has been investigating the past minutes of council meetings in a search for old regulations which have not been heeded by student government, has pointed out that the no-smoking in Bungalows 5 and 6 rules, adopted in the seventh council meeting, have not been adhered to.

Since Ettin will be at the State Conference tomorrow, Chezik, AMS president, will preside at council.

Dance Band Social December 4 Offers Continuous Music

By Hugh Haworth

No name, no theme, no decorations, no entertainment, just music, continuous music is what the students will have at a dance band dance on Friday, December 4, director John Dunn announced today.

The City College dance band, 40 pieces strong and in new red blazers, will play without break from 8 p.m. to midnight "any type music that's requested — cha-chas, twists, swims, fast numbers or slow," Dunn said.

Some tunes that are planned for the Friday night social "have never been heard before," and there will be "new arrangements" and an "original theme number."

The trick, he noted, in having the one band play continuously for four hours is that there is "a band within a band." At times 20 pieces will perform while the others rest and by alternating, the full band sound will be uninterrupted.

Dunn pointed out that this will be "the only dance on or off campus this season by a band with full instrumentation."

The dance is "stag or drag, going for a dollar a head," Dunn stated.

Tickets for the dance are being sold by dance band members and Dunn, and they can also be purchased at Dunn's office in Smith Hall next to the finance office between 7 a.m. and 3 p.m. daily.

"Tickets will not be sold at the door," he emphasized. Dunn remarked that he wishes to know how many students will attend the dance before that night. A similar dance, given by the group last year was a sellout.

At the last performance this semester by the dance band, the Frosh Premiere, 700 students attended. However, to leave enough room for dancing at the band's own party, Dunn limited attendance at 600.

Because of personal reasons, Dunn is terminating, at the end of this semester, his sponsorship of the band, which he built from 8 members of three years ago to its present number of 40.

Presently, Dunn leads these musicians on time in addition to regular duties as cafeteria manager and instructor in the hotel and restaurant department.

Guardsman Four Welcomes Borodin Four In Russian

(Editor's note: Four Russian-speaking Guardsman reporters interviewed the Borodin Quartet. They are Margarita Botelho, Karl Sapelkin and Peter Dorn, all of Russian descent, and Hugh Haworth who studied the language at the United States Defense Language Institute in Monterey. Miss Botelho wrote the story.)

After visiting about 22 cities in 11 American states, the members of the Borodin Quartet, famed Russian string group which gave a concert at City College October 29 before a large and enthusiastic audience, agreed that "they have'n't seen much of the country at all.

"We have had only rapid glimpses of the United States through car and airplane windows," the musicians said.

The quartet was in further agreement that in the USSR, classical music seems to be more appreciated by young people than in the United States, although popular music is also enjoyed.

"I, myself, like American jazz very much and have a large collection of jazz recordings," Dimitri Shebalin said. He thinks Elvis Presley has a very good voice and admires him as a singer, but he would "probably hang himself" if he had to go through an entire concert of rock n' roll music.

"All Europe is "crazy about the Twist now," Shebalin said. "It is ridiculous to see little old ladies raise their skirts high above the knees and do the Twist," he commented, adding a pretty fair imitation.

Unlike the current trend in American music, folk songs in the USSR are only sung in little country villages. Each province has its own folk music.

The members of the quartet, who have been together since 1945, started their musical education very early. Rosticiav Doubinsky, first violinist, began playing the violin at the age of five.

The entire group speaks German which they learned in school. Yaroslav Alexandrov stated, "I would be a very happy person if I could speak English," Doubinsky learned the language at home.

Shebalin started developing his musical talent when he was 13 years old. Son of a famous Russian composer, he grew up in a musical atmosphere.

Valentin Berlinsky is the only member of the group who teaches as well as gives concerts, although he finds the combination difficult because it is time consuming.

Although their several tours are also time consuming, the four musicians say they enjoy them very much, for they get a chance to visit new places and meet new people. They have already many friends in the United States.

The current tour is part of a cultural exchange between the USSR and the United States and the quartet has appeared in concerts in all of the European countries except France and Spain, several times in each country. The success of their outstanding performances has been unanimous throughout Europe.

Because of their extensive traveling, the members of the quartet are able to spend only a year at home in Moscow. Their plans are made two years in advance, with part of the trip expenses paid by the agency which happens to be sponsoring them. The quartet is paid per each concert and also by the Russian government.

The Borodin Quartet will next go to Canada before returning to the USSR.

Booters Clinch League Title, Face Victor Valley At Balboa Field For State Crown On Saturday

For the second year in a row, coach Roy Diederichsen's top-rated soccer team rolled to another championship of the Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference, by dumping San Mateo, 7-0, November 6 at San Mateo.

The victory over the Bulldogs gave the Rams their second consecutive two-year college title and the right to a State title playoff at Balboa Field Saturday against Victor Valley.

Victor Valley, located in Victorville, played the Rams last year in the State title playoff and lost, 4-0.

In the San Mateo game, coach Diederichsen made a few major changes, moving Al Fernandez from wing to the center forward position, formerly held by Alex Mendieta, who has been nursing a bad knee since the first Menlo game.

Mendieta was then switched to the half position, and Chris Wager replaced Fernandez.

The Rams jumped off to an early lead as Bob Mull scored from 30 yards out. Speedy Fernandez tallied the second score on a pass from John Kazavis.

From that point on, the Rams never let up. Mendieta and Fernandez both scored two goals against the San Mateo Club.

In addition to putting up a tough offense, the Rams showed a hard-nosed defense, playing the best defensive game to give the Rams their first league shutout of the season.

The Bulldogs had several chances to score, but both Ram goalies saved for the shutout. As one San Mateo player put it, "Their goalies must have nine lives." This comment came when Marin, failing to check into the game, gave San Mateo a direct shot at the goal, and Marin tipped the ball for no score.

Because of the heavy downpour of rain, the game with Menlo last Friday was cancelled and will be rescheduled.

Prior to the game with San Mateo, the Rams defeated Diablo Valley, 3-1.

YES, THAT'S A SOCCER BALL, and that's the Ram soccer squad. But that's not the way the men play the game; that's the way they practice, in Coach Roy Diederichsen's swimming pool, that is.

Evolution Of Soccer

Disregard For Rules Leads To Rugby, American Grid Games

By Charles Gallagher

"Undefeated Rams play Menlo College at Balboa Stadium" read the signboard in Science Hall as an onlooking student remarked to his friend, "Who cares? I don't even understand the game."

"You should care," replied the other, "it's the most popular sport in the world."

The game referred to, of course, is soccer and while boxing fans may not share the latter speaker's enthusiasm about its popularity, investigation into the matter reveals that it is at least one of the most popular sports in the world, being the No. 1 sport in Europe and Latin America.

Indeed, for a while in 14th century England it was almost as popular as war and was soaring to great heights when good King Edward put his foot down and prohibited "that kicking game" for military reasons.

It seems that during the Anglo-Scottish wars the combatants had to be restrained by their commanders from playing football with their enemies, instead of fighting them.

Some comical and bizarre situations appear in the early development of the game.

For instance, it was said that the first game of football was played in Chester, England, in the 12th century, and the first ball used was the head of a Danish Chieftain, apparently the method of celebrating victory over one's enemies.

Another story in the origin of the game is that the lads in a parish would run across hill and dale kicking an inflated bladder in front of them until they came to the next village. The natives of the invaded village would thereby take up the challenge, try to get possession of the ball and drive their enemies back from whence they came.

Obviously this running back and forth was too strenuous on the spectators, so they shortened the distance between the goal posts and played on the village green.

Sometimes the games became exceedingly violent, and players would kick each other's shins without the least ceremony. So great indeed was the violence and so frequent the injuries that a Frenchman watching a game at Derby exclaimed, "If the English call this play, it would be impossible to say what they would call fighting."

Soccer was not confined to men either in those days. In Medlotian, Scotland, in an annual game, the married women of the parish used to play the spinsters and almost invariably beat them severely.

The game of soccer was regarded, however, by certain University authorities as boisterous, undignified and totally unsuited to gentlemen. So one day a fellow named Webb, with a fine disregard for the rules, picked up the ball in his hands and ran with it, thus giving birth to rugby and its offspring, American football.

Today the game has world-wide popularity, except perhaps in the U. S. and Canada. If Webb had not broken the rules, maybe it would be the No. 1 sport here.

Vikings Final Grid Opponent

Rams Steamroll Bulldogs, 46-12, Edge Jags, 26-22

By Mike Smith

In their last two road games of the season, City College gridders swamped the San Mateo Bulldogs 46-12 two Saturdays ago, November 7; and came from behind to knock off the San Jose Jaguars 26-22 last Friday night.

As for the San Mateo game, the Rams took an early 6-0 first quarter lead on a 12 yard pass from Henry Scott to Joe Ross, who went out on a tackle eligible play.

In the second quarter, the local gridders exploded for 26 points on a 41 yard pass from Scott to John Helms, a six yard run by Joe Sobeck, and a 97 yard gallop by Ron Fassler.

Following Sobeck's six yard TD, the Rams kicked off to the Bulldogs. The ball bounced on the ten and rolled into the end zone. But San Mateo began walking off the field without downing the ball, so Rudy Lapera rushed into the end zone and fell on the ball for the score.

San Mateo finally got on the scoreboard in the third quarter. Walter Harris, finishing up on the Bulldog's 62 yard drive in 17 plays, went over the middle and into the end zone for the one yard touchdown.

The local gridders came back early in the fourth quarter on a seven yard end run by Sobeck for their sixth touchdown of the day. The Rams' final score came with 3:11 left in the game on a seven yard dash by Don Cameron. Scott passed to King for the two point conversion.

Just two minutes before that Ram score, San Mateo's Harris raced nine yards for the Bulldog's last touchdown of the afternoon.

San Francisco had a much tougher time against the San Jose City College Jaguars. Trailing 15-0 in the first half, the Rams did not score their first two touchdowns until the last three minutes of the first half.

Fassler intercepted George Walker's pass on the Jaguar's own 35 yard line. Then he, Sobeck, and Craig Rodeick pushed the ball down to the 20 in four plays. From there, Scott tossed a 20 yard aerial to Eural Smothers.

The Rams second touchdown came about a minute and a half later when Lapera recovered Randy Cardin's fumble on San Jose's own 39 yard line.

Scott went to the air, connecting with Fassler for 25 yards. Then after a three yard run by Fassler, Scott shot another touchdown pass to Smothers, this one for eleven yards.

On the first play of the second half, the Rams came from behind a 15-12 score and surged to a 20-15 lead on an 80 yard gallop by Fassler. Scott passed to King for the two point conversion.

The local gridder's last scoring came near the end of the third quarter on another great run by Fassler. This time Fassler charged 30 yards down the sidelines.

San Jose did not score again until the last two minutes of the game when Pat Cavataio tossed a 12 yard end zone aerial to Dean Locurt.

Homecoming Game Friday Closes Frustrating Season

Diablo Valley will be the last game of the season for the Ram gridders, with the kickoff set for 2 p.m. Friday in the Ram stadium. This homecoming game will end a frustrating season, that easily could have been an undefeated one, if the Ram offense had had more punch in certain games. Instead the Rams have lost two games and tied one.

When the Ram gridders were shut out, 14-0 by league-leading Contra Costa, it virtually eliminated them from any chance for the Golden Gate Conference championship. But the Rams revamped from that costly defeat and finally jelled to swamp the San Mateo Bulldogs the following week, 46-12.

Diablo Valley, coached by Sam DeVito, has won only one league game so far this season, against Foothill, 21-20. The Vikings have lost to Merritt College, 30-14, Chabot, 6-3, San Mateo, 29-14 and San Jose, 13-12.

Last season, the Vikings did not win a game until they upset the Rams in the last game of the season, 24-6.

The Vikings, who use a pro-type offense with plenty of passing, are led by split end Joe Tarango, and halfback Jim Hammett. They have a strong defensive line led by linebacker Bill Shinn and end Tom Greerty.

The 46 points that the Rams scored against San Mateo were the most they scored since they waxed Contra Costa, 46-8, back in 1960. Although the Rams played their best game of the year, they scored many points from breaks they alertly took advantage of.

A possible new Ram record is the 97-yard run from scrimmage by halfback Ron Fassler. He ran off tackle through the Bulldogs with fine blocking. Fassler also intercepted a pass and ran it back some 80 yards to set up another Ram touchdown against the Bulldogs.

Quarterback Henry Scott called and played a fine game against San Mateo, as he replaced the injured Bill Gianquinto. Gianquinto fractured his ankle in the Contra Costa game and is out for the season.

Another blow to the Rams is the loss of star halfback Oliver Mitebell, who broke his jaw in the San Mateo encounter.

As the score of 46-12 indicated, the Rams had many fine performances in the rout of the Bulldogs. Outstanding on defense were linemen Rich Colombo, Rudy Lapera, Chris Davis and Sinese Malae, and halfback Henry King who intercepted two passes. On offense, backs Scott, Fassler, Craig Rodeick and Don Cameron played well.

The Rams have yet to allow an opponent to score more than two touchdowns in any single game this season. This is a tribute to their fine defensive play.

After the shutout by Contra Costa, coach Dutch Elston said, "In order to win the remaining games, more punch is needed in the offense."

That punch was provided against San Mateo, and the Rams hope to duplicate the performance against Diablo Valley.

CONFERENCE STANDINGS:

Spikers Hope For Upset In NorCal Meet At Salinas

By Bill Pitee

Coming off the most disastrous season in the history of cross country at City College, Lou Vasquez's harriers can't be considered anything better than a dark horse looking for an upset in the Northern California Junior College Championship meet Friday in Salinas.

The Rams suffered eight straight losses in six meets before they could conjure a win in their next-to-last meet before the Northern California Junior College Championship meet.

A matter of a few seconds separated the Rams from victory against Merritt College as they went down in a close one, 27-28. Rich Klemmer, Mike Conroy, Bob McGuire, Bill Long and Joe Singer finished first, fourth, fifth, eighth and tenth, respectively, in respectable times.

After eight straight losses this season, the Rams came up with the surprise feat of the year by beating Contra Costa, 25-34, in the second part of their dual meet for their first win of the season.

The overall finish was one of the highest the club has experienced this year, too.

Klemmer, the club's number one runner, came very near to setting a course record in the Contra Costa-Merritt meet as well. Klemmer placed first with a time of 17:19.1, just an instant off the record of 17:18.2.

There was a big gap of nearly a minute and 18 seconds between Klemmer and the second man, Conroy, the club's other veteran who finished fifth in a time of 18:37.

Close behind was McGuire, another outstanding member of the squad, who finished in 18:48 for eighth place followed by Long at 19:00 for eleventh and Singer at 19:13 for thirteenth.

Vasquez placed a good deal of the Rams' hopes in the hands of Singer. "Singer is still our fifth man and he should be our first man," Vasquez said, "he just hasn't performed as we thought he would."

"I'm no longer optimistic about our chances in the Northern California Junior College meet," Vasquez explained. "By our record we should be seventh but I will be very happy if we make fourth or fifth and only a strong performance can bring that."

There is some consolation, however, after completing the college's most disastrous cross country season.

If Klemmer, Conroy and McGuire had not performed as they did, the Rams could have gone through a winless season losing by even greater margins than they did.

Peacocks, Alpha Phi Epsilon Snatch Top Intramural Slots

By Bruce Klein

The Peacocks are in first place in the Independent League, the Filipino Club and Hotel and Restaurant are tied for first in the Club League and Alpha Phi Epsilon is in the top spot in the Fraternity League, after the third week of competition in the Associated Men Student intramural basketball scramble.

Tonight's fraternity action has Alpha Kappa Rho meeting Beta Tau in the women's gymnasium, while Phi Beta Delta tangles with Alpha Phi Epsilon in the men's gymnasium with both games starting at 8 p.m.

In the Independent League, the Peacocks meet the Devinessians in the men's gymnasium as the Divine Ones are scheduled to take on the NBA Rejects in the women's gymnasium. Both games start at 9 p.m.

Next Tuesday's action has the Professionals meeting the Chancelors in the women's gymnasium while the Peacocks play the Bay City Celtics in the men's gymnasium. These independent games start at 9 p.m.

There will be no more club games as the round robin was completed last night. The Fraternity League will finish competition next week.

A Phi Beta Delta and Beta Tau game October 28 was not an official league game, according to AMS President Ray Chezik, but unofficial practice between the two fraternities.

Chezik also noted that the Divine Ones will not be playing basketball until the football season is over.

On November 3, the Devinessians rallied in the second half of action to defeat the Professionals, 57-31, in an independent game. High point men for the victors were Tony Crear with 16 and Chester Craft with 12. Schaffer and Bernie Piper were high for the Professionals, each with 11.

Also victorious were the Chiefs. They out-scored the NBA Rejects, 71-38. Bob Hanson, Ron Coleman and Richard Lawless were the big guns for the Chiefs with 14 each.

The Hotel and Restaurant defeated Lawson's 10, 31-24, in a Club League game. The Filipino Club won its game from The Guardsman by forfeit.

High point men for Hotel and Restaurant were Bruce Bauer with 12 and Richard Munley with 7. Palmini and Sid Ancar were high point men for the Criminology Department with 6 each.

November 4 the Peacocks slipped by the Chancelors, 68-53. High men for the "birds" were Robert Roehl with 19 and Curran and Sinclair with 12. Roehl of the Peacocks was picked Most Valuable Player in the Independent League that week. High men for the Chancelors were Liser Jones with 20 and Leroy Woods with 11.

Also victorious on November 4 were Alpha Phi Epsilon and Phi Beta Delta. Alpha Phi Epsilon defeated Alpha Kappa Rho, 29-20, while Phi Beta Delta squeaked by Zeta Phi Sigma, 35-34.

The high men for Phi Beta Delta were Gary Falconer with 10 and Paul Mechetti and David Pritchett with 9. High man for the Zetes was Larry Minnich with 15.

Thanksgiving — Everyone Enjoys It But The Turkey

By Charles Gallagher

Thanksgiving is a day joyously heralded by all red-blooded Americans, except perhaps for those unfortunates who must distastefully abide by dietary regulations, or that fine-feathered friend, the turkey, whose feathers are really ruffled on this occasion.

While Thanksgiving is a distinctly American holiday, the practice of setting aside a day of thanks did not originate with the Pilgrims but goes far back in history.

In early colonial days in America, however, days of thanks were celebrated in recognition of such happy events as victory over the Indians and plentiful harvests.

Present day Thanksgivings can perhaps be traced back to the first observance by the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock. It had its inspiration in the proclamation issued by Governor Bradford in 1621 inviting the inhabitants of Plymouth Colony to observe an annual day of thanks for the blessings of the past year.

The women of the colony spent many merry days in preparing for the feast. They boiled, baked and roasted. The Indians brought wild turkey. The men of the colony brought geese, duck and fish. The people spent three glorious days in feasting and prayer, and those who could returned to their tasks.

The Indians enjoyed the fare so much that when it came time to return to their affairs of state, they refused to budge. They reasoned that so long as there was food at the colony, why hunt for more.

Their custom differed from their hosts' in that they cooked and ate their victuals on the spot where the beast was slain. They didn't quite see the point in storing their produce for the entire winter.

But for the consummate skill in the art of diplomatic relations of Governor Bradford, his guests would undoubtedly have devoured all and sundry. The Governor tried many methods to get the Indians back to the reservation, from feeding them porridge to providing them with liberal doses of Irish whiskey, but all to no avail.

Finally he invited his red-skinned friends to join him in a cup of tea, and this to his astonishment had the desired effect. The Indians found this black water distasteful and feared it contained evil spirits.

They fled to the protection of the forests and thereafter were not wont to return to the white man's abode.

While the origin of Thanksgiving in America can be traced to the Pilgrim Fathers, the credit for its preservation must go to Sarah Hale who campaigned tirelessly for a national observance.

Her efforts were not in vain as President Lincoln issued a proclamation designating the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day and a national holiday.

In 1939, however, President Roosevelt proclaimed that Thanksgiving Day be celebrated one week earlier. His purpose was to help the business community by making the shopping period between Thanksgiving and Christmas longer.

Congress finally ruled in 1941 that the fourth Thursday in November would be observed as Thanksgiving Day and would be a legal holiday.

And so it is today — or tomorrow, that is.

Election Committee Adopts Rules For Student Campaign

Strict adherence to rules adopted by the Election Committee and the administration were demanded of participants in last night's and Tuesday night's conventions by Dan Christian in a meeting held last week.

The building of an action-packed election campaign to generate student interest began at the Election Committee discussion. "We have several plans to spark up the election," Christian said.

Friday, December 4, is the last day for candidates to register with the Election Committee.

The Election Committee is encouraging the use of political rallies, debates and campaign stunts to stimulate student interest.

Seven voting booths will be placed around the campus. The silver pole, Arts Hall theater, and the men's and women's gymnasiums will feature booths, while at the expected points of greatest voting activity, the library entrance and Smith and Science Halls, automatic voting machines will be placed.

In the discussion when rules concerning posters and campaign materials were enumerated Christian said, "Signs and campaign posters not approved by me will be torn down!" Also emphasized was that failure to comply with these rules is grounds for disqualification of the candidates.

Candidates for the office of President are allowed to display eight 16 by 20 inch posters. Other candidates may have four posters of the same size.

Two banners are allowed each presidential candidate, only one of which may be displayed on campus, however. A size limit of four by eight feet has been imposed. One banner of the same size limit is allowed the other candidates and each party.

Presidential candidates may use 2000 circulars, while other candidates and each political party are limited to 1000 and 2500, respectively.

Those hopefuls who were nominated last night were presented with petitions which must now be signed by 15 Associated Student card holders, the candidate's counselor and the Dean of Men or the Dean of Women for the candidates to qualify for the election.

Sorrow Follows Sorrow; No 'G'—Then Midterms

Thanksgiving is tomorrow. Consequently, along with the day after, it is a holiday. For most students Thanksgiving is for that purpose, and the day after for digesting that thankfulness.

But for The Guardsman staff the twenty-sixth is, like all Thursdays, deadline day. And when deadline day is a holiday, no paper comes out the next week. The Guardsman staff is doubly thankful this year.

But what is no small joy for the staff, is no small sorrow for the student body. The familiar stacks of the "G" will be absent from their accustomed places on the first of December.

It seems that tragedies run together. The end of the second midterm is only three days after that. Calamity follows calamity. But the real optimist looks at the brighter side. The Guardsman will come out as it always has the following weeks; for those who are still here.

Holiday Feast To Use Half A Ton Of Turkey

In keeping with the past traditions of the college and the nation, the hotel and restaurant department will serve its annual Thanksgiving dinner from 11:15 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. today in Smith Hall, Pierre Coste, executive chef, announced.

The luncheon, costing 65 cents, will include roast turkey with stuffing, giblet gravy, rolls and butter, and pumpkin and apple pies. Assorted cakes will also be served.

Coste said that 1000 pounds of turkey will be served this year which is an increase of 200 to 300 pounds over last year. Increased enrollment caused this factor.

Coste emphasized that regular entrees will also be available and breakfast will be served as usual that morning.

Christmas Sing Out Set For December 8

A sing out and refreshments on-the-house are to be featured at the Collegiate Christian Fellowship's annual observation of the Christmas holiday and will be held in bungalow 6 Tuesday, December 8.

For the past five years, students have joined together to sing Christmas Carols. Alice Gardner, one of the members of the arrangements committee, stated.

"These festivals have always been well attended and greatly enjoyed by the students," Howard Schoon of the counseling department and club sponsor declared.

"Christmas Drive funds will not only include the money raised all next week, but also the proceeds obtained from the COO talent show which was held at the college on November 13," Miss Oliver stated.

The Christmas Drive will continue through next week and will be highlighted by a Santa Claus contest to be held in front of Smith Hall during College Hour on Thursday, December 3.

Miss Oliver indicated that any on-campus organization may sponsor an entry in the Santa Claus competition.

The winner will be the entry receiving the most votes from the students themselves. The cost per vote will be a penny, which COO believes should not put too much of a strain on the pocketbooks of the college students.

The winner of the contest will not only bring recognition to his organization, but will also be given the opportunity to bear cheerful Christmas tidings to the students on the college campus, which as Miss Oliver said, "every good Santa Claus should."

Santa will tour the campus bellowing his ho-ho-ho's to all and sing Christmas carols along with a chorus of students which will accompany him on his way.

Last year's Santa Claus created quite an uproar in both Cloud Hall and Science Hall as he made his way into several classes piping his good tidings to one and all.

This caused such a commotion in the classrooms visited that faculty members were forced to dismiss their students early in order to obtain some sort of tranquility.

Judging from the fruits of last year's Santa Claus contest, this year's promises to be even better.

Petitions for the contest are available all this week at the AS office, bungalow 5.

Fraternities are planning to display Christmas greeting posters in Smith Hall next week.

December 1 Marks Beginning Of COO Christmas Drive

Council of Organizations' annual Christmas Drive, held each year to raise money for the needy families of the city, is scheduled to start next Tuesday.

The announcement was made by Wardene Oliver, Associated Student vice president and chairman of COO.

Dance Band Predicts Sellout For Social; Pep Band To Retain Proceeds For Junior Bowl Trip

By Hugh Haworth

The once-a-year dance band social featuring continuous music from 8 p.m. to midnight Friday, December 4, in the Statler wing, is expected to be a sellout, band director John Dunn stated yesterday.

The limit of 600 tickets was "almost" reached by the first public mention of the dance in last Wednesday's Guardsman, Dunn remarked, to the credit of the group's players who have been enthusiastically pushing their own dance.

Dunn noted that the restriction of the number in attendance to only 600 will "leave room for dancing."

The continuous music for serenading will include a wide variety of numbers, "some never heard before, some new arrangements, cha-chas, foxtrots, twists, swims and waltzes — whatever is requested."

The cost of admission is one dollar per student, open for both "stag and drag" with the customary attire for the men of coat and tie.

Dance band membeers, who can be recognized by the big orange tickets sticking out of their pockets, are selling the remaining passes to the Friday-night social. Tickets can also be purchased in Dunn's office in Smith Hall next to the Finance Office from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"Tickets will not be sold at the door," Dunn emphasized.

Proceeds will go to the pep band for the trip to the Junior Rose Bowl competition in Pasadena in January. Since many of the members of the dance band are also members of the pep band, this money will be actually earned for the trip by the pep band members.

The new outfits to be worn by the band are actually dual purpose. The red blazers, navy blue slacks with a fine stripe and straw hats were designed to serve both the pep band and the dance band.

Dunn remarked that the band practiced in the Statler wing, the site of the dance, the last two Sunday evenings, and he said they sounded "wonderful" there.

At this semester's close, because of personal reasons, Dunn is ending his sponsorship of the band, which he has built from 8 to 40 in three years.

Women's Safety After Dark Topic For C-Hour Talk

City College coeds are invited to participate in a question and discussion period, focused on safety after dark for young women.

Sponsored by the Associated Women Students, the event will take place during College Hour Thursday, December 3, in S-205.

Barbara Kontis, AWS president, will introduce Larry Lawson, head of the criminology department here, who has been invited to lead the forum. It will consist of questions prepared beforehand, followed by suggestions to problems and a general discussion on safety rules.

"Young women having to return home in the dark from classes, work or otherwise should benefit from this open discussion on rules which should be followed in preserving personal safety," Miss Kontis explained.

Last year the AWS sponsored a similar event on the topic of marriage. The success of the open discussion led to this year's program.

Recently, 20 AWS student leaders were interviewed by Mrs. Robert Pratt, a Ph.D. degree candidate at Arizona University, who is preparing a dissertation on the work of Deans of Women.

The coeds assisted Mrs. Pratt by analyzing, through their consultations with the Dean, the help, or in some cases the discouragement, they received in discussing critical problems.

Mrs. Pratt is also interviewing students of several other colleges.

Creative Workshop Attracts Amateur Talent

By Mike Barber

The Creative Workshop, a burgeoning Bay Area center of amateur creative activity, began during the last summer session when two City College students, Carl Mayberry and Eugene Peters, recognized a need for a cooperative organization to bring together people seriously interested in the creative arts.

Today, three months after conception, the Creative Workshop has more than 130 members, including students and instructors from City College, Patri School of Art, San Francisco State, San Francisco Art Institute, University of San Francisco and University of California.

The workshop, located at 2016 Clement street, offers "a loosely organized creative arts center that is open to anyone who is seriously willing to give a little time and effort to support it," according to chairman Mayberry.

Services of the workshop include book exchanges, tutoring, translating, typing, theater discounts and an eating co-op featuring complete meals for 25 cents.

Members may also obtain, Mayberry said, information on low rent housing, loans and scholarships.

The Creative Workshop, meeting at places like the Precarious Vision Coffee House and Coffee and Ideas, has held programs featuring such controversial speakers as Patricia Maginnis, chairman of the Citizens Committee for Humane Abortion Laws; E. C. Vanderlaan on In Defense Of Atheism and Ernie Barry of the League For Sexual Freedom.

Lawrence Ferlenghetti, San Francisco poet and author of Coney Island Of The Mind, Starting From San Francisco, and Unfair Arguments With Existence, is a member and has given readings of his work. However, Mayberry explained, the workshop is primarily composed of amateurs and beginners in the creative arts field, and the programs and activities are keyed toward their level.

A play, to be chosen, produced and cast by members, will be presented January 29 at the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Hall.

Students interested in giving their support to the Creative Workshop are invited by Mayberry to attend its functions.

A $5 membership fee and four hours of work per month are required of those who join. Additional information is available by calling 752-0243.

Statler Wing Prices To Rise Unless Students Learn To Obey Basic Rules And Keep It Clean

IF THE OLD ADAGE about cleanliness being close to Godliness holds true, Billy Graham had better stay away from the Statler wing.

As the popularity of the new student wing to the cafeteria has increased, so has the mess. In a move to save the "Great Wasteland," John Dunn of the hotel and restaurant department produced a drastic plan to hit the students where it would hurt most . . . in their pocketbooks.

As a result Dunn announced that if the condition of the Statler wing didn't show a marked improvement by the Christmas break, the prices of the food in the vending machines would be raised five cents in order to pay for SOMEBODY to clean up the debris.

Dunn is perfectly justified in enforcing the administration backed price boost since the wing is his responsibility and its appearance is a part of that responsibility.

Former students asked for a lounge area where they could study over a cup of coffee and eat their lunches which could be supplemented by beverages and desserts available by vending machine purchases. The present students have received this benefit and more as hot meals and sandwiches are also provided in the unsupervised wing.

The wing has been a success as far as taking the strain off of the cafeteria and giving the students the lounge they desired is concerned. To date the only drawback has been the conduct and litter problem in the new addition.

When this same problem occurred in Smith Hall the campus police had to be called in to police the area. This was a strain on students and the campus police. It takes officers away from other areas and is an unnecessary burden on them.

Because of the rowdiness and litter of a few immature students the rest of the student body had to suffer.

The Statler wing is in a similar situation. Because of the rowdy slobs who "hang" in the Statler wing, the rest of the student body and future students may have to pay an average of 75 cents a week more for their food.

Maybe these students can afford the price boost, but wouldn't it be a lot easier just to throw the empty wrappers and cartons in the trash cans on the way out?

This is only common courtesy and shouldn't even have to be mentioned once a student has completed elementary school.

The deadline is before Christmas break. The students concerned should keep a few things in mind:

1. This price boost will affect all the students.
2. The new prices will be PERMANENT.
3. This move, if necessary, will be followed by others to restrict the students in the lounge.

If these students haven't any pride in the appearance of the new wing, they should at least consider the present and future students who will be hurt by their thoughtlessness.

Starting today we urge all students who use the Statler wing to remember the words of the famous den mother, "All right now, let's keep it clean."

More Candidates Necessary To Bring Students To The Polls

LAST NIGHT the nominating convention for this Spring's Associated Student officers was held. At the convention petitions were issued to the winners of the United Student and Student Representative Parties' nominees as well as to independent candidates.

This does not mean other qualified students are unable to run.

Any student who has the required number of units to his credit and pays the $2 or $1 fee is eligible to run for any of the 20 offices up for grabs if he files his petition by December 9.

Students who are interested in student government and have had some leadership experience in high school are shirking their responsibility if they have the time and inclination to hold an office but don't run because they haven't been nominated by a party.

Virtually all of this semester's officers ran unopposed and those who were put into office at the special election October 6 were also unopposed. If the USP and SRP want to get students to the polls they will have to give the students a choice. If there aren't two candidates, why bother with the election.

This is where the independent candidates come into the picture. The more people vieing for the office, the more of a choice the voters will have.

Students who feel that the student government is inadequate should take the time they would normally use to run it down and utilize it for their own campaigns. For the students who are satisfied with the present regime, what better way of showing it than seeking one of the vacant offices on either the USP or SRP slates.

Petitions to run can be secured from Election Commissioner Dan Christian and the deadline for filing is December 9.

Student Makes It Big At Bimbo's

Coed Bright Spot In City's Bright Lights

By Hugh Wilson

Where there's a will there's a way, is the motto of Kathy Kneib, a 22-year-old coed here.

As a child Miss Kneib became interested in ballet and wanted to take lessons. Her parents were willing enough, provided the youngster would help to pay for her own lessons. And here begins the most unusual story of all.

In order to help pay for her lessons, the young Miss Kneib became a "goat-tender" for her neighbor. Her interest in this phase of animal husbandry grew and she joined her local 4-H club, where in six years she raised and exhibited several Grand Champions.

More recently, however, Miss Kneib has been using her training as a dancer at Bimbo's 365 Club in the North Beach section of San Francisco. Previously she was a dancer at the Gay Nineties.

"Dancing is my first love," Miss Kneib commented, "though I would like to branch out into other fields of entertainment. I enjoy the ballet form of dance more than the type I am now doing, mainly because after dancing three shows a night and doing three different types of dances, I am tired, to say the least."

Although presently enrolled here as a special student, Miss Kneib hopes to return next semester as a full-time student and major in drama. "Eventually, I would like to attend San Francisco State and earn my degree in drama," she said, "then I would like to study for a teaching credential."

"I became interested in drama in high school, and next to dancing this is second in importance to me," she stated.

Commenting on her work at Bimbo's, Miss Kneib said, "I enjoy the work I am presently doing, but I am looking forward to the time when I can have the spotlight to myself."

In comparing her work at Bimbo's with her previous dancing job at the Gay Nineties, she said, "I find that though the customers are not always gentlemen, they are all well behaved."

Miss Kneib has paid, or partially paid for her educational career from the time she helped care for her neighbor's goats, won a scholarship to the San Francisco Ballet school to the present.

"I love dancing and the related fields and hope that I can keep up in them."

Grabby Potter's Wheel Adds Spice To Ceramics

By Bea Takeuchi

Ceramics 67A is a course in patience and self-control.

If the primary lessons of using the potter's wheel does not bring out the hidden talent of a student, it will bring out his hidden vocabulary.

It takes skill and unlimited patience to mold a blob of soft clay into a work of art. One soon realizes that becoming an artistic potter is not as easy as doing juvenile finger painting.

A knowledge of first aid is very handy.

More than one student has peddled his wheel beyond the speed limit, and crunch! Ouch! His foot! It IS NOT like driving a hydromatic automobile.

Accidents, however, do not only happen with the feet. There is a throat accident, called the "apron-strangle technique," which is used by both students and instructors.

"One student became so interested in her work that her apron caught in the clay. The wheel spun on, and she was nearly strangled. She managed to free herself, though," related Bob Kovacic, instructor.

E. Roy Walker, head of the ceramics department, claims that he has also had this same traumatic experience. "One day, as I was making the last delicate touches to a beautiful large bowl, my whole apron was torn from me, and became part of the clay.

"I was demonstrating before a very impressive audience, too. We named the creation, 'A Horrible Mess'," he said.

Kovacic testifies that working with clay has its therapeutic values. "It's good for warts. One lady had warts all over her hands and was receiving medical treatment. Her warts disappeared after working with clay for only a couple of weeks," he related.

Although students may develop many artistic and spiritual values from working with clay, they may also develop forgetfulness.

Walker tells of one student who was quite wealthy, who wore diamonds instead of warts. She absentmindedly left $2000 worth of diamond rings on the shelf near the sink.

"She became so engrossed in her work, she forgot all about the diamonds and telephoned us about them several days later," Walker said.

"Which goes to show how an ardent student can be carried away. The spirit of clay is worth more than diamonds. A ceramist develops skills comparable to those of a concert violinist," Walker said philosophically.

SMILING ON, though in pain, Liz Byersdorf made a quick recovery from her foot mishap.

Fleas And Frog Rate Space With A Stupid Snake

By George Nelson

In addition to having more than 4000 fleas on the roof of Science Hall, the science department also boasts a rattlesnake and a five-legged frog.

The fleas are in fact Daphina and not real fleas at all. They just look like fleas, and because they live in water they are generally called water fleas. The only other similarity between a flea and a Daphina is that an elephant can have fleas but all a Daphina can have is baby Daphina.

These water fleas live in six rain barrels on the roof of Science Hall. Living with the water fleas are two other species of microscopic animal life called Copedods and Ostracods which also look like fleas to the undiscriminating eye. All are used in zoology experiments in which they are fed to Hydra.

The only thing these creatures are good for is food for other creatures.

About the five-legged frog. It actually exists and has five legs — three front ones and two back ones.

He, she, or it is of the species known as the Red Legged frog. It gets its name from having red legs with black spots. (The Red Legged — with black spots on them — frog doesn't have that scientific ring, somehow.)

Other than having an additional leg the frog is like all other frogs. No mental retardation is apparent aside from the fact that he thinks it queer that the other frogs in his aquarium have only four legs — two in the front and two in the back.

About the rattlesnake. There really isn't much to say. He just sits there flittering his tongue and shaking his tail. Stupid snake.

Election '64

If Johnson Had A Twin, GOP Might Win

By Boyd Burtnett

WITH the crushing defeat of Senator Barry Goldwater in the presidential election, the leadership of the Democratic Party is uncontested to say the least.

Lyndon Johnson is so firmly entrenched as trail boss of his herd that it would take the combined powers of Franklin Roosevelt, Abraham Lincoln and Walt Disney to jar him loose.

The fantastic control Johnson holds over his party was first observed during the Democratic National Convention in Atlantic City. If the tall Texan said jump, delegates jumped; if he said roll over, they rolled over — with the exception of Mississippi, who rolled out.

NO GIANT MACHINE

Johnson held the reins during the course of his campaign. There was no giant political machine pulling the strings of a puppet candidate. The candidate himself was the machine.

And if unity means strength, then at the present time the Republican Party is sitting in the rumble seat of American politics.

The party has been split into several factions. First there is the Conservative segment which fell to the mighty steamroller of the Johnson-Humphrey ticket recently.

LEADERSHIP CONTEST

Goldwater, the leader of the conservatives, says the majority of the Republicans agree with his political views and therefore claims leadership over the entire party.

The opposing side, the liberals, have something to say about this. William Scranton and Nelson Rockefeller are spokesmen for this faction, and they claim that they are in the mainstream of Republican politics.

Smack dab in the middle are the moderates headed by George Romney and they seem to hold the greatest chance of gaining party control. Because they straddle the fence, they could become acceptable to both the conservative and the liberals.

NATURAL CHOICES?

But this is not all; not by a long shot. Also claiming party leadership is Charles Haileck, Republican leader in the House, who states that he and Everett Dirkson, Minority leader in the Senate, are the natural choices if the Republicans want to be a working team again.

The selection of a leader will have to come from these men. There will be no lone figure to come riding out of the west and make everything good again as it happens in the cowboy movies. The Democrats already got him.

"Divide and conquer" someone once said, and nothing could be more true of the Republican party today. In the past, when there was a split in party ranks, that party usually suffered defeat at the polls.

SPLIT TOO WIDE

In 1964, the split was so wide that Goldwater was not able to receive help from many liberals who held a great vote-getting power.

Had he, the story might have been different, in spite of his bad image. Although he got trounced, he still received more votes than did Harry Truman in 1948.

If the Republicans want to be on top again, they will have to unify, and it will have to be behind a man with a great and magnetic personality in order to insure this unity. What they need is another Lyndon Johnson.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

ACCORDING TO a top educator, approximately 40,000 occupations exist in the business world today. The preference of one job over another often may be traced to motivation.

Motivation in turn may be tremendously influenced among many other things by a person's intrinsic and extrinsic values. Some of the more common motivations very much in vogue are money, prestige, convenience, parental influence, marriage prospects, security and pursuit of happiness. A closeup of each motivation reveals several interesting factors.

Let's take money for example: It is a well known fact money is a necessity nowadays if one wishes to exist in any manner, shape or form. However, setting money up as the sole goal in a person's life could be dangerous.

Working day in and day out at some horrible job just because it pays what might be considered an above average salary can be damaging to one's health. In the long run, the extra money goes to physicians.

Prestige: Trying to command admiration and esteem is certainly a worthwhile objective. Unfortunately, the person seeking a job for prestige purposes alone somehow ends up changing jobs rather frequently because he can't seem to find the position which will guarantee him a minimum of work effort and a maximum of prestige. (Poor soul — that job went out a long time ago.)

Convenience: Certain persons hate commuting (especially during the rush hour) with such a passion they readily accept any type of job so long as it's within walking distance of their home. (For most individuals this means the unemployment office — and sometimes the rush on this line can be far more aggravating than any Bay Area traffic jam.)

Parental Influence: While parental advice is most definitely useful, it can sometimes produce the opposite effect. Many parents go to great lengths to "force" their youngster to accept a particular job because they feel "it will teach him the value of money." (One week and one job later, some parents learn to accept the cold, hard facts.)

Marriage Prospects: Some women's main goal in life is to find a man and get married. While there is nothing wrong with this philosophy — it can become ridiculous. These women refuse to take any job unless the ratio of men to women is 3 to 1. (Not bad odds either, even for the extra, extra, shy female.)

Security: Everyone searches for and some really never find a job that offers a measurable amount of security. Actually, a person in search of this objective is in for a rude awakening. In this fast-paced world of today, any job whether it be "the best or the worst" is only as secure as one wishes to make it. (Quite a feat, even for the very successful.)

Pursuit of Happiness: These three words cover an awful lot of territory. Happiness is an individual thing. Whatever type of job a person feels the happiest with is the right one for him. (High paying positions don't always insure happiness — even the very rich reluctantly agree money can't buy everything.)

The importance of motivation in relation to job success cannot be overemphasized. Stated another way in a simple analogy: Motivation is to success what bread is to butter — they unmistakably go together!

Former Student Heads Enigmas

Oxtot Finds Fame, Fortune In World Of Satirical Music

By Don Patten

One more grad from City College has made his claim to fame. Dick Oxtot, member of the satire singers, The Enigmas, recently closed a very successful four month engagement at the hungry i.

Termed by the hungry i as "the singing and comedy act that has been sweeping the country," The Enigmas gave their final performance last Saturday night.

THE ENIGMAS, Dick Oxtot, Jack Andrews and Juanita Oribello (from top), recently completed a four month engagement at the hungry i.

Manager Norman Davis disclosed that the trio will open in a few weeks at The Tangeant in Palo Alto, make some college appearances and then enjoy a well-deserved two week vacation. The future, according to Davis, holds a possible engagement in Palm Springs.

"The Enigmas are not folk singers. They are satire singers and are an innovation — getting away from folk material, and replacing it with satire and comedy," Davis said.

Oxtot, a journalism major while here, transferred to San Francisco State College in 1940 and majored in music. From there, he performed in the Bay Area and then traveled East where he joined the Dixieland Rhythm Kings, a jazz group.

Anxious to start his own group, Oxtot returned to the Bay Area where, one night while visiting the now extinct Shiloh coffee house, he heard the voice of Juanita Oribello. "She was just right for the group and had a sound I liked. I talked her into leaving San Francisco State and joining me," Oxtot said.

Another individual was added and the group became the Dick Oxtot Trio.

Not satisfied with the other gentleman in the trio, Oxtot began searching for a new voice. He auditioned many people and while attending a local coffee house one evening, Oxtot and Mrs. Oribello heard Jack Andrews from Monterey.

"We liked him and persuaded him to become a member of the group. Jack has been with us for about seven months now," Oxtot added.

Oxtot has written various songs, one of which The Dedicated Undertaker, has been recorded by the Gateway trio on the Capitol label.

Oxtot described the song as not going over too well with the older members of society because of its rather morbid description of death. He has also made some jazz records with other groups.

The Enigmas have been together almost one year, and Davis has big hopes for them in the future. "They have played college concerts and the students really like them. We liven up the performance from the way it is presented at the night clubs and always seem to draw big crowds.

"Recently, we performed at the University of California at Berkeley to a crowd of between five and six thousand," Davis said.

The Enigmas, in addition to presenting two shows six days a week at the hungry i, also occasionally appeared at such places as the Sheraton Palace Hotel at 9 p.m. and then rushed to the "i" for their 9:30 and 11 p.m. shows.

Florists Create Colorful Display For Christmas

Students in retail floristry are sponsoring a Christmas display Thursday, December 10, from 8 a.m. to 12 noon in the horticulture center.

Larry Janzen, who is in charge of the display, said it would consist of all types of decorations that make Christmas a colorful season.

The college was represented earlier this month by a booth at the flower show, at the San Francisco Wholesale Flower Market.

The flower show consisted of different booths sponsored by individual florists and manufacturers. The purpose of the show is to exchange ideas.

The college retail floristry students participated so that florists in the state and the country might observe what is being taught here.

By working in the college booth, students gained experience in working under the critical attention of persons in the flower business, Janzen said. The flower show is also a big advantage to students because they gain job opportunities after graduation, Janzen added.

Every student who took part in the show was assigned two different Christmas decorations and given one hour to make them.

Those working in the college booth were Jack Connell, who was in charge, Vince Amado, Vickie Cook, Charlotte Elherhardt, Ellen Fraser, George Gagna, Carol Hurch, Harriet Kalakian, Chester Link, Paul Masterson, Trudy Masterson, Don Moriguchi, Leola Pierce and Robert Stamer.

422 File Petitions For Graduation

A total of 442 students has filed petitions for graduation at the end of this semester, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced today.

This year's total is lower than last year's when 512 applied and 347 were accepted and graduated. There is no record of how many petitions have been refused so far.

Even though the date for final filing of petitions has passed, Miss Learnard indicated that "late applications are often accepted if the excuse for delay is valid."

The requirements for graduation are stated in the college catalogue. Students are also informed by their counselors, if they are eligible, but Miss Learnard emphasized that "students can be assured that their petitions will not be accepted if they are more than five grade points down."

Close-Up Series Spots Engineers

The field of engineering technology provides the subject for the next two programs of City College Close-Up to be televised this and the following Sunday, November 29 and December 6, producer Sylvia R. Leff announced today.

On November 29, technological training and opportunities in architectural, building and contracting, general and civil engineering will be examined by faculty members Cecil Aggeler, Wallace Sellman and Donald Bryant.

December 6 the program will focus on design-drafting, mechanical, electronic and electrical engineering technology. Faculty members Aggeler, Robert Brand, Angelo Bertucci, John Hallock and Robin Crizer will concentrate on these fields.

Joined by engineering students from the college, these faculty members will explain and demonstrate the courses offered leading to certification as engineering technologists.

Leading professionals, employers and working graduates, will discuss job opportunities, personnel qualifications and two-year college training benefits.

Magda Jacobs Wins 1964 Homecoming Queen Laurels

Magda Jacobs, sponsored by the Associated Men Students, was chosen Homecoming Queen for last Friday's football game against Diablo Valley.

Runners-up, who served as princesses, were Carmine Meyer, backed by Alpha Sigma Delta; Lauren Walsh, backed by the Newman Club, and Kathy Kidd, the Executive Committee's nominee.

Other contestants in the annual contest were Penny Brown representing the Rally Committee, Carol Craig representing the Associated Women Students, Lucy Ann Labayog, sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega; Marsha Marcotte, Engineering Society; Judy McCann, Beta Tau, Jannie Moore, Alpha Phi Epsilon; Marlene Rostagno, Phi Beta Delta; Sue Taylor, Ram Ski Club, and Sandy Sager, Freshman Class.

In the car parade, held in College Hour last Thursday, finalists in the car decoration contest were Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Phi Omega and Alpha Sigma Delta.

Finalists in the Homecoming Queen contest were featured in the car parade's several circuits of the campus.

Entertainment at the rally included a presentation by Rick and The Ravens of such compositions as The Swim, Twist, Shout and Out of Sight.

Troy Dodds and his group, scheduled to appear at the rally, were, because of a misunderstanding in time arrangements, unable to take part.

One member of the group had made special arrangements to appear here and lost wages from another job. Rally Committee agreed to pay him the amount lost.

Student Concert Series To Start Next Monday

The music department will present the first in a series of student concerts during College Hour Thursday, December 3, in the theater. An evening performance will also be given starting at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, December 8.

Meyer Cahn, music instructor here, and Ken Bruckmeier, graduate student instructor from San Francisco State College, will conduct the student orchestra.

The program will include a contemporary work, Night Soliloquy, by Kent Kennan and a flute solo by Carol Dunn.

Myron Mu will be feature soloist in a concerto for French horn, Mozart's Concerto in E flat, K447. A brass quartet will present works by Bach and Hindemith.

The band will play ballet music from La Boutique Fantastique, by Rossini-Respighi, also works by Faure, Persichetti and others.

Cops Turn Firemen

Sgt. George Rudometkin of the Campus Police put out a cafeteria fire November 17 caused by two students' careless play with matches.

One match set fire to paper scattered on the table and the flame rose more than a foot above the table. No damage was caused, although it could easily have spread, according to Lieutenant Mario Piazza.

Upon detecting the blaze, Rudometkin and Piazza, assigned to cafeteria that day, rushed to the fire, and while Piazza herded students away, Rudometkin smothered the rapidly rising blaze.

The students who started the fire made no effort to put out the flames, Rudometkin said. They were watching it "like a show."

"One had his foot on the chair and was watching the blaze from no more than six feet away," Piazza said, "and this was the disgusting thing about the episode."

As it turned out, the fire proved to be of no danger, but the possibility existed that it might have spread. Had it, Rudometkin said, "panic could very well have developed."

The match-playing pair were escorted to Dean Ralph Hillsman's office where one was later released. Punishment was left to the discretion of the dean.

"If only college students would act like college students," David Kanmisto commented. He let the sentence trail off . . . .

Council Moves To Remove Litter In Statler Wing

By Peter Dorn

Increase of prices in the Statler Wing, threatened two weeks ago unless the litter problem was solved, was the main topic of discussion at Student Council last week.

Mike Phalen, Campus Police representative, said that it is impossible for the Campus Police to discourage all the careless students from throwing refuse on the floor and that an effective cleanup campaign must be waged by the students themselves.

If the initiative for a cleaner cafeteria cannot come from student esprit de corps, then it should stem from the proposed increase in the price of food, Barbara Kontis, Associated Women Student president, said.

In an attempt to find a solution to this litter problem, Gary Ettin, Associated Student president, formed a committee from council and cabinet volunteers, with Miss Kontis as chairman, to look into this matter and propose a remedy.

Using a broad interpretation of his constitutional powers, Ettin appointed a new cabinet position that will be known as Campus Activities Coordinator with Tom Cioney as its chairman; this officer will be responsible for the Cloud Hall bulletin board.

The college pistol team took seven out of twenty awards last week when it was competing against the Richmond Police force and some college pistol teams, Phalen announced.

Designs for next semester's AS cards will be presented to council Tuesday for approval, Mary Maurer, AS Card Sales chairman, said.

Ray Chezik, Associated Men Student president who presided over Thursday's council in Ettin's absence, said that the city Police Athletic League asked council to sell a book of tickets for the James Brothers Circus scheduled for Kezar Pavilion.

Council voted to purchase the tickets and to try to sell them on campus; if the book is sold, student funds will receive a profit of $15 as a result of council effort.

Scholarships Available For Capable Students

Scholarships are available for capable students in need of financial aid, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced last week.

Dean Golding recently attended a conference on financial aid for students in which several scholarship programs were discussed. The conference, sponsored by the College Entrance Examinations Board, included college representatives from the states of Washington, Montana, Colorado, Arizona and California.

There are still applications available for the California State Scholarship. Because surveys indicated that the average student in college is about 25 years of age, the California State Scholarship award, which pays tuition and fees, extended the age limit from 24 to 30, Dean Golding said.

First screening for this scholarship is based upon performance on the aptitude test. Last year two City College students won the award.

The University of California is making a special effort to encourage good students to enter the University by offering The Regents Scholarship Program.

Winners of the Regents Scholarship receive $100 regardless of need and up to $1400 according to their financial need. Winners may attend the campus of their first choice.

Other UC scholarships vary in amount from $400 to $600. Students applying for any UC scholarship must have at least a B average. Applications for these scholarships are available in S-150, Dean Golding's office.

Students are now being interviewed for the Lucille Lesser and the California Scottish Rite Foundation scholarships by the Faculty Scholarship Committee.

The committee is composed of Dean Golding, Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, Mary Perry, counselor, and instructors Frederick Foultz, Verrel Weber and Roy Burkhead.

Winners will be announced before Christmas vacation.

Victor Valley Crumbles Under Booters' Power, 8-0

By Mike Smith

Ram Soccermen, perennial winners of the Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference, snatched their second straight State Championship by overpowering Victor Valley 8-0 last Saturday afternoon, November 21, at Balboa Field before a small but enthusiastic crowd of 150.

Coach Roy Diederichsen's crew immediately gained control of the ball and dominated the game throughout the day. Their only trouble came in the opening of the third quarter when Victor Valley threatened to score several times. But a couple of saves by goalie Gil Benedict, and fine defensive work by Chris Wager, George Fernandez, and Mike Beltran stopped the Valleymen cold.

Left-halfback Enver Safir, who also turned in a good defensive job, was forced to leave the game late in the first period due to an arm injury.

Inside left Alex Volikovsky scored the Rams' first goal of the day some two minutes after the start of the game.

San Francisco racked up two more points in the second period. Chris Wager booted in the first; the other came by Alex Mendieta who took a pass from Volikovsky.

On the opening of the second half, Victor Valley's defense seemed to be getting progressively tougher until Carlos Cortes turned in the Rams' sole goal in the third quarter and the fourth of the game.

Then the City College booters exploded for four more goals in the last period. Volikovsky scored his second point of the day from the left side, some 20 yards out.

Center-forward Mendieta, who leads the Rams in scoring, chalked up two more goals in the fourth quarter. Ed Roblede turned in City College's eighth point on a penalty shot 15 yards out from the center of the field.

Victor Valley, who also go by the name Rams, came to San Francisco with a 7-4-1 season record. Five of these games were league games won in the Southern California Junior College Soccer Conference.

City College of San Francisco owned a 12-2 season record, and they went through the NCJCSC undefeated for the second consecutive year.

Filipinos Down Lawson 10 To Win Intramural Club Title

By Bruce Klein

The Filipino Club defeated Lawson's 10, 69-40, November 17 to capture first place in the Club division of the Associated Men Student-sponsored intramural tournament.

Bernard Piper was high point man for the Filipino Club with 23, and Palmini was high for the policemen with 16.

The Guardsman ended a "perfect" season with an 0-4 record by forfeiting four games in a row.

The Newman Club picked up the win.

The first game of the club season between the Newmans and Hotel and Restaurant will be rescheduled at a later date, according to AMS President Ray Cherzik.

On November 12 the Chancelors defeated the NBA Rejeects, 47-42, in an Independent league game. High scorers for the Chancelors were "Badnews" Bealum with 14 and Lisel Jones with 10. High men for the Rejects were Attabit and Calabro with 12.

Last Tuesday's Independent action saw the Bay City Celtics squeeze by a spirited Professional team, 57-49. High point men for the Celtics were Weaver with 16 and Smith with 15. Kerns, a newcomer to the Professionals, found the mark for 26 points.

In other Independent action, the Chancelors held on to beat the Chiefs, 31-29.

The Professionals play the Peacocks in the men's gymnasium, and the Divine Ones play the Chancelors in the men's gymnasium Tuesday.

In tonight's Independent action, the Divine Ones are scheduled to play the Chiefs in the women's gymnasium, and the Devinessians tackle the NBA Rejects in the men's gymnasium with both games starting at 9 p.m. Next week is the last week of Independent competition.

Also playing tonight in the Fraternity league are Alpha Kappa Rho and Phi Beta Delta in the men's gymnasium, and Zeta Phi Sigma meeting Beta Tau in the women's gymnasium with both games starting at 8 p.m.

The Peacocks barely squeaked by the Devinessians, 51-50, in last Wednesday's Independent league action to keep their hold on first place. High point men for the Peacocks were Roehl with 14 and Sinclair and Curran with 10. The big point getters for the Devinessians were Cal Peterson with 17 and Chester Craft with 13.

In the Fraternity league, Beta Tau forfeited to Alpha Kappa Rho, and Alpha Phi Epsilon outscored Phi Beta Delta, 34-27.

High point men for Alpha Phi Epsilon were Cal Peterson with 17 and Arnold R. Brooks with 10. The high men for the losers were Bill Lazar, Dennis Casad, and Gary Fatooner.

The AMS intramural basketball tournament has been a great success, according to Chezik, because of the hard work of the AMS officers and the referees. The two referees are Charles Parks and Rich Henderson.

RA Holds Last Sports Day Of Season With San Jose

The Recreation Association last Saturday participated with San Jose City College in what Pam Maul, RA historian, listed as the last sports day of the semester.

Activities were volleyball, bowling, fencing, badminton, tennis and folk dancing.

Members of the Recreation Association presently are planning to put full concentration on the Awards Social plans, Miss Maul stated. She further stated that any student who has participated in three-fourths of the activities has earned an award.

There are three types of awards, a block for first semester, shield for second semester and star for third semester participants. The awards social is one of the highlights of the RA's activities.

Booters Dominate Conference Team With Five Players

The undefeated Ram soccer team, keeping pace with its second straight Northern California Soccer Conference championship, placed five players on the All-Conference team chosen November 16.

Joining the mythical eleven are Alex Mendieta, Mike Beltran, Andy Nabong, George Fernandez and Jon Fromer. Mendieta was the leading scorer for the Rams.

Beltran was by far the leading fullback in the conference. Last year Beltran was on the All-Conference second team.

Nabong, a second-year man, made the club hands down as did the Rams' second leading scorer, Fernandez. The fifth man, Fromer, made the club despite missing the latter part of the season because of a contract with Mercury Records.

Coach Roy Diederichsen felt that halfback Alex Volikovsky should have been the sixth Ram on the team.

The selections were: Goalie—Mel Thorton of Diablo Valley; Backs—Beltran, Nabong and Fernandez of San Francisco, Lars Flohdin and Robert Yutzi of San Mateo, Lual Batteghia and Al Hoffman of Menlo; Forwards—Mendieta and Fromer of San Francisco, Luis Diaz and Julian Serraceno of San Mateo, Carlos Seifert of Menlo, Robert Weins of Pacific and Luis Luna, Diablo Valley.

Rams Tie For Third Place In Golden Gate Conference

By Mike Smith

Closing the 1964 grid season, the Ram eleven clobbered the Diablo Valley Vikings 41-15 last Friday afternoon, November 20, at City College Stadium.

The Rams churned out a game total of six touchdowns on 184 yards by rushing, and 153 yards by passing. Diablo Valley chalked up a total of 249 yards, with only 76 in the air.

Coach Elston's crew scored in the first six minutes of the game, for the only first quarter scoring done by both teams, when Ron Fassler tore up mid-field for 48 yards. Joe Sobeck followed up with the conversion kick.

City College's defense held Diablo Valley to only twelve plays throughout the first quarter. After the first two Viking plays in the second quarter, the Rams gained possession of the ball on the five yard line.

With the help of a 15 yard clipping penalty against the Valleymen, the Rams marched 34 yards down to the Viking 16 in two plays. On a second and ten to go situation, Fassler charged 15 yards down to the Diablo one. Immediately following Fassler's run, Sobeck took the ball over the middle for the score.

In the last four minutes of the first half, Henry Scott went to the air for the Rams' next two touchdowns. On the first TD, with the ball on San Francisco's own 37 yard line, Scott connected with John Helms for 63 yards.

The second touchdown pass followed a Viking 57 yard touchdown drive climaxed by John Dotson's 10 yard end zone aerial to Allen Oldfather.

Again with the ball on their own 37-yard line, following the Viking kickoff, Scott tossed a 42 yard aerial to Helms, and a four yarder to Fassler, thus placing the ball on Diablo's 17 yard line. With twelve seconds left in the first half, Scott tossed the Rams' last touchdown pass of the season to Eural Smothers.

With some seven minutes gone in the second half, Fassler scored City College's only third quarter score on an 80 yard punt runback. Fassler received two great blocks from Henry King and Chris Davis. Scott's attempted pass for the two point conversion was broken up by the Diablo defense.

The Rams scored their fourth and last touchdown of the afternoon on an 18 yard interception runback by Dennis Sullivan. Scott shot a short pass to Mike Taylor for the two point conversion.

The Ram's defense pulled in six interceptions for the afternoon, four of the stolen Diablo Valley passes were off Dotson.

Diablo Valley scored their final score, in the last quarter, on a 12 yard pass to Oldfather from Dotson.

The local gridders finished the 1964 Golden Gate Conference season in a third place tie with the Merritt College Thunderbirds, both teams hold a 4-2-1 record. Chabot College Gladiators downed the T-Birds 12-9, thus placing themselves in a first place tie with the Contra Costa Comets who lost their game Friday night to the Foothill College by 20-0. The Gladiators and Comets own a 5-2 mark.

Abundance Of All-City Players Bolsters Basketball Team's Chances For Top Spot

If the possession of All-City players is the only quality needed to win a championship, coach Sid Phelan could win hands down this year.

Although only two veteran varsity players are returning, they both saw extensive action last year. They are Henry King and Rich Henderson, the number three and number four men on the front line, respectively.

King, a former Polytechnic High player and second club All-City member two years ago, was the squad's third best scorer with 202 points for a 7.8 average in 26 games. Henderson, who helped Sacred Heart to the championship during his stay there, was right behind King with 159 points accumulated in 30 games.

The practice session of the 1964-65 basketball season opens next Tuesday when the Ram cagers will take on the Stanford University Braves at Palo Alto.

The partial exhibition schedule is as follows: Hamilton Air Force Base, December 3 at City College; San Jose State Frosh, December 5 at San Jose; Monterey Peninsula College December 7 here. The regular season starts January 5, 1965.

This season Phelan has several Academic Athletic Association All-City players among those trying out for the three open positions on the starting line.

One of the top All-City players who can be expected to earn a possible berth with the starting five is Willie Jones, a powerful second club forward from Lincoln High School. Jones was the AAA's third best scorer with 155 points last year.

Roger Langlois is another second club All-City member from Lincoln who could surprise many if he improves. Langlois virtually came out of obscurity to win a starting berth on the Mustang five.

Another prospect is ex-Saint Ignatius Wildcat Charlie Parks, a powerful center who could fill one of the holes left by the last year's famous Art Adams-Jerry Chandler duo.

In 1963, Parks kept Lincoln High from an undefeated season and a possible championship by scoring 35 points in a game the Wildcats won, 55-54, by the roll of a ball. Parks led the league in scoring and was third in rebounding that year when he made first club All-City.

Two "giants" from Washington High School, Ed Wilson and Ken Whitcomb, could increase the Rams' rebounding strength on the defensive board as well as aiding the club's offensive game. These two were half of the giant foursome on the Washington club which intrigued spectators because of their overwhelming height.

Other triple-A standouts are Steve Vlautin and Steve Lipson who carried much of Lowell's punch last year; Tom Courtney, a secondary man from Sacred Heart and Phil Scramiglia from Washington.

Others working for a berth on the squad are Cal Coleman, Fred Owens, Cal Peterson, Bob Johnson, Frank Taylor, Girard Chatman, Mike Cahill, Ken Sheehy, Phil Bailey and Rog Silver.

According to Coach Phelan, no one, except possibly King and Henderson, is assured of a spot on the starting five.

Spikers Stun Conference With Third Place Finish

Coach Lou Vasquez's hopes for a fourth or fifth place finish in the Golden Gate Conference meet at Stanford University November 13, turned out to be more than he had anticipated when the Ram harriers turned in a final third-place finish with a total time of 91:03 for a 105 points.

College of San Mateo won the meet with a total time of 86:57 for 41 points; Foothill College placed second with 86:58 for 46 points.

Rich Klemmer turned in the top Ram time of the 3.2 mile run with 17:19, he finished fifth in the race. Bob McGuire came in 13th running 17:55, Mike Conroy placed 16th with 18:46 and Joe Singer snatched the 37th spot with his 18:46 time.

Other Ram runners were Don Shea, 43rd, 18:58; Bill Long, 55th, 19:27; and Chris Terrigno came in 69th running 20:34.

Silver Fox?

Christmas Galore Theme Of Floristry Display Tomorrow

Christmas Galore will be the theme of the display sponsored by the retail floristry department from 8 a.m. to 12 noon tomorrow in the horticulture center.

Larry Janzen, who is in charge of the display, encouraged all students to visit the center at their leisure and observe the different decorations and demonstrations. All students are invited to come and are reminded that there will be no admission charged.

The display will be the first of a series of open houses to be held in future semesters, Janzen said. None of the items featured in the display will be for sale.

A varied assortment of Christmas decorations will be set up for students to inspect. Objects which have been made in class during the semester will also be shown. These include glass work examples, ming trees and plastic work. Fresh flower arranging will be demonstrated, Janzen said.

Among the Christmas display assortment will be wreaths, centerpieces, dinner arrangements and tree ornaments. Candle arrangements, door pieces, garlands and candy canes are also on the long list of decorations, creation of which is part of the retail floristry program.

Unusual decorations such as Christmas wedding bouquets will also be featured.

The display will be conducted by the advanced members of the retail floristry classes. It will be supervised by Janzen, George Gagna, assistant, and Maryhope Jacks, instructor in the retail floristry department.

Demonstration work will be done by class members who will show some of the skills of floristry design.

Four Fraternities Plan Christmas Service Projects

Service projects to be presented by four campus fraternities will be the highlight of the Inter-Fraternity Council's Christmas vacation program.

Phi Beta Delta will present its annual Christmas party to the El Portal School for the Handicapped.

Alpha Sigma Delta will decorate the trees on the corner of Ocean and Phelan avenues with lights, ornaments and tinsel.

Beta Tau is planning to sing Christmas Carols at the Laguna Honda Home. Beta Tau will also donate a tree to be placed near the silver pole on the first floor of the Science Hall.

The tree will be given to the Lucinda Weeks Orphanage after Friday when the college's two-week vacation starts.

Alpha Kappa Rho intends to collect books of varied topics to present to the Youth Guidance Center.

H&R Society To Present Holiday Gifts To Elderly

Christmas is fast approaching and the Hotel and Restaurant Society has begun collecting gifts to give to the elderly in San Francisco city and county hospitals, according to Nina Tucker, adviser to the society.

"The H&R Society is composed solely of the students enrolled in the Hotel and Restaurant program and they are the ones who donate the gifts," Miss Tucker explained. The society also uses its funds to buy candy to be distributed with the gifts.

Students donate, wrap and deliver the gifts to the president of the Women's Auxiliary, who in turn distribute the gifts to hospital patients.

While the H&R Society is full of the Christmas spirit, the obvious lack of the same spirit on the part of the student body as a whole somewhat accounts for the lack of a special Christmas luncheon on campus.

Said John Dunn, instructor in the hotel and restaurant department and cafeteria manager, "Nothing special is planned for the holidays because students just don't seem to have the Christmas spirit before vacation starts. A special meal is planned only once a year, and this is at Thanksgiving.

Choral Groups Present Annual Yule Concert In College Hour Tomorrow

In keeping with the spirit of Christmas, the annual student choral concert will be presented during College Hour tomorrow in the theater. An evening performance will be held at 8 p.m. Friday.

Tomorrow's concert will feature Choruses from the Messiah by Handel, sung by the A Cappella choir and conducted by William Grothkopp, music instructor and choir director.

The Friday evening concert will feature the Magnificat in D by Bach, sung by the A Cappella Choir and accompanied by a 16-piece orchestra, with solos by Delia Eagle, James Powell, Richard Canigilia, Andrea Fulton and a duet by Jacqueline Reed and Jon Wood. Grothkopp will conduct.

Three Hungarian Folk Songs by Bartok, The Lobster Quadrille by Fine and Songs from Ossian's Fingal by Brahms will be performed by the Women's Choir, conducted by Richard Finner. Tarantella by R. Thompson will be sung by the Men's Glee Club.

The Chamber Choir and instrumentalists will perform Motet No. 6 by Bach and Sicut Cervus by Palestrina.

Stodole Pumpa, a Czech Traditional, will be sung by Walter Hight. Also featured will be works by Purcell, Persichetti, Bennet, Weelkes, Haydn and Barber.

Quick, Cloney Win AS Presidential Nominations At Party Conventions

Maurer Gets USP Nod For Veep Amid Furor Over Eligibility Rules

Mary Ann Ducommun Claims Uncontested SRP Vice Presidency

By Mike Barber

George Quick won the United Student Party nomination for next semester's Associated Student President at a nominating convention whose delegates met here November 23 to form what they hope will be a ticket strong enough to overthrow the incumbent Student Representative Party. Paul Cota presided.

Sign-waving delegates indicated the representation of Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta, Associated Men Students, Beta Tau, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau.

Ray Chezik and Quick were nominated to the office of candidacy for AS President. A brief flurry of disagreement between Quick and Student Government adviser James Wyatt over Quick's eligibility had occurred earlier, but Quick accepted.

Chezik then declined and assumed by volition the position of alternate candidate for the office. Quick, who is a sophomore member on the present Student Council, said in his speech accepting the bid, "I know more about finance in student government than any student, which isn't much.

"I do know, however, that much needs to be improved in the area of finance communications between the administration and Student Council, and I will straighten things out." Quick got the vote of every organization except Alpha Sigma Delta, which abstained.

Mary Maurer accepted the uncontested nomination for AS Vice President. A short contest for Associated Men Student President developed between John Wallace and Jerald Woolf, with the decision of the delegates four votes for Woolf and two for Wallace, Phi Beta Rho abstaining. Nina Jacobs took the Associated Women Student presidential nomination unopposed.

Wallace vied with Robert Jones for the Sophomore Class presidential candidacy, but was again defeated four to two. Jones, introducing himself as "known as a very funny man on campus" in his acceptance speech stated, "Things are going fast around here, and I intend to go with them. I've been here since '61, so I know."

Candidacy for the office of Freshman Class President was accepted by Stan Angel, with Mike Lowery installed as alternate when Wyatt brought up a question of Angel's eligibility.

Nominations for sophomore members of council saw Frank Agnost, Bernadette Bosch, Chezik, Roger Digenova, Paul Elliot, Nancy Hughes and Carmine Meyer getting the bids, with Mary Jane Super as an alternate.

Murray Bilby, Magda Jacobs, Francine Loskay, Mike Lowry, Marty Murray, Charles Pickens and Lance Wiscomb were chosen as freshman candidates for council, with Dave Garcia and Robert Lott as alternates.

The incumbent Student Representative Party's delegates, led by Associated Student Vice President and Council of Organizations Chairman Wardene Oliver, convened November 24 and nominated Terry Cloney as its candidate for the spring AS Presidency.

A strong showing of support was evidenced by the presence of representatives of Alpha Gamma Sigma, Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, COO, Deseret Club and the Engineering Society.

Present also were representatives of the Forensics Association, Freshman Class, International Relations Club, KCSF, Merchandising Club, Pep Band, Rally Committee and the Sophomore Class.

Proceedings opened with Sophomore Class President Cloney and incumbent Gary Ettin receiving the nominations for AS presidential candidacy. Ettin, in a speech thanking the delegates for their support, declined the nomination and threw his support behind Cloney, who was then accepted by acclamation.

Cloney responded, saying, "I know how student government is run, and you can almost always get your way if you present is right. There's going to be some very rough competition in the elections, but with you behind me, we'll succeed."

Praising Ettin for the work he has done this semester, Cloney concluded his speech with, "Give me a chance, and in comparison with Gary, I'll show you a lot more."

Mary Anne Ducommun accepted an uncontested nomination for candidate to the office of AS Vice President with a short speech, telling the delegates "I've already planned ahead on what I could do as Vice President. The only reason I'm here is because of the confidence the past AS President has shown in me."

In a race for the Associated Men Student presidential spot on the January ballot Earl Braverman defeated Chuck Largaespada ten to three. The delegates acclaimed unopposed Clara Silva as candidate for Associated Women Student President.

Gary Freund, Freshman Class President, was unopposed as a candidate for the Sophomore Class presidential spot on the SRP ticket. "Grades have always been my problem until this semester," Freund said, "but if elected I'll keep my grades up to the best of my ability."

Tom Cloney, brother of Terry Cloney, was defeated by Jim Soletti as a candidate for Freshman Class President. Barbara Kontis, presently AWS president and Lori Klein, current AS recording secretary were selected as candidates for sophomore council.

Candidates for freshman members of council are Tom Cloney, Greg Moore, Martha Romera, Bruce Fisher, Rosemarie Adams, Carol Craig, and Karen Nordstrom. Burt Lurie was chosen as an alternate.

From a turn-out of approximately 35 students, the 23-member cast of the Good Woman of Setzuan, by Bertolt Brecht, were chosen last week by play director James Haran.

Phyllis Melmon will portray the feminine lead of Shen Te. It is Miss Melmon's first lead role at the college, although she was seen here in The Winslow Boy, playing Violet, the maid.

The part of Wong, the water seller in the city of Setzuan, will be portrayed by James O'Neill. O'Neill last played in the Chorus of Antigone.

Other roles and players include Shu Fu, to be played by Al Hughes; Yang Sun, by Ray Lynch; Mrs. Shinn, by Joan Grant; Mrs. Mit Zu, by Andrea Fulton; Mrs. Yang by Anne Chrichton; the Wife, by Lynnette Fishel, and the Husband by Mario Piazza.

Also included are the Brother, to be portrayed by Robert McFarland, the Niece, by Leah Canida; the Sister-in-law, by Sandra Turner; the Nephew, by Mohammed Kawsar; the Unemployed Man, by John Marden; the Old Woman, by Nina Meling; the Old Man, by Louis Engelstein and the Carpenter by Richard Eisenberg.

To complete the casting thus far are in the role of the Policeman, Patrick Gallagher; The Old Whore, Cheryl Willis; the First God, Mike Dobrinski; the Second God, Nelson Cole; the Third God, John La Zar, and the Grandfather, Edward Finerty.

Bill Shattuck, a member of the stagecraft group for some time, will be the stage manager for this play, Josh Smith will be his assistant and Luree Baker will supervise lighting.

The play will be presented from Wednesday, January 13, through Saturday, January 16, in the theater.

Tickets are free to Associated Student members and one dollar to the public. They may be obtained from Haran or purchased at the door.

Cal Transfer Deadline Set For December 15

Deadline for applications to transfer into the Spring semester at the University of California is December 15, counselor Nancy Humiston warned. "Students who have not applied for transfer should certainly do so before the 15th," she said.

Because of the student demonstrations last week at Sproul Hall which slowed the administrative services, no definite information was attainable as to whether students are still being accepted, Mrs. Humiston noted.

Admission officials at U.C. have been accepting forms since October 1 for transfer in the fall semester, 1965.

Shopping Madness Eclipses Real Meaning Of Christmas

THERE ARE 15 shopping days left until Christmas. You'd better hurry and buy your tree, decorations and presents because the deadline is in 15 days. That's what Christmas has turned into — a deadline.

Every year the commercialism of Christmas increases. Estimates have it that the American public will spend $8.5 billion on Christmas gifts alone this year. Trees and cards should add plenty to the total. Sales records increase each year at Christmas, but the meaning of Christmas decreases.

In the effort to buy, buy, buy people forget why they are buying. In the rush to beat the deadline people forget about Christmas.

When December 25 arrives shoppers are happy only because "it's over!"

College students fall into the same rut. They are out of school two weeks before the deadline so they can get a job to pay for their gifts.

They join the fight to keep up with the Joneses or the minute calculations to break even with the gift exchange.

Shoppers are out to beat the department stores, and the stores retaliate by putting everything but the salesman on the shelves.

If the shopper can't afford to play the above games there are plans where he can save money all the year to blow it next Christmas or buy presents on time so the payments from Christmas will last until Easter.

The college students' favorite is to charge everything until the Christmas present money rolls in and use it to pay for the gifts or until the Christmas vacation work check is received and can be cashed.

Although these people all mean well and are trying to create happiness through their gifts, many of them will just be swapping something because they are obligated for one reason or another.

This is how the buy something craze is kept alive. It's Christmas, we've got to buy him or her something!

Granted that this is helping the nation's economy; it's not doing a thing for the nation's ethics.

Christmas isn't a deadline, it's a state of mind. With Christmas comes a religious revival, fellowship and happiness.

These can't be purchased. The happiness should come from what you have — not from what you get.

What you get for Christmas is soon forgotten. Presents are exchanged or finally worn out or broken. What you have this Christmas lasts forever.

Money can't buy a member of your family back. Nor can it purchase sight, health, love or understanding.

The best Christmas gifts in keeping with the spirit of December 25 are peace on earth and goodwill toward ALL men.

. Happiness is a word called Christmas . . . not Christmas present.

Hostile Hospitality In The South

Cross-Country Tour 'Enlightens' Students

By Gregory Frazier

Learning is a sublime and noble pursuit, but at times it can be a dirty, sickening and somewhat sad experience, as James Fredrickson and Ernest von Emster, Alpha Sigma Delta president and treasurer, respectively, will attest.

Last summer Fredrickson and von Emster took a cross-country auto trip which covered 10,000 miles in one month.

On a bright August San Francisco morning the pair set out in Fredrickson's new Dart convertible with a few coins and a month of summery, book-free bliss ahead of them.

The travelers covered all four points of the American compass on their trip. They headed east via Reno, Salt Lake City and Chicago and stopped to view the magnificent splendor of Niagara Falls before proceeding to New York and the World's Fair.

"The trip that far was uneventful and a real pleasure," von Emster said. "It was when we swung south for the return trip that the going got rough."

Their destination was New Orleans.

"We had just crossed the Mississippi border when a 1962 Impala got on our tail and began following us. I was driving, and the Impala was making me nervous because it was following so close.

"I could see through the rear view mirror that it had two men in it. They were drinking beer and they didn't look too hospitable.

"We played cat and mouse on the road for what seemed like a long, long time. Finally, the two men pulled up directly beside us and motioned us threateningly to the side of the road. I pulled over and stopped and they approached our car."

"Both men looked as though they had just stepped out of Faulkner's imagination," von Emster recalls. "They were Southern farm types; big and beefy and mean looking. One of them, the spokesman, had a yellow, tobacco stained mustache and I could smell the beer when he spoke."

"Hi, fellas," he said with a smirky smile and a thick Southern drawl.

"Nice car you fellas have there. Y'all from California?"

"Yeah."

"I was jus' tellin' my friend here," he said, motioning to his beefy friend with a beer can, "Al, now jus' what do you think those two young fellas are doin' down in these parts with that nice new car and those California license plates?"

"Yeah," Al said. "Jus' what are you fellas doin' here? Y'all ain't a couple of those smart Yankee Integrationists comin' down here to stir up trouble, are you?"

"No," Fredrickson said. "We're college students from San Francisco and we're on our way to New Orleans. We've been taking a trip around the country. What's the idea of pulling us over?"

"Well, jus' say we're 'special police'. We've had a lot of trouble with you Yankees comin' down here what with yotin' an' all. Y'all can go, but make sure you keep goin' right on through Mississippi. An' we'll jus' follow you fellas to the county line jus' to make sure you don't get lost or somethin'."

Fredrickson and von Emster drove off and the Impala followed right behind them until they crossed the county line.

"We realize that this was only an isolated occurrence," Fredrickson remarked, "but it is indicative of the lengths to which some Southerners will go to enforce segregation."

"Violence and strong-arm tactics are merely tools to these people. I kept picturing myself lying in the Mississippi mud with a hole in my head. I thought the whole episode was disgusting and sickening, but it was enlightening."

"Although we were only approached once," von Emster commented, "it was the general feeling of hostility toward Northerners and strangers in general that left the greatest impression on me. I don't know what ever happened to that Southern hospitality.

"It seems that every place we went in the South brought unfriendly and suspicious grunts and glares. I consider the experience a vivid lesson in the behavior of troubled and confused men in troubled and confused times. It was rather sad and pitiful. Those men were actually afraid."

Asked if they planned another trip south, Fredrickson and von Emster replied: "The Peninsula is about as far south as we'll be going for awhile."

Guardsman Trio Interviews 'Fab Five' Between Riots

By Fred Wales, Editor

Last year about this time a minor revolution was taking place in England as the malignant Beatlemania was being replaced by a new sound. For the first time in a long while the Beatles were knocked out of first place on the record charts.

The record that did the trick was Glad All Over and the group that cut it was the Dave Clark Five.

When the versatile drummer, Clark brought Mike Smith (organ), Rick Huxley (bass), Lenny Davidson (electric guitar) and Denny Paxton (tenor sax) together it was on a temporary basis to raise money for Clark's youth club football team to travel to Holland for a contest.

GLAD ALL OVER

The group started playing at dances and later was playing three nights a week at a London ballroom. It was here that they gained popularity and an invitation to play at the annual Buckingham Palace Staff Ball. After that appearance their popularity soared on the tails of their recording Glad All Over.

It wasn't until the success of Glad All Over was realized that Clark began to consider the group a permanent band.

Earlier this year the group made a 17-day trip through the United States which covered 17 cities in 12 states but didn't hit the West Coast. The trip was so successful that the group returned October 29 for their second American tour.

It was part of this tour that brought the Dave Clark Five to San Francisco November 9 for their show that evening at the Cow Palace.

That afternoon The Guardsman was invited to a "teenage" press conference with the Fab Five at the Hilton. The conference was scheduled for the Diablo Room but somehow ended up in the Continental room with about a fifth of the invited press representatives finally reaching the interview.

All the high school press were girls and everyone looked very officious until the "Boys" came into the room.

At first the noise and rush to the front of the room was halted, but before 10 minutes had passed the "teenage" press conference was a near riot. Finally the Five had to be evacuated and the interview was over.

EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW

Ten minutes later when the screaming girls had departed, the resourceful Guardsman representatives were invited into the official Dave Clark Five press conference where Fred Wales, Claudia Hoeft and photographer Hugh Wilson received an exclusive interview.

This writer talked to Clark and inevitably the Beatles entered the conversation. Clark said he didn't mind being compared to the Beatles as they were the first group to popularize their type of music and are friends of theirs.

As to any comparison of Mike Smith with the Beatles' Paul McCartney, Clark stated, "The comparison may exist personality-wise but as far as comparing the two when you see them together there is no comparison really."

Although he admires the Beatles as far as imitating them is concerned Clark informed us that none of the Five changed his appearance to fit the group. "We've always dressed like this."

When asked about the rather slovenly Rolling Stones he quipped "Every man for himself."

The group's music is original and composed by Clark. He never expected the great popularity that befell them but feels that the group should last.

"OUR MUMS ARE PROUD"

Asked if their mothers approved their work and the frenzy they cause among young ladies Clark commented, "Our mums are very proud of us. It isn't often that working class people like ourselves can rise to such popularity. About the young ladies, we like to think we make them happy."

Miss Hoeft's interview with Mike Smith was soon reversed. After answering that he liked what little he had seen of San Francisco and that he studied to be a concert pianist, he began interviewing her about San Francisco, City College, American girls, their music, and herself — not quite in that order.

Lenny Davidson informed her that the group's favorite composer is Chopin, and that was when the interview unexpectedly came to a close as a group of girls broke through a partition and mobbed us. The Fab Five escaped on all fours and the interview had ended.

Before leaving (rather hurriedly and under guard) Clark said the group was going home December 20, was flying out that morning, didn't know the name of their new picture and would see us in June when they return.

All in all, the group is very impressive.

They show an air of class that is lacking in the rest of the English imports and yet still retain a bit of a frolicsome quality that uniquely signifies The Dave Clark Five.

Dark Horse In '68 — Time Will Tell

By Boyd Burtnett

THE YEAR is coming to an end and President Lyndon Johnson is knee-deep in the turmoil and crisis of today's domestic and international politics.

Barry Goldwater, to be out of a job come January, will no doubt return to the family's department store and divide his time between the annual winter inventory and writing his newspaper column.

But deep in the back of everybody's mind is a brooding question. It is further removed from the scheme of things than Berlin, Cuba, Vietnam or Bobby Baker, but it is still there nonetheless. What's going to happen in 1968? Who will be the next Presidential standard bearers? A lot of things can happen in four years.

One of the things that could happen is that Johnson might not choose to run for a second term. The Presidency is a grueling occupation and for a man with a history of heart trouble he may not want to press his luck. True, he is in perfect health today and it is hoped this will be the case four years hence, but there is always the possibility.

If Johnson should decide not to run, there would be a search under rocks for a Democratic candidate. Chances are that the Democrats would find Hubert Humphrey, but the Minnesota Senator could never hope to enjoy the popularity the President does today.

The Republicans are especially looking forward to 1968, and the power struggle within the ranks give fair proof to this. Whoever controls the party will choose the candidate.

The conservatives are Big Daddy Rabbit at the present time, but their position is strongly being protested from all elements because of their defeat at the polls.

What probably will happen is that the liberal and the conservatives will cancel each other out and into the spotlight will step the moderates, headed by George Romney of Michigan. Romney would like to be President, if for no other reason than to replace all the Cadillacs in the White House motor pool with Ramblers.

The chances are extremely small that Goldwater will ever get another chance at the Presidency. The Republicans have never made a habit of running a man for an office after he has lost it once already.

This does not mean, however, that there will not be a conservative candidate again.

As a matter of fact, the conservatives may have their eye on the election in 1972.

At which time the Republican liberals will be trying for 1976 and then it will be anybody's election in 1980. There will always be conservatives, there will always be liberals and there will always be the people straddling the middle of the fence ready to pick up the crumbs the other two factions may leave lying around.

It's all an endless circle of fore-sight and hindsight, but it's the game that's played when people want free elections. The funny thing about it is that no matter how much confusion is involved, it always seems to work out.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

WE ARE IN the midst of the great Christmas shopping season, a phenomenon existing nowhere in the world except in America.

Only a few generations back, Christmas was largely ignored in this country. Now the pendulum has swung the other way and Christmas is observed for a longer period of time and with greater intensity than any other day of the year.

PURELY COMMERCIAL

Unfortunately, a great deal of the observance of Christmas is purely commercial. People spend endless hours searching for presents to give to members of their families, to relatives, friends, and even to mere business associates. Christmas has become synonymous with giving.

If Christmas giving is motivated by a true spirit of generosity it certainly cannot be deplored. If the Christmas present is given as a compliment and an expression of good will, no one can object to it.

But how often does Christmas deteriorate into something formal, meaningless or unworthy? How many give only because they anticipate receiving in return something of equal value? How often are expensive presents given principally to make an impression and often to people who have no need for them?

Before buying Christmas presents, the giver might well ask, "Why do I want to give this present? Is my motive worthy? Is it Christian? Am I giving because I esteem and respect the recipient? Do I really love the members of my family to whom I am giving presents or am I giving them because I fear their displeasure or because it is expected of me?"

NEGATIVE RESPONSE

A negative reply to any of these questions should serve as a warning — a warning to re-evaluate one's life values.

All types of gift-giving can be lifted out of the material realm if they are given with a Christian heart. The real motive behind gift-giving is to give "with a heart tied up in every string of every package."

When each person takes stock of himself and realizes this is the real meaning of Christmas, then and then only, can a gift take on its true value.

Population Explosion Floods College Level Institutions

The staggering increase of student enrollment throughout seven western states, Hawaii, Alaska and British Columbia was one of the main topics of discussion at the Annual Conference of the Pacific Coast Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers held recently at San Mateo.

Mary Jane Learnard, City College registrar and president of the association, has watched the student population fluctuate here since the college opened in 1935.

"The college opened with an enrollment of 1500 students," Miss Learnard recalls, "and increased until the onthreak of World War II, when the enrollment decreased sharply to a mere 850 students."

After VJ Day, thousands of veterans flocked to the colleges and universities of the nation eagerly demanding a chance for an education. At that time, enrollment climbed sharply to 5500 in 1947.

Since then, the only decrease in student population was during the Korean conflict when enrollment dropped to 3300. It has been growing by leaps and bounds ever since to a present all time high of 7654 students.

The recent student explosion began in 1960 with the first crop of "war babies" from the 1940's. The second, and larger crop, is presently flooding schools throughout the county. The expected enrollment in the 70's and 80's is staggering," Miss Learnard commented.

Another factor that has influenced increased enrollment is the higher proportion of high school graduates who are going to college and remaining there.

The effects of the student explosion are vast and far reaching as evidenced locally at San Francisco State, San Jose State and the University of California at Berkeley.

Victor Stein, past president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and Interflora, the International Florists Association, will join with host Batmale and other industry leaders to discuss the opportunities for young people in wholesale flower growing, nurseries and retail floristry.

Faculty members Maryhope Jacks and Embree Johnson, and students from the college will demonstrate the courses offered in these fields and successful graduates will appear to discuss their current jobs and past training.

January 3 is the scheduled program date for the first part of the business curriculum, according to Mrs. Leff. Opportunities available in the business world concerning real estate and merchandising will be discussed by faculty members Hyman Berston and Elizabeth Helseth.

On January 10, the second part of the business curriculum offered at the college will be discussed. Programs are at 11 a.m. on KPIX.

Advertising Art In Focus For Next Close-Up Program

The next scheduled program of City College Close-Up, focusing on the subject of advertising art, will be shown on Sunday, December 20, producer Sylvia R. Leff announced today.

Faculty members William Davis, John O'Brien and William Svabek as well as students from the college will demonstrate and explain the courses offered in commercial art with an emphasis, according to Mrs. Leff, on subsequent job opportunities.

Working graduates of the college will discuss their current jobs and the benefits of the training they received at the college. Program host is Coordinator of Technical-Terminal Education Louis F. Batmale.

Training for careers in ornamental horticulture and retail floristry is the subject of the Close-Up program to be televised on December 27, Mrs. Leff added.

Victor Stein, past president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and Interflora, the International Florists Association, will join with host Batmale and other industry leaders to discuss the opportunities for young people in wholesale flower growing, nurseries and retail floristry.

Council Hears How Police Spent Supplementary Budget — Listens To Walkie-Talkies

By Peter Dorn

A pair of two-way radios was demonstrated in Student Council last week by Campus Police representative Mike Phalen; these radios are products of a supplementary budget to the Campus Police that was passed by council last month.

The radios, called "walkie-talkies" by Phalen, have a range of 15 or 20 miles; therefore they are able to be used anywhere about the campus effectively. The cost of the radios is approximately $100 each.

Phalen said that the constabulary uses of these radios are manifold. Suspected thefts, accidents or traffic congestion can all be reported by the "rooftop patrol" to the ground forces in a minimum of time, thereby increasing the effectiveness of the Campus Police.

There is no license requirement for these radios as they operate on an open channel. The radios can be operated on two channels. The campus officers hope to obtain more of these radios in the future so that each patrolman can be a few minutes notice from any location on the campus.

Prior to the Thanksgiving vacation, Jim Wyatt, Student Council adviser, introduced John Azzaro, alumnus and council member while here, who is currently employed by an advertising agency downtown. Azzaro, a San Jose State graduate, said that his participation in student government greatly helped him in his career.

As a student government participant, Azzaro gained experience and confidence working with a variety of persons and organizing and promoting student activities. He encouraged all the members of council to recruit as much participation in student government as possible.

Lou Vasquez, track coach, asked council for $150 to take Richard Kiemmer to the Mount San Antonio State Championship cross country track meet. The money was to cover the expenses for the trip. Vasquez's request was granted unanimously.

Not so unanimous was the decision to grant the Forensics Club's supplementary budget of 498.80. After a half hour of discussion pertaining to the importance of the debate club and to its small membership, the budget was passed, 10-5.

George Quick's proposed amendment to the bylaws of the constitution was approved by council.

The amendment states that legislation passed by council shall remain in force until specifically rescinded and that all laws and codes be collected by the AS President and compiled in one document and distributed to council members and interested parties.

Ray Chezik, Associated Men Student president, reported that the petitioning fraternity Chi Rho Delta cannot be accepted on campus because there are already six fraternities on campus, and policy does not permit any more.

The "Safety After Dark" lecture was attended by approximately 100 students, Barbara Kontis, Associated Women Student president reported. Miss Kontis told council that the lecture was very interesting as well as beneficial as various judo techniques were demonstrated to the weaker sex.

Two Santa Claus candidates, Gary Freund and Bruce Fisher, are, to date, competing for the Santa Claus contest, according to Arnie Kamrin, council member.

Classes Come Between Christmas And New Year

City College of San Francisco's student body is due for a two-week vacation starting December 12 and ending December 27, according to the college calendar.

Students are asked to return on the Monday after Christmas to attest to their survival and prepare for New Year's Eve parties that Thursday night. Friday, January 1, will also be a holiday.

The Guardsman staff wishes the student body Season's Greetings, Bon Voyage, Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

We will return January 6.

Forensics Group To Compete In Tri-Phase Program

Five students will represent City College in a three-phase forensic program including debate, oral interpretation and original oratory Friday. The students are members of the Forensic Association, Phi Rho Pi, here.

Bill Zuke, Carol Powell, Rocco Chavez, Mark Cummings, and Bill Zahiroff will represent the college at the program. Each person must participate in all three sections of the program.

Points will be awarded to individuals, and the team with the most points among its members will take home a trophy provided by Fresno City College.

"At this point we are still looking for interested persons who want to become members," Rosemarie Adams, Phi Rho Pi chairman, stated. She added that this early in the debating season most teams are still getting organized, and that the decision of the debate would be a "tossup."

The Northern California Forensics Association, founded by the college's own Michael Griffin, has been in existence since 1947. It is now a member of the National Forensics Association which includes more than 100 colleges.

The topic of the debate, to be held in the standard parliamentary style, is Resolved: That the Federal Government should support public works.

Miss Adams explained that selection of this topic was to aid such projects as war on poverty by furthering dissemination of information.

Griffin is the sponsor of the group and will provide transportation. The team will take part in many more similar programs before the end of the season next summer.

New Parking Lot Under Construction West Of Arts Hall

Construction is underway on a new campus parking lot, located west of Arts Hall, which will be ready for use in approximately one month, according to Oscar Anderson, coordinator of educational management.

"The new lot will be able to accommodate about 150 cars," Anderson said, "however, the parking area will be for faculty use only."

Anderson said that exceptions will be made in the cases of cripp'ed students and parking for night classes, but during the day the new parking lot will be primarily for faculty use.

The area in question is located to the side of the Arts Hall, parallel to Phelan Avenue, across from Riordan High School.

Landscaping began the week of November 23, and work has continuously bogged down because of the rainy weather.

According to Anderson, the lot will be ready for use by at least next semester, if not in one month.

C-Hour Movie Series Unreels 'Real West'

The Real West, narrated by the late Gary Cooper and described by Madison Devlin of the college's audio visual aids department as one of the best films in this semester's series, will be shown during College Hour tomorrow in C-246.

There are sequences of the Dalton brothers right after they held up a bank.

The still pictures used in conjunction with the narration are from a collection preserved from that historical period, Devlin stated.

They depict the gold seekers, the Indians and the other participants and their conflicting interests and the problems of maintaining law and order.

The plight of the early settlers as they tried to build homes for their families and the hardships of the Overland and Santa Fe routes is also shown.

Christmas Must Be Near

By George Nelson

Not-so-fat Santa Clauses are appearing in the toy sections of department stores. Other indications of an approaching holiday are evident. Christmas must be near.

A used car dealer on Geary Boulevard has removed all the cars from his lot and is now selling Christmas trees.

The price of coal and fire wood has gone up. Egg Nog shares the grocer's ice box with milk. Unemployment is temporarily down.

Where does one go to chop down his own aluminum Xmas tree? — Xmas, that's a four letter word meaning Christmas.

And all those turkeys who survived through Thanksgiving are now worrying about Christmas.

Christmas wouldn't be Christmas without all the commercialism. Concerned people discuss it and complain, "The holiday spirit is being exploited and people are tricked into buying things. The whole meaning of Christmas has been lost."

Humbug. Most wouldn't even realize it was the holiday season if the stores weren't so garishly decorated. Commercialism is as much a part of Christmas now as the douglas fir used to be. Too bad.

Students have good intentions of studying over the holidays but it is doubtful that any will open a book.

A week after Christmas comes New Year's Day — a little-known holiday that follows New Year's Eve.

New Year's Day is when sincere people make sincere resolutions that are forgotten sometime in February.

Some Make Big Time

Ex-College Grid Stars Gain Fame In Sporting World

It is a well known fact that City College turns out many 'scholars,' but a lesser known fact is that it also turns out many excellent athletes.

The latest in a long line is ex-Ram Gary Lewis who was drafted by the San Francisco 49ers in 1961.

Earlier this year Lewis was dropped from the squad, but a couple of weeks later he was back. Two weeks ago he started against the Baltimore Colts and was the game's leading rusher.

In the Fifties City College turned out such greats as Ollie Matson and Burl Toler. Matson went on to fame at University of San Francisco and later starred for many years with the Chicago Cardinals and the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League.

The great Matson, who is now with the Philadelphia Eagles, is enjoying a fine year. Cast off by the Rams as 'over the hill,' Matson went back to Smogville this season with his "new" team and beat his old teammates with some fantastic running.

Although considered an "old man" by the Rams, he showed that he isn't quite ready for the old folks' home just yet by scoring a big touchdown on a 25-yard run.

Toler also played at USF, but because of a persistent knee injury, a potentially great pro career was ruined.

In the Sixties City College added many new names to the books.

Among them were such men as Ron Coleman who played here in 1961 and '62, before transfer to Utah where he lived up to all expectations in becoming one of the finer young halfbacks in the college ranks. Many will recall that Utah battered Cal this season behind Coleman and his two touchdowns.

The year 1961 saw Dave Urrea from Lowell High and Jim Baffico from St. Ignatius team up at guard and tackle, respectively, to form one of the most feared 1-2 line punches ever seen at City College.

GARY LEWIS was named the outstanding offensive back in the old Big Eight Conference in 1960, his last year at City College.

After playing at City College, Urrea went to Cal where he started as a sophomore on the varsity squad. Urrea was expected to bolster a small but tough Cal line this year, but, as luck would have it, came up with a severe leg injury in preseason.

Big Jim Baffico, Urrea's teammate at City College, was considered exceptionally fast for a man of his size.

Baffico went to Marquette University where he played one year, but when football was discontinued at Marquette, he came to City College as a tackle.

After playing at City College, he received some 35 athletic scholarship offers. Baffico finally decided on Nebraska where he played one year and sat out the next because he wanted to bring up his grades.

Now with the Kansas City Chiefs of the American Football League, Baffico has seen limited action as a rookie.

Over at San Francisco State College, two other former City College gridders played a big role in this year's Gator football team's success.

Fullback Tom Piggee who was a standout as a Ram, also carried most of the load in the State backfield. Piggee led the Gators in rushing with 568 yards this year.

The defense was bolstered by linebacker Dennis Drucker who while at City College was an above average linebacker and guard. —G. D.

Prospective Swimmers Have Briefing Tomorrow

Potential members of the Spring 1965 swim team are invited to attend a briefing during College Hour tomorrow in A-301.

At the meeting training schedules will be discussed along with requirements for membership on the team. Coach Roy Burkhead will advise the prospective mermen of the essential ingredients of their preseason diet and special isometric exercises to prepare them for the season.

Peacocks, Chancelors Tie In AMS Intra Competition

By Bruce Klein

The Peacocks and the Chancelors tied for first place last week in the Independent league of the Associated Men Student intramural basketball tournament and the Fraternity league championship has been won by Alpha Phi Epsilon. The Peacocks and Chancelors have identical 5-1 records while Alpha Phi Epsilon has a perfect 4-0 record.

A play-off game between the Peacocks and the Cbancelors was held last night in the men's gymnasium. Results were not available at press time.

A play-off was also played between Alpha Kappa Rho and Alpha Phi Epsilon last night to decide who plays in the Sports Night on January 6.

In the Fraternity league, Zeta Phi Sigma won a forfeit game from "winless" Beta Tau, and Alpha Kappa Rho won its game from Phi Beta Delta to take over sole position of second place with a 3-1 record, according to AMS President Ray Chezik. Those games were played on November 25.

In the Independent league action held on Noveember 24, the Chancelors outshot the Professionals, 75-52, and the Bay City Celtics pulled the "upset" of the season by defeating the first place Peacocks, 51-38. High point men for the Celtics were Smith with 16 and Harris and Hall with 8. Frank was high for the Peacocks with 12.

High point men for the Chancelors were "Badnews" Bealum with 28 and Leroy Woods with 17. High man for the Pros was Kearns with 16.

On November 25, the NBA Rejects handed the Devinessians their fourth loss, 47-35 a O'Mally scored 13 and Healey scored 12 for the Rejects, while Stubblefield and Chester Craft scored 13 and 12 respectively for the losers.

Also played that week was a make-up game between Hotel and Restaurant and the Newman Club. The "chefs" barely pulled the game out of the bag with a 34-33 win.

In last Tuesday's only Independent league game, the Peacocks "outflew" the Professionals in the second half of action to win, 53-34. High men for the Peacocks were Roehl and Frank with 15 each. Kearns and Juarez were high for the Professionals with 12 and 10, respectively.

In last Wednesday's final Independent league games, the Bay City Celtics defeated the NBA Rejects, 74-54, and the Devinessians squeezed by the Chiefs, 45-40.

O'Brien and Hall were high men for the Celtics with 25 and 19. Pete Calabro was high for the Rejects with 24. High men for the Devinessians were Frank Taylor with 14 and Chester Craft with 12. Rich Eawless was high man for the Chiefs with 22.

In last Wednesday's Club league play-off game, the Filipino Club embarrassed Hotel and Restaurant 60-30 for a Sports Night berth.

League Cage Play Starts

Hoopsters To Go Against Foothill College January 5

In their league competition debut scheduled Tuesday, January 5, 1965, Sid Phelan's cagers will start against a veteran Foothill College club that is coming off its weakest record in that college's history.

Last year Foothill coach Chuck Crampton's Owls suffered a 13-15 record, but with six sophomores returning, he hopes for improvement. Even so, it's the coach's contention that "We'll have to play really well to win at all."

Dick Treglown was Foothill's leading scorer with 358 points overall for a 12.8 average. He came up with 218 of those points in Golden Gate Conference action with a 15.5 average.

Jan Hill, a 6-6 center, is another returnee this year and he is showing some improvement.

Despite his size he was not too spectacular in the scoring department with 116 points, 74 of them coming in conference play. His efforts ranked him seventh best scorer on the Foothill club.

Veteran Foothill guards are Howard Tuttle, Steve Danberg, Rich Farana and Rick Carpenter. Carpenter is a good rebounder while Tuttle and Farana are good floor managers. Although Tuttle is only 5-9½, he was able to come up with 196 points.

Following the Foothill contest, the Rams will play a San Jose club that is weaker than last year, but should be strong and can be very dangerous, according to coach Phelan.

Although San Jose is expected to be strong, Phelan stated, "They can't have the team they had last year. We were the luckiest team in the world last year to beat them."

After a long period of conjecture, Phelan has come up with a seven-man first string to carry the major part of his club's offensive-defensive power.

Since Phelan uses a double post position instead of a single center, there are three men striving for the positions. They are veteran Henry King, 6-4, rookie Charlie Parks and Ed Wilson who has top priority for one of the positions, according to Phelan.

Parks was leading scorer in the city prep circuit in 1963 and was third in rebounding. Wilson is also a good rebounder but needed much improvement on his shooting.

At the moment Riordan graduate Mike Cahill is the only man who is assured of a first string position. Cahill is a tremendous shooter and this apparently outweighed his liabilities and gained him the starting spot.

Fighting for guard positions are Willie Jones, Calvin Peterson and veteran Rich Henderson.

Phelan had stated that no veteran was assured of a starting berth and this apparently holds true. Henderson is working against Peterson for one guard spot, while it appears that Jones bas the other one to himself.

Mike Dugan was a late starter and could very likely take one of the guard positions away. Ken Whitcomb is looking better after a very slow start. Bob Johnson is learning fast, and Mike Taylor is finally getting into shape.

Highlight of the Ram preseason action is the annual Modesto Tournament which will take place December 21 to 23.

Klemmer Places In Cross Country Championships

Rich Klemmer ended a disappointing City College cross country season by earning himself a berth in the state meet at Mt. San Antonio with a tenth place finish in the Northern California Junior College championship meet at Salinas on November 20.

Klemmer came in 31st out of a field of 75 with a time of 17:24, a minute and six seconds behind the winner. San Diego Mesa won the state championship at the meet held November 28 with an overall time of 84:16 over the 5000 meter course.

American River came in second at 84:59 and San Mateo and Foothill came in fourth and fifth with times of 85:54 and 86:46, respectively. Diablo Valley staggered in tenth at 92:11, nearly eight minutes behind the winners.

Coming off their best performance of the season, Lou Vasquez's harriers ended the season with a disappointing effort in the Northern California Junior College championship meet at Salinas.

American River, the predicted winner, came through as expected with College of San Mateo and Foothill coming in second and third respectively as expected.

Vasquez had hoped, after seeing his club come up with a third place finish in the Golden Gate Conference meet, that the Ram harriers could come in fourth in the Northern California meet.

Since third was the best they could do in the conference meet, it was hoped that they could come up with another great performance and win fourth place but it was not to be.

"Except for Rich Klemmer, running was below par," Vasquez stated, "and he came in tenth."

Block SF Holds Banquet January 4

Adviser Dutch Elston announced that the annual Block SF Awards Banquet, will be held starting at 6:30 p.m. Monday, January 4 in Smith Hall.

A guest speaker will be announced later, and as usual high school coaches and other guests will attend.

At the banquet, blocks will be awarded to athletes who have lettered in their respective sports and have satisfied the dues requirement of the society. Trophies will also be presented to the Most Valuable Player in each sport.

This semester the major awards will be given for participation in football, soccer and cross country.

Rich Klemmer is President of the Block SF. He expects anywhere from 50 to 100 lettermen to be given blocks and jackets.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Smith

CITY COLLEGE of San Francisco's football squad finished the 1964 Golden Gate Conference in a third-place tie with the Merritt College Thunderbirds; both teams hold a 4-2-1 record.

The Chabot College Gladiators and Contra Costa's Comets shared the league's top spot with an identical 5-2 season mark.

The Rams were just three yards out of first place.

In the local gridders' third game of the year (October 23), they tied Merritt College Thunderbirds of Oakland, 14-14. On a third quarter drive of that game, the San Franciscans marched 21 yards in seven plays down to the Merritt eight yard line for tbe first down. In two more plays, Chris Ransom budged the ball two yards down field; then Joe Sobeck moved it to the four yard line.

On fourth down with the game tied, 7-7, Oliver Mitchell attempted to go over the goal, but he fell short by three yards. If the local gridders could have won that game, tbey would also have a 5-2 mark, thus making a three-way tie for first.

The season also proved that the Rams had a top-flight quarterback in second stringer Henry Scott. In his last three games, Scott led the Rams to victories over San Mateo Bulldogs, 46-12, San Jose Jaguars, 26-22, and Diablo Valley Vikings, 41-15.

Bill Gianquinto, in his first three games, broke even all the way around. Under Gianquinto, the Rams lost to Foothill, 15-13, defeated Chabot College, 19-12 and tied Merritt 14-14.

Scott and Gianquinto combined efforts to overtake the Contra Costa Comets last October 30. But the Comets blanked the Rams, 14-0.

With a "winning" season, the Rams naturally out-totaled their opponents in points, 159-104.

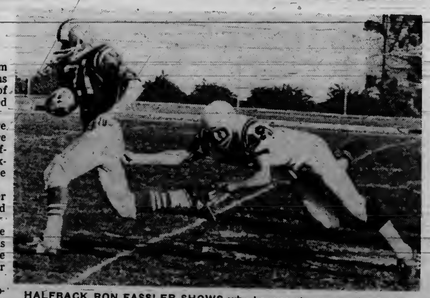
Only one team scored on the Ram defense in the season's third quarter play. That team was the San Mateo Bulldogs who chalked up six points. Their biggest trouble-quarter was the second. The opponents rolled up 40 points here.

What's more, only one team scored more than 15 points against the Rams in a single game. That team was the San Jose Jaguars who chalked up 22 points.

All in all, the Rams had a successful season. Certainly a great improvement over last year's 3-3 record.

Gridders Place Six On All-Conference Team

City College Lineman Bolsters Mythical 11



Five Ram gridders made first team and one Ram made both second teams in the All-Conference selections of the Golden Gate Conference, picked by the league's coaches.

On the first team were offensive guard Bernard Mordret, offensive center Tony Balzar, defensive halfback Henry King, defensive linebacker Rudy Lapera and lineman Mike Taylor.

On the second team, Ron Fassler made it as an offensive halfback and a defensive halfback.

The Back Of The Year in the Golden Gate Conference was Travis Williams of Contra Costa and the Lineman Of The Year was MacArthur Lane of Merritt College.

San Francisco's Lapera was promoted from the second defensive unit on last year's squad to the first defensive team.

HALFBACK RON FASSLER SHOWS why he was chosen for the Golden Gate Conference's second string defensive and offensive teams as he charges 48 yards upfield for the first of his two touchdowns against Diablo Valley.

Terry Cloney, George Quick Battle For AS Presidency Today, Tomorrow

SRP Standard Bearer

AS A COUNCIL MEMBER since my first semester, I've gained valuable experience in the mechanical workings of student activities. When I was Freshman Class President, I led the largest freshman rally in the college's history, and the first outdoor bulletin board was constructed.

AS SOPHOMORE PRESIDENT last semester, I led the class campaign for Proposition B, and was the leader of the Student Representative Party.

IF ELECTED, I will lead the SRP in forming a Finance Committee to remedy the present confusion in Student Council over financial matters. I propose two projects for the campus: ten permanent cigarette wells to be strategically placed to alleviate the litter near the entrances to campus buildings, and the replacement around campus of five maps of the college's land and buildings to guide visitors and new students.

I PLAN TO support the student survival program to eliminate college dropouts. This plan was proposed at the Area Six conference I attended and was accepted at the State Conference last November.

THE STUDENT Representative Party represents all the clubs and organizations on campus. Unlike the other party, it doesn't represent just one small group. Thirteen candidates of the SRP are now holding office. We mean it when we say, "Only the most qualified candidates" will represent you.

TERRY CLONEY

Commissioner Predicts Record Voting Turnout

Associated Student Presidential candidates Terry Cloney and George Quick square off today for the last time as students go to the polls to determine who will be their leaders for next semester.

The biggest election day turnout in the history of the college has been predicted by Election Commissioner Dan Christian. "I'm confident that over two thousand students will vote in today's election, more than doubling last semester's tally," he said.

The polls are open from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. today and tomorrow. Voting machines are placed in the basement of Science Hall, in the Library and on the second floor of Arts Hall.

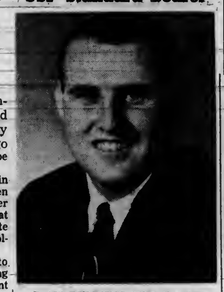
All students will be eligible to vote. An Associated Student card is not required.

Christian said tbat he based his prediction of a record election turnout on the rise of student interest and greater efforts in publicizing the campaign.

Candidates come from the two major political parties on campus, the United Student Party and the Student Representative Party.

Quick, heading the ballot for the USP, has Mary Maurer as his Vice Presidential running mate. Cloney, top man on the SRP ticket, is running with Mary Ann Ducommun.

Opposing candidates from each party are vieing for each office with the exception of Associated Men Student President. Earl Braverman, of the SRP, is uncontested for this office.



Statler Wing Prices Not To Be Increased

Because of the cooperation of the majority of students in keeping Statler Wing clean, the prices will not be raised.

John Dunn, cafeteria manager, stated last week that the two main reasons for the decision not to raise prices were the new arrangement of chairs and tables in the wing and the cooperation of the Campus Police.

"There have been a few incidents in the wing," he said, "but on the whole, the majority of students bas needed no correction; there are always a few trouble makers."

USP Standard Bearer

I AM RUNNING FOR the Associated Student Presidency because I believe I have the qualifications and a program to reform the present system of government into a system that will function correctly and will be respected by both the students and the college administration.

MY EXPERIENCE in student government consists of being the chairman of the Finance Committee, a Constitution Revisions Commissioner, a delegate to Area Six and the state conventions, a policy adviser to President Roddick and this semester a member of Student Council.

FROM THESE positions I now have an overall look at all the activities of the Associated Students.

WE, the United Students Party, believe students should have a greater voice in the running of their activities, that they should know how money is actually coming in and from and how it is going out.

FOR A MORE DEMOCRATIC and fair government, we propose posting the agenda and notices of AS actions around the campus so that interested parties can prepare and be present at council to support their causes.

WE WILL CARRY OUT these reforms without diminishing our present schedule of activities.

I HOPE YOU VOTE for Quick and Miss Maurer and the other USP candidates today and tomorrow for a stronger Associated Students.

Conflict Leads To Two C-Hours

Plans are being made to have two College Hours next semester because of conflict between campus activities and club meetings, Jim Wyatt, student government adviser, said today.

"One College Hour is not enough," Wyatt said. Clubs have complained that attendance at meetings has been poor because rallies and other activities coincided with the meetings.

When the social calendar is drawn up in February, the Council of Organizations will schedule club meetings on Tuesday at 11 a.m. while the Thursday College Hour will be reserved for concerts, lectures and rallies.

This plan will be in effect on a trial basis during the month of February. If it proves to be satisfactory and meets with the approval of club advisers, it will continue.

This plan has been under consideration for a long time, Wyatt said, adding that an editorial in The Guardsman proposing such a plan prompted the action.

C-Hour Features 'Electronics' Concert

By James Rauh

Students of the college are in for a rare treat during College Hour tomorrow when the San Francisco Tape Music Center will provide a concert of electronic sounds for their enjoyment.

Information concerning this unusual type of musical program was released today by Gerald Shapiro, spokesman for the San Francisco Tape Music Center.

"The concert will be composed of three pieces arranged by various composers," Shapiro stated. "The first piece is called Mandolin, by Subotnick; the second, Desert Ambulance, by Sender, and the third, Blue Suede by Tenney.

Subotnick studied music under Darius Milhaud, noted composer and associate professor of music at Mills College, who this year acted as music critic at the San Francisco Film Festival.

Sender studied music in New York and at a conservatory in Italy, and is currently studying with Milhaud. Not much information was available about the third composer.

Subotnick and Sender were co-founders of the San Francisco Tape Music Center.

Shapiro described the music as being either original compositions or new arrangements of music containing "electronic sounds" which add to the interpretation of the artist's work.

The first piece, Mandolin, by Subotnick, includes viola music plus the electronic sounds. To further the students' understanding of the music, light projections on a screen or some sort of movie will accompany the musical composition to give the audience a "visual picture" of the music.

The second piece, Desert Ambulance, by Sender, will consist of accordian music augmented by the electronic sounds. The third composition, Blue Suede, will be made up of the sounds and a new arrangement of an old rock n' roll favorite.

Shapiro added that the music, in actuality, is more than electronic because sounds are recorded live. He also said that this type of music cannot be termed under such labels as popular, classical or jazz, but must be classified as something different in the mind of the listener.

When asked how long this type of music has been in development, Shapiro disclosed that since the end of World War II many composers have been using this type of electronic music to meet their purposes.

Various concerts such as the one to take place at the college tomorrow have been given for some 20 years at numerous colleges and music centers around the United States.

Today Last Chance To File Leave Of Absence

Deadline for filing for a leave of absence is today, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Miss Learnard emphasized that once a student has passed this deadline, he has also passed the "point of no return." He must then go on and finish the class, finals and all, or pay the penalty.

A student who withdraws from the college without obtaining a formal leave of absence will receive a final grade of F in each course in which he is enrolled. He is not eligible to apply for a leave of absence.

Any student wishing to apply for a leave of absence may obtain the necessary forms from his counselor.

Happy Un-New Year

New Year's Day marked a new year's biginning for few students.

For most students the new year begins each September with the end of summer and the beginning of two more semesters of classes. The students' year is ten months long, and the two or so summer months is the time between years.

More than any other time of the year, September is the students' time for New Year's Resolutions: to study, to try harder, to decide on a major, to brush after each meal whenever possible.

But although January 1 may seem like the beginning of something to those not in college, few students fail to take advantage of the opportunity for celebration. And for many, the first day of the official new year is a beadache.

This 1965th official new year is six days old, and there are only 351 shopping days to Christmas.

Vote Today! The Choice And The Responsibility Are Yours

TODAY IS ELECTION DAY at City College. This is the culmination of weeks of hard work by the candidates in order to give the student body a choice as to whom they want to represent them.

The candidates who are victorious today will become the student body's voice on campus. These officers will either bask in glory of the college's accomplishments or face the disdain for the students' failures.

They are City College at meetings and conferences among the other colleges in the Bay Area. This college will be judged by their actions and capabilities.

Students at other colleges won't say that Mr. Beep or Miss Beep is a "poor representative," instead they would comment on how "City College is in bad shape." These people have no other criteria of judging this college than by its representatives.

Granted that all the candidates have a certain degree of competence, or they wouldn't be running, some will be considered more competent by the students. This is the reason for the elections. Students are supposed to go to the polls to select the ones they believe are the best qualified.

However in the past students haven't bothered to go to the polls at all. Voter apathy at the college has long been a problem. Out of the 7000 plus students enrolled last semester fewer than 700 voted. In the previous semester fewer than 1000 students voted and sometimes there have been no more than 500. Although this may seem like a big turnout, it works out to be less than 12 per cent of the student body.

The reason given for last semester's sparse number of voters was that the students "didn't have a choice." This reason was sound since practically every office was uncontested. But this semester there is an abundance of candidates. Virtually all of the candidates have had some experience and an intelligent decision will take some time and thought.

Take into consideration the record of the candidates in the positions he or she has held. Evaluate what they have accomplished in their former offices and use this as a basis for how well or poorly they will measure up to the office they are seeking.

If the voter is unfamiliar with the candidates, check with the election story on page one for their opinions in the issues involved.

After making a decision the student must then vote. This is where many voters make their mistake.

They may make an intelligent decision and then sit around and wait for their candidate to be elected. Later, shock sets in when the other candidate wins.

Excuses for not voting come easily, but excuses don't elect candidates..... VOTES DO!

Some of the students at the college already enjoy the privilege of voting in the national elections and others are about to join their ranks. If these students are unwilling to vote at the college's elections where they have access to the candidates and can question them first hand, how do they expect to become intelligent voters later.

The elections today are important to the students and the college. Students have an obligation to vote.

IRC Growth Largely Due To Efforts Of One Man

By Prudie Johnson

The International Relations Club, under the supervision of Joseph Jacobsen, in its brief years of existence has become one of the more interesting and exciting clubs on campus.

IRC meetings and social affairs serve as a place where students from foreign lands and American students may learn about each other's countries and customs. Curiosities are stimulated and the learning process of college takes on an international color.

Jacobsen assumed the position as counselor for foreign students in Fall of 1953. In 1946 Jacobsen had been recalled to the Air Force and upon returning to City College in 1953 he was asked to take over the job as foreign student adviser.

With the start of his duties, Jacobsen studied the participation of foreign students in campus activities. "I found that the students were not participating in campus social activities so I decided that something would have to be done about the situation," he said.

Being a very decisive and active man, something was indeed done. Approximately two months after beginning his job, Jacobsen "wrote 250 post cards to the foreign students then on campus inviting them to meet to discuss the possibility of an International Relations Club."

He found the students very enthusiastic about the idea and the IRC was underway.

At its start the club was open only to foreign students. Students from different countries met to discuss their countries, to learn about those of others and to discuss and evaluate their opinions of American college life. This was originally the main purpose of the club.

The first big project of the club occurred the following Fall 1954, just one year after the club's conception. It was the first IRC Fair. Though not a financial success, it was a cultural success and has been an annual event since then.

Students from all over the world participate in IRC and because many of them have never joined in any club activities before, Jacobsen conducts a special class listed as psychology G13. According to him, "It serves as an orientation to club life. Members talk about club activities and learn club procedure.

"They do very well and eventually join IRC. Many become club officers, not only in our club, but in others as well. Often students run for Associated Student offices."

After 11 years of existence the club has become an established part of campus life and activities, and membership has extended to include not just foreign students but American students as well.

Success Story

Police Officers More Than Gunmen Says Ex-Student, Now Newark Force Chief

By Bea Takeuchi

The Chief of Police of Newark, California, James L. Chambers, believes that future police officers should not only be fast on the trigger, but fast at the typewriter keyboard too.

In answer to a letter-interview, The Guardsman received a neatly typewritten letter (typed by his secretary). Chambers said that the "one course, in addition to others, every potential police officer should take, is a course in typing.

"No other single course has been of more value to me during my police career."

Chambers, a 1949 graduate of this college, was selected as police chief of Newark in 1956. He was chosen from among 92 candidates.

He described Newark as a community which started with 6000 residents, increasing to 21,500. Its police department has an authorized strength of 21 persons. The city hopes to expand and include the "ultimate population of between 60,000 to 70,000 residents," Chambers noted.

Prior to his present position, Chambers served in different capacities with the police department in Richmond, California. He was a foot patrolman, car beat officer, dispatcher, vice detail investigator, sergeant and patrol sergeant.

"During my 15 plus years as a peace officer I've encountered endless cases which range from mildly interesting to fascinating," Chambers related.

He told of how his training here had enabled him to identify a corpse which was decomposed beyond recognition and to determine whether the individual had been murdered.

"I feel that my year as a pre-med major at City College was a great help to me. That science background in chemistry, mathematics, and zoology has made my job a little bit easier," Chambers said.

He started out here as a pre-med major and switched to criminology.

Chambers is currently enrolled as a part-time student at San Jose State College. He is studying public administration. He has also attended the F.B.I. National Academy in Washington, D. C., and California State College in Hayward.

"I'm not sure whether I've reached the pinnacle of success or not. At this time I have no ambition to leave Newark for another police department."

Newark is still a growing community, and, Chambers commented, "We have a long way to go."

Local Trio Singing Way To Fame

Ex-Students Finding Fun And Profit With Folk Singing Journey

By Mike Barber

A trio of folk-singing, ex-City College students, Jon and Dave Fromer, and Elbert Robinson, with two guitars (twelve string for Jon, six for big brother Dave), has after a few short months of existence blossomed into the entertainment world.

Jonathan, David and Elbert, the name by which the group is introduced, appeared with Henry Mancini in a tour that took them from Seattle to South Bend last October. Recently a week was spent at the RCA studios in Los Angeles, where the trio cut its first record, an album of songs that is scheduled for release in mid-January.

At that time Jonathan, David and Elbert will again be with Mancini, this time touring the East Coast, with appearances planned on the Ed Sullivan and Johnny Carson shows in February.

Jon Fromer, 18 and the youngest of the group, had only three weeks as a history major to his City College career before he had to take a leave of absence to follow Mancini on the tour. But those three weeks were not wasted.

He appeared in the second college hour of the semester, on September 24, on a folk-singing program with Pete Sherwood and Ellen Faust.

Though he played in only three games as a member of the college's championship soccer team, he so distinguished himself on the field that he was chosen All-Conference.

Dave Fromer, who is 22 and a history major from the University of Wisconsin, attended here in 1961 and played forward on that year's championship soccer squad.

When asked how it felt to be elected All-Conference, Jon modestly replied, "It feels great. But I can't understand it."

Robinson, who sings bass for the group, was an engineering major here before he dropped out. He had sung at informal gatherings around San Francisco before the group was organized, and had met Jon before there was any thought of organizing a professional group.

The trio enjoys singing for the sake of singing, yet they are serious in their approach and avoid the commercialism so prevalent in today's recording world. "We do songs with honesty," agent Peter MacMinn said.

On the album will be songs such as Fifteen, The Road Song, and Three Kids in a Sandbox, which was written by Jon. The trio enjoys each other's company as much as the songs that they sing. "We'd be singing together whether we were professional or not," Jon said.

Another former student, Chris Pray, accompanied the group to the northwest as their harmonica instructor.

Radarange—Infra Red's Way To A Fast, Hot Meal

Today's fastest and most effective method of cooking is with radar. Statler wing houses one of the newest developments in radar cooking. The Radarange, costing more than $1000, is enough many times its price in the time it saves.

Donated by the RAYTHEON company for training value in the hotel and restaurant department, the Radarange serves as a companion to vending machines. Now foods, both precooked or frozen, can be purchased in the vending machines and in seconds be cooked to the desired temperature.

By using the Radarange, food costs can be kept down while the quality of the food is still good.

A large variety of food is available in the machines, all of which can be cooked by a single step operation.

A schedule is posted on the Radarange informing students which button to push. All the buttons are individually numbered and colored representing different amounts of time necessary for cooking food items.

John Dunn, instructor in the hotel and restaurant department and cafeteria manager, said, "The Radarange is helpful in that it reconstitutes cold foods and saves a lot of time. We can freeze foods such as pizza and spaghetti and put them out as needed."

Penetrating infra red waves are the cause of the heat in the radar oven. They produce instantaneous heat even to deep inside the foods which in any state (precooked, frozen or raw) absorb microwave energy and become hot.

Certain materials such as plastics can transmit the heat without getting hot themselves. The waves convert to deep heat within the foods.

It is quick, efficient and costs the student nothing to use. These features, plus the fact that better tasting and a larger variety of foods can be offered, all make the Radarange a popular feature of the Statler wing.

Student Forsakes Muni For His 10-Speed Racer

There are those who ride busses, trolleys, cars, motorcycles or scooters to college every day. There are those who walk. But by Heaven and Earth there is one who rides a bicycle to classes every day. His name is Joseph Singer, and of him the student body can be proud.

For people like Singer make the student body more than just a body; they make it a body of people. He is an individual.

Singer is a member of the track team, a miler, and a good one, as anybody would know if he read the Guardsman or better still went to the meets. Having pursued the sport of cycling for six years, Singer claims that riding his bike to and from college helps him stay in shape. Good hint for weight watchers.

Singer has held membership in a large cycling organization, the Western Wanderers.

Not one to take the 45-minute grind to classes on the city's buses passively, Singer pulls his Ideor-Asso bicycle from his garage and, with all 10 speeds, peddles to college.

He peddles toward the men's gymnasium and dismounts in the customary style—leapfrog in reverse over the back wheel. Then he leads his bike into his parking stall, the paint closet in the men's gymnasium.

While Singer is earnestly basking in 15 units worth of pre-medical knowledge, his noble machine waits for the trip home.

Joseph Singer is not only individual in his means of transportation, he is also individual in his dreams for a vacation.

Singer plans to go to Europe this summer. He has latched onto a certain firm which provides transportation to the continent and sees that its clients obtain work on the other side. All this for the nominal fee of $450. Thus, Singer's dream is quickly coming into focus.

Yes, the gods and even the Campus Police seem to smile on Joseph Singer. He, parking in his spacious paint closet, has beaten the parking problem: Joseph Singer, oh subtle irony, does not need a parking permit. —K.S.

SHADES of the holiday season are fast fading away.

The new year is practically one week old and the serious task of finals looms uncomfortably near.

What type of year will it be? From present indications, it will be a year of returning. Amazing but true, the department stores are more mobbed now than they were a month ago.

People who vowed they wouldn't "be caught dead downtown" are standing in line trying to return presents they don't want, can't use, have already, or don't like. It is simply incredible.

Only a few weeks ago, these same individuals had tears in their eyes as they thanked relatives and friends for presents they had always wanted. How shallow, how hypocritical, how disgustingly ungrateful human beings are.

The merchants, and who in their right mind can really blame them, had a field day during the mad holiday rush. Items at best, that weren't worth the space they occupied on a counter, were literally jammed down the buyer's throats. And in desperation, the weary and exhausted shopper purchased anything and everything in order to escape the crowds (if this was possible).

Then, bless their hearts, there was the problem of the so-called "experienced" salespeople. Hired merely to try to accommodate the holiday rush, these individuals no more belonged behind a sales counter than a child belongs in combat.

So, is it really any wonder the stores are filled to capacity now? Certainly not. Any person, given a bit of time to view his gifts, practically has a moral responsibility to himself to return or try to return the junk he so graciously received.

In a few weeks, (perhaps a bit longer) the shopping situation will once again be somewhat normal. And human behavior being what it is, people must forgive and forget all the aches and pains connected with holiday shopping.

They have to, because Christmas 1965 will roll around sooner than expected, and then these same people will be doing the same thing.

They're bound to—for history has a strange way of repeating itself!

Dental Assisting Awards Caps To 14 Students In Ceremonies

By Hugh Haworth

Five graduating students and nine students finishing the third semester of the dental assisting program here received their caps at the college theater last night.

The five graduating students are Phyllis Amstein, Joyce Chau, Elda Fanucchi, Doreen Hirsch and Elaine Tsuha.

The nine third-semester students who were capped are Frances Blum, Hereen Blyoder, Sandra Kipnis, Sandra MacArthur, Georgina Ong, Mary Ordano, Mary Robledo, Sandra Salozin and Martha Turner.

Dr. Jack Werner, Jr., secretary of the San Francisco Dental Society, presented the keynote address, How To Succeed By Trying.

Frank Szehner, Jr., head of the dental technology department here, gave the welcoming speech to visitors at City College and a report on the "gains pertaining to the dental auxiliary services at City College as a result of Proposition B passing."

Presentation of the caps was made by Betty Lou Park, 1960 graduate of the dental assistants program and presently an instructor here in the same department. She was assisted by Marsha Pearson, a 1964 graduate and a certified dental assistant working with the Public Health Hospital.

Ruth Inskipp, director of dental auxiliary services here, explained that it is customary to present the caps to students before they start the fourth semester to give them "a little prestige" in clinics and serve as inspiration to students who have not reached their level of efficiency.

Joan La Grave, a June 1964 graduate from the dental assistant's program, presented the San Francisco Dental Assistant's Society scholarship award to Miss Turner.

The Dr. E. Frank Inskipp Memorial Scholarship established by Mrs. Inskipp in memory of her husband, late dean of the School of Dentistry of the University of Pacific, is awarded only in the spring semester.

Mrs. Inskipp declared, "We're awfully proud of our department. We have one of the first accredited department courses of the colleges in this area and we have four doctors of dental surgery on the faculty."

Women's Groups Plan For Awards

Three campus organizations will merge talents to present the semi-annual Women's Awards and Recognition Night. The affair, originally set for tonight, is now scheduled for Wednesday, January 13, from 6:15 to 8:30 p.m. in the Statler wing, will be centered around a Hawaiian theme complete with luau.

Featured at this function is the presentation of awards and recognition of outstanding City College coeds. Barbara Kontis, Associated Women Student president, will represent her organization by presenting an AWS award to the coed who has contributed outstanding service to the college.

The Recreation Association will bestow an award on the outstanding woman athlete. Donna Lleces will make this presentation, as RA president.

Outstanding scholarship, which includes the highest grade point average, will win the Dougherty Trophy for a yet-to-be-named coed. Randee Herting, president of the Inter Sorority Council, will name the winner at the luau.

A second purpose of the semiannual festivities is to announce the names of the new presidents of the AWS, RA and ISC, following the elections which are being held today and tomorrow on campus.

Representatives of a Hawaiian travel bureau will be present to explain and answer questions concerning Student Study Tours to the University of Hawaii.

Student Police Outfox Pros

While the San Francisco police were combing the hills in search of a very special stolen car, two alert Campus Police officers recovered it—100 yards from a police station.

The car happened to belong to the daughter of Thomas Cahill, chief of the San Francisco Police Department. It was abandoned on the campus "D" parking lot, within sight of the Ingleside Station.

John Fussleman, deputy chief of the Campus Police and Sergeant Walter Potter were on a voluntary patrol around the campus at 8:30 p.m. December 24, when Fussleman noticed a lone Corvair in parking lot D by the men's gymnasium.

As the car was devoid of any college identification, Fussleman noted the license number and proceeded to visit the Ingleside Police.

A check of the "hot sheet" did not prove the car to be stolen, but a newspaper article that was published the next day describing the "hottest car in town" prompted Fussleman to telephone the Bureau of Inspectors for the latest report of stolen cars.

Sure enough, one on the list turned out to be the Corvair in parking lot D, Chief Cahill's daughter's car.

A police car and tow truck were dispatched to the campus immediately, while Fussleman guarded the Corvair to prevent its removal.

Deputy Chief Fussleman said that whenever any of the Campus Police happen to be driving by the college, they always check out the grounds to make sure that all is secure. Although there are no mandatory or scheduled patrols of the college on weekends or vacations, Campus Police Chief Paul Robin's men could be about anywhere, anytime.

Council Chooses Candidates Among Students, Faculty For College Service Awards

By Peter Dorn

Nominations for student and faculty Outstanding Service awards were made at last week's Student Council meeting. The winners will be presented awards at the Council awards dinner next Tuesday night.

Candidates were nominated on the basis of their participation in extra curricular activities and service to the Associated Students.

Stan Angel has been recruiting participants for a ski trip on January 15, 16 and 17. The weekend of skiing, skating, swimming (yes, swimming), and schussing at Squaw Valley costs only $27 per capita, he said.

The price includes round trip transportation by chartered bus, two nights lodging at the Olympic Village Hotel, two breakfasts and one dinner at the hotel, discount rates for skiing lessons and ski lifts.

Anyone interested in joining the 27 students who are already going can notify Stan Angel at Bungalow 5, full payment and reservations are due Friday.

Ray Chezik, Associated Men Student president, announced that Alpha Phi Epsilon will play against the faculty basketball team at Sportnight tonight. He invited all students to attend the game and "see their instructors in action."

Council approved a $730 supplementary budget for athletic awards under the prompting of Bob Higginbothan, Athletics Awards commissioner, for the purpose of jackets and trophies for the members of the successful teams.

Goodwoman Players Step Up Rehearsal Pace

Rehearsals for Goodwoman Of Setzuan, written by the late Bertold Brecht and directed here by James Haran, drama instructor, are being stepped up as opening night draws closer.

Scheduled to open next Wednesday and run through Saturday, the two-act play calls for a cast of 23 members, making it the biggest, as well as the final, production of the Fall season.

Portraying Shen-te, her first lead role, will be Phyllis Melmon, last seen as the maid in The Winslow Boy production. "We are all very enthusiastic about the play," Miss Melmon said, "for this is the first time a play of this type has ever been presented at the college."

Brecht died in 1956 but not before winning world-wide acclaim for such plays as the Three Penny Opera and Mother Courage.

Brecht sought to educate and enlighten his audience, rather than stir its emotions and this technique becomes more apparent as the play progresses. In several scenes, the actor speaks to the audience, taking himself away from the character and conveying Brecht's philosophy.

The over-all effect is an Oriental touch done with a minimum of effort.

Tickets for the production will be free to Associated Students, $1 to the public. They may be obtained from Haran or purchased at the door.

Rally Committee To Sponsor Open Dance

Statler wing will be decorated in "the spirit of basketball season" Friday night when the Rally Committee will sponsor its first open dance of the semester.

The dance will be preceded by the college's second on-campus league basketball game in which the Rams meet San Jose City College.

Students who attend the game will have their hands stamped to insure free admission to the dance afterward. Any other student will be charged an admission fee of 50 cents, a Rally Committee spokesman said.

Admission to the game is also free with an Associated Student card.

A four-piece combo will supply the music and entertainment for the dance which is expected to last from 10 p.m. to midnight.

Jim Wyatt, student activities adviser, said he hopes the dance will be a celebration of a Ram basketball victory.

Evening In Paris Theme Of Council Awards Banquet

An Evening In Paris will be the theme of the Student Council awards dinner to be held in the Statler wing at 6:30 p.m. next Tuesday.

Edward W. Wessling, a member of the Department of Salaried Personnel Relations at Lockheed Missile and Space Company in Sunnyvale, will be the guest speaker at the dinner. Wessling has been active in counseling university students at Madison, Wisconsin and Valparaiso, Indiana.

A specialist in "employee motivation," Wessling conducts vocational counseling at Lockheed and monitors promotions.

The dinner will have a French menu and will be supplemented with entertainment by vocalist Alan Vian of the drama department. Hotel and restaurant personnel will purvey the culinary delights; attendance at the dinner is by invitation only, Wardene Oliver, AS vice president and chairman of dinner arrangements, said.

Awards for Outstanding Service to a student and to a faculty member, along with awards to council and cabinet members, will be presented.

After dinner the new AS President and Vice President will be inaugurated, and the top six AS officers will be introduced to the diners, consisting of both students and faculty members.

Laotta Wins COO Santa Benefit Title

Winner of the annual Council of Organizations' Santa Claus contest was Mike Laotta, representing the Newman Club.

The contest netted a total of $55.32, collected by the penny-per-vote method of election.

Santa and members of the college's chorus toured the campus on the last day of classes before Christmas vacation caroling, distributing candy canes, spreading good cheer and generally "ho, ho, hoing it up."

Other candidates in the contest were Michael Florentino of the Recreation Association, Bruce Fisher of Forensics, Gary Freund of the Freshman Class, Max Siemel of Block SF and John Wallace of Alpha Kappa Rho.

According to Wardene Oliver, COO chairman, the $55.32, coupled with $126.30 gained from the recent COO Talent Show, totaled $181.62 and was given to the Marist Missionary Sisters for disbursement.

"The fund provided 30 families with a happier Christmas," Miss Oliver said.

She also disclosed that COO will sponsor drives for similar collections annually, with recipients representing a different faith each year.

Film On Antarctica Next In C-Hour Series

Seven Cities of Antarctica will be the film shown during College Hour tomorrow in C246, Madison Devlin, audio visual aids coordinator, announced today.

The film, Devlin said, shows how men on scientific expeditions in this region of the world live.

One of the points brought out in the film is that the rugged men on the expeditions built regular cities under ground, hence the name of the film.

Devlin also stated that attendance at these films has been excellent during the last few weeks, and he hopes that it will continue in the future.

Peacocks Vie With Filipino Club For Tournament Championship In AMS Sport Show Tilt Tonight

By Bruce Klein

The Peacocks will vie with the Filipino Club for the Associated Men Student Intramural championship, and the Faculty will face Alpha Phi Epsilon, Fraternity league champions, in tonight's semiannual AMS Sportnight to be held starting at 7 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

Boxing matches will also be featured.

The Peacocks defeated the Chancelors to earn their spot in the Sportnight against the Filipino Club.

During the intramural season the Peacocks led all teams with a total of 323 points with Bob Roehl scoring 91.

Alpha Phi Epsilon led the Fraternity league with 105 team points. Arnold Brooks was high man with 36 accumulated points. The Filipino Club led the Club League with 204 points. Bernard Piper scored 59 of those points.

The Faculty team didn't play in any league, but the instructors are rumored to have a promising team comprised of youth, speed and height.

The Faculty players include Bob (The Dunker) Quigley, Larry (The Tip) Lawson, Jim (The Stilt) Wyatt, Ernie (The Dribbler) Domecus, Gary (The Shot) Schaffer and Terry (The Toe) Kilpatrick.

Boxing matches, under the direction of coach Roy Diederichsen, will follow the basketball games. There will be eight bouts with each bout lasting three rounds of a minute and a half each.

The bouts are in order of appearance:

Winners of the basketball games and winners of the boxing matches will be awarded trophies tonight.

There will also be a fencing exhibition scheduled, according to AMS President Ray Chezik. Chezik said that a guest celebrity might come to add another attraction to the event. A "special surprise" is also planned but must be kept secret, he said.

Doughnuts and cokes will be served, and students with AS cards will be admitted free of charge. Students from other high schools or colleges with proper identification will be admitted for 50 cents. Mothers, fathers, aunts, uncles, grandparents and other relatives will be charged 75 cents. "Everyone is welcome," Chezik said.

City College Duo Excels In Pro Ball

A couple of ex-City College of San Francisco baseball players turned in sparkling performances in the last minor league baseball season. They were pitchers Rich Nold and Frank Bertania.

Nold set a New York-Pennsylvania League record of 268 strikeouts in 242 innings pitched.

While pitching for the Geneva Senators, Nold was the league's only 20-game winner. His final record was 20-8. Meanwhile the other Nat hurlers won 59 games among them.

For this performance the National Association of Baseball Writers gave Nold the 1964 Most Valuable Player Award.

Bertania, doing duty with Baltimore's farm club, Elmira, of the Eastern League, was given the MVP Award of that league.

College Athletics 1964 Are Now History

RAMBLINGS

Moments Of Defeat And Victory Recalled

By Mike Smith

NINETEEN HUNDRED and sixty-four is gone, and with it, the impressive moments of glory for City College's athletes have faded into the past of that recent year.

Some teams reached the summit of success while others failed to indulge in the taste of victory. These are moments worth recalling.

Coach Sid Phelan started the year off with a bang when he piloted his cagers—particularly Art Adams, Jerry Chandler, Henry King, Rich Henderson and Ken Scalmanini—to their third straight Golden Gate Conference title.

Then the Ram cagers went south to Mt. San Antonio College, taking a 27-7 record with them, and met Riverside Junior College, the number one ranked two-year college team in the nation. With four seconds left in this game, Riverside's Tom Ferraro sank a 30-foot jump shot to give his team a 42-40 victory, thus knocking the Rams out of the State Tourney.

One City College team that did win a state championship was Coach Roy Diederichsen's soccer squad, led by Alex Mendieta who scored more than 25 goals during the course of the season. The Rams booters racked up a 12-2 season record, and went through the Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference undefeated for the second successive year.

The Ram soccer squad went on to overpower the winners of the Southern California Junior College Soccer Conference, Victor Valley, 8-0, last November 21 for the state crown.

Yet there was not only team success, but success of the individual performers who turned in new City College records in the year 1964.

In swimming, Rich Gray swam the 50-yard freestyle in 24.1 to set a new City College record. The old mark was 24.8, set in 1960.

In the Golden Gate Conference track meet last May 2, Gene Plotkin recorded a new college mark in the two mile with 9:33.3. Plotkin broke Paul Patten's (member of City College of San Francisco's Hall of Fame) 1958 record of 9:35. Later in the year, Plotkin bettered his new mark to 9:29.6.

Tom Gardner set a new 220 dash mark for the college when he ran 21.7 in the State Championship trials.

During the State Championships last May, the Ram relay team of Oliver Mitchell, Paul Richard, Gardner and Vern Bradford posted a new Ram 440 relay record. They beat the old record of 42.3 with 41.9.

Another Ram record set in 1964 was by Ozzie Norris. The Ram speedster ran the 880 in 1:55.5. Another teammate, Chris Ferrigno, was one step behind Norris with 1:55.6 during the same race.

The Ram track team had a somewhat better than average year, while another spring sport, baseball, turned in a 10-11 season record thus classifying them as "average." But the Ram nine had a good enough record to put them into a fourth place tie with the Diablo Valley Vikings and the College of San Mateo Bulldogs. At the end of the season, Russ Kunkle and John Bussanich inked major league contracts.

Coach Dutch Elston's football team finished in a third place tie with Merritt College (4-2-1) behind co-champions Chabot College Gladiators and Contra Costa Comets (5-2).

After the injury to Bill Gianquinto in mid-season, Henry Scott stepped into the quarterback spot, and aided by the fine running of Ron Fassler and Joe Sobeck and the pass receiving of Eural Smothers and John Helms, led the Rams to three straight victories. The City College gridders rolled over their last three opponents—San Mateo, 46-12, San Jose, 26-22, and Diablo Valley, 41-15.

Much of the gridders' fine defensive work belongs to All-Conference members Henry King, Rudy Lapera, Mike Taylor and Fassler.

One of Chabot College's defeats came in an early game against the Rams with Gianquinto quarterbacking. In this particular game, Chris Ransom exploded for 152 yards and helped the City College gridders to a 19-12 victory.

Two-Year College Conferences May Undergo Revision

Plans for wide-scale realignment of two-year college athletic conferences were apparently approved at closed meetings over the Christmas vacation in Pasadena, it was learned recently.

The decisions were made at meetings in Pasadena at the time of the junior Rose Bowl on December 12.

Dr. John Shepard, chairman of the State Junior College Athletic Association, refused to confirm that there would be wholesale reorganization of junior college conferences, but little doubt was left that things would be otherwise.

"There are 72 junior colleges now and there will be 90 in the near future," he stated, indicating the need for examination of the present two-year college alignments.

"The committee has been studying this matter for several months," Shepard stated and cited an open meeting in San Francisco as proof of the undertaking.

"The committee acted in closed session and no report will be made until each college receives a copy of the action taken," Shepard stated.

Ram Cagers Take Modesto Tourney Consolation Berth

By Bill Pates

City College's basketball squad takes on San Jose City College and the Merritt Thunderbirds for its second and third Golden Gate Conference games of the season.

The San Jose game will be played here at 8 p.m. Friday, while the Merritt game will be played next Tuesday night in Oakland.

After dropping two of their first five games, the rookie-dominated Ram cage squad pulled itself together enough times to win six of their next seven games, end their pre-season action with a 9-3 record, and take the consolation championship in the Modesto Tourney.

STANFORD BRAVES

In their initial contest of the season, the college's young cagers dropped a hard-luck 65-64 decision to the Stanford Braves, December 1.

The Rams took an early five point lead which faded away to a 31-31 halftime tie.

Stanford pulled away to a seven point lead in the third period and held it until the last three minutes of the contest when the Rams made a run at it. They closed it to 63-61 with 30 seconds left when they were hit by fouls which put it out of reach, 65-61. City College closed out the scoring at 65-64 with 15 seconds left.

HAMILTON AIR FORCE

Two days later the squad had an apparently easy time of it with a 79-56 conquest of the Hamilton Air Force Base team.

Fifteen Rams were involved in the scoring, as the airmen were overwhelmed by the college's over-all scoring ability.

SAN JOSE FROSH

San Jose fell to San Francisco for the third year in a row by a lop-sided 72-59 score, for the club's second win.

It started off quite slowly with the San Franciscans leading, 11-8, at the quarter, 34-25, at the half.

Led by veteran guard Rich Henderson, who did all his scoring in the fourth quarter, the Rams exploded in the second half to put the game out of reach in the third quarter, 56-35, by outscoring the Spartan Frosh, 22-10. Final quarter action saw the Rams scoring 16 to San Jose's 24.

MONTEREY

After falling behind, 12-3, in the first period, City College caught Monterey with five minutes gone and eased out to a 58-52 win, for its third straight victory.

Outbursts by Henry King and Willie Jones helped the squad to a 28-17 halftime lead, as Monterey could manage only five points in the second period.

USF

Led by the Dons' Jamison, Black and Snyder, USF broke up a tight 22-19 contest with a 44-point second-half blast to demoralize the City College Rams, 66-53, breaking their three game win streak.

With Jamison and Black hitting on everything and only having Cahill to contend with, the Dons massacred the Rams by a 13-point margin, their worst loss of the season.

VALLEJO

Coming off their performance against USF, the Rams ran wild in the second half against Vallejo Junior College to take a 77-51 victory.

Being somewhat timid from their last outing, the Rams fell victim to the shooting of Vallejo's Hawkins and McGee who led their squad to a 34-32 halftime lead.

In the second half however, the Rams' King, Henderson and Cahill hit for a combined 30 points to bring the club its fourth win in six starts.

CAL BLUES

Behind the clutch shooting of forward King and guard Jones, the Rams broke a 26-26 halftime tie to edge the California Blues, 64-58.

Forward Cahill kept the college five in it during the first half and the fine efforts by King and Jones helped put it out of reach. King led all scorers with 18, and Jones came up with 13 and Cahill 14 to lead the Ram attack.

ST. MARY'S FROSH

Veteran cager King proved the spark of victory for the second win in a row as he pulled the City College five to a 65-53 come-from-behind win over the St. Mary's Frosh for the club's sixth win of the season.

King poured in 15 points in the second half to assure the San Franciscans of the win. King led all scoring with 20 points.

FRESNO

In their Modesto Junior College Basketball Invitational, with the first encounter against Fresno, the Ram five met their first zone defense and were hypnotized into a 63-56 loss, breaking their second three-game winning streak.

Although the Fresnans led, 32-29, at the half, they fell behind in the early going of the third period and had to fight back for the victory.

At 3:09 of the fourth quarter, they broke a 52-52 tie and the Rams' back and went on to take the win by a seven-point margin.

SANTA ROSA

The Rams quickly jumped back after their third loss of the year and won three straight for the Modesto consolation championship, and all were against zone defenses.

Santa Rosa's 6-6, 220 lb. Bear Cub forward Tom Stewart matched San Francisco's Cahill, basket for basket, but he didn't get enough help from his teammates to prevent a 68-61 loss to the San Francisco Rams.

With Cahill showing the way by giving the Rams an early 7-0 lead, King, Duggan and Jones combined their efforts to give the college quintet a 19-14 lead at the quarter and stretch it to 39-29 at the half.

The defending champions coasted the rest of the way for the win, but it may prove very costly to the Rams.

Center Charlie Parks and guard Henderson both suffered sprained ankles, with Parks' being especially severe. He is expected to be out for an indefinite time, although Henderson will be able to return to action.

EL CERRITO

With Cahill, Wilson and King doing most of the damage, the City College Rams vaulted themselves into the consolation championship game with a 74-57 conquest of the El Cerrito Falcons.

After falling behind, 20-16, the San Franciscans outscored the Falcons, 25-6, in the second period to walk off with a 41-26 lead.

BAKERSFIELD

It was literally no contest between the Rams and the Bakersfield Renegades as the City College five walked off with an easy 91-62 victory to take the Modesto Tournament Consolation title.

King's tremendous 21-point first half output deflated any ideas the Renegades might have had on the outcome of the contest.

Top Coeds Get Awards At Gala Hawaiian Luau Tonight

By Kathi MacDonald

Presentation of awards will be the highlight of the Polynesian Party tonight in Statler wing from 6:15 to 8:30 p.m. A Hawaiian luau provides the theme for the Women's Awards and Recognition Night, sponsored by the Associated Women Students, Recreation Association and Inter-Sorority Council.

During the festivities, the spotlight will fall on Barbara Kontis, AWS president, as she presents an award to the coed who has contributed outstanding service to the college. Following the applause, RA president, Donna Lieces will take over to bestow an award on the outstanding woman athlete.

The Dougherty Trophy will then be given by Randee Herting, president of ISC. This presentation is made to the coed showing outstanding scholarship by attaining the highest grade-point average.

Also on the agenda tonight will be the announcement of the new presidents of the three organizations.

A light Hawaiian supper, served buffet-style, is being prepared by the hotel and restaurant department. Sacorro Rivera, refreshment chairman for the event, lists a Hawaiian chicken combination, salad and surprise dessert on the menu.

Guests and participants will be seated at a circular row of tables as they dine on the Hawaiian delicacies and are serenaded with background music provided by the City College music department.

Grass mats placed on the floor at the center of the tables will fashion a stage for the entertainment, which will consist of singing and dancing in keeping with the Hawaiian theme. Martha Romero, entertainment chairman, predicts the show to be "an impressive display of talent."

Carol Bickel will perform a solo dance, after which she will be joined by Barbara Stewart for a duet. Group dance numbers will be done by Purita Pera, Resurreccion Bolfango, Eva Bolfango, Lolita Quides, Theadorina Resella, Bonjamin Joves, Juanito Briones, Irenio Ciriales and Ernesto Guevara.

Another chorus of dancers will include Martha Romero, Rae Orteske, Darla Bertoli, Socorro Rivera and Judy Barling. In addition to the dancing, Alan Viau will sing.

A representative of a Hawaiian travel bureau has been invited to explain and answer questions concerning Student Study Tours to the University of Hawaii. "Especially interesting," Miss Kontis commented, "will be a film to be shown of some of the beauties of Hawaii."

Other committee chairmen who have handled preparations for the party are Miss Lieces, setup; Luba Susoeve, publicity; Lula Tubbs, invitations; Miss Herting and Gerri Maloney, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau presidents, respectively, decorations.

Guests at the affair are invited to wear muu-mus, however college dress will be appropriate if preferred.

Police To Patrol New Statler Wing On Hourly Basis

Hourly Campus Police checks of table conditions in the Statler wing are now being made and any persons contributing to a disorderly table will be asked to leave, according to John Dunn, hotel and restaurant department instructor and cafeteria manager.

The action was prompted when Dunn entered the wing at 1 p.m. last Tuesday and discovered the majority of the tables looking like a "shambles."

Dunn asked campus policemen on duty to order those at fault to leave the building.

"If they don't clean up around here, they're not welcome," Dunn stipulated. "This is a disgrace."

As evidence he cited the many students who put their feet on the tables, leave trash, disposable dishes and eating utensils on tables and generally create a disturbance.

Dunn emphasized "I know who these people are. I know what clubs they belong to and just exactly who the troublemakers are."

The litter problem has plagued the wing since its opening.

Students were given a four-week trial period before the Christmas vacation to solve the litter problem or face a five cent per food item increase in prices to hire personnel to keep the wing clean.

When classes resumed December 28, improvement had apparently been sufficiently marked to end the price hike threat. The improvement lasted, after the trial period, approximately one week.

Dunn said he had tried to treat the situation in a "nice way" by referring disciplinary action to Student Council and the Campus Police, but has now given up and must resort to the present course of action.

Thus, each hour, campus police officers who patrol Statler wing anyway will have the new duty of removing any litterers. This procedure will remain in effect until further notice, Dunn said.

Last Test Dates Near For Chance To Transfer In 1965

Dates, important for students planning to transfer to a four-year college in the Fall, 1965, semester, were announced today by Nancy Humiston, counselor.

Friday, January 22, is the last day to register for the American College Test to be given at San Jose State College. Saturday, January 23, is the last day to register for the National ACT.

The sites of this test will be announced at a later date.

The test date itself at San Jose State College is Saturday, January 30, and the National test date is Saturday, February 20. These are the last test dates for Fall, 1965 applicants.

San Jose State application dates are from February 15 through April 15, and all applicants must take the ACT to be considered for admission.

Students applying to San Francisco State College for Fall, 1965, semester must apply immediately, Mrs. Humiston advised, because admission will be on a first come, first served basis.

Students completing all the necessary requirements at the earliest date will have the best chance of being accepted, she said.

The deadline for filing an application to any University of California campus is March 1, 1965. According to a UC bulletin, only one in six apply to enroll in advanced standing. This means that early filing is advisable.

When ceilings are reached at one branch of the University of California or any of the State colleges, a qualified student is referred to another campus in the state that has room for more students.

Because of the vast number of applicants for the Spring, 1965, semester, especially to San Francisco and San Jose State college campuses, a large percentage of qualified students was denied admission. These students, if they re-apply, can expect priority.

Mrs. Humiston directed all students planning to transfer in the fall to consult their counselors for further information. Applications for the ACT may be obtained in S-142. Catalogues from other colleges are located in S-160, the counseling office.

College Denies Charter Request Of Chi Rho Delta

Attempts to establish and charter another social fraternity on campus ended in defeat for its organizers.

Chi Rho Delta, an organization composed of Campus Police which had intended to become a campus social fraternity, appealed to the Inter-Fraternity Council with petition and constitution in hopes of gaining membership in that organization.

After discussion and reading of the proposed constitution, the IFC voted in favor of accepting Chi Rho Delta as an IFC member, if the college administration would grant approval.

At this point, Hillsman informed several of the fraternity's organizers that according to policy, no more than six social fraternities may maintain campus charters during the same semester.

Hillsman stated that another reason Chi Rho Delta was denied a charter was that the faculty as a population is not large enough to allow for one of its members to spend as much time as is necessary to assume the responsibilities of a faculty adviser.

"However," Hillsman added, "had Chi Rho Delta appealed for charter as a professional fraternity, there is a great probability that the administration would have accepted the petition."

NEWLY ELECTED AS PRESIDENT TERRY CLONEY receives congratulations from opponent George Quick (left). Cloney headed the Student Representative Party ticket that almost swept the election as they captured all but three of the 20 offices that were filled. The total vote of 1297, although almost double last semester's total, was far from the anticipated record.

SRP Dominates Elections, Wins All But Three Offices

By Mike Barber

Terry Cloney was the pick of a large number of voters in his landslide victory over George Quick in the Associated Student election held here last week.

Cloney captured 796, Quick 444 of the 1240 votes cast for president. The total number who voted was 1297, an increase of about 50 per cent over last year's 840.

Mary Ann Ducommun, with 640 votes won the AS Vice Presidency over Mary Maurer's 503, as the incumbent Student Representative Party was swept triumphantly back to office for the spring semester. Official tallies were released by Election Commissioner Dan Christian.

The only unopposed candidate in the elections, Earl Braverman, SRP, received the most votes of any person on the ballot, 802, when he walked in to office as Associated Men Student President.

A tight contest developed for the office of Associated Women Student President between United Student Party's Nina Jacobs and SRP's Clara Silva. Miss Jacobs with 551 squeaked into a 21-vote victory over Miss Silva to capture the only USP administrative office.

Newcomer Tom Cloney, brother of President-elect Terry Cloney, was pleasantly surprised at getting 686 votes over USP's Robert Jones' 453 in the contest for the office of Sophomore Class President.

Defeated for the office of Freshman Class President was Michael Lowerey. SRP's Jim Soletti received 610 votes to Lowerey's 461.

The USP had only two of its members, Nancy Hughes and Magda Jacobs, elected to the SRP dominated council, thereby bringing the total number of USP winners to three.

Miss Hughes received 564 votes and Miss Jacobs 576 to earn their respective positions on the Sophomore and Freshman members of council.

The remaining members, all of SRP, and the number of votes received are as follows:

- Sophomores—Penny Brown, 712; Kathy Kidd, 650; Carol Anselmi, 657; Barbara Kontis, 599; Lori Klein, 565, and Jim Stull, 523.
- Freshmen—Carol Craig, 669; Bruce Fisher, 579; Karin Nordstrom, 536; Greg Moore, 531; Rosemarie Adams, 530, and Martha Romero, 528.
- Council also-ran sophomores and their votes were Tom Sanchez, 512; Ray Chezik, 505; Paul Elliot, 462; Roger Di Genova, 411; Frank Agnost, 407, and Bernie Bosch, 396. Freshmen: Bert Lurie, 480; Bob Lott, 426; Murray Bilby, 421; Francine Loskay, 419; Charles Pickens, 386, and Martin Murray, 383.

Cake Presentation Ceremony Starts St. Francis Day

A feature of the 14th Annual Operation St. Francis Day will be the presentation of a cake by the students of this year's hotel and restaurant department to St. Francis Managing Director Dan E. London.

One of the purposes for this celebration is to show student appreciation to London for making the annual event possible.

"The cake's decoration will probably be in the form of a yacht and yachting cap along with the number representing the program," according to Gary Packer. Packer will be the student in observation under Shirley Baker of the hotel's publicity department.

A fourth semester student, Packer will graduate this month and hopes to get a job in the publicity department of one of the city's large hotels.

The students from the journalism, engineering and photography departments who will also participate in Operation St. Francis are: Allen Heald, photography; Ted Terstegge and Dan Kennedy, engineering; Pat Dutter and Boyd Burnett, journalism.

Engineering students Terstegge and Kennedy will join Ben Pronneke, named last week to represent engineering. All will be under the supervision of L. S. Cronander, the hotel's building superintendent and chief engineer.

Sharing the speaking honors will be London, Jean Molinari, student managing director in observation and Dr. Louis G. Conlan, college president.

Approaching Final Exams Are Moment Of Truth To Students

AT THIS late date in the semester many students are beginning to notice that for some reason or other everything on campus seems less crowded. The reservoir hasn't been full in months. The library and cafeteria congestion has decreased considerably and the crowded classrooms are now dotted with empty seats.

The reason for this new surplus of space is the high number of dropouts at the college. Last week was the deadline for taking a leave of absence and more than 1000 of the original 9660 who enrolled in September have bailed out.

Many of these students left because of a bad start and are returning next semester. Many more have left to get jobs. There will also be a few hundred who didn't bother to take a leave of absence and just stopped coming to the campus. These students aren't planning to return so the row of automatic "Fs" on their transcripts doesn't bother them.

To all or most of the ex-students, the big question that ended it all was which is worth more; the college diploma or a job? This question has probably entered the mind of every two-year college student at one time or another.

Some students can and do handle both, but most must choose between the two.

Each choice has its advantages, but the advantages of the jobs are more immediate. The job brings money and a degree of status that accompanies it. The job also brings immediate security since the college student must stay on his toes in order to remain in classes. The job is also easier. More students quit school to go to work than quit work to go to school.

The advantages of the college education are the same as those of the job but far more lasting. Where the job brings immediate money, the degree represents earning power. Where the job provides the temporary status of a new car or extra money, the education provides permanent status that can't be removed or depreciated. A 20-year-old with a new car attains a degree of status, but a 30- or 40-year-old without any college background is at a real disadvantage.

As far as security is concerned, the job is secure for as long as the person can hold it. However, the worker without the college education is in worse shape than the student. The dropout will be the first one on the "cut" list, where the college-educated person enjoys far more real security. Should the student be "cut," his ability to find another job is more than double that of the dropout.

The job that starts by being "easier" than the college work doesn't stay that way very long. After the student's four or five years of college, he will eventually enjoy the less demanding job with better pay while the dropout must rely on seniority for any advantages that may come his way.

Granted that while there are exceptions in each category, the rule still stands. The job can't match the degree in real value. With this in mind the remaining students now approach examinations.

Three weeks of intense study now can help make up for months of inferior work. Just being at this college one semester isn't enough. Students should be thinking ahead to their futures either in their profession or at another college.

Midterm grades are like halftime scores. They don't win the game. The finals are what count. The work needed to accomplish what each student needs in his finals is hard but WORTH it.

Sloppy Students Are Causing Big Statler Wing Crackdown

IT APPEARS THAT the proposed disciplinary price hike in the Statler wing has been abandoned because of the presence of the campus police. Although the prices were not increased, the problem is still very much in evidence.

Granted that there are no longer bonfires on the tables and food sailing in the air, but there is still a mess. The campus police have done their usual job of containing the students as far as conduct is concerned, but cafeteria manager John Dunn has a lot to say about the conditions in the new addition.

Dunn is perfectly justified in his protests. The wing resembles a high school cafeteria. The wing was built so the students could have a quiet place for a cup of coffee, study or just to gather. The wing was constructed with this purpose in mind and has a nice atmosphere and a picturesque view.

The Statler wing was opened without supervision. Then the campus police were called in to check on the wing every once in a while. Later to avoid the price boost on the food they were called in for full-time duty. Now they are required to police the tables every hour. This is in the supposed relaxed, unsupervised, students' wing.

Unruly groups in the addition are defeating the purpose of the whole project.

If the situation continues, the campus police will be required to use even stricter methods, the new addition will become worse than the cafeteria proper ever was, and the students will be right back where they started two years ago.

It seems that the present students don't realize what advantages they are enjoying. Maybe when they finally get taken away .....

Coed Earns Date With Singer

GERRI MALONEY, Theta Tau president, whose reward for volunteer fund raising for the Tom Dooley Foundation was a date with Victor recording star John Gary.

Gerri Maloney Wins Recognition For Work With Dooley Foundation

By Gregory Frazier

How many young girls, in their most secret and secluded moments, have dreamt of spending an enchanted evening with their favorite vocalist; someone like RCA Victor recording star John Gary, for example?

To be picked up by Mr. Gary's chauffeur-driven limousine and whisked away to the Fairmont Hotel, and there to be wined and dined by the handsome star?

And after dinner to be given a front row seat of honor at one of Mr. Gary's brilliant performances? And still later, to accompany the crooner to a party at Veneto's?

This dream recently became reality for Gerri Maloney, Theta Tau president, as a reward for her volunteer work with the Tom Dooley Foundation.

Miss Maloney began volunteer fund raising for the Dooley Foundation when she was in high school. For her efforts at that time, she received a "very warm and kind letter of appreciation." Miss Maloney then vowed that if the opportunity arose to do something further for the foundation, she "would do anything possible to help."

The principal function of the foundation is to provide medical aid and equipment, Miss Maloney commented.

This was all the incentive she needed to sell fund raising tickets to the Dooley Foundation's Benefit, An Evening With John Gary, at the Masonic Auditorium.

"I did what any determined girl would do for something she believed in so strongly," Miss Maloney said. "I sold tickets to friends, nursing students, sorority and fraternity members and I managed to slap posters up in any spot available.

"Because I had sold the most tickets, I was to be John Gary's date for the evening.

"Needless to say, I was quite thrilled, a little afraid, and I felt most undeserving."

The evening of the benefit, Miss Maloney was picked up by a chauffeur-driven limousine and taken to the Camellia Room at the Fairmont Hotel where she met Mr. Gary for dinner.

"Mr. Gary was delighted to know that his performance was a complete sell-out," Miss Maloney recalls, "but at the same time, I knew that he couldn't become over-confident as he remembered the time when he was just an unknown freshman in show business.

"His modesty, most honest and sincere, was surprisingly unique and somewhat unexpected."

Miss Maloney learned that in addition to Gary's vocal talent, he is also a talented sculptor, a champion archer, and holds two world's records for underwater endurance with an aqualung.

He once owned his own diving company, did underwater shows, was in a project developing underwater TV cameras, and was involved in weightlessness tests underwater that simulated space conditions.

After dinner, which consisted of superb French cuisine, the couple proceeded to the benefit at the Masonic Auditorium.

"I was given a front row seat and enjoyed the show tremendously," Miss Maloney reminisced, and "Mr. Gary was in excellent voice and was received heartily by his fans."

After the show, Miss Maloney waited while Gary signed numerous autographs. The pair was joined by Gary's brother Dick and his wife, at which time they proceeded by limousine to Veneto's for a party with the Patrons of the Dooley Foundation.

Here, Miss Maloney was made to feel "very comfortable and quite honored.

"I was amazed to see for myself what a noted performer has to endure on the road to success," Miss Maloney remarked. "Mr. Gary was summoned right and left, introduced time and time again, stopped for pictures and autographs, all with a charming graciousness one would have to see to appreciate.

"I was most impressed with the fact that Mr. Gary was a complete gentleman in every sense of the word. His boyish, but extremely natural manner is his greatest charm, and I couldn't have asked for a more well-mannered and considerate host."

Miss Maloney came home in the same grand style with which her evening began, and was escorted to the door by Mr. Gary. Whether she granted the crooner a good night kiss will never be known, as Miss Maloney declined comment on this phase of her delightful evening.

Miss Maloney added that any person interested in the Dooley Foundation's work can obtain information at the foundation's offices at 442 Post street.

Modern Studio Helps Students In TV Training

To the general public, a television studio is an interesting place. Through the efforts of Henry Leff, the campus studio is just as interesting to his students.

A graduate of Brooklyn College and Cornell University, Leff instructs his students in the art of radio and television production, direction, performance and other phases of the industry.

The studio, an actual closed-circuit television station, is located in Arts Hall.

Armed with earphones, microphones, proper sets and lighting, cameras focused and the Channel 13 placard in place, the future technicians begin a closed-circuit broadcast.

From the adjoining, glass encased, control room, images in the cameras are transmitted onto small screens and analyzed. Directions to adjust a camera or microphone are made and it's air time.

The "On The Air" sign flashes on and the announcer looks to the camera with the shining red lights, for this one is "on" him.

The program begins. Hands wave at various times to indicate the camera to be used. Cameramen speak to the control room, listening for further directions. Fingers are held up to signify the amount of time that remains. Leff stands by, observing, perhaps holding a microphone.

At the conclusion of the program, the camera that televises the speaker's image shuts off and one which picks up the Channel 13 insignia is switched on.

The set is struck and props are returned to the storage room. The student-technicians leave, the electricity is turned off and the bright spotlights dim.

The courses included in the television and radio department are open to all. The many aspects of this industry are both highly interesting and rewarding.

Disregard For Parking Rules Penalizes Innocent Driver

There's a cynical old saying that goes — "The innocent suffer while the guilty go free." A City College coed recently was the innocent victim of a fellow student's disregard for the law.

One afternoon a potential "outlaw" attempting to find space in the student parking lot adjacent to Arts Hall, finally placed his compact car along the curb which surrounds the inside of the lot.

He was then illegally parked, since his car would interfere with exits from the stalls, but he decided to risk a ticket and left for classes.

Enter the innocent coed; her car was parked neatly in a stall with another four-wheeler on each side, in addition to the compact directly behind and only a few feet away. After glancing in the rear view mirror and to each side, she realized the boxed-in situation, started the motor and said a little prayer.

As the coed struggled to manipulate her way out, another student waited to secure the spot for his car. He, too, saw the predicament and, with a kind offer of help, took over the wheel while she hopped out to signal directions.

After considerable strain, the trapped automobile was freed, but the dismal result was an ugly dent on the fender, of a neighboring late-model car.

The anonymous victim dutifully left an apologetic note with her telephone number on the windshield of the injured car and left.

The illegally parked car was untouched and probably went unnoticed by campus police. Whereas, the innocent coed must pay approximately $40 in damages to the owner of the scarred auto.

Reservoir Lot Earns Its Name

During last week's cosmic treacheries, students who park cars in the reservoir lot found out why that lot is called the reservoir.

A group of automotive experts offered several tips to those students who have been having difficulties with their vehicles.

Although there are many tricks that can be employed in starting a wet automobile, all the experts agree that if the water level of the reservoir is parallel to or higher than the hood of a compact car it is unlikely that the compact will be started.

Cars that are forced up the wet ramp with engine at full throttle have a tendency to veer sideways, thereby impeding the smooth flow of traffic. Experts say, "keep drive range low."

The experts advise sports car enthusiasts that the cornering capabilities of their chariots are greatly reduced in inclement weather; even Super 90 Porsches have been known to lose stability on wet turns at speeds over 75.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

VARIETY is the spice of life. No one can deny this rather obvious fact. Beauticians in particular have taken heed, and as a result women's hairstyles (to put it mildly) are something else.

In the late fifties, the bouffant or the "bubble" as it was called came into vogue. Practically every woman, whether she had the face for it or not, sported the popular haircomb. "Little Women" were certainly pleased with the extra height the bubble provided.

BEEHIVE BUZZES IN

Just as the American male was beginning to get used to the "new look" —and what's more to like it—the beehive buzzed in. Fortunately for all concerned, this fad didn't last. How could it? (Even the hairstylists who created this "wild look" hardly had the patience to do more than one beehive a day.)

About the same time as the beehive "was in," the French twist made its debut. And in spite of the name the twist wasn't a dance, but a modified version of the "bee" look. (Incidentally, very few French women wore this coiffure for some unknown reason.)

BUBBLE BURSTS

Then all of a sudden, the bubble burst, the beehive lost its sting, and the twist unwound. Most women became tired (the truth of the matter is their hair couldn't take the constant abuse it received from teasing or backcombing) and the hairdressers decided it was high time for all women to "let their hair down."

And let their hair down they did. Now, it was the goal of all women to try to achieve the "Cleopatra Look." Actually, it became comical. Men thought they had suddenly moved to Egypt, and the gals were dreaming of romantic cruises down the Nile — and not with their husbands either!

LIZ TAYLOR LOOK

If nothing else, the "Liz Taylor" look paved the way for the more casual, natural appearances. The men seemed pleased — and the women adapted to the situation.

How long will the current trend last? It's hard to forecast. One might compare hairstyles with the stock market: Up one day, and down the next!

Real Estate, Merchants Next On Close-Up Series

The fields of real estate and merchandising contained in the business curriculum at the college are scheduled for presentation in the next City College Close-Up to be televised this Sunday, January 17, from 11 to 11:30 a.m. on Channel 5.

Producer Sylvia R. Leff emphasized that because of unforeseen pre-emptions, the series has been moved up two weeks and the final program will be presented on February 14.

Opportunities available in the business world concerning real estate and merchandising will be discussed by faculty members Hyman Berston and Elizabeth Helseth.

Famous Hiker To Give Lecture Here

Colin Fletcher, celebrated hiker, writer, traveler, lecturer and ex-captain of the British Royal Marines, will be guest speaker at tomorrow's Student-Faculty Lecture during College Hour in the theater.

Fletcher's lecture topic is The Lonesome Road, an account of his 1200 mile, border to border trek through the California wilderness from Mexico to Oregon.

During his six month hike, Fletcher passed through 600 miles of scorching desert, crossed Death Valley and climbed up into the High Sierra where he scaled the 14,246 foot White Mountain, a mere 250 feet short of the highest peak in the United States.

Fletcher won acclaim as the first man to force a land passage of the Grand Canyon. Before this feat was accomplished, the only passage was made by boat down the Colorado River.

Fletcher will illustrate his lecture with color slides.

PHYLLIS MELMON AS SHEN TE, and Ray Lynch as Yang Sun, are featured in the lead roles of The Goodwoman of Setzuan, which opens in the college theater tonight. The play is scheduled to run four nights. —Guardsman photo by James Powell.

Goodwoman Opens Tonight With Melmon In Lead Role

The Goodwoman of Setzuan, directed by drama instructor James Haran, opens at 8 p.m. tonight in the college theater with Phyllis Melmon and Ray Lynch in the lead roles and a cast of 23.

Miss Melmon portrays Shen Te, a reformed prostitute struggling to be good in a hungry and corrupt world. "Playwright Brecht felt," Miss Melmon commented, "that a person cannot stay good and survive."

For Shen Te to keep her Tobacco Shop (a gift handed down to her by the Gods) from going bankrupt, she transforms herself into her cousin Shui Ta, a shrewd businessman. This transformation is symbolized by a mask.

Portraying the three Gods are Mike Dobrinski, Nelson Cole and John La Zar. Through all their travels on Earth, they have failed to find only one good person, Shen Te.

"The three Gods find only greed and corruption and grow weary of searching," Dobrinski said of these roles, adding, "with each scene, they become more ragged and dirty, and their journey seems futile."

Costumes for this production are mainly black leotards with shirt-tops depicting the character roles. They were designed by Robert Johnston, designer for last year's presentation of Tartuffe and this semester's production of The Winslow Boy.

A major contribution to the production is the sets, designed by Paul Crowley, art department instructor. A wooden-framed structure stands in the middle of the stage, representing the Tobacco Shop and the factory.

In the background, painted sets appear to produce visualized statements. "There is no depth, no illusion in our sets," Crowley said. "The idea is to keep the audience's attention focused in the unfolding of the tale."

The Goodwoman of Setzuan was hailed as a great triumph in the Theater Film Festival in Paris. It has been produced in London with Peggy Ashcroft and in New York with Uta Hagens, portraying Shen Te.

It will run here through Saturday, and tickets may be obtained from instructor Walter Krumm or Haran for $1 or may be purchased at the door. Associated Students will not be charged admission.

Harvey Yee Winner Of Spring AS Card Design

Harvey Yee, a student in John O'Brien's advertising art class, is the winner of next semester's Associated Student card design contest.

The announcement of Yee's victory was made by Mary Maurer, AS card sales chairman.

Yee submitted three of the 21 designs from which the judges made their choice.

The winning design features the letter symbols of the college name in red running vertically on a white card. Interspersed between each letter are pictures of college activities.

Tryouts Begin Tomorrow For One-Act Play, No Exit

Tryouts for the one-act play, No Exit, by Jean Paul Sartre, will be held at 2:15 p.m. tomorrow and Friday in the college theater, according to Walter C. Krumm, drama instructor and director of the play.

The play will be presented during College Hour, February 18 and concerns four persons, locked in a room, who reveal their true identities to each other.

Copies of the play are available from Victor Valo in the college theater office. Students appearing in major roles in the presentation will receive one unit of college credit.

Student Council Supports COO Statler Wing Cleanup, Wears Garbage Can Badges

By Peter Dorn

Badges shaped like garbage cans and bearing the inscription, Keep The Statler Wing Clean, are the latest efforts of a cleanup committee, Arnie Kamrin, student public relations chairman, told last week's Student Council meeting.

Carol Jimenez is the chairman of the cleanup committee that was instituted under the auspices of Council of Organizations Chairman and Associated Student Vice President Wardene Oliver.

COO members and any other interested students will be asked to wear these badges as a reminder to the student body to keep their cafeteria clean.

Campus Police representative Mike Phalen announced that a law has been proposed to the police that will authorize them to make students clean up their places in the cafeteria before the student has a chance to vacate the place.

Phalen also told council that John Fussleman, deputy chief of the Campus Police, who was instrumental in recovering the car stolen from the daughter of San Francisco Police Chief Thomas Cahill, had received a personal letter of appreciation from Chief Cahill.

(Details of recovery of the car by campus policemen on voluntary duty Christmas Eve were reported exclusively by The Guardsman last week.)

The Student Council picture would not be complete without mention of the birthday cake that was presented to Gary Ettin, AS president, by Miss Oliver.

Bob Higginbotham, Athletic Awards commissioner, asked for and received a round of applause for Jim "Tiger" Wyatt, Student Council adviser, for his outstanding performance at the faculty-Alpha Phi Epsilon basketball game, a feature of Sports-night last week.

Council adjourned in a panic last Tuesday, members were under the impression that it was snowing and rushed outdoors — but as everybody knows, it was just good old orange-growing rain.

At midnight Friday, the Olympic Village at Squaw Valley will be invaded by a bus full of fun seekers bedecked in winter regalia and bent on having a grand time skiing, sledding, singing, schussing, ice skating and swimming, until sometime Sunday.

The invasion is, in fact, the Associated Student snow party — two days and two nights of snow and chaos.

The weekend program includes such other features as round trip transportation on a chartered, air-conditioned bus with uniformed driver, lodging at the Olympic Village Hotel in the heart of Squaw Valley, a Saturday night dance, a 10 per cent price reduction on all the ski lifts, lessons and free passes to the swimming pool and free ice skates.

The Snow Party will leave at 6 p.m. Friday from Bungalow 5, and will return to the same place Sunday night about 10 p.m.

Administration Okays Purchase Of Portable Speaker

Purchase of a portable speaker, usable indoors and out, and considered a "crying need" by student government adviser Jim Wyatt, received administration approval last week.

After Dr. Oscar Anderson, coordinator of educational management, approved the purchase of a new loudspeaker system, the Rally Committee started "looking for the best price. We plan to have it for the new semester," Wyatt said.

Prompted by the poor amplification December 31 of "talent up from Broadway" and "one of the speakers at the Associated Student officer candidate rally" in the words of Rally Commissioner Tom Duff and Wyatt, the Student Council decided to remedy the "feedback and static" and to improve the carrying distance of the sound through a better system.

In the past, "equipment has been rented at $25 an hour" for special occasions, Wyatt said.

Duff explained that the portable speaker could be lent to other clubs and organizations for use at games, special shows, rallies, or for whatever occasion arises in the future, that only one man is needed to operate it, thus saving time and making for an easier setup.

"It will last forever," he added, "and be something every major activity at the college really needs."

Cost of the loudspeaker, Duff said, will be between $150 and $200.

Mirror Of America Next Of Film Series

Mirror Of America, 1914-27, is the next scheduled presentation of the College Hour film series tomorrow in C-246, Madison Devlin, of the audio visual department, announced today.

The film will cover the conditions of the United States during World War I and the succeeding period.

Old film clips of Presidents Wilson, Harding and Coolidge, as well as American troops returning from France after the Armistice, will be featured.

Devlin urged the attendance of all interested students.

College Engineers Honor Mayo

William Mayo, first instructor in engineering here, founder of City College's Engineering Society and Dean of Instruction who retired last June, will be the guest of honor at the society's scholarship dinner Saturday night, Oddvar Wikstad, club member, announced today.

"Faculty members have been asking if Dean Mayo would be at the dinner, and they can be reassured he will and he will also speak," Wikstad said.

Among other accomplishments, Mayo was the college's first engineering department chairman and has been "very active as liaison official between the state colleges and universities and two-year colleges."

The dinner, which is a first for the engineer's club as a scholarship fund-raising activity, will be at Rod's Frontier Restaurant.

Tickets are going for $3.25 at the Silver Pole.

"All students and faculty are invited to buy tickets," Wikstad emphasized. The scholarship named in Dean Mayo's honor is to receive all profits over the cost of the dinner.

Wallace Wells, instructor in engineering here, will present a half-hour discussion with slides, descriptive of a recent trip through Alaska.

Present also, Wikstad added, will be graduates from more than ten past classes who were active in the society. Invitations have been sent to them and science department faculty, he said.

An "informal reunion" is another of the main purposes of the dinner.

"This will be a buffet dinner, too, he added, "so they can eat all they want."

WILLIAM MAYO, who will be guest of honor at the Engineering Society's dinner.

Cagers Crush Owls, 73-55, In League Opener

By Georgs Ohlson

It took the Foothill Owls seven minutes to light up their side of the scoreboard last Tuesday night as the Rams handed them a beating to the tune of 73-55 in the Golden Gate Conference league opener on the loser's home court.

The Rams from San Francisco took advantage of a cold start on the part of the Owls and promptly jumped off to a 10-0 lead before the Peninsulans could net their first fielder with seven full minutes already lost to the clock.

The Owls' star guard, Mike Smith, put through a 20-foot jumper to start the scoring for ill-fated Foothill.

With 14 minutes gone in the first of two 20-minute running halves, the invaders from City College held a very commanding lead of 25-5.

Playing without the services of center Charlie Parks, the Rams showed good bench strength. Parks is out of action temporarily with an ankle injury.

Taking over for Parks at the post position was Ed Wilson, a first year man. Wilson hit the boards and tanked 16 points for the night. Also very tough on defense, Wilson did an admirable job of filling Parks' shoes.

The Ram front three of Mike Cahill, Wilson and Henry King got more than their share of rebounds as the big fellows crashed the boards hard all night. Their clutch rebounding proved to be the main cog in the Ram wheel of success. All are over 6-8 in height.

Led by play-maker guard Rich Henderson, the Ram hoopsters left the court at half-time with a 42-21 lead.

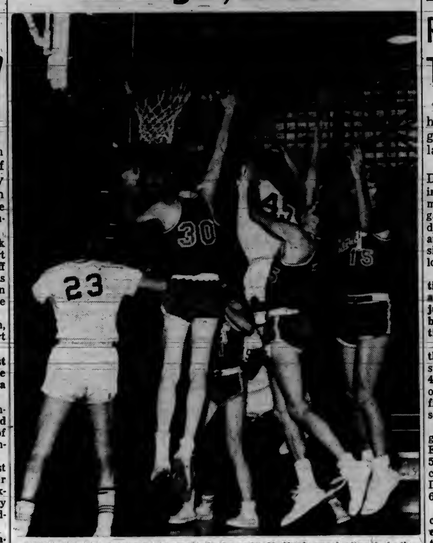
The second half wasn't much different from the first, in that the Owls trailed all the way. At one point, Wilson hit a jump shot to give the Rams their biggest point spread of the game at 54-28, a 26-point lead.

The closest the Owls ever got to the rampant Rams was late in the first half when they pulled to within 14 points. But it was only a matter of two minutes before they were down by 21 points.

The leading scorer for Foothill is a forward named Dick Treglown, however the big sag was put on Treglown, and he ended up with zero points for the night.

Two bright lights in an otherwise dark night for the Foothillers were Rick Carpenter and Smith who swished 13 and 14 points respectively.

City College had two men in double figures, Cahill with 13, and Wilson with 18, high for the game.



Guards Willie Jones and Henderson potted nine points apiece.

Substitutes played most of the last half for the winners. The men who back the starters came in for mopping up operations and proved they too can hold their own on the hardwood.

The Owls managed to gain only one field goal on the Rams in the second half. They trailed at the half by 21 and by 18 at the end of the game.

The Rams will meet Foothill again later this season. The next game with the Owls will be played on February 5 here.

Sportsnight Cage Action Declares Peacocks Champs

By Bruce Klein

The Peacocks of the Independent League are intramural basketball champions by virtue of their defeat of the Filipino Club, 57-48, in last Wednesday's Associated Men Student Semiannual Sportsnight held in the men's gymnasium.

The half-time score was 35-22 in favor of the Peacocks. The "birds" were not behind in the entire game and found themselves ahead by 11 points most of the contest.

As the game progressed into the second half, the Filipino Club, led by Bernie Piper, closed the gap to 7 points, at 51-44.

High men for the "champs" were Bob Roehl with 20 and Frank with 13. Piper and Minnich were high for the losers with 20 and 10 respectively.

Referees for the game were Rich Henderson and Charlie Parks.

In the second basketball game of the evening, Terry "The Killer" Kilpatrick led his highly talented faculty team to a stunning 44-39 defeat at the hands of Alpha Phi Epsilon.

As Kilpatrick was driving A Phi E crazy with his spectacular dribbling, fakes and "fancy Dan" plays, he also scored 16 points. Teammate Gerry Mullin scored 12 points.

Peterson had 21 and Brooks had 11 respectively to pace the victors.

At the end of the championship game, AMS President Ray Chezik, presented the Most Valuable Player awards to the top men in each league.

The Independent League MVP was won by Roehl, the Fraternity League MVP by John Wallace and the Club League MVP by Piper.

The MVP for each week in each league was also present that night.

Winners in the Independent League were Roehl, Lanier, Helms, Attabit, Wise, Rego, Bealum, Lawless, Kearns, Harris, Smith, Frank, Weaver, Stubblefield, Wood, Coleman and Sinclair.

The winners in the Fraternity League were Wallace, Brooks and Peterson. Recipients in the Club League were Piper, Palmini, Cummins, Minnich and Chezik.

AMS pin winners were John Vanderburgh, Bob Higginbotham, Paul Coke, Don Bone, Ray Chezik, Magda Jacobs, Frank Bobbadilla and sponsor Kenneth Meitz.

There were also seven boxing matches held at the sportsnight.

Mike Jay defeated Roger Blaetler, Barry Silverman won a split decision over Presco Tabios, Tim Higgins won over Al Young, Paul Fatooh defeated Philip Alberto, Jerry O'Connor and Jordan Rackerby fought to a draw, Al Tilds won by TKO over Eric Gustafson and John Rodelo won his fight by TKO over Joe Nichols.

The winners and losers of the bouts were awarded cups. Referees were Kilpatrick and Tom Parretto.

Spring Sports To Begin Tryouts

Spring sports of tennis, track, baseball, swimming and golf will begin their practice sessions between now and the start of the next semester. The swimming and golf coaches have called for meetings this week.

Grover Klemmer asked all golfers interested in being on the golf team next semester, to meet with him before Friday. The season will start February 11 with an intrasquad match. In addition to league matches in the Golden Gate Conference, there will be practice matches and special tournaments.

Swimming team coach Roy Burkhead scheduled the team's first workout at 2:30 p.m. today at McLaren Pool. He asked students to bring suit and towel and urged experienced swimmers with an equivalent time of third place or better in city finals to try out for the team.

Athletic Origins

By Stamus Cocoles

College sports fans wonder which prep schools continually provide the Rams with the most athletes. With the football team of 1964, for example, 44 out of 46 players have come from the ten San Francisco high schools.

Mission High leads the pack having provided eight football players on the 1964 team. Lincoln, Balboa, and Sacred Heart had six football players each representing them. Five players were from Washington, four each from Saint Ignatius and Polytechnic, three from Galileo, and only one each from Lowell and Riordan.

For this year's football squad, it can be said that the players are fairly equally spread among the San Francisco high schools, except for possibly Lowell which only had one team member representing that school this year.

Dutch Elston, head football coach, said that the number of athletes each San Francisco prep school provides varies from year to year, but it balances out for the most part in the long run.

A possible reason why Mission High provided the Rams with the most players this year is the fact that Dutch Elston coached at Mission before he came to City College in 1962.

However, another reason could be that the Mission athletes are less apt to take advantage of their scholarships than many of the other high school athletes.

The usual lack of players from Lowell may be due to the fact that students from Lowell avail themselves of four-year college scholarships. Sacred Heart with six football players is surprising because one would think that one of the many Catholic Colleges would lure them because of their athletic abilities.

Duggan Sparks Hoopsters As Rams Storm From Behind To Surprise Jaguars, 75-70

Coming off a 60-60 tie game of regulation play, the Ram cagers hit the net for fifteen points in a five minute overtime period to give them a 75-70 victory over the San Jose City College Jaguars last Friday evening in the City College of San Francisco gym.

Following the Ram victory, Coach Sid Phelan credited Jim Duggan, who came off the bench late in the first half, with steadying the team and giving them the momentum they needed. Before Duggan came in, the Rams were having difficulty in setting up their plays; and the Jaguars were having possession of the ball too much, and too long.

San Francisco and San Jose were tied three times in the first half, then as the five minute mark, the Jaguars jumped out in front with seven quick baskets to give them a 38-27 halftime lead.

On the opening of the second half, the Ram hoopsters turned in six straight points to close the gap at 40-35. Moments later the Jags went on a hot streak and pulled out in front of the City College cagers by a score of 56-49.

At this point, with 6:25 left in the game, Mike Cahill, Henry King and Ed Wilson caught the Jaguars at a 58-58 tie with 2:31 remaining on the clock. A minute later, however, Clyde Dawson put the Jaguars out in front 60-58 with a 15-foot jump shot.

With 35 seconds frozen on the clock, Wilson and Matulich were forced into a jump-ball situation. Wilson tipped the ball to King, and then the veteran forward heaved the ball down court to Rich Henderson who plucked it into the net for the 60-60 tie.

In the five minute overtime period, within 92 seconds, Cahill put the Rams out in front for good with two goals.

Phelan's Cagers Clash With Chabot Gladiators Friday

City College's defending champion Ram cagers will vie against the lowly but "improved" Chabot Gladiator five at 8 p.m. Friday in the men's gymnasium.

Chabot served as the league's door mat last year with a 2-12 record, good for dead last, although faring better elsewhere to accumulate an overall 12-17 record.

This isn't to say that the Gladiators will be an easy pushover for the Ram five, however. They could very well lull a team into a false sense of security and come up with an upset.

Coach John Wagoner's squad, with its better than 70 point a game average, has rarely been completely out of a game this year and has lost five by eight points or less.

Surprisingly enough, Chabot led until late in the game in all five close losing efforts.

Two of Chabot's biggest "weaknesses" have been inability to sweep the defensive boards and put together a solid 40-minute effort.

"Mechanically, we're doing things well," Coach Wagoner explained.

Guards Bill Windhigler, Hal Dohling and forward Pete Ness were singled out as primary men in the Chabot attack.

Guard Dohling is said to have all the talent but has had much trouble in regards to team play although he is now improving.

RAMBLINGS

Sports '64—That Was The Year That Was

By Mike Smith

LAST WEEK in this space we recalled many of last year's memorable moments of the Ram sports world. Here are more of those 1964 college athletic highlights.

Perhaps the most frustrated team of the 1964 season was the City College golf team. The golfers won only one match and tied one which gave them a seventh place finish. But the linkers had a great exhibition season; they won nearly all their matches. It was that way all through 1964; they would win the practice matches and lose the league matches.

The Ram cross country team had a very dismal season. But they did come up with one surprise. Prior to the Golden Gate Conference meet, coach Lou Vasquez said that based on their record, (the harriers won only one meet), the Rams would finish seventh, but he went on to say that it was possible for them to finish fourth or fifth. The Ram harriers placed third.

A team that started with rookies but finished on top was coach Roy Diederichsen's tennis squad.

For the third year running, the Ram netters captured the Golden Gate Conference title. At the beginning of the year, Vince Chinn was the team's only veteran. All the rest, Fred Suessman, Ben Levy, Lou Engelstein, Al Brambila and Mike Price were rookies.

The team tagged as "the one to beat" was the Foothill College Owls, and that Los Altos team had two of the finest players in the state in the persons of Rodney Kop and Dave MacGowan.

Both teams, the Rams and the Owls, won all their regular season games until the last conference match when they met each other for the first time in 1964. This match was for the league title.

In the first two single matches, Kop and MacGowan defeated Chinn and Levy. Then Price, substituting for the injured Brambila, upset his opponent, Jerry Wisnia. Coach Diederichsen called this "the key victory of the day" because he was confident that Suessman and Engelstein would win (which they did), but he was not sure of Price.

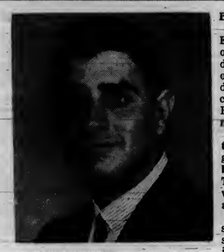
Kop and MacGowan teamed up for the doubles match and matched the first doubles victory at that point the score was tied, 3-3, with one doubles match left. Suessman and Levy defeated Barry Rapazo and Larry Rogers, for the match and the league championship.

The Ram tennis team went on to establish itself as the second best team in the Northern California Tennis Championships and the third top team in the State Championships.

Possibly the most surprising highlight of the 1964 tennis season, was Suessman's upset over Foothill star MacGowan. Suessman did not stop there but went on to establish himself as the fourth best in the state.

Participating in a very little publicized sport, fencing, Ben Bartholomew won the first-place spot in the individual saber competition of the Western Inter-Collegiate Fencing Conference.

In a Recreation Association sports day at Cabrillo College, April 4, Pam Maul, competing against bowlers from eight colleges, won first place in women's bowling with a score of 232. This same day, the RA Ram volleyball team snatched first place.



Jan Uribe won first place in the men's novice class in water skiing competition at the Western States and Boat Club water-ski contest held in Vallejo last summer.

The Campus Police pistol team, competing against 45 teams, won three first places and two second place awards at the State California Pistol Championships last April. Members of that team were James Dean, Dave Kannisto, Sherwood Zammit, Jim Juarez, Bob Nasise, Henry Wesch, John Conlon, Ray Chezik and coaches Larry Lawson and Tim Foley.

In 1964, ex-Ram basketball star Cleo Cofield 1958-60) and track-football star Alex Darnes (1961-62) were chosen as members of the City College of San Francisco Sports Hall of Fame.

That was the year that was.

Ettin Predicts A Successful Semester For Cloney

OUTGOING PRESIDENT Gary Ettin wished the best of luck to his replacement and commented that Terry Cloney would do a great job as Associated Student President.

By Mike Barber

Associated Student President Gary Ettin good-naturedly passed the gavel on to newly-elected Associated Student President Terry Cloney at the oath-taking ceremony held last Tuesday in Smith Hall, signifying the change in leadership of the Student Representative Party dominated administrations.

Ettin predicted in a statement to the press that "Terry will do a real good job next semester. There should be an effective Student Council. Those who have been re-elected as well as the new members will bring a lot of spirit into council."

Praising his administration, Ettin said it was "a real working force in student government" and noted that it "sold the most AS cards." He was particularly appreciative of the efforts of the Council of Organizations and its chairman, Wardene Oliver, who "worked hard with us."

Cloney, who will preside over next semester's first council meeting February 10, has begun his official duties with the appointment of Miss Oliver to the cabinet position of State Information Chairman.

High on the list of council projects will be the Student Survival Project. Cloney promised. "I might get different members of council to arrange occupational guidance meetings for troubled students," he said.

Under the same program, which has been officially adopted on a statewide level to decrease the number of college dropouts, Cloney plans to organize a student tutoring center which would supplement or replace the present campus service offered by the honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, which, he said, "sort of fell through."

Cloney plans to give council members more official responsibilities to combat the problem of those "who just sit around and vote." A finance council will be one of the first committees to be formed.

Cloney added that next semester "seems like a semester in which we'll do many service projects." Ten cigarette wells, which were promised during the campaign to help curb the litter problem that abounds about the entrances to campus buildings, were named as an example.

George Quick, the defeated United Student Party presidential candidate in the election, said that his party will remain organized throughout the semester. "We'll be the loyal opposition," he said.

Quick warned the SRP, "We now serve public notice that if they make a mistake, we'll call it." As for next semester's elections he added, "We'll try harder."

INCOMING PRESIDENT Terry Cloney will head the SRP-dominated student government next semester. Cloney plans to concentrate on lowering the number of college dropouts.

AWS Cite Service, Scholarship, Sports At Awards Dinner

Awards for outstanding service, scholarship and athletic performance were presented to coeds at the Women's Awards and Recognition Night, last week.

The Associated Women Students presented an Outstanding Service award to Martha Romero and the Dougherty Trophy was given to Theta Tau.

Fran Richardson received the Outstanding Athlete award.

Barbara Kontis, AWS president, stepped down from her position when she presented the traditional gavel to newly-elected Nina Jacobs, and was then installed as the Recreation Association's new president.

Miss Jacobs has asked Clara Silva, former AWS vice-president, to continue at her post; however, her acceptance has not yet been verified.

The new leader is presently conferring with the AWS adviser, Dean Mary Golding, "to discuss plans for the new semester's activities." Among the forthcoming events will be the semiannual fashion show which will feature the naming of a "best-dressed coed."

The show is scheduled in April and Liebes has promised to provide the fashions to be modeled.

Sunday, February 7, is the date for the traditional coke-tail party, given for the purpose of welcoming and introducing incoming freshmen to City College.

An additional feature of the awards party was the installation of Gerri Maloney in the position of Inter-Sorority Council President.

For her appreciation of help and guidance during the past semester, Miss Kontis presented Dean Golding with a gift.

Five Students Win Lesser, Scottish Rite Scholarships

Winners of the Lucille Lesser and the California Scottish Rite Foundation Scholarships were announced today by Dean Mary Golding.

The $1500 Lucille Lesser Scholarship is awarded twice annually to men students only. This semester's winner is freshman Merritt Barnes.

Barnes, a George Washington High School graduate majoring in history, hopes to receive a baseball scholarship also and transfer to Stanford University.

There are four winners of the California Scottish Rite Foundation Scholarship.

John Kipping, a graduate of Lick Wilmerding High School, is a major in wild life conservation and plans to transfer to Humboldt State College in Northern California. Kipping said he wants to work as a naturalist in national parks.

Lowell High School graduate Luba Susoev, majoring in languages, plans to transfer to San Francisco State College and become a teacher of Russian or an interpreter.

Kathleen O'Meara, an Abraham Lincoln High School graduate majoring in mathematics, plans to transfer to University of California.

Lisa Friend, also a Lincoln graduate, became a life member of the California Scholarship Federation in high school. Miss Friend is a mathematics major planning to transfer to the University of California.

Dedication Set For Statler Wing

Official dedication of the Statler wing will take place March 1 with ceremonies beginning at 5 p.m.

Detailed plans have not as yet been completed, but a tentative list of speakers was released today from the office of Louis F. Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education.

Among the speakers will be Harold Spears, San Francisco superintendent of public schools; Louis G. Conlan, president of the college; Willard Abel, president of the American Hotel and Motel Association; Ward Arbury, chairman of the board of the Statler Foundation, and Mrs. Alice Statler.

A hotel and restaurant library located in the Statler wing will be dedicated at the same time.

A banquet dinner, to be held in both the Statler wing and the main room of the cafeteria, will be served following the ceremonies.

Alumni and many who have contributed to the wing as well as members of the city's various hotel and restaurant organizations will attend the ceremonies.

Approximately 500 persons are expected.

McCloud Offers Registration Tips

Walter McCloud, counseling chairman, today offered some last minute advice to students re-registering for the Spring semester.

- Any student who failed to keep his programming appointment or for any other reason has not as yet seen his counselor should do so immediately. Students will not be called a second time.
- Registration begins at 8 a.m. Monday and Tuesday, February 8 and 9. Registration numbers are in the upper left hand corner of the yellow program sheet. Students should check the bulletin boards for time schedules.
- Students will be admitted only at the time scheduled for them, and they must have a pen with them.
- All students are advised to cooperate with personnel to insure a smooth and speedy registration. Classes begin February 10.

Drama Program Offers Students Six Units Via TV

Early rising San Francisco residents may earn up to six units of City College credit in two television courses to be offered during the spring semester by CBS-TV.

The first program, Sunrise Semester, is a three unit course in dramatic literature, English 3A-80. Lionel Casson, professor of classics at New York University, will teach the course. The subject will be The Tragic Dramas of Greece and Rome.

The program begins February 3, ends May 15, and will be aired at 6:30 a.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

The second program, City College Presents, is a three unit course in Introduction to Theater, Drama 4-80. James Haran, English and drama instructor here at the college, will teach the course.

This program begins February 21, ends May 30, and will be aired at 11 a.m. each Sunday.

Requirements for both of these courses will include two midterm examinations and a final examination taken at the college. To apply for admission to either of these courses, interested residents should send their name, address and telephone number to City College of San Francisco, Box TV, 50 Phelan Avenue, San Francisco, 94112.

McElligott Tops In Police Exam

By George Nelson

Peter McElligott, English major here and former Marine, was one of the 780 applicants to take the San Francisco Police Department examination.

McElligott received the highest test score by correctly answering 927 of the 1000 exam questions.

It was last summer that McElligott decided to become a police officer. "I've always been interested in law," McElligott said.

With this in mind, he began taking the necessary steps. Two weeks after filing the application he took the exam with 779 other potential police officers. Next came the physical agility test, weight lifting, pull-ups and sprint. No scores are given for this test; one either passes it or flunks it. McElligott passed it.

The medical exam followed shortly after the agility test and McElligott was inspected by a battery of doctors. By this time the 780 applicants had dwindled down to 40.

Next came the personnel interview conducted by three police captains. "It was tough, but I was approved," said McElligott arrestingly.

Now there were only two more things to get out of the way—the background investigation and the second medical exam. He passed the background investigation but flunked the second medical.

But flunking the final phase of the police recruitment program didn't dampen McElligott's interests in law. Does anybody know where the Mafia headquarters are?

Vicki Brown Earns Council Award For Service To College

The student Outstanding Service award was given to Vicki Brown at the council awards dinner last Tuesday night.

Edna Pope and William Richardson were tied for the faculty Outstanding Service award, so each instructor was given a plaque in appreciation for assistance in Associated Student affairs.

Miss Brown, who is a sophomore majoring in the medical assisting course, was the Sophomore Class Secretary this semester.

Miss Brown supplied most of the secretarial labor for the Proposition B campaign this semester, in addition to her assistance in other student activities. She will be the Associated Student Corresponding Secretary next semester.

Richardson, counselor and Alpha Gamma Sigma sponsor, was awarded a plaque for the contribution of his time and effort in assisting the AS officers and at faculty functions, where he supplied entertainment in the form of piano virtuosos and played Santa Claus for the faculty's children this year.

Miss Pope, the Recreation Association sponsor, who devoted much of her own time in judging various contests throughout the semester and in assisting the AS officers and activities co-ordinators, received the other Outstanding Service Plaque.

Dan Christian, Election Commissioner, received a special award in addition to his council pin for his efforts in the recent election campaigns, where twice as many students voted this semester as compared to the last election.

Terry Cloney and Mary Ann Ducommun, the novice Associated Student President and Vice President, were sworn into office at the end of the council dinner.

College TV Flick Talks Shop About Business Here

A survey of the business curriculum at the college focusing on the fields of secretarial, accounting and insurance, comprises the next program of City College Close-Up scheduled to be presented from 11-11:30 a.m. Sunday on Channel 5.

Producer Sylvia R. Leff disclosed that James McConnell, Harry Frustuck and Henry DeJongh will serve as faculty hosts by discussing and explaining these business courses and the career opportunities they provide.

Stephanie Scrao, secretarial major at the college, will demonstrate the type of practical experience to be obtained in the secretarial curriculum.

Working graduates in the business, Mrs. Leff indicated, will discuss the training benefits they received at the college as well as their current occupations with program host Louis F. Batmale.

Daly City Police Chief Roland Petrocchi will join with faculty members Lawrence Lawson, Timothy Foley, John Walsh and James Brackett to discuss the criminology curriculum January 31.

On February 7 and 14, the series tells how students meet requirements toward a bachelor's degree.

From Crises To 'Funnies'—The G Was There

By Hugh Haworth

Another semester is drawing to a fast close and The Guardsman is looking for the week-and-a-half breather between semesters after keeping a hectic pace covering the many campus news-making activities of the students and faculty.

As usual though, certain organizations and individuals made it easier by providing "beats" for the "Big G" reporters of regular newsworthy happenings.

One organization, student government for instance, appeared steadily before the college as it worked out conferences, proposed events, campus problems and student spirit.

Snags like relaxed council decorum and car-parade-support apathy were noticed as much as credits for increased attendance at rallies around the Ram and at games, along with the effective push for more student involvement in campus activities.

The Guardsman watched as the tempo of the campus government picked up with the elections for spring Associated Student officers. In itself, the campaigns waged by each party brought an increase over past semesters in student awareness of campus activities.

Besides these local elections, the national, state and city politics were oriented on the "Big G" pages. Proposition B gained overwhelming support from students and faculty with the constant plugs. And the national hopefuls even got coverage on their campaigns, antics and smears.

Coming events always caught a large part of the readers' attention like ISC teas, dances, world renowned pianist, string quartets, mandolin club concert, debates, films, plays, lectures and shows. Informing the students about the College Hour activities and highlights was also constantly in the forefront of Guardsman duties to the whole student body.

Information of another type was the warning to the students: "Get parking permit, fill out free-hour form, don't miss vacation job opportunity, drop classes now — or pay later!"

Humor was there too — in funnies like the domestic problems at the home of a student who lost his wedding ring, or Columbus' mistake of half-a-grand years ago which noticeably became a holiday for all the discovered and misnamed Indians and The Guardsman staff.

Pearl Baby, the fish of gourami type, and a knowledge-seeking skunk made it big in black and white to the students' pleasure. By the words of the "G" reporters, this noble institute has not staved off touching forays by our lower animal-kingdom brothers.

Successes from the college's revered halls have come back to their Alma Mater on these pages. A dean of engineering, an acting college president, ivy-league-college researcher, football and soccer champions and a financial wizard, all have given the grads-to-be a glimpse of the future.

Individually, the students have been recognized here too, such as the coed breakthrough in the hotel and restaurant department to gain positions in the men-dominated fields of chefs and caterers. The winners of awards and scholarships also gained their recognition here.

Eating habits were served in one issue. Cream-of-wheat and scrambled eggs have been the students' choice at the counter as the article goes.

Rarities like an electronic concert here and a cycler representing a dying breed of students who pedal to the campus were noticed quickly for the students' amazement.

And for the Variety readers, The "G" kept running accounts of the college drama performances and stimulating visits by artists, some of them not only world renowned, but from all over the world.

Without fail the most consistent item in The Guardsman has been sports! City College teams have been followed faithfully up and down California, up and down the league standings, and in and out of prison (for games only, that is).

In all, The Guardsman presented this semester the clear glass of objectivity, the refreshing drink of information, the opinion — with a foam of humor all reporters love to give.

Students Needed To Fill Void In Stands And College Spirit

FOR THE third consecutive year the City College of San Francisco basketball team is in the midst of a tight race for the Golden Gate Conference title. With four games completed, the Rams are leading the conference with a 3-1 record.

This achievement is no surprise, when the ability and hard work of coach Sid Phelan and his cagers is taken into consideration.

The question brought to mind is that of empty seats at Ram contests. For sports fans, the quality of the basketball played is attested to by the success of the Ram alumni. The games are fast-paced and very close — sometimes too close.

For students who aren't sports fans, the games are still entertaining. Competent announcers keep the audience informed throughout the contest, and at halftime entertainment is provided by the Ram straw-hat band (no relation to Cal's).

For the femme fatale, what better way to start a Friday evening than to watch an exciting basketball game. The games are usually over by 9:30 p.m. which leaves plenty of time for other activities.

In addition to the entertainment the games provide, they should also be considered as building college spirit. Many persons judge the spirit of a college by the support it gives its team. These games are an ideal opportunity for students to develop a real sense of belonging to the City College student body. The team, like the student body, is composed of players from high schools throughout the city and is representing this college. The team has done its job successfully; now it is the student body's turn.

Of the 10 remaining contests, coach Phelan rates no less than six as crucials. On Page 4 the remaining basketball schedule is published. For your own enjoyment and to back up the good job the basketball team is doing, attend an upcoming game.

Well, There Goes Another One

ALL THINGS — good or otherwise — must come to an end. So it is with the Fall 1964 semester. Tomorrow is the last day of classes, although finals will run through January 29.

This has been a rewarding semester for students as well as for the college itself. In the November election Proposition B provided funds for the expansion and, at last, the completion of the college.

Out of this bond issue will come money for new buildings as well as the modernization of the old ones. Landscaping and more parking area should also appear, thanks to the bill.

The Student Council got into the act by helping push Proposition B at a Union Square rally. The student leaders took their usual jaunt south, this year to Santa Maria, for the State Conference and spent the time at home busily doing what council usually does, only accompanied by giggles.

The Campus Police received walkie-talkies and put them to good use patroling the parking lots. They deserve a lot of credit for the fine job they did in decreasing the number of cars stolen from the college's parking lots. The "boys in blue" should also receive accolades for their patience while baby-sitting in the (ugh) Statler wing.

Students can rest assured they will hear more about that campus spot next semester.

New student government adviser Jim Wyatt proved a pleasant addition, and his Rally Committee did a bang-up job producing good, spirited rallies.

In other activities the International Relations Club Fair was a success as were the drama productions and the rejuvenated Forensics society. The H&R and horticulture departments won more honors as did this illustrious publication.

The sports scene found the football team improved, the cross-country team also-rans, and the soccer team State Champions.

Although a number of graduating students won't be around to see it next semester, Terry Cloney and company will move in to Bungalow 6 and things will roll on as usual.

The Sounds Of Music

Ears Spared Distortion With New Audio System

By James Rauh

It was only a matter of time until those who organize and put on the college's rallies realized that there was a rather serious defect in the microphone and amplification equipment they used.

Even since the Spring '64 semester, the talent at the rallies has been getting better and better and the microphone system has been getting worse.

It all began with the appearance of a folk group called the Dick Oxtot Trio (now re-named the Enigmas). The trio's singing and guitar-playing was superlative, while the speaker system was far from being even substandard in performance.

As the weeks wore on, the system became progressively worse. The college dance band performed at a rally and might have sounded fine if the microphone pick-up hadn't been so poor. The noise produced resembled a bad skip on an old Guy Lombardo record that never hit the top ten.

Featured at this rally along with the band, was a vocalist. Instead of applause, the only thing that could be offered her was sympathy, for because of the magnificently terrible mike set-up, her audio endeavors were somewhat less than flattering.

Fall semester of '64 rolled around, and the mike system was still in dire need of repair.

The rallies were getting much better not only in the talent department, but also in the holding of student interest.

Students were allowed to relieve their inner tensions through terpsichorean creativity in the street in front of Smith Hall while music was provided by various rock-n'-roll combos.

At a rally featuring George and Teddy, a popular rock n' roll singing duo, and their musical colleagues the Condors, the microphone broke down in the middle of a number and they had to continue without it.

More recently was a rally at which Rick Stevens and the Ravens appeared. The sound system pulled through in typical form producing various raspy and ear-piercing noises, let alone missing the combo's tone.

Less than two weeks ago the election rally was held. The program consisted of the presentation of candidates, speeches and music by another group named the Remains.

Needless to say, nearly all aspects of the rally were a failure because of the audio system. Neither speeches nor the music could be deciphered to any degree.

A decision had to be made. The microphone and speaker system needed to be either 1. repaired, 2. replaced, or 3. destroyed.

According to James Wyatt, student government adviser, steps have been taken in order to secure a better audio system.

"The system we use at the rallies had great difficulty working inside or outside," Wyatt said. "Neither the microphone nor the speakers operated proficiently at any of the rallies."

Wyatt explained that at times the audio equipment was rented for $25 an hour in order to provide better entertainment for the students. "At that rate," Wyatt stated, "it would be easier to purchase our own speakers and microphone. And that is exactly what the Rally Committee plans to do."

It appears that the ears of the college students, which have been subjected to constant abuse and bother at past rallies, are in for a treat during the coming semester.

Letters to the Editor

Ram's Horn

• Exposed!

Editor, The Guardsman:

Thank you Guardsman for a newspaper that reflects so whole-heartedly the candid views of our worthy administration as I have come to know them.

Thank you also for printing clever stories about such newsworthy individuals as the campus police, athletes and those long sufferers of tradition, the sororities and fraternities.

A belated thanks for your fearless political coverage of proposition B. I feel that the public was certainly weary of the many arguments and controversies concerning State proposition number 14, 17 and 35. Certainly, they were not at all related to our school or students.

I think you should be saluted for the weeding out of offensive and controversial articles. This will most certainly prepare the staff members for work on a syndicated paper someday.

So keep up the good work Guardsman and you too can proudly wear the label of decency that one of our finer local publications advertise.

Lois C. Page

(Editor's note: And here we've been trying all semester to keep the real "goings on" in utter secrecy. The frequent riots, bookmaking, graft, gun-running, payola, praying in class, kidnapping, slave-raiding, espionage, pornography, mutiny, sedition, rumbles and pipe smoking had all been hidden. Killjoy!)

Synanon Group Asks Use Of Ram Ski Cabin

By Mike Barber

Synanon came to City College last week asking for a favor. The favor — occasional use of the Ram Ski Club's mountain cabin during the week.

Don Balestrieri, as the representative of the group of 50 former drug addicts, 34 men and 16 women, teenaged to middleaged, who live at the Synanon house on Sansome street here in San Francisco, made the request.

According to Balestrieri, who came to Synanon 17 months ago after 11 years of drug addiction, the members need places to go outside the city where they may relax. Because Synanon exists almost entirely on donations for their support, renting of such a place is impossible.

A cabin would be an aid to the second stage of rehabilitation. Addicts who come to Synanon for help must go through three stages of "growing up."

Balestrieri said, "Addicts are childishly stupid people. All Synanon tries to do is get these people to grow up." The first level of learning begins when the addict first walks through the door.

Just how severe withdrawal can be was described by Charles Dederich, who founded Synanon seven years ago, in an interview with Time magazine. "Addicts are babies who look like men and women. They have to grow up emotionally."

Acquainted and adjusted to their new home, which, Balestrieri said, takes about 90 days for most people," and if the inductee elects to stay, he enters the next stage.

The second stage member may work or go to school. Like anyone else, he needs vacations and a change of scenery. The Seawall Synanon on Sansome street is housed in the oldest warehouse in San Francisco.

In the third stage the member goes out to take a responsible part in the world.

He graduates into his chosen role in society because Synanon has given him the chance.

Revised Nursing Program, A.A. Degree Bring More Enrollees

Roy Campbell, the only man in the college's first class to earn the Associate in Arts degree in Nursing, when interviewed in 1963 gave among his reasons for joining the program that he believed it offered an inspiring career to men.

He proved his contention by being the first man from this campus to receive the award as Student Nurse-of-the-Year.

Campbell was asked by the Student Nurses Organization to be its adviser when he was graduated from City College.

Now very active in the nurses' organization, he continues to show that opportunities exist to fill a community need.

In 1961 the present nursing program was initiated on this and other campuses because the closing of six of the nine hospital schools of nursing left the community without enough registered nurses to fill the need.

Shortening of the registered nurse training program and granting of the AA degree are listed as major factors in attracting many more students.

Planning by Gannelle Griffin, chairman of the department of Nursing here, and her staff has eliminated repetitive experiences and permits a fully-rounded program of theory and practice in two years instead of the three used by former training schools.

Removal of the 18-to-35 age restriction, which had been traditionally maintained by hospitals, and the invitation to men to enroll opened the door to many more applications from interested students.

A typical day in training sees student nurses reporting to a hospital at 7 a.m. when patients are awakened for the morning routine. The student nurse checks temperatures, helps the R.N. with other tasks, and then attends various hospital departmental activities for on-the-job instruction.

At 11 a.m., students change from uniforms to campus dress and board the bus for the college where they attend the academic courses.

Two hundred and seventy applications have already been received for the coming semester and the present freshman class has 60 students.

Eighty-four per cent of the students of the first class were San Francisco residents and 91 per cent of the second. Those who were not residents came from areas where there was no two-year college program.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

THE END IS bound to come. Perhaps this is why people are able to bear seemingly unbearable tasks, because they realize "this too shall pass."

No one understands the full impact of this statement more than college students — and especially so right now. Why the big hassle? Well, it's finals time and that means agony, misery and pain. But why have finals become such a dreaded ordeal?

For the true answer, let's start at the beginning — the beginning of the semester. At such time every student filled out a study program, enrolled in certain courses and purchased the necessary textbooks.

Then, while the semester was still young, each instructor issued to his students an outline of the respective course which included the required readings and so on.

But, college students playing — or trying to play the stereotyped collegiate role — ignored the outline. To be downright honest, they buried them in the "round sorter," and now that the end is here they are panicked.

In fact, the word panicked really doesn't do them any justice. They are completely hysterical. And rightly so. Reading, studying and understanding an entire textbook is a mighty task. It is a job bigger than most students can and will handle.

The end result — plenty of worry, sleepless nights and countless tranquillizers.

If satisfying grades could be earned by this method, the end wouldn't be quite so painful, but unfortunately college isn't that simple.

At this stage of the game, it is practically impossible to salvage one's grades with anything less than continuous and conscientious study. And even this won't guarantee success.

For some, there will be another semester, another chance — and if these students are smart, they'll remember the famous Shakespeare line: "Cowards die many times before their death, but vallants taste of death but once."

Wing Open For Finals

The Statler wing will remain open during finals week, Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education, announced today.

Regular cafeteria service will be available until Friday, January 22. Starting Friday, only the vending machines in the Statler wing will be available, Batmale said.

Machines will be in use throughout finals, with the wing open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

Council Fails To Pass New Spring Budget On Grounds Procedures Are 'Sloppy'

By Peter Dorn

Student Council failed to pass the spring budget at last week's meetings because some council members thought that the appropriation of $37,981.80 in one lump sum would be a hasty move on their part.

Arthur Lindholm, freshmen member of council, said that the whole budget procedure was very "sloppy," including the voting method. Lindholm said that the budget was thrown together and cut at random to get it under the speculative limit of $38,000.

Gary Ettin, Associated Student president, replied that the budget is the product of numerous budget committee meetings, where each organization's budget request was scrutinized and reduced where possible in order to meet the $38,000 limit.

Ettin explained that the administration has striven to allot a uniform amount each semester, and that $38,000 was a very conservative estimate of the revenue that will be produced by next semester's AS card sales and Ramporium profits.

Nancy Hughes, entertainment committee chairman, received a reply to one of the many letters she sent out in the attempt to obtain top name entertainment for the College Hour rallies.

Perendio Artists Ltd., wrote that the Four Preps could be available in February at a very low price to the college. Council and cabinet agreed that Miss Hughes should investigate this subject further.

It was agreed that the AS could cover the cost of top-name entertainers by charging modest admission fees fo the rallies, and that the AS might even realize a profit from the performances.

President Louis G. Conlan and Oscar Anderson, coordinator of educational management, were given plaques as a gesture of AS appreciation for the use of Bungalows 5 and 6 throughout the semester; John W. Dunn was presented with a plaque for his contributions of time and effort in rejuvenating the Pep Band and elevating it from a membership of 0 to 42.

Patricia H. Dutter Heads Spring Guardsman Staff

Nary a dissenting vote was cast as Patricia H. Dutter was selected to head The Guardsman staff for the Spring 1965 semester at an Editorial Board meeting.

Miss Dutter, who was the Managing Editor this semester, will be the seventh woman to hold the position of Editor In Chief.

Joining her will be Don Patten, this semester's Staff Editor as Managing Editor, and Mike Smith who returns as Sports Editor.

New faces on the Editorial Board will be Feature Editor Mike Barber and News Editor Peter Dorn. Greg Frazier, Hugh Haworth and Kathi McDonald are Staff Writers.

Departing from this semester's staff will be Staff Writer Boyd Burinett, News Editor Ann Weill and Editor in Chief Fred Wales.

Coed Wins $100 Scholarship For Oral Readings

City College student Carolyn D'Inzillo won first place in the poetry division of the Junior College oral interpretation contest held at San Francisco State College recently. The prize was a $100 scholarship to State College.

The contest consisted of three divisions, prose, poetry and drama. Ralph Farve represented City College in drama, competing against ten contestants from other colleges. Pamela Collins, another college contestant, entered the prose competition.

More contestants have entered this year than in any of the previous five since the contest was started. Lucille Meredith, instructor of the oral interpretation courses here, considers the contestants from City College exceptionally good this year. The State College drama professors who judged the contests agreed.

Science Majors Eligible For 35 Heart Scholarships

Science students are invited to apply for California Heart Association Research Associates scholarships. The invitation was extended by Maurice Eliaser, Jr., M.D., chairman of the San Francisco Heart Association's research committee.

"The purpose of the program is to encourage gifted science students to consider careers in cardiovascular research," he said.

Thirty-five students from California universities, colleges and two-year colleges will be chosen to work this summer in heart research under the guidance of established scientists. The program is in its ninth year.

Each student receives a $750 stipend to cover living expenses for the ten week period, which will begin shortly after June 1, 1965.

Applicants should be enrolled in a college and should have junior, senior or graduate status for the first time in the Fall of 1965. The application deadline is February 1.

Physics and chemistry students are particularly encouraged to apply because of the growing importance of the basic sciences to medical research, according to Dr. Eliaser.

Further information can be obtained by writing the San Francisco Heart Association at 259 Geary street or telephoning YU 2-5753.

Dead Week Gives Students Choice — Study Or Mexico

Final examinations will start on Friday and conclude January 29. Classes will end tomorrow. There are four week days devoid of anything but scholastic pursuit from January 18 to 21; this is called "dead week," instituted by the administration for various purposes.

Obviously, considering the time of the year, this dead week was produced so that students might have time to go skiing up in the Sierra. However, if one is not the outdoor type, one might find the dead week an excellent opportunity to catch up on some sleep.

Enterprising students have found that the week is a good time to install an anti-smog control device on their cars; others will have ample time to fix that rattle in the trunk.

For those students who are at a loss as to what their preoccupations will be for The Week, here are some suggestions: visit Aunt Hildegarde down in Los Angeles; get a part time job parking cars on the Broadway "strip," or catch up on some of the excellent movies shown on TV at 10 a.m.

If none of the above mentioned suggestions instill enthusiasm, there is yet another alternative. As final examinations are just around the corner, why not read a few of those chapters in the textbook that were supposed to have been read in October? Deciphering and reviewing notes may also prove a worthwhile pastime.

However, if one is not particularly worried about the coming finals, Mexico is very cheerful this time of the year.

Lincoln Grads Place First In Enrollment Statistics

The Fall 1964 college enrollment in terms of high school graduates from city, state, national and international high schools was revealed recently by Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Lincoln and Washington High Schools have always fluctuated between first and second place for the highest number of high school graduates attending the college.

This semester, the two schools registered a slim six student difference, the narrowest margin recorded. Lincoln took the top spot with 872 and Washington followed with 866.

Next, in numerical order, were Lowell 668, Galileo 580, Balboa 577, Mission 371, Polytechnic 319 and Adams-Commerce 140.

Wilson, a new high school, registered 68 students from its first graduating class. In the future, Wilson is expected to compete heavily for top honor.

Girls High School, which has been closed for some time, registered five. There are 13 non-high school graduates on campus.

Alameda County, which always sends some of its brighter students across the Bay, has a total of 126. There are more students here from other California counties (833), than from other states (759).

Foreign countries showed an enrollment of 320 students; first, second and third place going respectively to Hong Kong (51), Germany (38) and the Philippines (35).

Many of these students attend college here to major in chemistry, physics, medicine, dentistry and other aspects of science.

Increase in the number of coeds is attributed to new technical training programs.

The statistics show that there is a grand total of 7651 students attending the college in the daytime. The ratio of men to women is 4815 men to 2836 women, or approximately 62 per cent men to 38 per cent women, which means that there are 1.7 guys to each and every doll.

Students Vie For Sweetheart Title

Three City College coeds, Susi Ng, Joyce Yim and Dely Serafino, are competing for the position of Queen of the annual Sweetheart Ball to be held in March sponsored by the Chinese Club.

They will participate first in the talent contest to be held at the Sweetheart Ball Rally on January 30 in Victory Hall, 8 p.m. until 1 a.m., at $1 per person.

Judging the contest will be Deans Mary Golding and Ralph Hillsman. The coed who sells the most tickets to the rally and ball, along with the popular votes cast at the door before the rally and who wins the talent contest will be crowned queen.

The winner will be crowned queen at the Sweetheart Ball which will be held in the Continental Ballroom of the Jack Tar Hotel March 6.

It will be semiformal with admission $3.75 per couple. Music will be provided by the Dick Crist Orchestra.

Proceeds from the ball will go to the Chinese Club scholarship fund. Sponsors are Albert Ting, Florence Gantner, and William Funke.

Contest managers are Alex Eng for Miss Yim, Ken Joe, with co-managers Darlene Lim and Mike Fujimoto, for Miss Ng, and Bernard Piper and David Calvo for Miss Serafino.

One man can support on his shoulders 340 pounds.

Chabot Power Jolts Rams, 83-63

Cagers Drive For Fourth Title, Face Comets Here Friday Night

At this point the Ram basketball squad has played four games and won all but one. This 3-1 record puts the Rams in a three way tie for first place in the Golden Gate Conference, and the local hoopsters could be on the way to their fourth straight league title.

Although the local cagers are not running away with first place, the Rams have made themselves a major factor in the league race for the title after defeating contenders San Jose City College, 75-70, in a five-minute overtime period, and Merritt College by a slim 56-53.

Sid Phelan's cagers play the Merritt College Thunderbirds and the San Jose Jaguars again later in the season and it is expected that the games will be much tougher for the Rams.

Especially since Bill Robinson of Merritt College and Jack Matulich of San Jose are the league's top scorers with 75 and 96 points respectively.

Another thorn in the Rams' drive to their fourth cage title is that the Contra Costa College Comets are right behind the Rams with a 2-2 record.

Although the Comets lost to the San Mateo Bulldogs, it was only by one point, 58-57; if it were the other way around, they would be tied with the Rams for first place.

Friday night here at the men's gymnasium, the two teams will fight it out to see if the Rams can retain its share in the top spot Saturday morning. The Comets also had one of the best Golden Gate Conference pre-season records with a 12-3 mark.

If the College of San Mateo had topped Contra Costa, they would have been considered capable of defeating any team in the league. When the Bulldogs played Merritt College two weeks ago, they lost the game by only two field goals, 43-39.

Thus far one of the most unpredictable clubs in the league is the Diablo Valley Vikings led by the team's top scorer, John Paul Jones. Twice they were uncomfortably close the "wrong" way when they lost to Chabot, 71-70, and the "right" way, again by one point, when they defeated San Mateo, 55-54.

Between Foothill and Chabot Colleges, the latter obviously is the tougher to contend with. Particularly when two of their players, Hal Dohling and Ross Moe, are among the top five scorers in the conference.

When the two teams met two weeks ago, Chabot won, 80-69.

Remaining games are:

Alpha Phi Epsilon Flunks Faculty In Sportsnight Gig

By Bruce Klein

City College's youthful faculty team put on a show of talent unequaled by any previous year's effort at the Associated Men Student semiannual Sportsnight on January 6 in the men's gymnasium.

Most students don't realize that the so called "Old Men" still have plenty of spunk left. This was evident in the Faculty - Alpha Phi Epsilon game at sportsnight, which saw the Faculty flunked, 44-39.

The much talked about faculty team featured Terry "The Killer" Kilpatrick, Larry "The Lip" Lawson, Gerry "The Shrimp" Mullin, Bob "The Shill" Quigley, "Jungle Jim" Wyatt and Paul "Adding Machine" Fisher. Members of the AMS tried to help the "old men" but were bench warmers most of the game.

The five big guns for the faculty's competition, the "fighting" fraternity brothers from Alpha Phi Epsilon, were Arnold Brooks, Cal Peterson, Jerry Percy, Walter Stubblefield and Herbert Rankins.

The "faculty clowns" made the audience laugh as an intentional foul was committed by "The Lip" and "The Killer" in the opening seconds of the first half. "Killer" Kilpatrick complained to the referee that a bad call had been made and that the faculty should have received the ball.

Unfortunately, the faculty was not awarded the basketball on that particular play.

Seconds later, Kilpatrick did a "fancy Dan" play that completely fooled the opposition. He dribbled to the left and right and then went in for an easy two points. On another play he "played dumb" by standing still. While the defender wasn't watching, Kilpatrick turned and shot a 20-foot unorthodox hook.

As the first half progressed, both teams were shooting unbelievable shots. Mullin was hitting well from the outside as was Fisher.

Later in the game, Kilpatrick "inadvertently" wrestled Brooks to the floor. "Killer" was so astonished that he went around the gymnasium showing off his superior physique.

Toward the end of the game, Mullin hit more long set shots to give himself 12 points for the game. Kilpatrick continued to hit the mark as he was high man for the "Old Men" with 16. Fisher, Lawson, Quigley and Wyatt hit 4, 4, 2 and 1, respectively.

High men for Alpha Phi Epsilon were Peterson with 21 and Brooks with 11. Stubblefield, Percy and Rankins scored 8, 2 and 2, respectively.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Smith

SOMETIME on Tuesday, the second of February, ten days before the 156th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birth, John Paul Jones will arrive in San Francisco all the way from Concord.

However, this John Paul Jones does not belong to the United States Navy, but to the Diablo Valley Vikings' basketball squad, and he is coming from the home of the Vikings in Concord, California.

JONES IN LEAGUE TOP

Diablo Valley Coach Charlie Karp has in Jones one of the Golden Gate Conference's top ten shooters. Presently Jones has been averaging 16 points a game.

Although the Vikings turned in a 4-7 preseason record, they are capable of beating the Rams and a few other of the top conference teams; and they almost did last week when they were edged by the Chabot Gladiators, 71-70. The Vikings also believe that they have potentially one of their strongest benches in years.

In their first game with the Rams two weeks from now, the Diablo Valleymen will try to break the stranglehold City College has had on them over the past four years. In that time, Karp's teams have beaten Sid Phelan's cagers only once.

KARP PRAISES PHELAN

And Karp, who picked the Rams to repeat their 1963-64 championship performance, knows very well what a tough assignment he and his team have, and furthermore, Karp knows what kind of coach Phelan is, and has said as much.

In a recent interview by a Bay Area sports writer and former Guardsman Sports Editor, Lou Lucia, Karp praised the Ram coach very highly, noting, "Sid has the best offensive mind in basketball in the United States. Every year he comes up with new wrinkles to harass us defensive-minded coaches.

"He usually has good material to start with, which makes him tough to cope with at the start, and then he has a fine basketball mind to go along with it. He is the most original coach I know when it comes to new phases of offense," Karp stated.

To back Karp's praise, there is Phelan's record. For example, in 1962 the Rams won the now defunct Big Eight title and the State classic. City College also took the initial Golden Gate crown in 1963 and again last year.

KARP RECORD

Incidentally, Karp has been coaching for 15 years now, and he has quite a bit of valuable experience behind him. Before he came to the Vikings, Karp was the basketball coach for Mt. Diablo High School. Karp-coached teams at Mt. Diablo never finished lower than second place during his six years at the high school.

So here at 8 p.m. on February 2, the Rams, one of the top offensive teams in the league, will take on a fine defensive club in the Diablo Valley Vikings. Although the Vikings started the season somewhat slowly, they improve each time they play. Two weeks from now, the Diablo team should be ready to give the Rams a real battle, and that they will do.

Block SF Society Asks For Volunteer Vendors

Block SF Society President Rich Klemmer issued a plea yesterday for members to help sell refreshments at the high school basketball games played in the gymnasium. The Block SF is in financial straits and the only way they can supplement their dues is with the candy and soft drink sales at these games.

Members interested in helping the Block SF may sign up with Klemmer or club sponsor Art 'Dutch' Elston for currently open games. This includes members who received awards this semester. "A responsibility goes with the Block SF awards," Klemmer said.

Cagers In First Place Tie With Chabot And Merritt

By Mike Smith

San Leandro's Chabot College Gladiators handed the City College Ram basketball team their first conference defeat by a convincing score of 83-63 here last Friday evening before an estimated crowd of 175-plus.

Chabot and San Francisco are now tied for first place in the Golden Gate Conference with identical 3-1 records. Merritt College (Oakland), who defeated the Diablo Valley Vikings 74-56, are also in the top spot with a 3-1 mark.

One of the major factors of the Ram loss was the silent gun of Mike Cahill. Before going into this game, Cahill was the eighth leading scorer in the conference with 51 points for a 17 point game average. In Friday's contest, Cahill was held scoreless in the first half, and scored only two goals in the second.

The Gladiators jumped off to an early 2-1 lead and were never behind or tied. Outside the opening score, the closest the local cagers got to the Gladiators was 11-9 late in the first period, and 29-23 at the half.

Chabot's Russ Moe and Bob Hachman led the Gladiators to their 29 half-time total with 14 points between them.

With some two minutes to go in the first half, the defending champs of the GGC, trailing 29-18, began a fierce drive down court. But the Gladiators slowed down the Rams by committing personal fouls on Cal Peterson, Rich Henderson, Henry King, and Charlie Parks. All four of the City cagers sank their charities to give the Rams their intermission total of 23.

Very early in the opening of the second half, it looked as though the Rams were going to close the gap when they were behind by only 30-25. Cahill scored the first two goals in the half, and the Rams looked as is they were ready to roll. But Cahill did not score another point, and the Rams fell rapidly behind the Gladiators.

Chabot picked up where they left off and began scoring in streaks of eight points. This time, however, Moe was held to only four points, but Pete Ness, who turned in only one goal in the first half, pumped in ten points in the third period.

In the fourth period, Sid Phelan sent Willie Jones and Peterson back into the game. They both not only went all out on defense, but the two guards scored ten of the Rams last 20 points.

See-Saw Battle Sees Rams Edge T-Birds, 56-53

The Ram cagers put together a strong fourth quarter to come out on the winning end of a see-saw battle against Merritt College, 56-53, at the losers' home court January 12.

Led by high scoring forward Mike Cahill, the Rams broke up the Merritt Thunderbirds' unbeaten season. The win put the Rams at the top of the heap in the Golden Gate Conference, with a 3-0 record.

Cahill paced the San Francisco cagers with 20 points for the night, 10 in each half of action.

The first half saw the lead change hands many times with the Rams gaining the upper hand just before the intermission to lead the T-birds, 29-28, at the half.

The last period proved to be Merritt's downfall, as they ran into foul trouble. Although they hit 12 fielders from the floor to the Rams' 10, the local cagers won it from the foul line.

Each team took 11 foul shots. The Rams made eight while Merritt could only mesh five. This in itself was the margin of victory for San Francisco.

This game also saw injured center Charlie Parks return to action for a short period. Although still hurting from an ankle injury sustained early in the season, Parks hit one fielder from the floor and helped spark a Ram comeback in the first half.

Again it was Cahill and Wilson leading the scoring for the Rams with 20 and 10 points, respectively. The Thunderbirds had three men in double figures, James, Washington and Robinson with 12, 15 and 10 points respectively for the evening.

Baseball Arrives On Scene With Preseason UC Opener

Baseball is here again as the Ram baseball team begins practice February 1 and open the season February 20 against the University of California Oaniors.

Coach Ernie Domecus, assisted by Robert Quigley, will field a predominantly freshman team with a few veterans mixed in this coming season.

Top veterans from last year's squad include hurlers Bill Booth, Ken Dyer and Hugh Miller, also infielder Henry Scott and catcher-outfielder Mike Dunne.

First-year men include outfielder George Alvarez from Balboa, infielder Merritt Barnes from Washington, infielder Ed Sickinger from Balboa, pitcher Greg Sinclair from Galileo, outfielder Barry Carli from St. Ignatius, outfielder Ken Hall from Polytechnic, Ron Fassler from Sacred Heart, who won a trip to New York to participate in an All-Star game sponsored by the Examiner Baseball School.

Continuing the list of potential freshman stars are outfielder Nick Eterovich from Lincoln, first-baseman Rich Forman from Balboa, pitcher Mike Calegari from St. Ignatius, pitcher Bing Konzic from Washington, pitcher and infielder Dan White from Wilson.

Roy Diederichsen, coach of the tennis squad, has a veteran team returning this year in addition to a couple of newcomers. The veterans from last year's team include Ben Levy, Fred Suessman, Lou Englestein and Mike Price. Newcomers expected to bolster the Ram team are Chuck White and Steve Jones.

Diederichsen urged all tennis players to consult him, and if there are players in sufficient number who can't make the varsity, a junior varsity will be formed. Practice will start February 10, the first day of spring semester classes.

In addition to league games in the Golden Gate Conference, many practice matches are scheduled, including one with the University of British Columbia. Each year they come down from Canada and play some of the Bay Area teams.

Track practice is now being conducted on an individual basis, according to coach Lou Vasquez. The first practice meet will be held Friday, February 26 and Saturday, February 27 in Modesto.

All men interested in the City College track team for the 1965 season were asked to apply to Vasquez in the men's gymnasium as soon as possible.

It is against the league rules to have organized team practice with a coach until the new semester starts. Athletes are expected to train on their own before they consider competing in the league.

Anyone who has any questions concerning the spring 1965 track team can get further information from Vasquez.

Before anyone is able to represent City College in any spring sports competition, these rules must be followed: a) completion of at least 10½ units this semester; b) Enrollment in at least 10½ units during the spring semester; c) Membership in the Associated Students for the spring semester; d) Submission of a medical form certifying readiness for Varsity competition to the college nurse.

Lively Arts

Drama, Music, Journalism Aid Creativity

By MICHEL JANICOT

IT WAS TOLSTOI who said, "Art is a human activity having for its purpose the transmission to others of the highest and best feelings to which men have risen."

Students with the urge for self-expression in the fine arts as well as the applied arts and the lively arts, can achieve this release here on campus by participating in the many diversified programs offered by the college.

But by far the most popular form is in the lively arts which have a cultural value at the same time that they stimulate and encourage local artists.

MUSIC ENRICHES

The College Orchestra gives formal concerts and performances throughout the year, offering students the opportunity to practice and perform all styles of musical works, ranging from classical music to "soul" jazz.

The A Cappella Choir, Chamber Choir, Men's Glee Club, Women's Choir, and vocal soloists take part in two annual vocal festivals and present choral concerts throughout the year. In addition, these groups provide off-campus concerts for community organizations.

The department of music and the Associated Students also present the fall and spring Concert Series, featuring outstanding professional ensembles, instrumentalists and vocalists. The department also presents the annual Christmas concert.

DRAMA TRAINS, ENTERTAINS

The drama department offers training and experience in all the arts, crafts and techniques of the theater —and entertainment. Courses include theory and technique of acting, play reading, speech for the theater, theatrical make-up and stagecraft.

The drama department has been especially instrumental in the past year in producing numerous plays, such as Antigone by Jean Anouilh, Tartuffe, The Winslow Boy and The Goodwoman of Setzuan.

For aspiring disc jockeys, the radio and television broadcasting department operates KCSF, the college radio station.

JOURNALISM INFORMS

The college newspaper, The Guardsman, is a member of the Associated Collegiate Press and has received 32 All-American ratings in 46 semesters of membership. The Guardsman is a weekly newspaper entirely produced by journalism students, who plan and direct all phases of the newspaper publication.

The Guardsman is a vital organ of communication of the Associated Students, serving the best interests of the college to its students. The newspaper also invites students' opinions through the letters to the editor column, the Ram's Horn.

FRESHMAN EDITION

This special edition of The Guardsman is published exclusively for entering Freshmen and is the result of joint efforts of both the outgoing and incoming members of the editorial staff.

ON BEHALF OF the administration and faculty, it is my pleasure to extend a most cordial welcome to the Spring, 1965, entering class. We are pleased that you have decided to continue your education here. May I assure you that we stand ready to assist you in every possible way.

YOU MUST REALIZE, however, that this is a cooperative undertaking to which you must contribute your full share if it is to be successful.

JUST A FEW YEARS AGO, students entering college could be quite certain that the world they were preparing to enter, upon completion of college, would not change much during their lifetime. This is no longer true for we are living in an age of change brought about by technology and automation.

CONSEQUENTLY, young people today must be better prepared than ever before if they are to succeed in this changing world.

THE PERSISTENT EXERCISE of a little extra effort is one of the most powerful forces contributing to success. This persistence will, no doubt, allow you to meet the challenges of this atomic, automated era.

Time And Place, Cost And Deeds Of Campus Life

For anticipators, worry warts and organizers, seven important items of interest come under the heading, What Every New Student Should Know.

For those interested in details, freshman registration for honor students will be held at 1 p.m. Monday, February 8; for all others starting at 1:30 p.m. February 9 and continuing through Thursday, February 9, and there will be no late registration.

For the chronic worrier and others who may wish to know the worst at the onset, the first midterm ends on March 26 and the second on May 7. Final examinations will be held from June 11 to 18.

Since it is not possible to learn without books and supplies, it might be helpful for all new students to know that the college bookstore, the Ramporium, is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. with the exception of Fridays, when it closes at 3:30 p.m.

Because the campus can be a cold and windy place in the fall, and because the cafeteria is not always the ideal place to study it might help also to know when the college library is open.

The library is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. during the day Monday through Friday, and from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays.

To broaden their education, students who do not have classes during College Hour, from 11 a.m. to noon Thursdays, have an opportunity to attend class or club meetings in assigned rooms, lectures on various topics, to see films and to participate in rallies or dances.

The cafeteria in Smith Hall serves breakfast from 7:30 to 10 a.m. and sandwiches for lunch from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. when the snack section closes. The hot lunch section of Smith Hall, however, is open from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.

To accommodate a growing student population, Statler wing, the annex to Smith Hall, offers hot entrees in vending machines. The wing is open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

'Big Six,' Council, President's Cabinet Play Important Roles In Student Government System

By HERM KLIGERMAN

Student government at the college can best be explained by first noting three distinct groups which play a part in its makeup.

First, there is what is referred to as the "big six." Included in this group are the Associated Student President and Vice President, the Associated Men and Women Student Presidents and the Sophomore and Freshman Class Presidents.

Each is elected by the students-at-large semesterly. However, only one of the "big six"—the Vice President—may vote on the official governing body of the association.

STUDENT COUNCIL COMPOSITION

This body is known as Student Council. Its members, all of whom may vote and introduce formal motions, include seven representatives of the Freshman Class, seven representatives of the Sophomore Class and the Vice President.

Each is also elected by the general student body each semester.

The AS President presides over all meetings of council and may vote in the case of a tie.

RESPONSIBILITY, AUTHORITY

Student Council is responsible for and has final authority in the supervision of the affairs, policies, properties and conduct of the Associated Students of the college.

"Associated Students" means those registered students who have in their possession a current AS card available at the beginning of each semester for $5.

One of council's major duties is that of allocating funds to official budgeted organizations on campus for the semester succeeding its term of office. For example, last spring council allocated almost $38,000 to operate student activities for last semester.

TWENTY COMPRISE CABINET

After Student Council comes the third and final division known as cabinet.

Cabinet members may either be appointed or elected by the organization he represents at Student Council meetings, or appointed by the AS president. Like the Associated Men and Women Student Presidents and the Freshman and Sophomore Class Presidents, cabinet has a voice but no vote on the official body.

A question frequently asked is: Are the "big six," council and cabinet all that make up the college's student government system? The answer is no!

ON BEHALF of the Associated Students, I extend to you a warm welcome to City College of San Francisco. This will be your first experience with college life and I know you, the class of Fall '66, will make the most of it.

A SUPERIOR academic program and personal relationship between you and the administration will add greatly to your education.

ASSOCIATED student officers are extremely interested in your education and survival at City College. I recommend that you get involved and make this college your home. Belonging to a club and taking part in student affairs is most gratifying. Not to belong or show interest can cause you to lose association with our well-balanced program.

I CAN ONLY advise you to join the college activities we have planned for you this semester. The activities will only be as great as you the students make them.

GET TO KNOW your student officers; let them help you get started this semester. I would like to speak to you some time this semester. I am in bungalow 5, Associated Student office. You give a little of your time, and we will do the same.

Terry Cloney,
AS President

PARTICIPATION OPEN TO ALL

All students here are eligible and invited to take an active part in their student government system and are welcome to voice their opinions on campus issues at appropriate times in an appropriate manner.

Council meets from 12 noon to 1 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday in bungalow six, which is directly behind Cloud Hall and the nearest bungalow to Arts Hall. The doors are open to all interested students.

The college offers units in four areas of student leadership. SL G2 is designed for those students interested in the management of club activities. SL G8 is open to students desiring practice in the organization of assemblies, forums and rallies.

Those students interested in Student Government will be encouraged to enroll in SL G10. This course is primarily for Associated Student officers but is open to others. Student leadership, G16, is for members of the band.

Lincoln Grads Top Enrollment

Lincoln and Washington High Schools have always fluctuated between first and second place for the highest number of high school graduates attending the college.

Last semester, the two schools registered a slim six student difference, the narrowest margin recorded. Lincoln took the top spot with 372 and Washington followed with 866.

Next, in numerical order, were Lowell 868, Galileo 580, Balboa 577, Mission 371, Polytechnic 319 and Adams Commerce 140.

Wilson, a new high school, registered 68 students from its first graduating class. In the future, Wilson is expected to compete heavily for top enrollment honors.

Girls High School, which has been closed for some time, registered five. There are 13 non-high school graduates on campus.

Alameda County, which always sends some of its brighter students across the Bay, had a total of 126. There were more students here from other California counties (833), than other states (759).

Last semester, Hawaii led the enrollment race with 29 students, New York followed closely with 15 and the other states represented in decreasing order were Texas 14, Oregon and Pennsylvania with 11 each, Washington with 10 and Alaska, the largest state, was last with only two students enrolled.

Foreign countries showed an enrollment of 320 students; first, second and third place going respectively to Hong Kong (51), Germany (38) and the Philippines (35).

Many of these students attend college here to major in chemistry, physics, medicine, dentistry and other aspects of science.

The statistics show that there was a grand total of 7651 students attending the college in the daytime. The ratio of men to women was 4815 men to 2836 women, or approximately 62 per cent men to 38 per cent women, which means that there were 1.7 guys to each and every doll.

Students Adapt, Not Conform To New College Environment

THE TIME HAS COME when a high school education is not enough. Be it technological advancement or just plain status, employers now require a college education before they even give the job-seeking individual consideration.

Students do not usually like to admit that the reason they are attending college is to be eligible for better jobs and therefore more money. They prefer to quote the more lofty ideals of the desire to seek the Truth—or education for the sake of education alone. There are those who are actually here for this reason and no other, but they are few and far between.

But whatever a person's reasons for continuing his education, one dominant fact remains. He is doing it on a voluntary basis; the time of compulsory education has passed. Anybody on this campus can leave at any time. He will not leave a gap. Annually increasing enrollments show that there will be two new students to take his place.

Entering college means entering a new environment. A person has to adapt to an environment—he does not have to conform to it. There are few rules and regulations to follow at City College, but these few must and will be adhered to.

The two-year college is the backbone of California's system of higher education. It offers relief to the already over-crowded State colleges and universities and it helps the student complete his lower division requirements of a college education with a minimum of cost. It makes possible the dream of a college education to all with the ability to receive one.

But when somebody foots the bill, it is only right that the receiver of the benefits recognize certain obligations. In the case of City College, the city of San Francisco takes care of the major burden of expenses with state funds taking care of the rest.

For their effort, the city and state ask but one thing—that the student receive the best education possible under existing circumstances. Upon graduation, the student is not required to pay back anything. He is not even required to remain a resident in the area that was taxed the heaviest for his education.

The two-year college is a tried and true route to the universities. The time will come when it will be the only route, because of increasing enrollments. A college education is here for the asking, but it is up to the individual to work for it. Learning is never easy, but that is what is offered here. Good luck.

Map Shows Areas For Student Cars

AS Members Have Parking Rights Here

By GEORGE NELSON

Approximately 1800 parking spaces are available for students driving to the college, provided that the cars parked in these areas have a valid parking permit on their windshields.

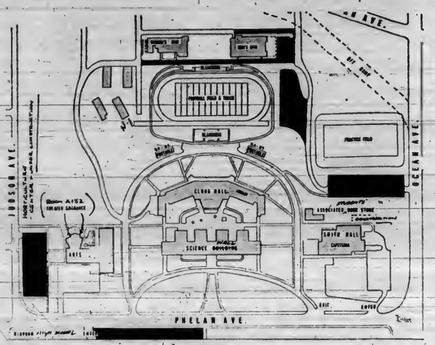
Parking permits are issued by the Campus Police department to those students who have joined the Associated Students. Cars parked in the student parking lots without the permit are subject to citations.

Five student parking lots east of Phelan avenue are as follows:

Parking lot B, the blacked-in area on the map between the football practice field and Smith Hall (cafeteria), is a student parking lot. Entrance to the lot is from Ocean avenue. Walking time from the center of lot B to the flag pole in the center of the main courtyard is three minutes and 20 seconds.

Parking lot C is the area between the football field and track and the practice field. Entrance to this lot is also on Ocean avenue and through lot B. Walking time from lot C to the flag pole is three minutes and 35 seconds.

Lot D is the area next to and along side the men's gymnasium. The spaces against the curb are for physical education instructors only. Students parking there will be tagged. Walking time to the flag pole is four minutes and 35 seconds.



Lots F and G encompass the area between Arts Hall and Judson avenue. Entrance is from Judson avenue. Walking time from the combined lots is clocked at three minutes and 25 seconds.

The "Big Daddy" of all campus parking lots is the north reservoir.

From the reservoir, across Phelan avenue, it takes four minutes and 40 seconds to walk to Science Hall.

All other lots are for faculty or guest parking.

Although the ticket is issued by the Campus Police, it is the same as any citation issued by the regular San Francisco Police force. The fine is payable to the Hall of Justice.

BLACKED-IN AREAS OF MAP denote areas where students with permits may park. On the right, parking lots B, C and D. On the left, parking lots F and G, along Judson avenue. The Big Daddy, of all is the reservoir.

Sights To See Around Roller Coaster Campus

City College, located on San Francisco's Hill 29, has seven permanent buildings, only one of which, Science Hall, dominates the top of the incline.

Although true, this is little consolation to the incoming student who may have a high registration number yet a comparatively late registration hour.

And a typical class schedule can pose problems.

At 8 a.m. the young student finds himself in front of Science Hall, the major building on the crest of the hill. He proceeds to climb the three flights of stairs to his first class on the third floor.

The 9 a.m. carillon rings, and he dashes from his third floor class and realizes that he has only 10 minutes to reach his next class—physical education.

He then staggers down the three floors of Science Hall, walks out the east door and finds himself in a large courtyard with Science Hall behind and Cloud Hall directly in front of him.

He continues to walk east through Cloud Hall and finds himself at the crest of a downward hill which will eventually take him to the men's gymnasium. Upon descending the incline beyond the stadium, there are two large buildings in front of him.

Coeds enter the building on the north, so he assumes that the place for him is the structure on the south.

At long last, 10 a.m. rolls around and he notices that he has a long-sought-after break. Where does he go?

He decides he needs nutrition and begins to climb the hill from which he descended just 50 minutes earlier.

At the top of the incline, he turns south and walks down a hill where he finds Smith Hall and the new Statler wing directly to the left of it and set further back.

After sipping a cup of coffee in the fountain section of Smith Hall and somewhat rested, he decides to explore. Outside he finds 4o the immediate east the Ramporium, the Associated Student bookstore. This structure is not considered permanent because of future building plans.

At the chimes for the 11 a.m. class he realizes that he has to trudge to Arts Hall.

Now, he makes an about-face, turns to the north and starts the journey back up the hill that took him to Smith Hall, across the middle of the courtyard and then down the hill on the north side of Hill 29.

There stands Arts Hall, soon to be expanded to house photography, advertising and graphic arts.

Priceless Rivera In Arts Hall

College Boasts 'Biggest, Best'

By DON PATTEN

A masterpiece by the late Mexican artist, Diego Rivera, self-described as the "biggest and the best," adorns the east wall of the theater lobby in Arts Hall, after lying hidden for nearly two decades before a fitting site was found.

This great masterpiece, a mural, entitled, Marriage of the Artistic Expression of the North and South On This Continent, was given to the college after being painted as part of the living arts displayed at the Golden Gate International Exposition of 1939 on Treasure Island.

While being moved to the college at the close of the fair, the mural was insured for $50,000 with Lloyd's of London. It is now insured for $125,000. In the art world, however, "priceless" would be the expression used to indicate its value.

When it arrived at the college, no facilities were available to accommodate the huge mural which is 22 feet high and 75 feet long.

The mural was placed in a protective case and stored in sections near the men's gymnasium where it lay for 18 years.

As the plans were being drawn in 1958 for what is now Arts Hall, provision was made for the mural to be mounted in the theater lobby of the building.

And so with the completion of Arts Hall, the outstanding mural, which is a priceless property of the college, was again displayed after its long period of dormancy.

The mural is divided into panels and in the center one is a serpent-fanged machine god. Around it are inventors, statesmen, personal friends of Rivera and shots from some of his favorite movies.

In the far left panels of the mural, Rivera has created an Aztec motif.

Moving to the right, such great men as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln are painted.

In the approximate center of the mural, sculptor Dudley Carter is shown carving the Redwood Ram, which, also a "relic" of the 1939 Golden Gate Fair, is now permanently located on the campus near Smith Hall.

The Ram was moved to its present location in 1956.

Below the Ram, Rivera is seen with his wife.

Rivera also placed dictators Stalin, Mussolini and Hitler in his mural.

Twice Olympic diving champion Helen Crlenkovich, then a City College student, is in the mural as she seems to glide silently above the bay waters and the city of San Francisco.

Finally, on the extreme right of his masterpiece, Rivera showed inventors Thomas Edison and S.F.B. Morse, and Robert Fulton and his steamboats.

The overall theme of the mural was to, and does, depict Pan-American unity.

When asked why he painted himself holding hands with movie star Paulette Goddard, Rivera explained, "It means closer Pan-Amercianism."

THE WORLD-FAMOUS MURAL, BY THE LATE famous Mexican artist Diego Rivera, is mounted on the east wall of the theater lobby in Arts Hall. A section of the priceless masterpiece, entitled, Marriage of the Artistic Expression of the North and South on This Continent is shown here.

Redwood Ram Stands Guard At Main Campus Entrance

The Redwood Ram, the best known symbol on campus, stands guard at the main approach to the campus, serving as a meeting place for students and a reminder of college spirit.

Created in 1939 by sculptor Dudley C. Carter, the Ram made its debut under the admiring glances of the crowds visiting the California Handicraft Exhibit of San Francisco's Golden Gate International Exposition of 1939 on Treasure Island, where it was carved.

Following the fair, the Redwood Ram was formally presented in 1940 to the late Archibald J. Cloud, then president of the college, by the late architect Timothy Pfleuger as Carter's gift to a new and expanding institution.

After an unfortunate five-year stay in the men's gymnasium, forced there by lack of a suitable place to display its beauty, the Ram was moved from place to place as new buildings came and temporary ones went. When the West Campus was abandoned to become reservoirs, it was decided that the present spot was best.

There, on January 3, 1956, at about 10 a.m., the Ram was permanently mounted on a specifically designed pedestal provided by the engineering department.

Carved from a redwood stump, the figure took about 16 eight-hour days of work to complete, and it was carved with a double-bladed axe, some chisels and lots of skill. The complete statue, which was painted Red and White, the college colors, in 1947, weighs about a ton.

Recently, because of an excess of paint that had been splattered on the Ram, his standard Red and White color has been chipped off.

Its future is still to be determined.

The Redwood Ram.

Success Story — The History Of City College

San Francisco The Campus For 1470 Argonauts In 1935

City College of San Francisco (then named San Francisco Junior College) became a reality August 26, 1935, when the first student body met in the War Memorial Opera House to be addressed as "Argonauts."

Between opening-day formal speeches, 1470 students and 72 faculty members read a newspaper bearing the name Emanon — (try it in reverse).

A high point in the speeches was to become a familiar reminder from pioneer President Archibald J. Cloud: "A college is more than buildings..."

There were many buildings, yet each was borrowed.

Morning classes met in the University of California's Extension Building at 540 Powell street, afternoon classes in Galileo High School, where administrative offices also were located. Beyond these bases, classes requiring special facilities found them in from 18 to 25 buildings throughout the city.

An automobile tour of 18 of these sites, made in 1938 by an Associated Student President and a Guardsman reporter, clocked two hours and 35 minutes driving time exclusive of parking mileage and stops at the 18 locations.

Thus, without a campus of their own, the early student bodies could rightly call the city itself their campus, Union Square their recreation center between classes, cable car rides around and over Russian Hill to Galileo a stimulating diversion.

Within 30 days after opening ceremonies, the Argonauts had organized the Associated Students, drafted a constitution and elected officers; named their newspaper The Guardsman; adopted a mascot, the Ram; chosen colors, Red and White, and adopted a motto, Ut Adolescentes Vitae Educantur which, translated from the Latin, means That Youth May Be Educated To Life, all through the democratic process — the vote.

One year later, 40 acres of Balboa Park were acquired as the site for a permanent campus, and on April 25, 1937, Science Hall construction, in the form of ground-breaking, began.

A special bond issue, necessary to qualify the School department for federal funds was passed by San Francisco voters — and the two gymnaslums were assured. So, in 1940, 3000 students occupied their own campus — soon to be dubbed pneumonia hill by the more cynically minded.

For three semesters the new campus, the college's own campus after five years of wandering, was at peace, or at least fighting only for familiar items such as adequate parking facilities.

Until December 7, 1941.

Although enrollment ebbed to fewer than 1000 in 1943, the war years saw the college not only maintaining its two basic curricula, university parallel courses and technical training programs, respectively, but also meeting wholeheartedly every effort to aid in the World War II effort.

Summer sessions were inaugurated, victory gardens of vegetables dotted the campus, evening classes were established, and a variety of specialized programs was provided to service units in San Francisco as the need arose.

Through it all, even though necessarily on a limited basis, the traditions, the activities, the spirit established by the Argonauts in 1935 of accepting any challenge continued.

Campus Hits Big Time With 'Lee' Miss America

Although the college had previously made news, nationally, notably when it was listed by Look Magazine as one of the top ten two-year colleges in the country, nothing put it on the map more dramatically than the triumph of Lee Meriwether — City College student, 1954 — Miss America, 1955.

The two years marked the trek eastward to the college's permanent campus, a move that had visual evidence shortly after Louis G. Conlan "came home" as President of the college where he had been a member of the pioneer faculty.

Within two years after his appointment, President Conlan led a building program that was to stretch to the present time. The "war babies" were soon to reach college age, and at City College, as well as throughout the nation, accommodations were being made for their education.

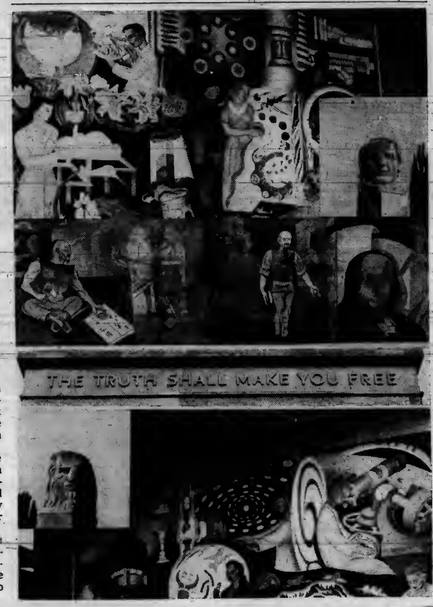
The two-year college, largely a product of California, had proved itself and proved to the nation that every person was to be afforded the opportunity of a college education without tuition.

Construction and occupation were the earmarks of the period started in 1954. Cloud Hall: curiously, dedication ceremonies on April 25 marked an anniversary — 17 years to the day after ground had been broken for the construction of Science Hall.

Smith Hall construction, to house the famed hotel and restaurant department and the cafeteria it operates, was started not only in the Cloud Hall dedication year but also in the same month.

Completed in 1956, and already outgrown as a cafeteria what with steadily increasing enrollments, Smith Hall occupancy was followed in 1959 by the start of construction of Arts Hall and the college stadium.

Arts Hall, 1961 — for the first time City College had a real theater, not too large, it is true, but nonetheless a theater, possessed of the most modern equipment possible — and comfortable seats.



Music, art, closed-circuit television, ceramics — each had quarters conducive to carrying on the tradition of artistic achievement bravely begun by the Argonauts in 1935.

Building of a sort not anticipated by San Francisco's school department created a minor furor in 1962 when a freeway tentacle chopped off a corner of the campus. The corner just happened to be the site of the horticulture center, built in 1947.

Last April, however, a new center was completed along with its greenhouse and room for 30,000 plants rescued from the old greenhouse.

Students entering this Spring, 1965, will push the total number of students who have enrolled here past the 130,000 mark.

From Powell street and Galileo High headquarters to Balboa Park and the temporary West Campus — City College is the San Francisco School Department's top Success Story.

Works Of Art Adorn Campus

MANY ORIGINAL WORKS OF ART adorn the walls and halls of City College in addition to the Diego Rivera mural and the Redwood Ram.

Usually the first to catch the eye of the visitor because of their location just inside the main entrance to Science Hall, are the twin murals by artist Fred Olmstead, depicting a student engaged in study, (top left and bottom right).

Painted in 1940 and 1941, these impressive works were, almost unbelievably, finished by Olmstead in his "spare time," while he concurrently worked on two stone sculptures now in the courtyard leading to Cloud Hall.

The two figures, among the last commissioned by the Federal Work Projects Administration, were set in place in 1941, shortly after completion of Science Hall.

Facing each other, they are the heads of Thomas Edison, (top right), and Leonardo da Vinci, (lower left), meant to represent Theory and Science.

For the record, Edison is on the north side of Science Hall's courtyard, while da Vinci stands on the south side of the court.

In keeping with the impressive murals created by Olmstead, is Stanley Sadler's mural depicting the evolution of type and journalism from the invention of type by the Chinese to the latest presses and newest processes, (top center).

The mural is fittingly mounted in room 345 of Science Hall, near the graphic arts laboratory, the advertising art department and the office of The Guardsman, official publication of the college.

Not exactly an art treasure but deeply revered by faculty and students is the college's motto, The Truth Shall Make You Free, from the New Testament, John, VIII, 32.

Other works of art adorning the college's walls include two 40 by 50 foot mosaics by Herman Volz, outside the north and south walls of Science Hall, a portrait of Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, first President of the college, located just inside the entrance to the library in Cloud Hall.

The West Campus — 1946-1954

THESE 14 BUILDINGS, constructed with parade ground area in foreground for the US Navy Waves' separation center, were once standing on the present site of the south reservoir across from Science Hall. The college used these buildings as its West Campus from 1946 to 1954.

City College had a West Campus from 1946 to 1954.

Buildings, 14 including a gymnasium-turned-auditorium all originally constructed for Navy Waves and situated where the south reservoir across from Science Hall now stands, were used by the college.

With ex-GIs swelling enrollment past 5000, the West Campus era saw major events in college history.

Foremost was the change of name. The hated "Junior" was officially killed and on February 12, 1948, it was City College of San Francisco.

Activities were at their height. Music — Christmas concerts drawing capacity crowds in 1000-seat auditorium... drama — Shakespeare, top-drawer... Man Who Came To Dinner the same... Ramporium established ... The Guardsman published twice a week... campus-wide participation in the music-drama production of Vagabond King... 4000 total audience.

And Archibald J. Cloud, retiring as President in 1949, gave this thought in a valedictory message: "Education is not a destination — it is a journey — always, we are en route."

IF ARTS HALL in the above shot appears as one winding ramp — it isn't. This optical illusion was created by pasting the picture in the upper left-hand corner over the large one. Clear? — sure!

Rams In Pursuit Of More Crowns

Netters Set Sights On Fourth League Title

Coach Roy Diederichsen's tennis men will be aiming their sights on their fourth straight Golden Gate Conference title this year.

Last spring, for the third year running, the Ram netters captured the league title. At the beginning of the year, Vince Chinn was the team's only veteran. All the rest, Fred Suessman, Ben Levy, Lou Englestein, Al Brambila and Make Price were rookies.

The team tagged as "the one to beat" was the Foothill College Owls, and that Los Altos team had two of the finest players in the state in the persons of Rodney Kop and Dave MacGowan.

Both teams, the Rams and the Owls, won all their regular season games until the last conference match when they met each other for the first time in 1964. This match was for the league title.

In the first two singles matches, Kop and MacGowan defeated Levy and Chinn. Then Price, substituting for the injured Brambila, upset his opponent, Jerry Wiania.

Kop and MacGowan teamed up for the doubles match and snatched the first doubles victory; at that point the score was tied 3-3, with one doubles match left. Suessman and Levy defeated Barry Rapazo and Larry Rogers for the championship.

The Ram tennis team went on to establish itself as the second best team in the Northern California Tennis Championships and the third top team in the State Championships in Fresno.

VINCE CHINN.

Possibly the most surprising highlight of the 1964 season was Suessman's upset over Foothill star MacGowan. Suessman did not stop there but went on to become fourth best in the state.

All the members of that championship squad except Chinn will return this year.

Prep Stars Key To Ram Pennant Hope

Baseball practice is currently being conducted under the guidance of coach Ernie Domecus and assistant coach Robert Quigley. Last season the Ram baseball team had a ten win, eleven loss record for a fourth place tie in the eight-team Golden Gate Conference.

The Ram sandlotters play nine practice games, the first of which is scheduled February 20 against the University of California junior varsity. The team also plays a triple round robin in the conference. The team to beat this year, according to Domecus, will be Chabot College.

This season the Rams will play each team in the league three games for a total of 21 contests for the year.

Coach Domecus stated that the outcome of the 1965 season depends highly on how the many first-year men who played high school ball last year perform in this tougher league. The Ram team will be loaded with city prep talent, but will only have about five veterans returning.

The top veteran is catcher and outfielder Mike Dunne. Last season he led the team in batting with a .333 average, had the most hits, most runs batted in, and most extra base hits. Coach Domecus calls him a tremendous competitor.

Other veterans are pitchers Bill Booth, Ken Dyer, Hugh Miller and infielder Henry Scott. Last season the pitching was very weak and with one year of extra experience, these second-year men should strengthen the Ram pitching staff.

Hading the freshman list is outfielder George Alvarez from Balboa, who was chosen last year as City triple-A Player Of The Year. Another is Greg Sinclair from Galileo, who pitched a no hitter in the City AAA Championship game last year.

Another standout could be football star Ron Fassler, who won himself a trip to New York for his performance in the Examiner baseball school. These plus many other freshmen will be the nucleus of this year's team.

Spikers Bask In Moderate Success

Track and field events have enjoyed successful seasons in recent years.

Although Ram track squads have failed to win the championship since the Golden Gate Conference was formed, they previously dominated the defunct Big Eight Conference and took four straight titles between 1958-1961 before their string was broken.

Last year, Lou Vasquez's crew came in third in the conference and sixth in Northern California. Of the nine entered in the Nor Cal meet, seven qualified for the State track meet where they came in 14th overall.

Standouts for City College in the meet were the members of the Ram relay team who broke their own record with a 41.9 timing, only three-tenths of a second behind first-place Oakland.

Among the veterans returning are Vern Bradford who runs the 100 and relays, 440 man Rod Coleman, Rich Klemmer and Chris Ferrigno in the 880, Mike Conroy in the two mile, Leroy Woods in the high jump and football offensive-defensive back Oliver Mitchell in the hurdles.

This 1965 track squad will miss the services of shot putter and discus thrower Pat Lewis, Ozzie Norris who ran a record 1:55.5 in the 880, and record setter Tom Gardner who ran the 220 in 21.7 in the state trials.

Basketball Team Aims For Fourth Straight Title Year

The Ram basketball squad is aiming for its fourth straight title this year. The team's coach is Sid Phelan who has been with the squad since 1955.

In 1961-62 the City College cagers won the title in the now defunct Big Eight League. In the next two years, 1962-63 and 1963-64, the Rams won two more championships, this time in the Golden Gate Conference.

In most sports, City College participates in the Golden Gate Conference, first organized in 1962.

Other colleges forming the league are San Mateo, Contra Costa, San Jose, Chabot of San Leandro, Foothill of Los Altos Hills, Merritt of Oakland, and Diablo Valley of Concord.

Intramurals And RA Offer Sports Activities For All

City College offers competition in sports outside of varsity competition through the Associated Men Student intramural basketball program and Recreation Association activities.

Each semester, the AMS sponsors intramural basketball competition within three leagues, Fraternity, Club and Independent.

To participate in the games, usually played Tuesday and Wednesday nights, the teams must comply with the regulations.

These rules specify that all players must have Associated Student cards, that teams must file petitions to enter and all players and teams must observe any additional rules posted by Associated Men Student officers throughout the season.

At the season's end, winning teams and high scorers are awarded trophies and medals on Sportsnight.

Last semester, winners in each league were the Filipino Club, Alpha Phi Epsilon and the Peacocks who also won the championship.

The college's Recreation Association offers at least a dozen different coeducational activities each semester to interested students and recognizes outstanding participants in each sport with block, shield and star awards at its semiannual banquet.

Among the activities offered are coed archery, badminton, bowling, folk, social and modern dancing, fencing, golf, swimming, tennis, volleyball, basketball and softball.

Swimmers Must Compete With Fraction Of A Team

City College's biggest deterent to obtaining a championship in swimming has been lack of depth, and this year is no exception.

There were several fine individual swimmers on the swimming team last year, but they were fighting insurmountable odds in attempts to win any swim title or individual meet.

Leading the club was Rich Gray, specialist in the freestyle and butterfly, who set records in the 50, 100 and 200 freestyle and the 100 butterfly including a 24.1 record in the 50 yard freestyle.

Fred Wales set the college's record in the 500 freestyle while Brian Edie provided the competition in the breast-stroke and individual medley and Dave Stone did the diving.

With only seven men on the team, they didn't do too much.

After a relatively successful season with a third place finish in 1963, the squad fell to sixth place last year.

There are only two swimmers returning this semester and one of them isn't definitely coming out as yet. Edie, last year's individual medley and breast-stroke is the only person who will definitely turn out. The other possible returnee is Bill Thury.

College's Athletes Hit Top On Hall Of Fame

Each spring two former Ram athletes are chosen for the City College Hall of Fame by a committee of four judges in the persons of Ralph Hillsman, dean of men; Jack Gaddy, athletic director; Tom Wilson, health department, and counselor Bill Fisher.

Since the Hall was first organized in 1957, it has grown to 31 members.

Some of the most notable ones are City College's own Dean Hillsman, captain of the first championship team and Louis Conlan, now college president, coach of that title team.

Linkers Mix Vets With Newcomers

The Ram golf team, which last year won one league meet and tied in another, hopes to surprise the Golden Gate Conference with a mixture of veterans and some newcomers.

Returning from last year's team are Jim Schroder, who averaged 77, and was top man, Mike Moore, who averaged 80, Mike Soden, who averaged 83, and Pat Eden and Steve Parish, who averaged 85.

Along with these veterans, golf coach Grover Klemmer expects a stronger team this year with the addition of five freshmen, Mike Butler from Lowell, Tom O'Kane from Lincoln, Joe Estillar from Wilson, Phil Clare from Lowell, and Ron O'Connor from St. Ignatius.

Lettermen Join Block SF Society

Block SF is an honor society composed of athletes who have lettered in their respective sports. At the end of each semester the Block SF holds an awards banquet at which letters and jackets along with most-valuable-player trophies are presented for each sport.

Last semester the highlight of the Block SF came at the awards banquet when a total of 65 awards was presented to athletes participating in football, soccer and cross country.

This included 32 letters, 27 jackets and six most-valuable-player trophies.

At the end of the spring semester, awards will be given to athletes who were members of the baseball, basketball, tennis, track, golf and swimming teams.

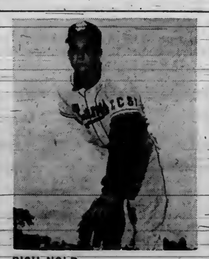
Athletes Add To Fame Here For Future Pro Call

By Mike Smith

THERE IS a popular misconception abroad that City College does not have many good athletes because "all" of San Francisco's future champions have gone to other colleges via scholarships.

This is not true, because many of the All-City winners from the high schools enroll at City College hoping for a chance to use the college as a stepping stone to a scholarship or a career in professional sports; some have made it, and a good many are on their way.



The latest in this long line of ex-Ram stars is San Francisco Forty-Niner fullback Gary Lewis who was named the "Back of the Year" when he was a Ram in 1960.

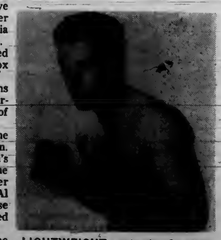
Another name from the grid world is the future National Football League Hall of Famer, Ollie Matson. The veteran fullback went on to fame from City College to USF, and later starred for many years with the Chicago Cardinals and the Los Angeles Rams.

Another pair of ex-Ram gridders who are on their way are Utah's Ron Coleman and Cal's Dave Urrea. Coleman won a scholarship to Utah where he was lineman-of-the-week.

BOB SISKA, former Junior Davis Cupper now at San Francisco State, played here in 1962-63 when Ram net teams won State titles.

RICH NOLD.

Several former Ram baseball players have become professionals. In the past three years, six members of the Ram nine have inked major league contracts. They are Butch Bussanick, Rich Farrell, Frank Gable, Russ Kunkle, Rich Nold and Walt Williams.



Presently half of them have had very successful seasons in the minor leagues. Just last month, the National Association of Baseball Writers gave Nold the 1964 Most Valuable Player award of the New York-Pennsylvania League for his 20-8 pitching record.

Then there is Kunkle, who batted a .350 clip for the Sarasota White Sox in the Florida Rookie League.

Williams, who played for the Rams in 1963, compiled a .318 batting average for the Winnepeg Cardinals of the Northern League.

In soccer, the college has become one of the strongest in the nation. Since 1959 coach Roy Diederichsen's squads have either won or tied for the championship. A couple of former Ram booters, Gary DeLong and Al Korbus, while playing for San Jose State, were chosen for the United States 1964 Olympic team.

There also have been many fine boxers produced here. A few of them are Bobby Scanlon, lightweight contender; golden gloves champ Frank Suega and Gil Gallegos, representative in last year's Olympic boxing team.

LIGHTWEIGHT contender Scanlon.

Pair Of College Coeds Earn Bank Of America Business Awards For Academic Work

This semester's winners of the Bank of America awards for scholastic excellence are Sally Poon and Barbara Favero, Dean Mary Golding announced today.

The awards will be presented to the scholars at the Business Awards Banquet honoring Northern California winners at the St. Francis Hotel Thursday, March 18.

Dr. Robert C. Gordon, dean of men at Stanford University, will be guest speaker.

Miss Poon, a secretarial major, graduated from City College last semester. She now plans to work as a stenographer at Standard Oil Co. Miss Favero, a sophomore majoring in accounting, plans to become an accountant after graduating from City College.

Scholarships are presented on the basis of good academic record, character and financial need. Every semester about two and a half as many students apply as there are scholarships available, Dean Golding said.

The California Scottish Rite Foundation awards approximately $500 each semester in scholarships.

The Hotel and Restaurant Foundation of City College offers students majoring in hotel and restaurant operation or food preparation 20 annual scholarships, ranging from $100 to $500 each.

The Mary Clayburgh Kahn Memorial scholarship is awarded to one man and one woman student. These scholarships, of $250 each, are awarded on the basis of scholarship and need.

The Lucille Lesser scholarships, awarded annually to two men graduates from a San Francisco public high school who intend to obtain a bachelor's degree following graduation from City College, total $1500 each, payable over a four-year period.

Deadline for all applications toward scholarships is Monday, April 19.

Samuels Takes Over Pep Band Director Position

Art Samuels, music teacher and counselor at Mission High School, has, since January 5, assumed the direction of the Pep Band at City College.

Along with the Pep Band, which plays for rallies and games, Samuels has also been given the direction of the stage orchestra, which functions at more formal occasions.

Both band and orchestras, whose members practice at regular sessions every week, have expansion plans for the future, including College Hour and evening performances, jazz combos and music clinics.

Glamour Magazine Sponsors Meet For Best-Dressed Coed

Tryouts for the best-dressed coed will be held in C-258 and 259 at Cloud Hall during College Hour tomorrow. Tryouts were also held on February 25.

The nation-wide contest is sponsored by Glamour Magazine, and in turn, is sponsored by the Associated Women Students here on campus.

The name of the winner will be sent to Glamour Magazine and she will be entered in the national contest for best-dressed coed. The national winner will win a trip to New York in June. Dean Mary Golding commented that City College of San Francisco is the only two-year college invited to participate along with the four-year colleges in this event.

Women students who plan to become entrants in the campus contest are requested to wear heels and a suit or sheath, and bring a small snapshot to the tryouts. Applications for the contest may be picked up in C-258 or in the women's gymnasium.

Nina Jacobs, president of the Associated Women Students, said that the judges, faculty members Catherine Shorb, Mildred McCullough, Frances Galloway, John O'Brien, Hyman Berston and Sheldon Morton, will base their selection on apparel, poise, posture, grooming and personality.

Smith Hall will be the setting for the Associated Women Students fashion show and tea to be held Thursday, April 1. Some of the models will be chosen from those who participated in the best-dressed coed contest.

Several representatives of AWS will also participate in an AWS State Convention to be held Saturday at Chico State College. Again, City College is the only two-year college invited to send representatives.

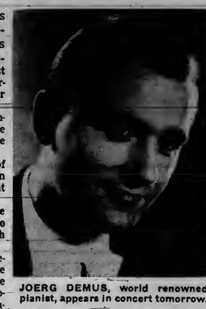
Catch A Falling Star is the theme of the convention, and the speakers are Ruth Anderson, dean of women at the University of California at Davis, and Mrs. Harlan Adams.

Concert Series Features Joerg Demus

Featuring one of the world's great young pianists, Joerg Demus, the Associated Students and the music department present their second in a series of Artist Concerts during College Hour tomorrow in the theater, music instructor Meyer Cahn announced today.

Demus, a 30-year-old Austrian pianist, is considered by many to be the most nearly "perfect" pianist of the younger generation.

He studied with such virtuosos of the piano as Walter Giesecking, Edwin Fischer, Wilhelm Kempff, Yves Nat and Michaelangeli.



In 1956 Demus was awarded the coveted Busoni Prize in Italy, and two years later he won the Cohen Bach Medal in London.

Demus is no stranger to those devotees of the classical piano, for he has more than 50 LP's listed on the current record catalog. Being a prolific recording artist, Demus was familiar to United States audiences long before his American debut in 1955.

One of the world's great artists, Dietrich Fisher-Dieskau, has paid tribute to Demus in the following words:

"Here is a musician who has hardly an equal in the younger generation. He belongs in the line of the truly great personalities to whom the piano is a means of deep and comprehensive expression — not merely a mechanical instrument.

"Under his hands the creations of Bach, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Chopin or Franck, their essential depth, their true greatness come to life in the most beautiful and most recreative way."

JOERG DEMUS, world renowned pianist, appears in concert tomorrow.

The masters themselves agree that there are very few pianists like Demus, for he has the "exceptional gift of talent polished with painstaking tutelage" that has placed him high on the roster of young pianists favored by discriminating audiences in almost every country of Europe, in the British Isles, in North America, South America, Asia and Africa.

In recent seasons in Europe, Demus has corroborated listeners' earlier impressions and won new acclaim in playing the complete piano cycles of Schumann, Beethoven and Debussy.

Demus' American debut a few seasons ago was keenly anticipated by music lovers who had appreciated his talents by virtue of his recordings.

With these to his credit, Demus vies with Rubinstein, Horowitz and Serkin in the number of his recordings now available to the American public.

The international press has saluted Demus many times as an "artist of international reknown." He has been praised by the people of Germany, France, Austria, England, Belgium, India, Spain, Japan (where he was received by Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko), Mexico, Venezuela, Denmark (where he played for King Frederik IX and Queen Ingrid), and also by the United States where he has performed in New York, Chicago, Washington, D. C., Boston, Cincinnati, Tampa and, in January, 1963, in San Francisco.

Most pianists lead highly specialized musical lives in which a steady diet of solo recitals is varied only with occasional solo appearances with symphony orchestras.

An exception, however, is Demus, who performs with distinction in solo capacities, but is equally happy — and frequently employed — as part of a musical team.

Demus appeared in a concert at the Veteran's Auditorium Monday night which was cosponsored by the Austrian Consulate General and he is expected to be true to his usually magnificent form when he plays tomorrow in the theater for the enjoyment of those who attend.

In the words of the international press, "As a versatile and personable young man, Demus has attained a pinnacle over the international musical scene aspired to by many, but accomplished by few."

Sorority Tea Hostesses

MARY MAURER, (left), president of Phi Beta Rho, and Theta Tau President Gerri Maloney, will act as hostesses at the Inter-Sorority Council's opening tea to be held from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., Sunday in the Statler wing of Smith Hall.

THE PURPOSE of the tea is to acquaint women students with the two sororities at the college. It will also provide an opportunity for coeds to learn something about the sorority program. Last semester, for example, Phi Beta Rho received the Dougherty Trophy at the Associated Women Student awards dinner.

PHI BETA RHO president, Miss Maurer, said the tea will be formal and the officers of both sororities and their sponsors are expected to attend.

Allocated Funds Allow Planning Of New Structures

Proposition B, which allocated some $31 million for city school development, has made possible the construction, starting in 1966, of two new buildings on campus as well as numerous improvements throughout the college.

Dr. Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Division of Educational Management, said today that although the exact appropriations have not as yet been made, the college is expected to acquire between two and three million dollars as its share of the total amount.

The college will also acquire between $200,000 and $400,000 for improvements from the passage of state Proposition 2. In addition, there is $400,000 left over from Proposition 1A of 1963.

Anderson said that the first scheduled project will be the construction of two new buildings at a cost of approximately $900,000. "It takes one year to draw the plans," he said, "therefore there will be no construction before the Spring of 1966."

It will take 18 months to complete the two buildings which will be built simultaneously. The first building, to be located near Smith Hall, will house the administration offices and IBM equipment as well as a bookstore.

The second, to be located below Arts Hall directly opposite Cloud Hall, will house the photography, graphic arts and advertising arts classrooms.

Anderson further stated that after the two buildings are completed the lighting and acoustical systems in Science Hall will be improved and the entire top floor of the building will be reserved for the para-medical departments.

A few additional improvement projects include landscaping the entire campus, more locker room for the woman's gymnasium and covered tennis courts.

Another long-range project will be to negotiate with the city Water Department for the possible building of parking facilities on top of the reservoir. This would increase parking space 50 per cent.

Cloney Seeks To Push Cigarette Well Plan Through Committee

By James Rauh

In the second Student Council meeting of this semester, plans were put forth to secure permanent "cigarette wells" for the campus, which has its fair share of excess cigarette butts cluttering the grounds.

Terry Cloney, AS president, was not only the one to initiate the plans for the wells, but he also drew up the blueprints of how they should be built.

When asked what the cost of his proposed project would be, Cloney disclosed that "no idea of the cost for the project has yet been reached; my only hope now is that the idea will be approved by the standing committee."

The standing committee, a newly formed group headed by Nancy Hughes, Sophomore member of council, was established to approve or disapprove any motions of the Student Council for possible improvements on campus.

Cloney added that the "cigarette wells" would be 20 in number and would be placed in strategic positions around the campus in order to aid in the struggle against litter on campus.

Ben Cademarti, representing the Campus Police at the council meeting, made the announcement that rules regarding parking lot use by students and faculty would be enforced as of last Monday.

Another announcement at the meeting came from James Wyatt, student government adviser, who said, "Any campus organization wishing to sponsor a folk concert, in lieu of financial gain, is welcome to consult with him at any time."

Wyatt has been in contact with a Van Tonkins, an agent representing three folk groups, namely the Dillards, the number one Blue Grass group in the nation; Danny Cox, a balladeer and humorist, and Joan Manning, a London recording artist.

Tonkins has these folk media under contract and is willing to have them appear at the college if a campus organization will organize and sponsor their performance. The organization would receive from 15 to 20 per cent of the profit, while Tonkins would receive the remainder.

"This possible program would," Wyatt said, "have to take place on Wednesday night, March 10, because the groups are already scheduled to appear at the College of San Mateo and Humboldt State College on March 9 and 11. College Hours activities are scheduled here.

Population Here Hits 9600 Mark

Total enrollment of students here this semester dropped by only 60 from last semester's mark, according to figures released by Mary Jane Learnard, registrar. An increase of 635 over last spring semester's mark did occur, however.

A record was set when 2300 night students enrolled this semester, the largest evening enrollment in the history of the college. This, coupled with a daytime enrollment of 7300, brings the total enrollment to 9600. Last semester's total was 9660, an all-time record for this campus.

At this time last year, of 8765 students attending, there were 6625 day students and 1900 night.

According to figures released then, there were two men students to each coed. Prior to fall of 1961 men outnumbered women students almost three to one. Statistics, showing the ratio of men to women, will be available later this semester, Miss Learnard said.

Council Changes Days Of Meetings

Student Council meetings this semester have been changed from noon Tuesdays and Thursdays to noon Mondays and Wednesdays. The announcement was made by James Wyatt, student government adviser.

"The reason for the sudden change," Wyatt explained, "was partly for personal convenience, but mostly for the adequate organization and supervision of activities which, this semester, will be scheduled during College Hours on both Tuesdays and Thursdays."

Wyatt indicated that last semester, because of the Student Council meetings Thursdays, College Hour rallies were not adequately supervised from the standpoint of organization.

"Because of the rallies," Wyatt added, "the Student Council meetings, which were scheduled for 12 o'clock, got under way much later than they should. He said that the council members came wandering into the meetings 15 to 20 minutes late because of their duties at the different rallies.

"With this happening every Thursday," Wyatt emphasized, "there was not enough time to accomplish an appreciable amount of work."

Academic Discipline Is The Key To Peace In Tomorrow's World

THE YOUTH of today is the backbone of tomorrow's world. Tomorrow's world might be a frightening experience unless our youth grasps tightly the academic discipline which alone can hold the world to peace.

This is the primary importance of all education — to inculcate in our youth the love of what St. Thomas calls "the tranquillity of order," which harmoniously joins all peoples in all nations to right principles.

CALL TO ARMS

This is a mighty task. It is a job bigger than the United Nations, but if our youth responds to the call to arms—academic arms, they will liberate the world of tomorrow—their world, and the world of their children.

It is apparent that our world is suffering from a gradual loss of culture, and culture is an academic thing. Yes, we have progress, tremendous progress, which modern youth confuses with culture. Materialistic progress will only bring man to destruction, for progress without culture is a direct defiance of the purpose for which man was created.

Man is a spiritual being, and unless he lives up to his spiritual existence, he becomes as one lost in the midst of progress and materialism.

It is up to the young persons of today to preserve culture, and by so doing they will fight the greatest war that was ever fought. They will bring back to a suffering world the unity and peace of a brotherhood of man under a Fatherhood of God.

COLD WAR STRATEGY

We have heard much in this day and age about a cold war. It has had most disastrous effects on the home front. Cold war strategy has left a weakened vanguard where fear of danger, fear of atomic weapons and fear of fear have taken possession of man instead of fear of God, fear of breaking God's laws and fear of a life of sin.

A tremendously large percentage of American youth has lost the spiritual bonds which held them to the fear of God, and they have become bold with a boldness that terms them juvenile delinquents. Their armor is dungarees, dope, knives and vice, instead of cultured dress, faith, respect and virtue.

We can never expect to have peace if our youth will not fight to bring culture and order to a chaotic world.

It is not the first time in the history of the world that culture has been on the wane. Institutions of higher learning have preserved through the ages the culture and spirituality that has saved the world, but the current materialistic and communistic movements are more insidious than any yet recorded.

CONVERSION OF EUROPE

Europe is practically converted to a democratic society where people are free with the freedom of God, and what has happened abroad can happen here. As in other countries, its first inroad was through the youth.

As the Commander In Chief of the Army and the Navy in this Great Society first calls for the induction of youth in any national emergency, so it is important and strategic that the youth of the world arise to this academic call to arms.

AMMUNITION OF TRUTH

Only thus will our youth recognize and use the ammunition of truth and subsequently grasp real beauty.

Then like the Augustine of old, a youth who grasped truth, may our youth also proclaim as he did, "Too late have I loved thee, O Beauty ever ancient, ever new."

When this sentence becomes the theme song of a future modern world—then, and then only, will we have peace.

Protestors, Litterbugs

Pamphleteers Center Of Uproar At Cal Bookstore, Incur Wrath Of Manager

City College too can now hold its head high and consider itself a full-fledged collegiate institution, for it has finally had a demonstration of its own—off-campus.

On February 19, in front of the California Book Company, two young men, in traditional demonstrators' garb of beard and sandals, handed out leaflets advocating United States withdrawal from Vietnam.

The manager of the store, disturbed by this exhibition, tried by reasonable argument to get the pair to leave. He did not succeed.

The two men, Nino and Ezra by name, took their stance in the center of the sidewalk in front of the bookstore, each flanking the side of a large, stout and rusty trash can, placed there by the now irate manager.

As if the symbolism of the trash can were not enough, the manager had taken one of the leaflets, written "Deposit Here" on it, and taped it to the can.

For his pains he received only the insolent retort that as demonstrators, they were right by being on public property, but the trash can had absolutely no business being in the middle of the sidewalk.

This was just too much for the manager. He ran into the store in a red-faced rage, screaming at the top of his lungs that he would call the police, at whose hands the protestors would get their just desserts.

Naturally, this did much to pick up the pace and renew the interests of the assembled on-lookers.

Apparently the manager had also called the college administration, for in a few minutes Dean Ralph Hillsman appeared on the scene.

The Dean got the two parties together and tried to talk the problem out. After much discussion Hillsman concluded that the demonstrators were on public property, and since it was not a college matter there was nothing he could do. He then left.

Despite the small audience, the "discussion" continued undaunted.

"I don't care if you do demonstrate," the manager cried. "You can demonstrate all day if you want to, but not here. Just look at the mess you're making," he said, pointing to the mound of litter stuffed close to the wire fence adjacent to the store.

Ezra retorted that the litter had always been a characteristic of the grounds around the bookstore.

"And talk about bad appearances," cried Ezra, pointing at the advertising painted on the sidewalk by the book store, "what about all this stuff?"

Then the police came. After conferring with the manager and the demonstrators, and deciding that no laws were being broken, they departed.

When asked by a bystander, "Would you mind the demonstrators as much if they favored the U.S. remaining in Vietnam," the manager choked out "You're just ready for their Communist saturation. I was over there in Korea for two years fighting them, and now they're doing it all over again."

The demonstration continued for awhile, but then dispersed. Those participating did not want to be late for their two o'clock classes. —A. C.

Dean's Office Beseiged By Mom's Memos

When the United States, during the Spanish-American War, wanted to send a message to General Garcia, who was deep in the Cuban jungle, they chose a fearless and responsible Lieutenant Andrew Rowan.

When a parent wants to relay a message to a college coed, the parent calls Dean Mary Golding's office, which is located deep in Science Hall and has many more important functions than message-relaying.

The United States wanted to arouse Garcia against the Spanish army; the parents want Dean Golding to find Little Lucy and remind her of her dental appointment.

Typical of parental requests are these: "Tell Junior to return the car keys, because his father can't get to work. . . Could the office please page Miss X, who should be in the library. . . . Could the office please see that Junior eats a good lunch."

Parents are not the only ones at fault. Students' wives have been known to try to reach hubby because the car has a flat tire, because they have locked themselves out of the house, or because they are at the grocery store and haven't enough money to pay the bill.

Then there are the enterprising G.I.'s who call the office for a woman student's address; the only clue the soldier has to the identity of the coed is her first name and the fact that she is blonde.

Although Dean Golding's office makes a real attempt to locate a student in an emergency, it cannot possibly take the time to track down Little Lucy in order to tell her to buy a can of asparagus on the way home.

Dean Golding says that her students want to be treated as adults, and it is very embarrassing to a student to be told to ask her mother not to call the office in an attempt to relay trivial messages.

San Francisco State has a very definite procedure for processing messages; a tape recorder informs the caller that the college is very sorry but it hasn't the facilities to run errands.

Dean Golding's office tries to be as helpful as possible, and the Dean will assist a parent in finding her offspring — provided the parent comes to the college and does the looking.

Dean Golding also assists as much as possible in helping employers locate their personnel. As long as the menial calls are eliminated, the college will be spared the expense of a tape recorder.

RAMifications

Candidates Know Folly Of Strong Stands

By Hugh Haworth

MARCH ALREADY, and the elected representatives of the nation are busy considering the new problems of the people in the light of old standards of the Constitution.

These problems should have come into sharp public focus back in the Fall of 1964 when nominees were campaigning. And then is when the people should have made choices through candidates with the proper solutions.

But as usual the campaign ended in a personality contest, name-calling fracas, and Utopia-promising banter. The voters had little to decide on. "Does he care for us laboring folk or not?" It's often decided on hearsay or the campaigners' image.

Many voters fail to see the folly of having such a meaningless campaign where nominees have not taken definite stands on many issues. They come out of the election with no grounds on which to challenge their man in Congress unless he makes a serious blunder.

For instance, if the man in the chief executive's position promises "A Great Society" or a "War on Poverty," it's hard even for experts to assess by the end of four years whether the society has improved and eliminated its unwanted poverty.

But, if this same man declares a policy of increased trade with all nations for peace, anyone can see how trade treaties and foreign commerce are progressing.

All elected officials know the power of the ballot, and despite some popular images they have cast for themselves, they always realize the possibility of being voted out at the hands of aroused voters.

So, once the candidate has committed himself to the platform, the electors have it easy. They sit back (if that's advised in a democracy) and wait for the officials to make a false move. Bam!! Out of a job—he'll be if he crosses his conscientious public.

However, the public hasn't felt this way, and the '64 election turned out the same.

The Republican platform became a fancy piece of railroading by a select group. The program led to many deserters and a platform that some Republicans couldn't stand on.

Naturally, the Democrats attacked the split GOP platform like termites from below instead of building their own "staging area" which might have proved vulnerable. Especially, since President Johnson found it easy to slide in on a couple of programs already made popular by the late President Kennedy.

With the '66 campaign coming up next year, the voters can see the same process again.

A few strong ideas will go into party caucuses only to be watered down. A platform will be made and then discarded for a personality clash. The press will follow by giving the nation a day-to-day travelogue of campaign trains.

And finally the victory will go to the best team of public relations and campaign management specialists.

The voters are the ones left out when office-seekers can slide into such a campaign routine, because then the touchy issues go undisclosed and unattended and grow to crises, most often solved by emergency action too quickly for a public airing.

Plaque Marks Statler Wing Dedication

By Greg Frazier

More than 28 years of careful planning and hard work culminated last Monday in ceremonies dedicating the Statler wing of Smith Hall.

The dedication program featured Willard E. Abel, vice president of the St. Francis Hotel Corporation and National President of the American Hotel and Motel Association; Ward Arbury, Secretary of the Statler Foundation; Dr. Louis Conlan, president of the college, and Ronald Perry, a fourth semester H&R student as speakers.

A bronze plaque was unveiled in commemoration of hotelman Ellsworth M. Statler under whose will the Foundation was established in 1934. The plaque bears Mr. Statler's image with the dates 1863-1928 and the following inscription:

"Erected by the California Northern Hotel Association in honor of E. M. Statler in recognition of his distinguished contribution to the development of our industry and his life-long fidelity to his own golden rule of service.

"'Life is service. The one who progresses is the one who gives his fellow men a little more, a little better service'."

The dinner which followed was of French cuisine.

The Hotel and Restaurant program was established in 1936 through the efforts of George D. Smith, the late Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, the college's first president, and John Clifford, instructor in the department.

The Board of Education and school department leaders recognized the contribution of the H&R program to the welfare of youth and the economy of San Francisco.

In 1956 they invested over $1,000,000 in Smith Hall. This effort was rewarded with even larger enrollments.

It was decided by the faculty and college administration that the quality of instruction could be improved by adding those facilities now housed in the Statler wing. It was further agreed that these facilities should be provided by outside means.

In 1961, Abel approached the Statler Foundation which promised a $100,000 grant if the remaining $50,000 necessary to complete the wing were raised locally. The gift provided two-thirds of the full sum.

A steering committee under the leadership of Richard Swig of the Fairmont Hotel undertook the raising of the additional funds. Contributions were many and generous.

A sum of $2500 was contributed by H&R students and their families.

The quota was met within a few months, and a pleased Statler Foundation matched the over-subscribed surplus with another $25,000.

The Statler wing and Alice Statler Library are now complete. The wing houses a lecture-demonstration room, demonstration kitchen, library and provides students with a congenial atmosphere for study.

Dr. Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical terminal instruction, under whose administration H&R falls, speaking on behalf of the college, voiced "a sincere vote of thanks to the Statler Foundation and all of those persons whose magnanimous contributions have made possible the realization of a dream started some 30 years ago.

"Thanks to their generosity, H&R graduates are now found providing 'a little more, a little better service' throughout the world," he said.

Meanderings

By Don Patten

THE thrill of charging down the mountain on two "slick sticks" in the form of skiing is enjoyed by many students at the college but to a record number, their "first love" will unfortunately be curtailed for the remainder of the season.

The inevitable "wipe out on the slopes" is always a hazard to these dare devils and those who happen to make a bad landing can look forward to a ride down the mountain on a litter fondly referred to by some as the Tyrolian Rickshaw.

More than 20 cast-laden students at the college petitioned for relief in the form of February registration by proxy. Other small requests were for special parking permits and elevator keys.

The administration answered the requests with the old saying, "think before you leap" and so in the future these accidents may not be a blessing in disguise in the form of carefree registration and "I got everything I wanted" cries.

An interesting side note came during registration when one adviser helped a young man find an ice skating class that would fit into his program. He had his leg in a cast and was sporting two crutches.

What some people will do to get out of buying a gym suit!

The cause of many skiing accidents is the presence of wild snowbums who delight in practicing their downhill technique for the next Olympic games right on the public-crowded slopes.

Imagine the picture — "the reckless one" bends his knees, points his tips downhill, and takes off. Down, down, down he races, gathering momentum and shouting the "fore of the slopes," Left! or Right! to indicate to the unwary in his path the probable flight pattern.

Almost certainly, one victim, in this case Archie Unfortunate, is going to forget which is left and which is right and the result is collision! Not very pleasant to be run over by two low flying spears and 200 pounds of charging mass. Poor Archie.

The champ gets up, wipes the snow off his $50 ski pants, murmurs sorry friend to the twisted mass of blood and bones nearby, and proceeds on his mad course of catastrophe.

Ah, what a joy it must be to feel that you can liquidate as many as five or six skiers in one run.

Meanwhile, back at the scene of the accident, Archie looks sadly down to find his beautiful new skis, a gift from Santa Claus, reduced to a conglomeration of wood and steel.

He slowly rises, puts his equipment remains in his pocket, and mushes onward bravely through the wild wilderness. Alas, three hours and two frostbitten feet later, the weary traveler enters the civilized world of the ski lodge and a warm fireplace.

As this tearful story draws to a close, Archie sadly recalls the good old days when it was possible to spend an entire weekend on the slopes and sustain nothing more than a red, sunburned nose and two cold feet.

And the moral of the tale, dear readers, is strike while the ski pole is hot and reverse the charges!

Amori, Buttimer Declare War On Poverty At College

Joseph A. Amori, placement director of City College, is collaborating with Harry Buttimer, dean of instruction, to wage his own war against poverty at the college.

Under the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, Amori has been able to offer 30 on-campus jobs to students who meet the requirements.

The Economic Opportunity Act provides Federal aid for student employment programs. This, in turn, enables certain departments of the college to hire students to fill previously neglected or newly created positions.

More than 300 eligible students have already applied for the specialized jobs.

Applicants must be United States citizens enrolled in 12 units or more with a "C" average. They must also exhibit a genuine financial need.

In addition to the positions already created and filled in the chemistry and biology labs, men's and women's gymnasiums, registrar's office, counseling departments and many other departments, Amori is preparing to find 25 more positions, which will pay $1.35 for a maximum of 15 hours per week.

Applications may be filed in S-187 from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

Sweetheart Ball Set For Saturday

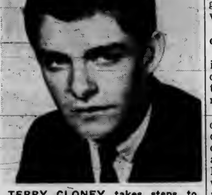
The annual Chinese sweetheart ball will be held Saturday at the Jack Tar Hotel, according to Chinese Student Club officers. The affair is scheduled from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Dick Crest and his orchestra will provide the dance music.

The ball draws its name from the judging of popular ballot of the Chinese sweetheart. Three of the contestants this year, Joyce Yim, Susi Ng and Dely Serafino, are students here. Candidates are judged on the basis of their ticket sales, talent and popular ballot.

All attending the ball can cast ballots for their choice, officers said.

The Chinese Students Club is sponsoring the candidates. Their other activities include a fall dance, talent show and, the big affair of the year, the Sweetheart Ball.



Tickets are available in C-330 and cost $3.75.

Cloney Fills Cabinet Posts

AS Head Begins Task Of Fulfilling Election Pledges

City College Associated Student President Terry Cloney, after receiving a mandate vote victory of more than 60 per cent in elections held last January, is working to follow up campaign promises with constructive action, as well as fill cabinet posts.

The first action to be taken will be the construction of 10 to 20 cigarette trash wells.

TERRY CLONEY takes steps to carry out campaign promises.

The design, construction and number of display maps of the City College campus will come under consideration at a meeting to be held this Friday

Cloney is pledged to support the Student Survival Program to eliminate dropouts and has already made the chairman of the program a cabinet post. The Student Survival Program is designed to provide assistance to poor and failing students on a personal level.

Working with the AS President on these programs and others will be the following list of cabinet members thus far appointed:

Honorary appointive cabinet members are Council of Organizations President Mary Ann Ducommun, Rally Commissioner Paul Dunn, Inter-Fraternity Council President John Hohman, Inter Sorority Council President Gerri Maloney, Publications Board Chairman Patricia H. Dutter, Campus Police representative Ben Cademarti, and Recreation Association President Barbara Kontis.

Appointed cabinet members are Recording Secretary Bernadette Bosh, Corresponding Secretary Vicki Brown, Finance Chairman James Douglas, Student Card Sales Chairman Carol Jiminez, Student Card Sales Coordinator Sandy Casetti, Athletics and Awards Commissioner Dennis Sweeney, Election Commissioner Merritt Barnes, Yell Leader Jim Stull, Parliamentarian Lynn Barker, Campus Activities Coordinator Stanley Angel, Publicity Committee Chairman Chris Billy, Cultural Affairs Coordinator Shelli Horwitz, High School Public Relations Chairman Irma Tabares, Student-Faculty Relations Chairman Christine Scales and Campus Affairs Coordinator Diane Burnick.

Card Sales Reach 1700, Still Under Anticipated Goal

Associated Student cards sold thus far number approximately 1700, AS Adviser Jim Wyatt announced today.

The goal is to sell more than the 2047 sold last spring, but Wyatt added that 2500 sales would make him quite happy. Currently there are 2200 cards in circulation, 500 of which remain to be sold.

Last semester's total sales of 3568 was the highest in the college's more recent history. It is notable to add, however, Wyatt said, that card sales run lower in spring semesters because of a smaller enrollment resulting from drop-outs and a more limited athletic program.

Wyatt encouraged all to support the college and buy AS cards, saying, "it's a good buy if students participate."

Just a few of the spring services and activities supported by the Associated Students are The Guardsman, drama presentations, a concert and lecture series and the campus police car checking protection.

Wyatt reminded all new students that all of the many activities and services plus free parking permits and valuable discounts are available to all members of the Associated Students.

Wyatt commented that AS card salesmen will be selling cards up until 2 p.m. daily in Bungalow 5 and the Silver Pole. They are also on sale at the finance office, 107, in Smith Hall from 8:45-11 a.m. and noon to 2:15 p.m.

Night Film Series Opens Tomorrow

Once again City College's cultural spotlight will focus on a Spring film series featuring "foreign films of more than passing interest," as promised by Walter Krumm of the drama department.

The first film, End Of Innocence, will be presented at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the theater of Arts Hall.

A different film will be shown every Thursday night through May 13. Tickets are free and obtainable from James Haran, Krumm or Victor Vaio in A-147.

On March 11, a Yugoslavian film will be shown, entitled The Last Bridge. Then, the following Thursday, March 18, Forbidden Games, a French film, is scheduled. Viridiana, Spanish, will be shown on April 22, Knife in the Water, Spanish, on April 29, The Green Man, English, on May 6 and The Lady With the Dog, Russian, on May 13.

These films, of which the foreign ones are subtitled in English, have all been produced within the past 13 years and are rented by the department for the enjoyment and interest of both the students and faculty of City College. This will be the third semester of presentation of a night film series.

Best-Of-Semester Photo Exhibit Due This Week

Best Of Last Semester is the title of the next photo exhibit to be displayed along faculty row in Cloud Hall, Emmett Smith, photography instructor here, announced today.

The photos will be exhibited the "first two or three weeks of March," he added. They are the work of fundamental, commercial, portraiture, color printing, advertising illustration and design and composition photography classes.

For those who would like to model for the photography classes "in order to get experience," Smith stated that signups may be made at C-249 between 10 and 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. Smith noted that other than the experience, prints of the models is the only reward for posing for cameramen.

Campus Talent Makes No Exit A Hit

By Bea Takeuchi

It takes talent to produce a hit play, and the drama department has done it with Jean Paul Sartre's No Exit.

An appreciative College Hour audience saw the fruits of Walter Krumm's selection and direction last Thursday in the theater.

The Nobel Prize winning one-act play by the French philosopher is filled with an abundance of symbolism, and each of the four students portrayed his part with the finesse of a veteran.

"This only comes with hard work, and we have some pretty versatile actors this semester," Krumm commented.

The whole play centers around three characters who are placed in a purgatory unlike Dante's Inferno, with its different levels of torture. Each sinner is given no explanation of his being there, and is left with the others to figure out his new "environment."

There are moments of satire and wholesome humor in this play, and each punch line was brought through with a clear voice.

John LaZar, a second semester drama major, though only 18-years-old, took the lead. He portrayed the character, Garcin, a coward. Garcin, in the play, was twice LaZar's age. The whole effect, with silver hair spray and make-up, brought out the talent of LaZar.

"This was one of the best examples of existentialism in theater form, and it's wonderfully satisfying from my standpoint. I had to do the part on various emotional levels," he said.

Another forceful part, that of Inez, a man-hater, was done by Grace Johnson, formerly of Fullerton College in Southern California. "It was different, and quite difficult to convey coldness. I got a lot out of this play. It was my first encounter with a Sartre play," Miss Johnson said.

Estelle, a childishly emotional adulteress, was portrayed by Cheryl Willis. "It was very difficult, and the most important role I've ever had," she commented. However difficult, she demonstrated skillful ability in portraying this part.

Bill Shattuck, a familiar face on this college's stage, took the part of the Valet. "Through the direction and scenery, Sartre's ideas came through. The play really makes you think, and shows that hell is other people, as he sees it," Shattuck said.

No Exit will be on again April 8. The production staff includes Paul Crowly, scenery; Victor Vaio, technical supervisor; Joshua Smith, stage manager, and John Marden, lighting and sound man.

Ramporium Sees Future Trouble

Despite the fact that sales remained relatively the same this last year, Dick Main, Ramporium manager, expects that sales will drop unless the store can expand into a new building in the near future.

"Right now we are at our capacity in both sales space and storage. There is simply no room left," Main stated. "Sales will continue as they are until we get into a larger store."

This stagnation and possible loss of sales in the future, he commented, could prove detrimental to future plans of the student government because of the dependence on the book store profits.

In regard to obtaining any new "gadgets" or "novelties" that might pick up sales, Main contended that these items "don't go in two-year colleges" although he believes a single page paper punch may go.

The one steady item for the past few years at the Ramporium has been a ring binder with a pressboard cover. But the sale of binders isn't enough to enhance present sales movement.

Aid For Financial Dropouts

By Mike Barber

A GREATER chance for survival is now possible for students who at some time during the semester find themselves in such a financial nadir as to necessitate quitting college.

The Student League was created recently to eliminate a student's leaving school because he suddenly finds that he is a walking poverty pocket and must make a choice between dinner or a degree, according to Carl Mayberry, director.

The Student League is not, nor does it plan to be, in a position to offer any student full support throughout each semester.

However, should someone find himself down and out, yet still possessed of a strong desire to continue his education uninterrupted, the league can offer room and board until he is able to regain his financial feet.

Other services that the league offers include aid in obtaining such necessities for life as a mattress, desk, food, some clothing, and inexpensive lodgings or a part-time job.

Student League is able to offer these services only to the extent that donations are received from the community and the work necessary for the league's existence is done for the program out of the sense of responsibility and obligation of those aided.

The main function of the league is allotting donations to those students in need. Priority is granted to those who have done the most service.

In explaining the source of largess, Mayberry said, "You wouldn't believe the amount of useful things which are just thrown away in this society, things which could make life more comfortable for students."

The Student League is the result of a succession of student-oriented organizations. During the summer of 1963 two City College students, Mayberry and Eugene Peters, began planning a loosely knit organization that would exist for the benefit of students.

At the first meeting, held in the San Francisco Public Library, students from around the bay were invited to discuss the general and specific functions such an organization might undertake. This meeting was attended predominantly by City College students and resulted in the formation of the Bay Area Student Union.

However, because of its size, broad scope and internal difficulties, the BASU folded, and from the wreckage emerged the Creative Workshop, led by Mayberry. Problems again prevailed, and the Creative Workshop ceased to exist in January, and was replaced by another, more precarious organization, Activities Unlimited, which died a month ago.

Mayberry blamed the failure on the lack of students applying for help as well as those willing to help. Mayberry thinks he may have hit upon the correct formula for survival with the Student League, "although I'm afraid it may take a little time before we're going well."

The league is a non-profit organization, with no membership fee, and is "not affiliated in any way with a religious or political group." Anyone interested in more information concerning the Student League may see Mayberry at 2016 Clement street, or call 752-0243.

Crucial Match Pits Champs Against Owls

City College's tennis squad, aiming for a fourth straight Golden Gate Conference title this year with a host of veterans and a promising group of rookies, will take on the Foothill College Owls at Los Altos Hills this Friday afternoon for their first conference match of the season.

Returning to the Ram championship net squad are Fred Suessman, who established himself as the fourth best tennis player in the State Championships last year, Ben Levy, Mike Price and Lou Engelstein.

Despite Suessman's outstanding performances last year, he will not occupy the number one berth. That position will go to "rookie" George Pontikif who went to the semifinals in San Francisco's recent tennis tournament.

The number two spot on the tennis ladder will then go to Suessman; Levy, Engelstein, Bill Krutcher and Price will follow, respectively.

When the Rams meet Foothill this week, they will be going up against their toughest foe of the conference. Although Rodney Kop and Dave MacGowan are not with the team this year, coach Roy Diederichsen believes them to be good as ever.

Although the net coach did not make any specific predictions for the Owl game, he did say this: "Our first match with Foothill will probably be the toughest of the season. If we can get by them, we can very well go all the way." However, Diederichsen later added that to accomplish this feat, the Rams must keep their players healthy and eligible.

Diederichsen also tabbed the Diablo Valley Vikings and the San Mateo Bulldogs as threats to the Rams' net title. But he seemed confident when he stated, "Last year it was the depth that won it for us. This year we have that same depth, but we now also have a somewhat stronger number one man in Pontikif."

Friday Last Day For Intramural Signups

Last day for filing petitions for this year's intramural basketball competition, sponsored by the Associated Men Students, is Friday, Earl Braverman, AMS president, said today.

Individuals who wish to participate in the games, he emphasized, must comply with certain regulations. The rules specify that all players must have Associated Student cards, that players can not be members of a varsity basketball team and that participating teams must file petitions.

Three-league competition will start Tuesday, March 16, he said.

Hopefully... A Score?

Tracksters Out To Regain Title Status In Relays At Chabot

Hoping to return to the title status which has eluded them for four years, the Ram tracksters make their debut against league opposition Saturday in the Golden Gate Conference Relays slated for 1 p.m. at Chabot.

The Red and White have been on a downward-trend since their crown-holding reign from 1958-61 in the old Big Eight and last season finished third in the conference and 14th in the State meet.

Mentor Lou Vasquez believes that, "We should be among the top teams but we won't really know how we stand until we see the others.

"Foothill, Merritt and San Mateo look strong but we could surprise them, and I doubt if we'll lose to any of the others. We're weak in some events but so are they."

In the sprints, where the Ram strength lies, half of last year's college record-holding 440-yard relay team is back. Veterans Oliver Mitchell and Vern Bradford will be joined by freshman speedsters Bob Prince, Chris Ransom and Leander Benton who placed 1-2-3 in the Academic Athletic Association 100-yard dash last year.

San Mateo appears loaded in the field events and distance running as usual. With the loss of Pat Lewis from last season's outfit, the Rams have only Laisene Malauulu to challenge the Bulldogs in the shotput and discus.

Benton, who got off a 23-3 leap in high school, is the big prospect as a broad jumper.

LeRoy Woods cleared 6-7 as a high jumper before he broke his jaw in the past campaign and is the brightest hope in an event which also boasts Dwight Tucker, Winston Johnson and Carson English.

Cagers Drop Double Overtime Effort To Comets, Lose First Crown In Four Years

By Ivan Temes

No dynasty can continue indefinitely and newly-crowned Contra Costa dealt the crushing blow to the defending titlist Ram cagers with a dramatic double-overtime 89-85 verdict February 19 before an overflow throng in San Pablo.

Unable to recover sufficiently, Sid Phelan's quintet, non-champs for the first time in four years, last week, February 23, fell before mediocre San Mateo in a heart-stopping 55-54 contest while the Comets outlasted Chabot, 97-93, to clinch the crown.

The stage was set for a do-or-die effort for the college hoopsters in their showdown against the high-scoring Contra Costans even though each club still had two games remaining.

Riding the crest of a seven-game win streak, Rudy Hansen's aggregation had compiled a 9-2 mark as against an 8-3 record for the Rams and needed a victory to clinch a title tie.

They managed to outlast the gallant Red and White who were severely hampered in overtime play when stars Mike Cahill, Henry King and Rich Henderson all fouled out.

Phelan's men continually fought from the brink of defeat in the crucial match which was knotted 15 times and had to rely on the clutch shooting of 5-8 guard Jim Duggan, who tallied 14 of his 18 points in the waning moments to keep it close.

After overcoming an early 29-22 disadvantage, the college looked beaten as they trailed by four digits with only 53 seconds remaining, but a clutch bucket by King and a 30-footer by Duggan sent the tilt into overtime. Henderson sent the contest into a second overtime stanza with a crucial tying bucket in the final minute.

With Mac Reynolds, a 6-2 forward who tallied 26 markers, paving the way the Comets jumped to an 85-79 lead, but the visitors closed the gap in the thriller to two points before pint-sized guard Jerry Overstreet iced the win with four charity tosses.

Phelan was proud of his men even in defeat and the ecstatic Hansen concurred, tabbing the losers "just as good as last year's champions."

San Mateo caught the Rams engrossed in a natural letdown, which saw them connect all but 2 of their initial 16 field goals, and further added to the woes of the college by taking a 23-16 halftime lead and increasing it to 55-46 with only 1:10 remaining to play.

In a game characterized by what was generally conceded to be the poorest officiating of the year, King had already fouled out and both Cahill and Duggan were unable to come through in their specialty, scoring consistently from outside the key.

Finally, in an action-packed last 70 seconds, the pressing Ram defense went to work while Charlie Parks and Ed Wilson controlled the backboards. Willie Jones bucketed two crucials from the field and Henderson added buckets with 20 and 10 seconds remaining.

In the ensuing scramble, the Bulldogs retained possession of the ball as time ran out on the local five.

Following is a rundown of the games which followed the Rams early-season 3-1 record:

CONTRA COSTA 87, RAMS 85

Already beaten twice, the champs-to-be couldn't afford another loss and they gained a thrilling overtime win on Al Baker's 40-foot desperation toss which swished the hoop after the final buzzer had sounded.

Wilson nabbed 22 points, while King and Henderson contributed 18 apiece.

RAMS 65, SAN MATEO 58

Duggan proved the spark as he tanked 22 markers, keeping his club in command throughout. Free throws told the difference as the Bulldogs were on the short end of a 21-12 margin.

RAMS 77, DIABLO VALLEY 59

A balanced attack gave the Rams their easiest win of the league season as Wilson, King and Henderson tallied 18, 17 and 12 digits, respectively. Heralded guard John Paul Jones of the Vikings was held to two field goals by a relentless defense.

RAMS 58, FOOTHILL 53

Looking hopelessly beaten, 55-41, in the closing minutes, the Owls unleashed a strong attack to close the margin to 56-53. With Henderson on the bench with five fouls, the Rams were unable to effectively retain ball possession but finally managed a final layup by King to preserve the triumph.

Cagers Finish Third In Golden Gate Conference

City College's basketball team defeated the Diablo Valley Vikings, 68-62, last Friday evening at Diablo to close their season in third place with a 9-5 record.

It was the first time in the past four years that the Rams did not win the cage championship. The title this year was taken by the Contra Costa Comets who turned in an 11-3 conference mark.

San Jose placed second with 10-4; Merritt finished fourth with 8-6; Chabot and San Mateo tied for fifth place with identical 7-7 records; Foothill ended sixth with 3-10, and Diablo Valley closed its season in the cellar with a 1-13 mark.

SAN JOSE 63, RAMS 62

The Rams relentlessly closed an early 25-13 Jaguar lead, turning the encounter into a seesaw battle, and finally managed a 62-55 advantage with 1:50 to play.

Fate was with the home club as little Dave Parola climaxed an unbelievable rally by scrambling to sink a five foot jump shot for a San Jose victory with three seconds remaining.

Going for naught was the 90 per cent free throw accuracy of the losers as Henderson sank all 10 of his efforts.

RAMS 79, MERRITT 69

Trailing 49-42, the victors hurriedly came back to go ahead 58-50 with Cahill sinking long attempts and the fine playmaking of Henderson setting up numerous "cripples" for King and Wilson. The latter duo, along with Cahill, contributed a total of 62 points.

Duggan added 12 more while 6-4 Wilson displayed his top clutch rebounding of the season in a fine team win.

RAMS 78, CHABOT 61

Forward Cahill put on a tremendous offensive show, sinking 36 crucial points.

All his heroics were necessary as the taller Chabot forward line, paced by league-leading scorer Russ Moe's 28 digits, overcame a 36-27 deficit to go ahead 51-50 before the Ram splurge in the final 12 minutes.

In the words of Coach Phelan, "The four fouls on King in the first half made us switch to a zone defense and this certainly helped, because Chabot didn't know what to expect."

Pair Of Old Pros Bolsters Ball Club

Only two veteran baseball players, Mike Dunn and Sid Ancar, are returning to bolster this year's predominantly freshman club.

Talent, though, is not lacking with freshmen like San Francisco's Prep Player of 1964, George Alvarez, strengthening the squad.

Dunn, who led the club in batting last season with a .333 average, is attempting a move from outfield to catcher. Ancar is vying for the same spot, while freshman Ralph Mayer from Lincoln completes a triangle around the home plate position.

Containing grounders and runners in the infield will be Henry Scott at first base, Bill True at second base, Ed Sickinger at third and Merritt Barnes at shortstop.

Grazing the outfield grass will be Ron Fassler in left, Bari Carli in center and Alvarez in right.

Chucking the horsehide from the high spot will be Ken Dyer, Greg Sinclair, Ben Kunzig, Bill Booth and Bob Lee, a transfer from Arizona.

The Rams will be represented mostly by first year men but this does not put them at odds with the rest of the league. The fact is," explains coach Ernie Domecus, "the entire league is dominated by freshman players."

The coach added, "Our showing will probably be dependent upon how well our players can stand up to the pressures of a tough league."

College Quintet Wins All-America Laurels

(Today's-Ramblings is by William Pates)

SOCCER, a sport which City College has dominated recently and football, a sport which it has not, both had City College representatives on the All-American teams for this past season.

For 25 years, City College was unable to win, buy or steal a soccer championship. Since their initial championship win in 1959, the Rams have won six straight soccer titles and produced more All-Americans than probably any other two-year college in California and the West. This year is no exception.

Mike Beltran, a veteran center-half from last year's state championship squad, and Alex Volikovsky, an inside-left, made the first All-American, while Alex Mendieta, who played several positions during the year because of injuries, was chosen for the second All-American team.

All three were instrumental in the club's relatively easy race for a 12-2 record and an 8-0 win over Victor Valley for the state soccer championship.

This has been the best showing by City College soccermen on the All-American team since 1961 when four men made the first club All-American team of the National Junior College Soccer Coaches Association.

Mendieta was by far the team's scoring leader and many of the scores were set up by Volikovsky who also did his share of the club's scoring.

However, Mendieta's scoring was tremendous, 28 goals over the season including three in the Rams' 4-1 win over University of San Francisco, and five in both the 12-1 romp over Diablo Valley and 10-1 smashing of University of Pacific as well as three in the state championship contest. This despite injuries he received early in the season.

Volikovsky will be returning next season and should bolster the offensive power of coach Roy Diederichsen's squad as he has done this year.

Volikovsky, the veteran inside-left, was particularly valuable to the success of the team. With him in the lineup, the club won many games with ease as his was the playmaker for many of Mendieta's 28 goals.

In their 8-2 loss to Stanford in which Volikovsky didn't play, Coach Diederichsen felt the outcome would have been different if he had been able to participate. This fairly well shows Volikovsky's value to the club.

Not one to leave all the scoring "glory" to Mendieta, Volikovsky also contributed his worth to the net, including two goals in the squad's easy 8-0 win over Victor Valley for the state soccer title.

Center-half Beltran, along with Volikovsky and one other man, holds the distinction of playing for both of City College's state championship soccer teams. Last year Beltran made second club in the All-Conference ratings, but he improved readily this season to win the All-American rating.

Beltran's contribution to the club's success has seemed to be primarily that of a defensive player.

Although City College has produced only five football championships in its 30-year history, the last being a four-way tie in the now defunct Big Eight Conference in 1957, this has not proved to be a deterent to producing some fine ball players.

This year veteran linemen Bernard Modret and Tony Balzar made the All-American squad, chosen in January.

Modret, a 5-11, 200 lb. offensive guard was one of the more reliable men who could be called on to turn in a consistently good effort.

He, along with Balzar, are actually the "unknowns" who are primarily behind the success or failure of any play. In the past, the City College All-Americans have all been backs, and it is time that the hidden persuaders be rewarded.

Balzar at 6-1, 185 lbs., rather small for a center, deserves congratulations for his consistently fine play, particularly considering the players he had to go against in many conference contests.

Russian Diplomat To Give Account Of Soviet Woman

Cultural attache to the Soviet embassy in Washington, D.C., Galina Frolova will speak here on the Soviet Woman during College Hour tomorrow in S-100, Joseph Jacobsen announced today.

Jacobsen, adviser to the International Relations Club, explained that Mrs. Frolova's visit to City College is being co-sponsored by the IRC and the Associated Women Students, while her entire tour was arranged through the Soviet government and the local chapter of the American-Russian Institute.

Mrs. Frolova began her career in 1950, when, after graduation from a secondary school, she entered the Institute of International Relations, and studied American history and culture.

She was graduated from there in 1956, and then transferred to the Ministry of Paper Industry. In 1959 she became Secretary of the USSR-Great Britain Friendship Society, and while in this position made three trips to England.

In 1962 Mrs. Frolova moved to the staff of the Institute of Soviet-American Relations, and in 1963 was appointed to the Soviet embassy in Washington, D.C., in her present capacity of cultural attache.

Since that time Mrs. Frolova has traveled extensively along the east coast, lecturing on Soviet foreign policy, culture, education and the Soviet woman.

Author Talks On Crisis In Values

Dr. Robert A. Thornton, dean of the school of natural sciences at San Francisco State College and noted author and speaker, presents a lecture entitled Crisis In Values tomorrow in the theater.

Also during College Hour, Paul Taliaferro, a City College student, and his Jazz Committee, a sextet, will offer a program of improvisational as well as modern jazz in the choir room.

Dr. Thornton, a public lecturer and consultant in the area of the social implications of science, will emphasize this in his speech.

Sponsored by the Student-Faculty Committee, Thornton, who is a specialist in the field of theoretical mechanics and astrodynamics, is also an author with many works to his credit. Among these is "Problems In Physics For Pre-Medical Students."

In addition to his other duties, Dr. Thornton, now serving on the Governor's Television Advisory Board, has lectured at the University of Michigan, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Stanford University.

Herbert Davis, faculty chairman of the lecture series, recommended the speech to humanities, social science and science students.

War On Poverty Advances Atop City College Summit; 30 Campus Jobless Captured

The work-study program recently instituted here at City College, through the Economic Opportunity Act, has, so far, proved itself successful and valuable to all those involved.

Director of student placement service Joseph A. Amori said in a statement issued here, "With no exceptions, all departments on campus which are participating in the program are highly pleased with student performance. The students are also pleased with the work assignments."

The EOP act, which provides federal aid for student employment programs, has enabled Amori to offer and fill 30 on-campus jobs with students who meet requirements of citizenship, financial need and academic standing.

Because of the mounting number of applications, Amori has applied for a larger quota "to meet the needs of students as well as the departments."

If requests to the federal government and the local school system are granted, at least 25 more on-campus jobs, paying $1.35 for a maximum of 15 hours per week, will be available.

Taxpayers of San Francisco County are responsible for 90 per cent of the finances and a federal grant constitutes 10 per cent.

Those students who have fulfilled the eligibility requirements and are presently on the job have been placed in departments according to their skills.

The information booth at the head of the stairs near the main entrance to Science Hall is being manned by two other students on the program. Amori described this as a "great idea" for the convenience it provides for both students and visitors.

Working hours revolve around class schedules which must include at least 12 units with a 2.0 grade point average.

The list of requirements stipulates that an applicant must need the earnings from such employment in order to continue his education at City College.

Further information is available in S-188 between 10 a.m. and noon, or 2 and 4 p.m. daily.

Students Leaving Courses 'Out Of Luck' Cashwise

Students who drop courses now and expect a full cash refund for their books are out of luck, Richard Main, manager of the Ramporium, commented today.

Main said that only half price will be paid for books returned after the first two weeks of a semester. Book returns are not being accepted now, however, and will not be until around March 15, when a list of books to be used next semester has been compiled.

"Owners of books which will no longer be in use next semester will receive a blue book price of from 25 to 35 cents on the dollar," Main added.

March Of Dimes Rally Nets $315

A total of $315.50 was raised by Phi Beta Delta fraternity which sponsored its annual Mile Of Dimes rally February 25 in order to raise funds for the March Of Dimes campaign.

The amount raised this year corresponds favorably to those tallied in past years, with $271 raised in 1964 and $330.35—$303½ dimes—collected in 1963.

Phi Beta Delta officers Dave Pritchett, president; Gary Falconer, treasurer, and Pat Brennan, secretary, and the 25 other members of the fraternity worked together to make the event the success that it was.

Entertainment was provided, courtesy of the March Of Dimes, with Jim Lange, KSFO disc jockey, as master of ceremonies, and George and Teddy and the Condors providing the lively sounds.

James Wyatt, director of student activities, considered the event an overwhelming success, brought on largely by the huge crowd attracted to the entertainment, and the extensive leg work by the various members of the fraternity who "hustled" the dimes for the drive.

Wyatt commented, "This rally was a very worthwhile project not only to the March of Dimes, but to the college because of the news coverage which showed the public the college engaged in service to the community."

Statler Wing Sees Improved Conditions

Conditions of the Statler wing of the cafeteria have greatly improved in the past few months, according to John Dunn, hotel and restaurant instructor and cafeteria manager.

"We have recently lessened the number of hours the wing will be open to 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.," Dunn said. Hours last semester were from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Since events last semester showed that there was a need for better supervision of student activities in the wing, such steps have been taken, Dunn said, and a "close eye" is being kept on the condition of the tables and floors.

Disappearing Books

"Disappearing books" are a major problem in most school libraries, and the library here is no exception. Recently, however, books have been "disappearing" at an alarmingly rapid rate. This presents a problem with which each and every student is concerned.

Books "disappear" from the library for two reasons. They are either replaced in the wrong section by a thoughtless student or they are stolen by a thoughtless thief. According to Dean Claude Silva, dean of instruction, under whose supervision the library falls, book pilfering comes in jerks and spurts.

"In the period right before mid-terms when books are in most demand," Silva said, "a large number of books disappear. These disappearances subside between mid-term testing. On the whole, however, the disappearance of books is increasing."

Dean Silva emphasized that the majority of students are honest and innocent of helping books "disappear." "As always," he said, "it is a small minority of selfish, thoughtless and dishonest individuals who deprive the majority of their valuable source of information."

The books in the library belong to each and every student at the college, and the library staff strives to keep them in the public domain where everyone can enjoy them.

Dean Silva added that any student with an "overdue" book would be doing a great service to his fellow students by depositing it in any of the overdue book slots in the library.

IFC To Sponsor Ninth Annual Blood Drive On April 8, 9

The college's ninth annual Blood Drive will be held on Thursday and Friday, April 8 and 9, under the sponsorship of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

Students, faculty members, civil service employees of the college, and the alumni will be asked to donate, Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman said today.

Hillsman said that he hoped last year's donation of 339 pints would be surpassed. The record was established in 1959, when 421 pints were contributed.

In praising the college's record as leading all the other colleges on the Pacific Coast, Hillsman noted that this was the only one to sponsor a two-day drive.

For the past eight years the donations of blood have been, on the average, increasing. The college has been recognized with citations and awards from the State Government, the Mayor's office and the Veterans Hospital for its outstanding accomplishments.

The donated blood is deposited at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank in the name of the City College Blood Bank. The individual donor is given credit in the bank. At any one time, for a year, the donor can draw from the deposit.

"The blood can be for the donor, or one member of his immediate family. In the most significant instance, a total of 32 pints was drawn for one person," Hillsman said.

The donor can also transfer his credit in the fund to any person of his choice who may need blood. This transfer is limited to eight pints, and the donor then relinquishes further claims to the fund.

Hillsman said that students under 18 will not be allowed to donate.

Those students over 18 must have parental consent. Any person 21 or older, however, is free to contribute.

The unused reserve is distributed to organizations of the college's selection.

Coed Registration For Sororities To End This Week

Coeds may register for rushing for the two campus sororities, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. through Friday in S-150, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced today.

To be eligible for registration a coed must be enrolled in at least 12 units and have a minimum of a 2.0 grade average. The fee for registration is $1.

The first sorority event is a Fireside which will be held next Tuesday in the home of a sorority member. At this event coeds get acquainted with the sororities and their members.

Coffee preference hour, a meeting in which the rushees express their preference for either sorority, will be held from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Sunday, March 28, at a sorority member's home.

Invitations to sorority membership will be received by the rushees on April 2. They will be pledging on April 5 to 7 at which time they will wear sorority costumes and give service to the college.

"The sororities stand for scholarship, service—a minimum of five hours service to the college is required each semester—and social activities," Dean Golding commented.

Men Business Majors Eligible For R.I.S. Grant

Applications for the R.I.S. scholarships, which may be obtained in S-150, are due by Thursday, April 1, Dean Mary Golding said today. These scholarships are given to men students majoring in a business field.

(R.I.S. stands for the Right of the Individual to create and Sell his ideas and products.)

R.I.S., Inc., is a nonprofit educational foundation established to make annual scholarship grants to young men enrolling in upper division work in a four-year accredited college or university program that is business oriented.

There are at least ten grants of $1000 each. The majors which qualify are business administration, law, radio, teaching of business subjects, journalism, advertising, sales, commercial art and world trade.

Recent City College winners of R.I.S. scholarships are business administration majors Richard Thomas who graduated in Fall, 1963, and Allan Merritt who was graduated in Spring, 1963 and won the scholarship twice.

This semester's possible R. I. S. scholarship candidates are Gerardus Asselbergs, Robert Barney, Tony Britton, Richard L. Cordes, Kenneth Eggers, Stephen Gradhandt, Nathaniel Haines, Richard Harder, Victor Hing Jong, Jeffrey Kaufman, Richard Kenmotsu, Michael Lapp.

Kenneth Lehto, Kevin McGinty, Raymond H. Miller, Michael Moore, Joseph Nichols, Jeffrey O'Brien, George Quick, Victor A. Ricciarelli, James Soletti, Geraldine Terauchi, Frank Todaro, Carl Tregner, Fredrick Wales, Paul Wara, Richard Ward and Aureilo Yuen.

Scholarships are awarded on the basis of the applicant's need and promise of success.

Esthetic Approach To Parking

THE UNIQUE LATTICE work depicted provides interesting scenery for the newly opened Lot E parking area.

Lot E is proving to be a most welcome addition to the campus as it serves to alleviate the excess car problem, the scourge of the neighborhood.

Despite the "esthetic approach to parking" idea, student Tom Thomas seems unimpressed as he hurries to his next class.

Hoofers Win Oranges, 7-Up

First prize winners of the dance contest at the Frosh Premiere, held last month, were Tisha George and Obie Goodrich. They were presented with two dozen oranges and a case of 7-Up at the event, Follow The Sun, which took place in Smith Hall.

They were also guests of KSOL Teen Time commentator, Lucille Lando, at the hungry i. There, Mrs. Lando, also of Teen Screen Magazine, introduced Miss George and Goodrich to the Beach Boys and singer Frank Rown.

Second place winners in the dance contest were Jeanette Cargill and John Hohman, Inter-Fraternity Council president. They won 20 free games of bowling at Castle Lanes in San Francisco.

Two Golden Gate theater tickets went to third place winners, Jaqueline Boyette and Leo Walton, Jr.

Nongraded System The Modern Solution To Drop-Out Problem

IN EDUCATION, as in everything else, we cannot do today's job with yesterday's tools and be in business tomorrow," a Los Angeles educator said recently. Is the nongraded educational system the modern solution to the drop-out problem?

Before adopting an affirmative or a negative stand, let's objectively examine the nongraded system in its entirety. To do this effectively, it will be necessary to begin our evaluation at the elementary educational level and proceed upward.

TWO SCHOOLS OF THOUGHT

Leading educators throughout the country have developed two distinct schools of thought on the system. One group believes the nongraded elementary system is nothing short of a miracle, because it gives teachers the opportunity to better recognize individual differences.

In direct opposition to this idea is the theory that a child who receives no formal grades has little motivation to study.

At this point, it may be interesting to note, that while both groups have spoken out on the merits and the demerits of the nongraded system expressing opposing viewpoints, they did generally agree on one basic principle.

NONGRADING AIDS ALL LEVELS

The nongraded school regardless of the educational level in which it is employed allows the slow learner more time for more emphasis on remedial work, the average learner the ability of acquiring education in depth, and the exceptional learner the chance to assume responsibility for his own learning far beyond his normal grade level.

These concepts, it would seem, could very easily be applied to the junior and the senior high school levels. Perhaps, the terrible teens wouldn't resent the turbulent transitional period which has, as of more recently, become synonymous with adolescence, if they could strike a happy median between personality confliction and academic achievement.

Unfortunately, personality and academic worries are not restricted to any single age group. Far too many college students have developed a "persecution complex" as a result of the over emphasis of grades.

THE PERSECUTED GROUP

Out of this "persecuted" group, an alarming number of students who didn't make the grade for some reason or another, became another drop-out and even worse, an unemployed, unskilled one.

Realizing the tragedy which may engulf an unskilled drop-out, Goddard College, in Plainfield, Vermont, has joined the pioneer ranks in establishing an experimental campus. "Under Goddard's system, no tests or grades are given. Academic progress is measured by a special system of student and faculty evaluation."

Is the nongraded system strong enough to eliminate or help eliminate the drop-out problem? The majority of educators answer a resounding yes to this question, but only time will tell the story.

One must remember, the nongraded educational system is still in its infancy. It faces the trials and tribulations of adolescence before it can reap the rewards of maturity.

Whether the nongraded system makes the grade in the final test is not nearly so important as recognition of the poignant fact—the graded system is beginning to show the imperfections of old age.

Dimes Rally

Condor Club Highlighters George 'n Teddy Hit Campus

By Kathi MacDonald

Success of the Mile Of Dimes rally, February 25, can be attributed largely to the benefit performance of George and Teddy. The rock and roll team is a regular feature at San Francisco's Condor Club, and proved its popularity by providing a vibrant show of entertainment.

George, a tall, thin, articulate fellow, was born and reared in San Francisco and attended City College for one year. "I had all music classes; I never took my books home and got A's, so I decided to take my books home and started getting C's and D's. Then I left."

A bit shorter and heavier than George, Teddy is the wit of the team. He is originally from Detroit, Michigan, where he studied at Michigan State University. "I majored in architecture and have an Associate of Arts degree from MSU. But a striving architect makes all of $125 a week!," he emphasized. Teddy arrived in San Francisco in 1962.

The pair met through mutual friends and decided to combine their musical talents. The owners of the Condor happened to be in the audience one night as George Hamilton and Ted Brown played for a fraternity party at a San Francisco night club.

A short time later they were asked to fill in for the act then playing at the Condor, which had to be cancelled.

Both consider San Francisco their home base now and feel that they are most popular in the Northern Bay Area. "The crowd here seems to accept us more, I guess it's because this is our home. We feel at ease in the San Francisco area."

Asked if they felt they were a bigger hit here or in Los Angeles, George replied, "There's really no comparison; we began here. There was no time in L.A. We just sang and had sort of a fan club."

"Yeah, of about 500 girls!," added Teddy.

On the question of records the pair has cut, George explained that until now the sole recording they've made was an L.P. titled Live At The Condor. This was cut during a performance at the club.

Considering the battle, of sorts, going on between English and American vocal groups, Teddy had this to say:

"It really isn't a question of one winning out over another. There are two definite styles. The English place more of an emphasis on the melody while the American rock and roll songs stress the beat behind the tune." He added that they plan a European trip to study "the English sound."

Both George and Teddy are 25 years old and Teddy sums up his future with: "I've always planned to retire at 30. . . . only five more years to go! Look at Ringo Starr, he's 25 and doesn't have to work anymore!"

To Win: Cage Star, Rattle Chain, Release

Did the talented Ram varsity cagers miss out in their bid for a fourth straight title because they couldn't afford a cage to lock Mike Cahill in?

It's possible.

Prior to the college's important battle with Chabot, the 6-3 Ram forward was heard saying, "I wish we didn't have these bus trips before the game. I feel caged up and the ride makes me nervous."

When they finally unleashed the likeable, big guy, all he did was sink nearly every shot he threw for 36 crucial points in one of the top offensive exhibitions in the college's history.

Remember, this is for a ball-control, defensive-minded Red and White club, not the Boston Celtics. Even mentor Sid Phelan was screaming, "Give it to Mike," a phrase all but extinct in the pilot's vocabulary.

Certainly, Cahill hustled all year and had other good nights; however, it's possible he wasn't always nervous enough.

To insure victory all the time, Phelan should've locked his big star up a day before the games. Then just prior to tipoff time made the distraught hoopster a solemn vow, "Now, now Mike, all you have to do is promise to be nervous for an hour or so while you're playing basketball and I'll let you out."

Vietnam—An Admission Of Failure

By Hugh Haworth

THE "UNDECLARED" war in Indo-China is starting to escalate with United States tactical air attacks in North Vietnam and shipments of South Korean troops and U.S. marines landing in South Vietnam.

Soon, stirring march tunes are going to be played by political leaders on every side of the issue. And the youth will go off once again to the slaughter.

HOW MANY HAVE CHOICE?

Just how many of these doomed people from both sides of the world have the choice as to how foreign affairs will be conducted or whether they want or have to go to war?

Do the citizens of the Soviet Union, East Europe, China, Indonesia and Egypt make the decisions on non-domestic matters? Chances are, no.

But the American people, especially the young people, are not too far ahead—with their opportunity to influence foreign policy relegated to a few in Washington, then forgotten. The best the U. S. can do is have 60 per cent of the potential turn-out at the polls, the most active being the middle age voters, not the "up and coming" generation.

Vietnam was a sore spot in Asia long before the Geneva Accord of 1954—and that was 11 whole years ago. That is plenty of time to have averted what's happening now.

TOO LATE TO SPREAD IDEAL

If another "police action" or "limited war" starts, this time over Southwest Asia, it will again be too late to spread the American ideal. The U.S. has to go to arms just to hold its own, and everyone takes orders from the Commander-in-Chief. It's then just a question of who comes back.

So why not continue in the citizens' day-dreaming, laissez-faire attitude until a nice cozy ready-made war can be coasted into? Besides, the U.S. has tried every method that works on these "backward nations"—buy them off, twist their arm, cut them off from the world.

For those who like to extend the 20 year cycle between wars, another possibility has been offered. The United States can take a new leadership role which works in every capitol. Uncle Sam has walked too many times through foreign streets believing he's wearing the most noble robes of kingly aid while the foreign citizens have turned to snicker at his naive nakedness.

Overseas grass-root diplomatic decisions can be made. Now democratic-ideology is being tolerated by those who are in power, who don't want any part of it, and the ideal never reaches the subjects who don't know the means to attain it.

PEACE CORPS' STRENGTH

If the Peace Corps is the most "feared agent" of America in the eyes of the Chinese Reds, there should be more young Americans out there in this nonmilitary role. Give the local ambassador and consulates more of a free hand—adapt the Democratic theory to local conditions.

Its' easy to follow the Dulles form of foreign policy right down the line. "Watch out, we're going to deter you into fighting back."

Sure, America and all the countries of the world can keep up this status quo, and stay one or two steps ahead of the dark-age politics. That really doesn't have to concern students.

STUDENTS SEEK ESCAPE

In America, students are growing up in an automated world with the 35-hour week around the corner, leisure galore. They are freed by a more complex, closer-knit world. But, instead of taking part, they try to escape and "re-create" themselves.

The student generation should know that democracy works for the people who form the ideas, make the decisions, and finally run the administration. War in Vietnam, or Borneo, or anywhere on this globe is an admission of democratic failure. To have given the last full measure for America ideals is a true sacrifice, but it is often a senseless price paid for inaction over many years.

The big hot spots for the next generation are in the embryonic state now. Given 20 more years like the last 20, they'll once again need last-ditch efforts.

Meanderings

By Don Patten

HAPPY days are here again! Yep, it's time to file income tax returns. The only prerequisite is an IQ equivalent to that of Albert Einstein.

And now here he is, the old veteran at such matters, Brian Brainy, to show how easy it is. Take it away, Brian.

* * *

"Thank you, extremely. By a simple matter of deductive reasoning and normal amount of intelligence, it is an elementary task to complete our income tax returns.

"To fill out form 1040A, print your name, address and social security number. Enter total wages, salaries, tips and so on. Enclose Forms W-2, Copy B. If not shown on enclosed Forms W-2 attach explanation.

"To continue, we simply add interest and dividends, total income and addition of items 5 and 6 and then on to items 8 through 11. If item 8 is larger than item 9, enter balance due and if item 9 is larger than item 8, enter refund.

"After zipping through the first 11 steps, doesn't it all seem so foolish to have worried about making out our returns? Now instead of dreading this yearly task, we can look forward to it with zest and zeal.

"Now for the tax computation schedule. First enter the total income from item seven of Form 1040A. Enter the standard deduction which is explained on page 2 of the instructions. Subtract line 2 from line 1. Multiply $600 by the total number of exemptions claimed in item 15 of Form 1040A.

"After these four elementary steps, subtract line 4 from line 3 and tax on amount on line 5.

"See what joy and feeling of confidence you can have in your mathematical ability after you have completed the above steps? Doesn't it make you feel elated to think that the Math E course you took from old Mrs. Witherspoon is finally paying off?

"One noteworthy point is the fact that by using the tax table or standard deduction, we eliminate the complicated part of the tax return. It's always nice to do things the easy way.

"The standard deduction is 10 per cent of item 7, page 1, form 1040A, but not less than the minimum standard deduction which is an amount equal to $200 ($100 if married and filing a separate return) plus $100 for each exemption claimed in item 15.

"Well, now that we have taken care of the basic points for our tax return, it's just a simple matter of following the remaining directions and sending our completed forms to our nearest Internal Revenue office."

* * *

Thank you, Mr. Brainy. Surely all have profited greatly from your clear, concise, easy-to-understand directions.

By the way, those who could possibly—after Mr. Brainy's clear, concise directions—have any questions concerning tax returns, which will probably be the exception rather than the rule, can call their nearest Internal Revenue office and let him fill them in on the details.

His number is on page 2a of form 68G-431X in the third column of the telephone deduction table.

By subtracting the area code from your zip code, you can get your local office phone number without looking it up in the directory. The Internal Revenue service sure knows how to give every break it can to the populace.

Plaque Unveiling

STATLER FOUNDATION SECRETARY Ward Arxbury and Adolph De Urioste, President of the Board of Education, unveil the bronze plaque commemorating hotelman Ellsworth M. Statler in ceremonies held March 1 dedicating Statler wing. The plaque, the unveiling of which was the focal point of the evening, states in part, "Life is service. The one who progresses is the one who gives his fellow men a little more, a little better service." Under Mr. Statler's will, the foundation was established in 1934 and the plaque itself bears his image with the dates, 1863-1928.

AWS To Name Best-Dressed Coed At April Fashion-Tea

By Lee Larson

Twelve finalists and four alternates for the best-dressed coed contest were chosen during College Hour last Thursday. The winner of the contest, selected from these finalists, will be announced at the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea on April 1.

The twelve finalists are Jean Arana, Phyllis Bacigalupi, Jean Baptista, Sylvia Fernandez, Lindo Jo Heiser, Sharon Hunter, Galina Ivashikoff, Socorra Rivera, Theresa Santos, Sharon Strauss, Cindy Louise Wilkin and a twelfth student to be selected at a later date.

Alternates in the contest are Sharyn Grantz, Cheryl Morris, Guiliana Spera and Dixine Gillespie.

The name of the winner will be submitted to Glamour Magazine, which sponsors the nation-wide contest. Ten finalists, chosen from colleges throughout the nation, will in turn be selected by the editorial board of Glamour.

The entrant from each college must submit, with her name, three full-length photographs, showing the entrant in campus attire, casual luncheon attire and in evening dress.

An all-expense paid trip to New York in June, an appearance in the August issue of Glamour, and personal gifts from Glamour and companies associated with the magazine, will be awarded to the nation's best-dressed coed.

She will also have the opportunity to visit several fashion industries and cultural centers during her stay in New York.

Selection of the best-dressed coed will be based on her ability to manage a clothes budget, individuality in use of colors and accessories; a suitable campus look for the immediate locale, appropriate use of makeup, poise, a good figure, and excellent posture.

Glamour Magazine also places a great deal of emphasis on impeccable grooming, Nina Jacohs, president of the Associated Women Students, said.

Twenty runners-up will be awarded honorable mention by Glamour.

H&R Department Slates Five Scholarship Awards

The Hotel and Restaurant department is awarding five scholarships this semester. There will be two Harvey M. Tay class scholarships of $250 each, the George D. Smith scholarship of $250, and the Spreckels-Russell scholarship of $100.

Second, third and fourth semester students can apply for these scholarships through Lawrence Wong, H&R instructor, in Smith Hall.

The department's regular scholarships will be processed in June and awarded next September.

Retail Florists Plan Open House, Dinner

Retail floristry students here are planning their annual open house which will take place Tuesday, March 23.

Open house will be held from 5 to 7 p.m., followed by a dinner on campus.

The hotel and restaurant department will prepare and serve the dinner, cost of which is $3.50 per person.

Students planning the event said that there will be competition in the annual window display contest by the more advanced students. Awards will be given for these, and displays will be judged on the basis of their originality, composition and workmanship.

College Literary Magazine Seeks Copy

Manuscripts are now being accepted at C-331A for possible publication in the college's Forum Magazine, Catherine Connolly, Forum adviser, announced today.

The Forum staff, led by David Crooks, editor, Patrick McLaughlin, assistant editor; Helen Ladd, advertising manager; Robert Miller, promotion, and Vicki Powers, secretary, review the material contributed and, in conference with Miss Connolly, select copy for publication.

The tentative deadline for submitting material is April 24.

"The current type of literary pieces in vogue is poetry," Miss Connolly said, "and we have been receiving fine contributions of just that. What we really need more of is prose manuscripts, of which relatively little is submitted.

"Forum's life blood," she emphasized, "is its student contributions, but we need more and more manuscripts."

Creative work in any literary form, such as short stories, short one-act plays, essays not exceeding 1500 words, critiques of books, authors or institutions are welcome.

Articles of current interest, poetry and light verse may also be submitted for consideration.

"Satirical or humorous material of any form is especially encouraged," Miss Connolly added.

Once the manuscripts have been turned in, a series of operations commences in the interim between the deadline and the publication date.

Forum Magazine will go on sale in June.

Forum, published annually for 29 years, offers all students who are interested in writing the opportunity to have their work published and invites all students to submit their manuscripts for consideration.

Plans Underway For Campus Presentation Of Fantasticks, Off-Broadway Smash Hit

By James Rauh

Plans are now underway for the presentation of the smash off-Broadway hit, The Fantasticks, at the men's gymnasium Tuesday night, April 27, Garo Mirigian, student entertainment chairman, told the March 1 meeting of Student Council.

"The theater group, now performing nightly at the Little Fox Theatre on Pacific avenue, has agreed to present its fine show at the college for the one night at a special price," Mirigian said. He will spearhead the organization and presentation of this special performance.

Mirigian quoted the figures he had obtained on how much it would cost the Associated Students to program this event.

"Backing for one night will run $600 or 50 per cent of the total paid attendance; sound equipment costs $50; stage lighting will be $20, stage sets and scenery $20, and miscellaneous, such as promotion will require $10," Mirigian said. "The total cost for the program will be approximately $700."

The Fantasticks have been playing at the Little Fox Theatre for nearly nine months and continue to draw large crowds nightly, especially on their weekend performances.

Mirigian explained that the reason behind the theatrical group's agreement to perform at the college is simply that their nightly profit during the week would just about equal that which they have already been guaranteed by the AS.

Mirigian added, "Their big money comes from the Friday and Saturday performances, so this single show will not detract from their financial progress at all."

Admission for this special program has been set at $1 with AS card, and $1.50 for general admission. Tickets are expected to go on sale sometime in the near future, and will be sold by members of the Sophomore Class.

Other business which came up at Student Council meetings last week included an announcement from Campus Police Chief Ben Cademarti that from 20 to 30 men had to be denied campus police duty because of the lack of facilities and uniforms.

Student Card Sales Chairman Carole Jiminez stated that the AS card sales have reached the 2050 mark and that they are selling faster every day.

AS President Terry Cloney indicated that he and his brother Tom, Sophomore Class president, would perform the work to be done on his proposed plan for the campus "cigarette wells."

Cloney emphasized, "By doing this we can save the college $23 per well, whereas if outside labor were to be recruited, the cigarette wells would cost $35 each."

Cloney added that he would appreciate the help of any council member or student at the college who is willing to aid in the construction.

City Police Firing Range Opens To College Gun Squad

For the first time in its history, the Campus Police pistol team will be able to use the San Francisco Police Department's pistol range.

This is due to increased safety precautions used by the team, according to Tim Foley, its sponsor.

The team has also been asked for the first time to enter competition in the San Francisco Pistol Club.

The pistol team is younger this year because several good shooters have been graduated. The first team, which is still tentative, includes James Juarez, Robert Nasise, James Dean and Ray Chezick.

The pistol team competes in open matches with other groups of comparable rating. The rating depends on how the team shoots as a whole, Foley explained. It can be either master, expert or sharpshooter. The rating of the team this year is expert.

The team travels to different pistol ranges in Richmond, Oakland, San Mateo and the San Francisco Pistol Range.

Last year, in National Competition at Fort Ord, the Campus Police pistol team won team trophies in the .22, .32 and .45 caliber events against competition from the entire United States and its territories.

Choir Singers To Attend Music Educators' Confab

Fifteen members of the Chamber Choir will attend the Music Educators Conference from Sunday, April 11, through Wednesday, April 14, in Long Beach, California.

They will be part of a 1000-voice college choir under the direction of Robert Wagner, who is the director of the famed Wagner Chorale.

The Chamber Choir, which is under the direction of William Grothkopp, will also participate in a music festival on Monday, May 3, at Stanford University, and on Tuesday, May 25, they will give a concert in the theater here.

All the campus choral groups will perform on Thursday, May 27, during College Hour.

Chance, Begging And Pleading Tell Rally Talent Story

Talent for College Hour rallies is often obtained by pure chance and on some occasions, by begging and pleading, said Director of Student Activities James Wyatt, when asked how the Rally Committee goes about finding talent.

Most of the professional people appearing on campus during College Hour do so on their own incentive. Exposure and the chance to be seen by two thousand persons during a single performance, is important to their careers. Also, it is good—and free—publicity which helps to promote their images further.

Some of the performers appear on behalf of publicity-seeking drives and campaigns. In the future, top name performers will be on campus to help publicize the Peace Corps and the Blood Drive. Roger Miller, who appeared on campus last Thursday, did so through his recording company on behalf of the American Cancer Society in memory of Nat King Cole.

Since most of the performers appear voluntarily, they rarely receive a fee for their time. However, lunch and sometimes expense money is provided. According to Wyatt, when the subject of a fee arises, it is usually the manager, interested in his cut, who does the talking.

High Cost Of Living Deters Seekers Of Higher Education

By Mike Barber

THE PROBLEM of getting a college education is often financial as well as academic. A survey that was made last year around Bay Area campuses indicated that the average amount spent by a student who lived at home and attended a public college was about $1000 a year.

The cost for those living away from home averaged out to about $2300 a year, although some were able to eke out their survival, and still remain in college, on as little as $85 a month. Many were partially, and some wholly, self-supporting.

With paying part-time jobs that fit into the general schedule of most students are, of course, the exception. Many people are forced to take drudge-work jobs at substandard pay just to make ends meet.

With as many students as there are in the Bay Area, and with an estimated 75 per cent of them needing to work, a part-time employer's market exists. Competition is keen for even the more menial jobs, and students are glad to get them.

The average California factory worker now makes slightly over $3 an hour. Part-time jobs often pay less than half of that. More hours must therefore be spent on the job to earn a sufficient amount to sustain oneself. This may cut deeply into valuable study time, resulting in lower grades or the taking of lighter course loads, or both, and subsequently more years spent in college.

Scholarship loans are of course available to those students who are eligible, but eligibility is for the minority. The average majority of students have the average majority grade—C.

Scholarships are secured by those with the highest grade point average, as well as need. Even a National Defense loan, which is repayable after graduation, requires a B minus average.

Those students constituting the great majority, even if they are only C students, are an important segment of the nation's economy. They are a main body of the group the labor experts can count on not to be out looking for a permanent job this year.

Imagine what would happen if the nation's colleges and universities were to shut down suddenly. The immediate glut on the labor market would be more than formidable.

The government, by encouraging students to stay in school, is able to alleviate the immediate problem of the jobless thousands now on relief, as well as see those students educate themselves to an employment level and position where there is a shortage of qualified personnel.

Coincident with the general socialistic trends of the government's present policy, it may someday be feasible to expect Uncle Sam to pay a student outright a living wage just for attending college. Some industries now have a limited plan along these lines.

Such a plan, it can be assumed, would not be as efficient under governmental management as it is in the industrial program, but certainly it would be real encouragement to individuals who are now in such a financial squeeze as to consider quitting college for a full-time job.

After all, besides raising the general education level of the masses and reaping the benefits thereof, the government would also be constructively keeping off the welfare lists that percentage of students who would otherwise be jobless and living off the public dole.

Foothill Owls Shock Netters, 4-3

Rams Drop First Match In Golden Gate League Era

By Mike Smith

Ram netters, defending champions of the Golden Gate Conference, already have their title at stake as they were edged by the Foothill College Owls 4-3, in their first league match last Thursday at Los Altos Hills.

The match, which was originally scheduled for Friday, March 5, but was changed to a day earlier on request by Owl Coach Dick Gould, marked the first time a City College tennis team lost a Golden Gate Conference league match since its first year in 1962.

Foothill copped the first two singles of the opening GGC tennis match behind Owls Rual Contreras and Goeff Kerber who handed George Pontikif and Fred Suessman their first singles losses of the year.

In a vain attempt to come from behind a 2-0 score, San Francisco's Ben Levy and Louis Engelstein won their initial singles matches to even the score at 2-2.

Mike Price lost a very tough game to Larry Rogers of Foothill who in turn put the Owls out in front 3-2 with his victory.

City College's doubles team of Levy and Suessman lost to Contreras and Ponces; and with this Ram loss, Foothill clinched the match.

Englestein and Pontikif won the last doubles match.

This Friday the Rams will take on the San Jose Jaguars on their own court.

Diamondmen Open Against Merritt In Tuesday Clash

The opening of the 1965 baseball season next Tuesday, March 16, will be marked by the Rams' meeting with Merritt College.

The Rams completed last season with a 10-11 record, while Oakland grasped a dungeon position with a 5-16 outcome.

Despite the difference in final standings, the Rams could not manage to come up on the winning end of all three games against Oakland's Thunderbirds in 1964.

Along with hopes of coming up with a winning season, coach Ern Domecus cautions, "It's always tough in this league."

The Rams have stood up well so far under the pressures of rough pre-season games.

In a game with Cal's JV squad, the locals managed to secure a tie in the ninth inning while George Alvarez went three for four with a homer.

Bill True's two round-trippers were a spark of light in a close seven to six loss to Stanford.

Pitcher Ken Dyer showed good form allowing only six hits while the Rams collected 17 in dumping University of San Francisco frosh, 14-2.

True and Alvarez are graduates of Balboa High School.

New Dimension In Baseball—JV's

Baseball in City College has reached a new dimension. For the first time Ram baseball will field a junior varsity as well as the traditional varsity squad.

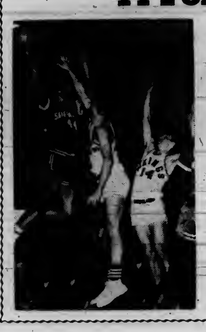
In addition to the 20-man roster used on the varsity club a padding of depth is now provided with the addition of the second team. This addition is, in fact, unique in all the Golden Gate Conference. These baseballers are an independent club since there is no league as yet.

Newly appointed JV coach, Robert Quigley, predicts, "A junior varsity league is the coming thing. City College, being first, is the pilot and it seems logical that others will soon see the benefits of such a team."

So far junior varsity competition has been only with high school teams. Mission, Woodrow Wilson and St. Ignatius have baptized the yearling Ram team with a record of two wins and three losses.

"This new team," Quigley indicated, "is designed to give promising freshman hopefuls a little experience so that they may have a chance of eventually joining the varsity squad. Many good players are sometimes lost permanently in the process of varsity cuts."

RA Places Second In Sportsday Competition



Second prize was taken by the Recreation Association's coed basketball team at a sports day which took place at Hartnell College February 27.

The Hartnell team won first place in the competition which was represented by members of six other colleges.

"We're pretty excited about winning the second place trophy," Barbara Kontis, RA president here, said. "Our team rarely had a practice, while Hartnell has been training for a year."

RA representatives will attend a sportsday at Cabrillo College Saturday where they will take part in either fencing, bowling, volleyball, archery, folk, social or modern dance.

44 For Two

Charlie Parks goes up into the air for a one-handed jump shot from the corner as two members of the cellar-dwelling Diablo Valley Vikings, Wayne Smaker and Dave Reynolds (14), vainly try to obstruct the Ram cager's view.

Parks, one of the team's top subs, finished the season with 19 points.

Ed Wilson, one of the Ram's top five, turned in 164 points to his credit which is the third best on the team.

Wilson's teammate, Mike Cahill, led the Rams in scoring with a total of 203 points for 11th place in conference scoring.

Henry King and Rich Henderson, who will not be returning next year, turned in 187 and 145 points respectfully.

The Rams' number five man, Jim Duggan, racked up 111 points.

Harriers Bid For Win At San Jose In League Debut

By Ivan Temes

It's time for the Ram tracksters to throw out the practice record and play for keeps Friday as they travel south to take on San Jose at 3 p.m. in their initial Golden Gate Conference dual meet competition of the year.

With tuneups at Modesto and the league relays last week having prepared them, coach Lou Vasquez' men hope to avenge the 71-65 upset banded them by the Jaguars in last season's injury-riddled campaign.

The Red and White pilot is happy with the weather break offered his contingent thus far and feels, "If we can avoid serious injuries we should win because San Jose isn't supposed to be strong."

Loaded with sprinters, the college will have to depend on their accrued points to overcome a noted lack of depth in the pole vault which boasts only Bob Incerti, and the shotput and discus in which only Laisene Malaulu and Ralph Raine rate as threats.

Veteran Vern Bradford, a part of the Ram record-holding quartet's 440-yard relay mark of 41.9 set last year, leads the 100 and 220 dash men who also include All-City sprint champ Bob Prince, Sam Johnson, Chris Ransom and Lee Benton.

Defending conference winner Chris Ferrigno, a 1:55.5 half-miler, and 4:30 miler Rich Klemmer head the distance men slated to compete Friday.

If Benton, who is credited with a 23-3 high school leap in the broad jump, or Leroy Woods, who high jumped 6-7 last year, can regain their past form they should emerge as winners.

A versatile quartet which can go in either the low or high hurdles gives the Rams maneuverability in these events. Oliver Mitchell, former All-City champ who was injury prone last season heads the group which also includes Harold Johnson, Bob Coleman and Dick John.

If the Rams get past the Jaguars, they shouldn't have any trouble with weak Diablo Valley at Berkeley the following week but then the competition toughens considerably as the local spikers bost highly-rated Foothill on Friday, March 26, in their home debut.

Local Golfers Prepare For Friday Match With Vikings

Ram linkers are scheduled to open against Diablo Valley's Vikings in what may prove to be a definite test of their golfing skills Friday at Harding Park.

The local choppers will be facing the formidable Clyde Sniffen, Diablo's number one man, and winner of the Air Force National match for the past three seasons.

Great changes are expected in this year's squad, according to coach Grover Klemmer. "These boys show far greater consistency than many of the teams in past seasons, though they could use some improvement."

So far the team ladder is rather unstable and there is some speculation as to which men are ranked where, according to Klemmer. "I am attempting, however, to give every man an equal chance," he said.

The team will be dependent greatly on the talents of veterans Jim Schroder and Mike Sodan, last season's number one and two men, and the team will be bolstered by the wide variety of newcomers from various high schools, 15 in number.

Freshman Tom O'Kane, recently of Lincoln High School's championship club, and former St. Ignatian Ron O'Connor are expected to give the team the lift it lacked last year when the Rams finished eighth in the conference.

Although the Rams ended in the cellar last year with only a single win, they did turn in a much better performance in the annual conference tourney where they came through with a third place finish.

In the February 26 match with Hamilton Air Force Base, the Rams triumphed, 41½ - 30½, on a day that, according to Klemmer "went right for the boys." O'Kane had a bad start with a seven after the first hole but overcame his self-imposed handicap and ended the day as top man for the Rams with 74.

Schroder knocked out his usual 77, and O'Connor notched a 78.

"This is a team with great potential and could take a conferenence championship," Klemmer commented.

Ill-Fated Reporter Spends Gooey Night

A FUNNY thing happened to this writer on his journey to the San Jose City College basketball game last month. He didn't get there.

On Tuesday, February 9, this Guardsman writer was making his way toward City College to board the basketball team's bus which was due to depart for San Jose within a self-estimated time of five minutes.

On his short trip, he noticed out of the center of his eyeballs a bus rumbling past him holding people who looked like King, Cahill and Jones.

When the scribbler got to the college gymnasium, he realized that it was King, Cahill and Jones whom he had seen, and not a trio of fellows who just happen to resemble the Ram cagers.

However, it wasn't long before he was on the road, in his ol' man's car, with plenty of time to make the game which was due to start in some 110 minutes. Then there was a very sickening bang, and the red panel board light glowed like those of an airliner when it is in dire trouble; the screaming sirens in the car was only a product of his imagination.

But luck still wore a slight and devious smile, for the car was near the Los Altos turn-off, and the injured vehicle limped off the speedway, down the turn-off, and sank into a gooey and muddy roadside.

After a quick check of the terrible suspicion of a blown rod, the resourceful reporter jogged down to the nearest gas station, after tripping a couple times in the dark, where he called home for help, and called San Jose to let them know that the Rams' scorekeeper would not be there.

When this certain journalist then finished calling the local papers to inform them that no one was going to call in the scores that night, a stranger popped his head into the phone booth to tell the reporter that he was not a stranger but a friend. He was.

Somehow this ex-stranger knew the people who were on their way from the city to bail out our newspaperman. What's more, they were all to meet at this ex-stranger's house where it was slightly warmer than the too exhilarating night air.

Just as they were about to leave, a very nosey gas station serviceman warned them that if they did not inform the Highway Patrol of the wounded car, it would be taken away and held for ransom.

The reporter, conscious of all good advice, and well-aware of the condition of his bank account, listened and heeded the highway prophet's word of caution.

Operator: "Good evening Sir, may I help you?"

Reporter: "Yes, can you please give me the Highway Patrol?"

Operator: "Is it an emergency?"

Reporter: "No.... not exactly."

Operator: "Why do you wish to call them?"

Reporter: "I want to inform them about my car so they won't tow it away as abandoned."

Operator: "Then please phone 411 for information." (Click).

After a few more short bouts with a gang of three more indifferent operators who seemed to enjoy their devious little game of "guess whom you're going to get next," complete with that humming of the telephone wires that sounds like soft, diabolical laughter, this certain journalist had thought he hit the jackpot when a very authoritative voice over the wire said: "Highway Patrol!"

Reporter: "I want to notify you that my car is temporarily disabled just off the..."

Voice: "Oh, I am sorry, I am not the one to help you. I'll connect you with upstairs."

However, "upstairs" said that the traffic bureau was the department that should have been called and not "upstairs."

The traffic bureau was a very understanding group of people, and the third person the reporter spoke with was the correct person, but his words of wisdom were somewhat useless by this time.

"There's no truck going by Los Altos tonight, so you have nothing to worry about," and for the fourth time the question was asked, "Are you sure it's entirely off the roadway?"

The Guardsman staff member replied with a perfected "Yes."

Around this time help arrived in a form of a pick-up truck. Once the car was ready to tow, both vehicles became deeply embedded in the bubbling ooze. Needless to say, that ex-stranger was not there, and neither were those crummy hot-rod teen-agers who had been mocking the situation.

So San Francisco, the city that knows how, was once again summoned to help some natives who didn't. That second force of aid came about 90 minutes later in an automobile with a crushed fender and a brand new bouncing hood.

Incidentally, unknown to the San Jose-bound Guardsman writer, there was a fellow Guardsman member on the bus, and he even had a spare scorebook.

Ram Splashers May Go Under

Lack of depth is again threatening to dim City College's swimming team efforts. As of this writing, the team's official status is uncertain. Presently, a shortage of members threatens to eliminate the sport from the college's varsity sports program.

The problem of team depth, or lack of it, is not new to the college's swimming team. Last year, the squad was also plagued by insufficient members.

Competing with only seven members, last year's team was able to manage only two victories, both coming in practice meets. Otherwise, the team struggled through a winless conference season, placed sixth in the Golden Gate Conference meet and failed to score a single point in the Northern California Championships.

The team is scheduled to open the season with a meet against the College of San Mateo Friday. So far, the meet will take place as scheduled. There has been no official cancellation.

Block SF Elects Two Grid Stars To Office

Block SF Society met recently and elected two ex-gridders to offices. All-American Guard Bernie Modret was elected President, and All-American Center Tony Balzar, Secretary-Treasurer.

Dutch Elston, club sponsor, announced that the Block SF raised $200 by running the refreshment stand at all Ram basketball games here and local prep games played in the men's gymnasium.

Block SF has a membership ranging annually from 60 to 80 lettermen.

Joel Andrews To Display Uniqueness Of Harp At C-Hour Concert Tomorrow

By Don Patten

San Francisco Conservatory of Music instructor and virtuoso harpist Joel Andrews will appear in concert during College Hour tomorrow in the theater, music instructor Meyer M. Cahn announced today.

The uniqueness of the harp will be shown in a lecture-demonstration given by Andrews.

Hailed by the Associated Concert Artists as a gifted artist who brings a new dimension of dynamic vitality to the rarely-heard harp, Andrews will play Hachas by Ribayaz, Romance by Palero, Giga by Corelli, Theme and Variations by Haydn and Variations On Come Ye Sons Of Art by Purcel.

As a program climax, he has chosen Chanson Dans La Nuit and La Desirade by Salzedo, as well as Concierto Serenata by Joaquin Rodrigo.

Born in Santa Barbara, Andrews, son of guitarist-autbor father, began studying the harp at the age of nine. After serving in the Air Force as first harpist with the service symphony in Washington, he married and went to Cleveland where he received a B.M. and M.M. in harp under Alice Chalifoux at the Cleveland Institute of Music.

While in the East, Andrews studied under Carlos Salzedo and played in a number of harp festivals. Chosen to head the harp department at the University of Texas in 1956, he founded an annual Southwestern Harp Festival for which he served as director, conductor, composer and soloist.

In 1960, he participated in a National Harp Festival with 50 harpists from all over the country.

With studios at the San Francisco Conservatory and Sherman Clay in Oakland, Andrews prepares students for a wide variety of professional activity. His standard aid to harpists, explaining the intricacies of harp-writing to composers, appeared in 1957.

Since the death of Salzedo, he has discovered and notated 26 special effects or new sounds, bringing the total to 55.

Andrews explained that "many of these new sounds I discovered while I was composing and seem to arise out of the basically dramatic nature of the harp. Adding it to a score is like adding ten instruments, so wide is its gamut, but it must be studied as such.

"With the influence of tape composers on the musical thinking of today, the harp, with its subtle, exotic and esoteric sounds, becomes increasingly valuable. The harpist can improvise complex sounds it would take an electronic studio weeks to synthesize."

JOEL ANDREWS, San Francisco Conservatory of Music instructor and virtuoso harpist appears in College Hour tomorrow. Hailed as a gifted artist, Andrews will display the uniqueness of the harp in a lecture-demonstration.

Quartet Of College Coeds Receive Scholarship Awards

By Kathi MacDonald

Four City College coeds will receive scholarships tonight at a banquet sponsored by the San Francisco Medical Assistants' Society. Sheila Moxom, Carole Parnow, Wardene Oliver and Maria Singer will be presented with $50 scholarships.

The society, which has done a great deal in coordination with the college in establishing the Medical Assisting program here, works on fund-raising projects each year to raise the money for the scholarships.

WARDENE OLIVER, State Information chairman, is one of four coeds to receive scholarships tonight.

The coeds have qualified and been selected for the awards through good scholarship and participation in campus activities. Misses Moxom, Parnow and Oliver are currently completing their last semester here and are acquiring work experience by assisting in doctor's offices.

Miss Singer has another semester to finish and is gaining experience through hospital work.

All are graduates of San Francisco High Schools and "all are exceedingly interested in getting into the field of medical assisting," Harryjean Tiesselinck, Medical assisting instructor, commented.

Students applying for either the Lesser scholarship or one of the four Scottish Rite scholarships were reminded today that application blanks are available in Dean Mary Golding's office, located in S-150 in Science Hall.

One Lesser scholarship is awarded each semester to the man student, a recent graduate of a San Francisco high school, who has attained a high scholastic rating. The recipient must also show he is deserving through character and need.

In addition, the scholarship is contingent upon his plan to transfer to a four-year college. He is awarded $500 while in attendance at City College and $1000 when finally enrolled in a four-year college or university.

During the preceding semester, officials of various San Francisco high schools singled out several graduating students who would qualify for the Scottish Rite scholarships and sent a list of recommendations to Dean Golding.

Following this procedure, Dean Golding mailed notices to the potential candidates, with information regarding applications. "The idea is to have good students attend City College for two years," Dean Golding said, in explanation of the recommendation process.

Daniel Faye, who is presently attending San Francisco State, is a past winner of the Lesser scholarship and Frank Wong, Charles Miller and Herbert Schott are now enrolled at the University of California at Berkeley, also with the help of Lesser scholarships.

Deadline Nears For H&R Applications

The deadline for filing letters of application for the five hotel and restaurant scholarships awarded this semester is no later than 4 p.m. next Monday in the department's office in Smith Hall.

The letters should stress why the applicant feels he deserves a scholarships from this department, Lawrence Wong, secretary to the Hotel and Restaurant Foundation Scholarship committee, said.

Eligibility for a scholarship requires that the student be a full time H&R major enrolled in at least 12 units and maintaining a 2.5 average, he added.

There has been a good response this semester for information concerning the scholarships, according to Wong.

Other members of the committee include coordinator Louis Batmale, chairman, and Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

The five new scholarships this semester have boosted the semester's total of H&R scholarships by $1000, Wong also reported. There are usually only a total of ten scholarships per semester which give financial aid to help H&R students through the college.

The first college drama production of the semester, Teahouse of the August Moon, will be staged on the nights of March 31, April 1, 2, and 3, in the college theater, according to Lucille Meredith, speech instructor and director of the play.

In line with the new policy of the drama department, which invites various members of the English department to act as guest directors for its productions, Miss Meredith has accepted the position of director for Teahouse of the August Moon.

"Tryouts for the play were held on the first two days of classes this semester," Miss Meredith said, "and nearly all of the roles have been filled with the exception of those of three children."

The cast for Teahouse has John La Zar in the lead role as Sakini, Jamie O'Neill as Gregovich, Ray Lynch as Fisby, Mike Dobrinski as Purdy, Tom Dotzler as Captain Maclean, Vincenetta Gunn as the Old Woman and Diane Nichols as the Old Woman's daughter.

Joshua Smith will be the stage manager, serving also as assistant director.

Teahouse is set on the island of Okinawa, in the Pacific, sometime around 1944. Miss Meredith describes it as "a gentle play which depicts the American occupation troops trying to bring democracy to the people of Okinawa."

Placement Office Seeks Students For Summer Jobs

By Mike Ruvald

Joseph A. Amori, placement director, is searching the campus for qualified adult students to fill numerous summer positions at out-of-town resorts and casinos.

Amori particularly emphasized the need for qualified students when he stated that he is seeking, "only people who meet the requirements.

"Since many of the casinos offer on-the-job training, they don't even have to be skilled. The only requirements are that the applicant be 21 and willing to work out of town," he said.

The majority of these jobs are of the public contact variety at Lake Tahoe casinos and resorts.

Amori has many openings for dealers, change men and women, waitresses and cashiers. The casinos provide on-the-job training for these positions, and all that is necessary is the fulfillment of the age requirement and a good physical appearance.

Also available are jobs for experienced food checkers, fry cooks, pantrymen and swimming instructors. The latter must possess a senior life-saving certificate, examiner's credential and instructor's certificate.

These jobs are "not only interesting," Amori commented, "but they pay up to $18 a day."

Amori also stated that there are summer jobs available for men and women from 18 to 20 years of age who have training and experience in boys' and girls' camps.

There are openings for young people who are skilled in areas such as arts and crafts, athletics, aquatics, drama, religion, horsemanship, archery and marksmanship.

Such jobs provide room and board and have a pay scale ranging from $25 to $50 dollars per week.

There is also a limited number of secretarial and clerical job openings for women here in the city, according to Amori.

AS Sponsors Trip To Squaw Valley

A weekend of skiing at Squaw Valley, April 9 to 11, just preceding Easter vacation, is on the Associated Student calendar, with Stan Angel, campus activities coordinator, accepting applications in bungalow 5.

The entire price for the weekend, which includes round trip transportation by Greyhound, two nights lodging at Olympic Village Hotel, four meals, swimming pool pass, and a Saturday night dance, is $27.

Participants will also receive a 10 per cent discount on ski lifts, rentals and instructions.

Students are required to have an Associated Student card to be eligible to participate.

En route returning to San Francisco, the group will stop at Sacramento for a second dinner Sunday night.

Open House Will Feature Winning Florists' Displays

The retail floristry department will hold an open house for interested students and faculty of the college from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., next Wednesday, March 24.

On exhibit will be window displays designed by students around the theme of International Flowers. During the open house, students will demonstrate techniques in flower arrangement.

Three awards will be made for window displays judged on the basis of originality, composition, and workmanship. These awards will be presented next Tuesday night, March 23, at the department's open house.

Judges for the competition are displaymen and florists J. Glotfelty, R. Rusyn, C. Chapman, and K. Fuller.

Students who will enter window display competition are Charlotte Eberhard, Paul Masteron, Vince Amado, Vicki Cook, May Jew, Larry Janzen, Havnet Kalakian and Gcorge Gagna.

Their themes are the nations of France, Ireland, Mexico, Holland, Samoa, Australia, China and Italy, respectively.

Demonstrators are Miss Eberhard, Allen Leonard, Susan Fergerson, Evelyn Hohn, Richard Ishida, Kathy Richards, Dave Rowe, Vivian Sommers, John Cunningham, Miss Cook and Miss Jew. Among their themes are Old Vienna, Easter and Mother's Day.

Speakers at the March 23 program are Edward Goeppner and Charles Hom. Victor Stein will present awards, and Janzen will represent the students.

The Sophomore King and Queen Contest will soon get under way, Cloney said. The couple will be choesn from nominations submitted by various campus organizations.

Working with Cloney to plan activities for the current semester are Carmine Meyer, vice president and Lynn Barker, secretary.

Nongrading System Makes Its Mark On The Education Scene

EDITORIAL COMMENT was made here last week with regard to the ungraded educational system, and the possibility of it helping to eliminate the drop-out problem.

By coincidence, The California Institute of Technology has abandoned the use of formal grades on the freshman level, and is extensively using the pass or fail method, while another college, Carleton, in Minnesota, has begun a similar program for certain upper division courses.

By further coincidence, The Associated Collegiate Press enclosed with one of its regular releases to THE GUARDSMAN, an editorial concerning the Institute's decision, published in the DAILY REVEILLE, the college newspaper of Louisiana State University.

The DAILY REVEILLE says of the California action:

While it's still too soon to assay the value of this move, we feel it is certainly a step in the right direction.

It would appear, from the overriding emphasis and vain pride that some of our "scholars" take in their averages that the main end of college is getting the grades necessary to join campus honoraries and have a top-notch transcript to fool gullible employers.

Not all students with high averages fit this pattern; many of them are the most conscientious students in school. But it is true that there are students who can ace an exam Monday and be a total blank on Tuesday.

With a system similar to that introduced in California, these apparently brilliant minds could turn their efforts from getting grades to that little-talked-of-subject, Knowledge.

Such a system could do the average student a service as well. The pressure of competing would to a large extent be removed from consideration and replaced, we would hope, by an honest desire for learning.

We don't believe that competition, as far as the grading system goes, is necessary or even desirable in today's university. If one learns no more than how to cram for a test in four or six years of university level work, who is to benefit? Least of all the student.

We see in the future a revolution in the educational system and honestly hope that Louisiana is a leader rather than a follower in that revolution.

Forgotten Bay Sharks Afford Angling Fun

By Mike Barber

SHARK fishing has been too long neglected on these pages, and as the advent of the season is at hand, not another issue shall be wasted.

Those who might ask "Why Sharks?" need only venture forth on opening day of trout season at the old fishing hole to have their question answered. The day has come when the weekend angler must wait in turn to elbow up to the water's edge and wet his line.

Such a situation is enough to try the nerve of even the most patient of fisherman, and when the rewards are nothing but a brief spat with a domesticated, machine-fed hatchery trout, serious questions of valnes and sportsmanship are raised.

Much the same is true of deep sea party boats. The so-called sportsmen are as often fighting each other for a choice spot at the rail as angling for fish, and the fish caught are often the result of much more effort with sonar devices, short-wave radios and spotting planes than rod and reel.

The day of the gentle walk at stream or ocean side, lazy drifting in an open boat alone or with friends has all but disappeared. Those days, the rewards of which were often more than a stringer of fish, gave a man a chance to achieve a heightened awareness of himself and nature.

They have been instead replaced too often by the business of catching fish, netting a trophy, or jnst coming out of the rat race with more sheer poundage than your neighbor.

There are still some around San Francisco Bay who have not forgotten the old values. Very few are women. The women who do fish seriously are usually hard bent on catching more and bigger fish than men, which they often do.

Those who realize the full value of fishing are almost always old men and children. The fish they try to catch around here is almost always shark, a worthless creature in itself that lies generally forgotten by the world of fishermen.

They fish for shark because the creature itself is a little absurd, maybe, but probably because the fish, being valueless once it has been drawn from the water, tends less to intrude itself into the values and pleasures of simply fishing for and catching it.

Sharks abound in the bay, and though they may remain here the year ronnd, it is in spring and summer when they are most active and voracious. It's also at these times that a man feels most like getting ont and spending some time in the ontdoor world.

The shark fisherman is a leisurely person. Because it is the act of fishing that is of primary importance and not the means, his equipment need not be the most intricate and expensive, although he also realizes as a source of satisfaction the well-oiled operation of a smooth running reel coupled with a strong but sensitive pole.

The sharks caught from the bay are usually five to ten pound sand and leopard sharks, although larger ones are not uncommon. They cruise the shallow bottom of the bay in search of anything edible. While not spectacular fighters, a ten pounder will provide a real test of skill to anyone adventurous enough to hunt him with light tackle.

Squid is as often chosen for bait as not. Sharks are not particular. Squid has the same general properties as a strip of inner tube, and therefore need not be constantly coddled and checked like more delicate baits.

The most convenient and uncrowded location is chosen. The line is baited and cast into the water and the fisherman moves into a relaxed period of waiting. With the pole well anchored and visibly placed to announce wildly when a shark has hooked itself, the sharker is free to wander down the beach, to submerge himself in convcrsation with a friend, or simply to curl up in the sun with a couple quarts of Old Bubbly and ponder the waves.

A Dream Come True

Theater Type Setup In H&R Amphitheater Lab Makes Learning Easy

By Bea Takeuchi

There is another theater on campus. In this one, the reality of food preparation takes the place of make-believe.

"This is my dream-come-true, our baby," says Larry Wong, personnel director of the hotel and restaurant department. "We can lecture and demonstrate to 80 students at once. Soon there'll be closed-circuit TV."

The stage in this playhouse is a thick marble-topped stainless steel sink with a built-in refrigerator. Within an arm's length is a $15,000 portable oven which can produce goodies for the audience.

The theater seats are slanted toward the stage, giving the room an atmosphere of an operating room for medical students. To insure a good view of each demonstration, mirrors will soon be installed high above the sink.

The use of mirrors will reflect the most intricate steps of any detailed recipe.

"Students won't be able to insist that they weren't able to see the demonstration. He'll learn to make marzipan right," Wong said with a laugh.

Adjacent to the theater, the H&R department also has its own library. It is carpeted wall-to-wall, and furnished in tasteful modern furniture. Only books pertinent to the department are available here.

Included in the library is a large conference room, also furnished to compliment the library decor.

In the enormous Smith Hall kitchens, Wong pointed to some modern equipment. There is an amazing three-kettle contraption which boils individual hot soups in minutes.

Another miracle worker is a small appliance that heats and defrosts two and one-half pounds of frozen peas in less than two minutes.

Wong, referring to a recent article in a trade magazine, said, "Someday we'll even have a thing that will cook 20 hamburgers simultaneously in the matter of minutes!"

Wong is an energetic person, an untiring former instructor who looks into every facet of hotel and restaurant operation. He is intensely interested in the acquiring of scholarships for his students.

"I worked my way through college during the depression years. It was tough. I vowed that if I ever could, I'd help others," he said.

He makes numerous out-of-town trips and long distance calls and consumes much of his own spare time in the procurement of these awards.

"Sometimes it takes at least two to three years to get one donor. Sometimes it takes only six months. It depends. Large corporations are very impersonal and they tend to overlook two-year colleges, so we have to work extra hard," said Wong.

The hotel and restaurant department has placed more than 3000 students in jobs in the Bay Area.

"Much of the credit goes to Betty Lytle, the secretary. She keeps the office running smoothly. She's so efficient that I'm able to spend more time seeking monetary scholarships for our students," Wong said.

MEMBERS OF THE HOTEL AND RESTAURANT department are shown here as they view a demonstration which utilizes the new $15,000 portable oven. It is part of the equipment recently installed in the ampitheater of the Statler wing, which seats an audience of 80 at one time.

Pit Provides Playland For Traffic Misfits, Surveyors

By Peter Dorn

The reservoir, also known as The Pit, Crater Lake, and "101 South at 5 p.m." serves in many diversified capacities.

Its manifold uses include parking, driver education proving ground, obstacle course for sports cars, standby reservoir, dragstrip and field trip destination for the surveying classes in the engineering department.

The primary function of a reservoir is, of course, to hold water. This, the reservoir does well . . . when it rains.

The present primary function of The Pit is to provide parking facilities for the Associated Students . . . which it does very well, as everybody knows.

In early spring, when baseball and track begin, the south reservoir serves as a "sports center" for batting practice and track workouts.

Recent suggestions have been made to convert the occasionally rain-filled south reservoir into a permanent swimming pool.

The reservoir has a few other purposes. For instance, not one graduate from the college's surveying class can honestly say that he does not know the dimensions of The Pit.

Driver education officials of the surrounding high schools also realize the value of The Pit. Because of the angle of incline on the walls, there is little danger of having a frustrated student driver go amuck and cause any real damage.

The worst that could possibly happen would be that he might hit a parked car. This is probably why he is in the college parking lot.

Of course it's a natural site for one to demonstrate the performance of his car to his classmates. What with the absence of the mounted motorcycle police the reservoir is a dragster's Utopia. A word of caution must be directed to the high-performance enthusiast here, in all fairness.

It seems that the Campus Police have a set of "walkie-talkie" radios. One man is usually stationed on top of Science Hall with one of these radios.

He is capable of detecting this form of sport and of dispatching a patrolman to the scene in a relatively short period of time . . . about a minute. It is not advisable for one to participate in this sport on a clear day.

So here it is, a beautiful, clear, spring day. This inactive sport is sitting in his car, sulking. He looks about him and sees a variety of automotive "goodies" such as chrome wheels, de luxe hub caps, tachometers. H'mmmm.

Again, in all fairness, he is reminded that Old Spoil Sport is perched atop the roof, fascinatingly interested in any form of automobile dismantlement.

Spoil Sport is so interested that he will actually dispatch one of his cohorts to go down and find out what's going on—in the usual relatively short period of time.

RAMifications

Students Aim At Grades But Fail To Think

By Hugh Haworth

STUDENTS need to get out of the rut and robotism of mass education and to try their own ideas. Unfortunately, they are shuffled into numbered seats to catalogue information up to and including most of their college career.

They specialize too late, work apart from "life" for 16 years in the perfect textbook world, worry and grope for grades, and probably have attempted no original thinking until they get well past the Bachelor's degree.

For these robotized students there flickered back in the '30's a glimmer of hope. Columbia University started the "New College" based on many needed reforms, including the following:

1. Individual guidance, differentiated programs, no uniform credit ladder.
2. Relatively few lectures, more individual reading programs, projects, conferences and seminars.
3. Efforts to achieve closer contact with "life" working on farms, in industry, in welfare agencies and studying abroad.
4. Closer relationship between student and faculty.

Tragically, the "New College" idea didn't spread far. So students have to take it upon themselves to correct their own educational program.

They could do what one man studying at Stanford did—he enrolled only in the highly related programs for self-gratification. This Stanford student loved electronics, and electronics and mathematics were the only classes he ever signed up for. All the way through the graduate level of courses.

Because of the sheer mass of scientific knowledge this man had obtained in the many scientific fields which interested him, he was finally awarded a Bachelor's degree, though he didn't satisfy the requirements.

A degree wouldn't have made a difference, because he was offered a $50,000 job by an electronics firm for his superior technical mind and avid interest in that field. He's happy.

He's writing books in good English, too, about his interests. He doesn't seem to lack an institutional background in communication when he puts over what is on his mind. He has complete motivation, enough to buck the narrow bounds that channel 90 per cent of American students.

Not so drastic an idea would be the full use of counselors and teachers. These two types of educators for the most part are neglected by students. Students should visit both to discuss course ideas and get a clear picture of what is ahead in the student's plans.

Students should read professional journals and tour actual conditions in their chosen fields, the sooner and more often, the better. Facts show the average change of jobs for a man's working career is five or six times. Too many students enter their professions without their "eyes wide open."

Most important would be finding courses, teachers or colleges where, in addition to funneling facts, the student can experiment and present his own ideas on each snbject.

There is no "New College" to attend, so students have to create their own by treating college as a tool of their own interest and not another institution to endure for the sake of a diploma.

Medals For Russian Mothers

Students here were treated last Thursday to a disclosure of the true modern Russia by Galina Frolova, cultural attaché to the Soviet embassy in Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Frolova, a petite, well-groomed person, described herself as the "typical Soviet woman of today."

She emphasized the USSR's pursuit of culture and the "good life," as Americans do not see it.

"Medals are given to mothers of five children or more. Our country highly appreciates motherhood," Mrs. Frolova said.

According to her, there are no annoying Planned Parenthood Clinics, nor is there fear of a population explosion or Disneyland.

"We do not have an unemployment problem," Mrs. Frolova claimed, adding, "there are 47 millions in the USSR, and over 48 per cent of the women are employed, 39 per cent in industry."

She stated that the family is very much a part of Soviet life today.

Questioned as to when families can congregate, since both parents work and children are placed in state nurseries, Mrs. Frolova said, "they can see each other on weekends."

She quoted countless statistics on every type of position that requires higher education, and pointed out that Soviet women exceed those in other countries in filling these positions.

According to Mrs. Frolova, the pursuit of intellectual and cultural knowledge constitutes the "good life," and is foremost.

No statistics of women bricklayers and cement workers were cited.

"We have an invisible income from public funds for public consumption," she said, not elaborating as to where the public consumes this, or realizing that in America people's incomes become invisible.

Mrs. Frolova's lecture, held during College Hour, was sponsored by the International Relations Club and the Associated Women Students.

Students Begin Fall Program Scheduling With Counselors

Appointments with counselors to discuss Fall programs started this week, Walter McCloud, counselor, stated today. Students will be called in by their individual counselors according to their free-hour forms.

If students have not turned in a free-hour form and self-addressed postcard they should do so now at the counseling offices, McCloud advised.

Those who have received interview times and realize that they cannot keep the appointment should notify their counselors "two days in advance," he warned. If he fails to do so, the student loses his registration position which is established by grades and seniority.

Summer session schedules also should be approved sometime prior to the end of the semester, McCloud said, adding, "Even though a student has not been called in for Fall program, he can still plan his summer classes before his scheduled appointment."

Registration for the summer session will be held in the periodics section of the library Tuesday, June 1, from 9 a.m. to noon; Wednesday, June 2, from 1 to 4 p.m.; Thursday, June 3, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and Monday, June 28, from 9 a.m. to noon.

Withdrawal from classes will be permitted from June 4 to July 9, but McCloud noted, however, that once students have signed up for a class they cannot change their program, only withdraw.

McCloud stressed the importance of early visits to counselors to avoid the end-of-semester pile up.

"In the past," he commented, "counselors have not had time to work with each student. There are 425 students for each of the full time counselors and interviewing cannot be started until well into March."

Programming prospective graduates from local high schools will take nine full days from each counselor's time.

Students planning to transfer to another college should make application as soon as possible, McCloud warned.

Meanderings

By Don Patton

SWOLLEN membranes, draining sinuses and dissected insides from which flows alphabet soup are just a few of the pleasures in store for the television viewer who is confronted with obnoxious advertising in the form of commercials.

Viewers sometimes feel that their wits have departed. It is only by sheer will power that they hang onto a thread of reality.

For example, cakes float across the kitchen only to be captured later by a butterfly net. Ah, what a wonderful invention light shortening is.

Or there is a washer increased to a size of ten feet simply by the addition of some powerful type of detergent. One Einstein on the scene describes it as "scientifically impossible," but through the wonders of television, the extraordinary event occurs; the Einstein is proved wrong.

Viewers who have never flown, but have a profound desire to do so, need buy only a popular dish soap and the excitement of finding themselves aloft is realized. This experience has another advantage too; it gets you out of the kitchen FAST!

In a flash back to the days of chivalry, dragons and damsels in distress, a knight on a white charger races down the trail looking for dirty people. He finds some in an oil field and with a thrust of his lance, they become white as doves and clean as virgin snow.

A giant tube of hair cream appears, and slowly arising from the interior comes a beautiful blonde smothered, of course, by gooey, ozzy cream. Miss Gooey threatens or challenges a viewer by saying, "Are you man enough to try it?" One man is but, unfortunately, he only gets a redhead out of the deal and spends time complaining about it.

Dusting can be and nsually is an unpleasant task. However, it can be worse when you find yourself running around the house trying to catch up with a certain piece of furniture that doesn't wish such service.

Just bring out the correct dusting product and lo and behold, the chair comes to you!

For lovers of adventure—two great new stars from beneath the sea, appear for the first time on the grocer's shelf; here they are, two new kinds of—ready—SOUPS!

Those who'd rather fight than switch can look forward to a "shiner." Who'd rather switch than fight can remain his self-esteem by repeating the old saying, "I'd rather be a live chicken than a dead hero."

And such noted personalities as the lady who makes a powerful good pot of coffee, the man who got rid of his speckles, the giant who inhabits washers and those old friends, Granny Parsons and Juan Valdez must not be overlooked.

Fortunately, these great stars will continue to haunt the minds of all who find themselves attracted to the great invention of the times, fondly referred to as the "idiot box."

Engineers Offer New Mayo Grant

A "first" for the Engineering Society in the form of the William K. Mayo Scholarship will highlight this semester.

The award is open to any qualified student in either the architecture, engineering or engineering technology departments, but applications are due in Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150, by Friday.

A fund-raising dinner sponsored by the society last semester enabled it to set up the scholarship in honor of Mayo who founded the engineering department here before he became Dean of Instruction.

He is now retired, but has made donations to the scholarship fund.

The society's president, Bob Bossi, explained that the qualifications will include not only need but a stable grade point average plus a vivid interest in the engineering field.

Dean Golding's scholarship committee will select four candidates from the applications and will then submit them to a special committee from the engineering department for the final decision. The $50 scholarship will be presented at the special awards assembly held at the end of the semester.

"The society hopes to be able to offer a scholarship each semester and is presently seeking support from donors to ensure this project," Bill Provose, society secretary, emphasized.

Top Entertainers Expected At IFC Blood Drive Rally

For the fourth consecutive year, the Inter-Fraternity Council will sponsor the college's annual Blood Drive, scheduled April 8 and 9.

A rally will precede the occasion, and the "best available professional entertainment" is being obtained through the Musicians Union and the Actors Guild, James Wyatt, adviser to student government, said.

Prior to 1962, the drive was under the sponsorship of one fraternity, Tau Chi Sigma. When the fraternity dissolved, the IFC assumed responsibility for the drive.

This year, as before, awards will be given to those fraternities that contribute the most to the drive.

A benefit to donors will be the unlimited withdrawals from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, trustee of blood deposited from City College, for himself or any member of the donor's immediate family for one year.

The donor can, within the year, transfer his rights of up to eight pints to any person of his choosing. This would relinquish all other rights the donor might have to his deposit in the blood bank.

Regulations provide that donations are limited to those age 21 or more, or with parental consent, age 18. Those under 18 cannot donate.

Passes Available For Student Ushers

Students interested in ushering at Opera House events may obtain passes in S-150 and were advised today by Dean Mary Golding to do so as soon as possible.

Reason for the immediacy of application is that the college is limited to four student ushers for each performance.

Coed ushers are asked to wear a black dress of street length, although dark blue or dark brown dresses or suits is acceptable if no color is a part of the outfit. Short socks are not to be worn.

Men ushers are asked to wear dark, business suits, white shirt and conservative necktie.

Ushers must appear at the site of the performance on the date for which they have signed up. If they cannot attend they must return the ushering ticket to S-150 no later than two days before the date of the performance, Dean Golding said.

Symphony concerts are usually scheduled for Wednesday evenings, Thursday afternoons and Friday evenings.

King Of The Road

ROGER MILLER sings up a storm to a capacity audience during a March 4 College Hour performance at the Ram. With an estimated crowd of 3000, Miller won the audience's approval almost immediately using a brisk sense of humor delivered with his famous Southern twang. Singing his four top hits Chug-A-Lug, Dang Me, Doo-Wacka-Do and King of the Road, Miller interrupted his busy rehearsing schedule at a popular Peninsula night club to make his benefit appearance in memory of Nat King Cole which brought more than $200 in contributions for the American Cancer Society.

Soph President Tom Cloney Projects Campus Map Plans

By James Rauh

A project for the construction of 25 City College maps was introduced by Tom Cloney, Sophomore Class president, during the Monday session of Student Council meetings last week.

Cloney emphasized the fact that each semester there is a large number of new students attending the college, and that his maps would help them considerably in becoming familiar with the layout of the campus.

In his Student Council speech, Cloney indicated that the maps would be encased in a redwood frame, covered with clear laminated plastic, and placed in and around the "busier" thoroughfares of the campus.

The total cost of producing these maps will come to $71.65, according to Cloney, whose list of expenses reads as follows:

Redwood, $18; plywood, $7.68; laminated plastic, $13; liquid hi-gloss plastic, $7; paint brushes, $3.12; screws and nails, $2.65; plaques, $7.20; lettering, $6.65; sandpaper, 90 cents; paint thinner, 45 cents, and miscellaneous, $5.

"The maps themselves will be printed by the visual aids department for free," Cloney said, "so the initial cost will be for their encasement and mounting."

He added that "plastic will be used in place of glass because it is less expensive."

Cloney stated that the 25 maps, which will each measure 13½ inches by 17½ inches, will be placed in strategic spots such as in Smith Hall, Arts Hall, Science Hall, the men's and women's gymnasiums, in the library, bookstore and the parking lots.

Cloney's project plans have been submitted to a standing committee.

In other Student Council activity, Terry Cloney, Associated Student president, announced that he and four other members of the council had attended the Golden Gate Conference Presidents' meeting during the previous week.

"The major theme discussed at the conference was the annual Art Festival," Cloney said, "which this year will be held at San Jose City College from April 20 to May 1."

The Art Festival is an annual event sponsored by the Bay Area's two-year colleges to attract works of art by students in any of the Golden Gate Conference colleges.

Cloney announced that the college is required to pay a $25 entrance fee to engage itself in the competition, and that any student who wishes to enter his painting, sculpture (weighing less than 200 pounds), or whatever must pay a $1 entrance fee.

"Trophies will be awarded for first, second and third places," Cloney said. "Any work entered by the college will be put on exhibit here during the last three weeks of the semester."

Jim Doudiet, Finance Committee chairman, announced that the college golf team requested a $100 supplementary budget to enter a tournament during Easter vacation. Grover Klemmer, golf coach, thinks "the team needs the experience, although the tournament is non-league."

Ben Cademarti, Campus Police representative, announced that beginning this week parking permits will be issued only during Thursday College Hours, in C-119.

Bird's Eye View Of Campus Deters Crime

Up on the Science Hall roof there is a man not many students know is watching them. This person is a member of the Campus Police and is placed there in an effort to protect students here.

This policeman is equipped with a pair of binoculars and a two-way radio. At this observation point from which major student parking lots are visible, the man on the roof can call in and report any malicious persons or activities on the campus.

"When the police officer thinks something wrong is happening, he communicates by walkie-talkie with Campus Police headquarters.

"Men are then sent out to investigate the situation," Lawrence Lawson, criminology department chairman, said. "Last semester we used this system and broke up a car stealing ring."

The watchdog on the roof also can see all roads leading to City College. This allows him to call in and report any traffic problems where policemen are needed to keep traffic running smoothly.

"If we did not have this service, I am afraid traffic around the college would be in a chaotic state," Lawson commented.

To coincide with some of the new methods to make the Campus Police more efficient, the Campus Police board this semester introduced a three-week training period for rookies. "Rather than put them right on duty, this training will bring about a more effective and better Campus Police force," Campus Police Chief George Rudometkin explained.

Part of this new training will include lessons in first aid, traffic direction, public relations and the writing of parking violation citations.

Asked if the college had an increase in parking violations and citations, Lawson said, "No, it's about the same at the beginning of every semester. People must be educated, and for some it is a period of trial and error, except that the error costs them $2."

Police Chief Rudometkin warned students that to park anywhere on campus they need a permit. They are available at the Campus Police office, C-110, for those with Associated Student card, car registration and driver's license.

Rams Abandon Swimming Competition

College Sluggers Challenge Diablo Nine In Twin Bill

By Pete Franklin

San Francisco's varsity nine will journey to Diablo Valley to meet the Vikings in a twin bill Saturday with the top half of the double-header starting at 11 a.m.

The games promise excitement as the Rams have rarely done anything other than split double headers in the past. Diablo has seven returning vets, though they did not pose much of a threat in last season's Golden Gate Conference pennant race.

"Again this season, any team can win any game, and losses on every squad are no uncommon sight," attests Ernie Domecus, Ram coach.

"This is a pretty balanced league, and almost everyone is a contender until after midseason," he added.

The Rams will have a rest after the twin bill before hosting Chabot's Vikings at Balboa stadium at 3 p.m. the following Tuesday, March 23.

In 1964, the Rams dropped two to the Vikings while winning one, and in the preceding year, rain plagued each meeting of the teams.

Needless to say, luck with the Vikings has not been great.

Rain may be prominent again this season, and already has thwarted Ram preseason efforts as the Marin County Tournament was rained out, depriving the Rams of both vital practice competition and a chance at some prestige.

"Rain, or whatever won't stop the conference from being a tough one," Domecus said, "and we'll be as tough as any in it."

The pilot hopes his club can parlay the hurling of Ken Dyer along with the steady performances of second-sacker Henry Scott and catcher Mike Dunn and the slugging of Bill True and George Alvarez into an improvement over last season's 10-11 record.

Duffers Tee Off Against Merritt At Harding Park

Anxious Ram duffers, as yet undefeated in preseason competition, clash with Merritt College in their second league match Friday at Harding Park.

Golf coach Grover Klemmer's enthusiasm was evident when he stated that the "expected the team to give a very good accounting of itself. This is due," he continued, "to the fact that this season's golfers are better and more consistent than in years past."

Veteran Jim Schroder, the team's anchor man, supported by a pair of Irishmen, in the presence of Ron O'Connor and Tom O'Cane, led the linkers to decisive victories in the team's last three practice matches.

Successful attacks were launched against Hamilton Air Force Base, the University of San Francisco Frosh and Santa Rosa.

Pressed for further information, Klemmer also admitted that his charges, in addition to their balanced attack, had the home course advantage.

Harding is the Ram practice course, and knowledge of the tricky fields is a decided aid.

Spikers Take Third In League Relays, Duel Vikings Next

By Ivan Temes

Confident of annexing a victory, the City College cindermen take on conference foe Diablo Valley at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in Berkeley.

Host team University of California Frosh will also participate, but the Rams, who finished third in the Golden Gate Conference relays, are out for the league triumph over the Vikings and based on comparative scores, the Red and White rule as solid favorites.

In their opening practice meet the college spikers downed Modesto, 86-50, but the valley tracksters came back to upend Diablo Valley, 75-57.

Ram coach Lou Vasquez expects a win Saturday, but he is dubious of any title chances for his club, pointing out that San Mateo and Foothill scored 102 and 76 points, respectively, in the league relays to 37 for the Rams.

"San Mateo is a real powerhouse and right now they look unbeatable," Vasquez said.

In the early-season relays, the Bulldogs took every team running event except one, the exception turning out to be the Rams' lone victory where Vern Bradford, Lee Benton, Chris Ranson and Bob Prince sped to a 43.1 clocking in the 440-yard relay.

Though the Vikings have posted better distances in the shotput and discus, the Rams hope to dominate as they did at Modesto where they copped 12 to 16 events.

Ransom posted times of 10.3 and 22.5 to take the 100 and 220-yard dashes.

Steadily improving quarter-miler Chris Davis has gotten down to the 50 second mark and is favored as is Chris Ferrigno, defending league titlist, who boasts a 1:55.5 clocking in the half-mile.

The distance attack is commandeered by 6-30 miler Rich Klemmer and two-miler Mike Conroy.

Intermediate hurdler Hal Johnson set a meet record of 39.7 at Modesto to pace his event while Bob Coleman led the Ram entries in the 120 highs.

Hopes rest mainly on Leroy Woods in the high jump, which he won with a 6-4 leap in the opening meet, and the triple-jump where he finished second but set a new Ram standard of 45-1.

Laisene Malaulufaoa in both the shot and discus but his respective winning marks of 42-2 and 123-11 are well below those posted by the Viking weight men.

Quigley Sees Successful Year For New JV Squad

City College's newest addition to baseball, the junior varsity squad, is going to have a successful season this semester, according to coach Robert Quigley.

As yet, though, a recapitulation of the two won, five lost and one tied record may seem to destroy such visions of a "successful season."

But coach Quigley was quick to point out that since it was a pilot program "it has proved to be successful in organizing a team to keep promising freshman players."

Instrumental in the two games the team has won was Wayne Cheso, pitcher, who received credit for both wins. Other promising players are Nick Eterovich, Mike Salmon and John Guterres.

'Murals Slated To Start Soon

Associated Men Student President Earl Braverman said today that petitions are coming in at a fast and steady pace and that league competition will begin next week.

The Filipino Club will be defending its championship title in the Club League. Other club league aspirants are Lawson's 10, the H&R, Freshman Class, The Vikings, Ram Ski Club and The Guardsman Staff.

Teams which have already submitted petitions for competition in the Independent League are Do-Ilumps, N.B.A. Rejects, Chancellors, Chiefs, The Mice, and the Irish.

Fraternity League teams so far are Alpha Kappa Rho, Zeta Phi Sigma, Alpha Phi Epsilon and Alpha Sigma Delta.

Netters Favored To Upend Jaguars Friday

Ram netters are slated to take on the Jaguars of San Jose at the Golden Gate Park courts at 2:30 p.m. Friday.

Foothill, San Mateo and Diablo Valley, along with the locals comprise the elite half of the Golden Gate Conference, and it is expected that most of the thicker competition will take place among these four.

"Don't count anybody out though," coach Roy Diederichsen said, "for anyone can squeeze through, and run home with the marbles.

"We are keeping our fingers crossed in anticipation of a possible chance upset of conference favorite Foothill in their meet with Contra Costa this week," Diederichsen added.

The match which the whole league may be looking to for a decision is the Foothill versus second-ranked San Mateo in May, Diederichsen predicted. The conference is a single round robin and consequently no team gets a second shot at another, should it lose.

The Ram club ladder is changeable, but few changes are likely to be effected after this week, according to Diederichsen. Number one man is 58-year-old rookie George Ponitkoff and Fred Suessman is the second choice.

Ben Levy holds down third place with Louis Engelstein and Mike Price playing at fourth and fifth. The present first doubles team is made up of Levy and Suessman, while Engelstein-Ponitkoff pair for the number two doubles combo.

On the exhibition calendar, the Rams dumped Santa Rosa, and dropped the match to Stanford's "remarkably strong" frosh team.

Rounding out the Ram net circuit are members of the junior varsity squad who compete with the stronger high school teams in the city. The men participating on this squad are Bob Kyrpta, Larry Peterson, Chuck Lee, Ed Finerty and Tom Csekey. To date these "reservists" have posted a 1-1, won-lost record with a victory over Lincoln and a loss to Lowell.

According to Diederichsen, the varsity loss to Foothill in the conference opener was disheartening as well as unexpected, but the Rams hope to bounce back in the future.

Lack Of Talent, Equipment Spell Downfall Of Sport

City College last week officially dropped swimming from its varsity sports program and cancelled all scheduled meets, swimming coach Roy Burkhead disclosed today.

Because the team has been suffering from lack of sufficient participants as well as qualified applicants, the move was not unexpected. Last year the team participated with only seven members, and this year the number was reduced to three.

In fact, in the last four years, the team has been unable to field more than eight members, much less the 15 members essential for successful overall team competition.

Burkhead expressed regret over the fate of the team but added that this was a result of the shortage of able swimmers coming from the local high schools.

This, he believes, is due to the need for swimming facilities at the high school and junior high school level.

"The Bay Area badly lacks sufficient swimming facilities which are necessary to develop potential swimming talent," he said, adding that "swimmers need to start out early in order to develop their heart muscle."

The Ram swimmers greatest glory came in 1960 when five members of the squad were selected to the two-year College All-American Team.

Aside from this honor, the team's history has been that of struggling to survive, always handicapped by a shortage of personnel.

Coach Burkhead partly attributed this to the fact that the college does not have an on-campus swimming pool as do most of the college's competitors.

The club thus had been forced to hold its practice sessions at McLaren pool in Visitacion Valley, which created transportation problems and discouraged some students from coming out for the team. —A. R.

Pistol Toters Await Sunshine

The Campus Police pistol team will not start to compete this semester until the weather is such that they can use the outdoor pistol ranges at Lake Merced.

The team is now practicing at Coyote Point in San Mateo.

When the weather does clear up, Tim Foley, criminology instructor and team sponsor, expects that the team will definitely benefit from the use of the San Francisco Police Department's pistol range.

The range has good facilities and will be a more convenient location for team practice.

Foley also believes that the experience the team will gain from competing for the first time in the San Francisco Pistol Club will help the team accustom itself to the pressure of competition.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Smith

CANCELLATION OF swimming as a competitive sport here came as no surprise to anyone. It was just a matter of time, for a full squad for too many seasons.

Last year Coach Burkhead had only seven mermen, barely less than half of what is needed for a team to enter all the necessary events; and early this semester, there were only three members pledged to the 1965 team.

City College coaches are by no means to be blamed for the cancellation of swim team competition. They are always willing to put in as much effort and time as the swimmers need from them; and no coach likes to see his sport disappear from the college.

Nor, can what may seem to be a case of "lack of interest" on the part of the students be pointed to as the prime factor in making the swim squad defunct. The regular swimming classes, which are filled to capacity, tend to prove that there are still plenty of persons in City College who like the water sport.

Although the college is only a stone's throw away from Balboa Pool, it is a public pool used not only by the college and high school physical education swim classes, but by Red Cross groups, girl's associations, adult classes and the general public.

As a result, the Rams have been forced to use John MacLaren Pool in Visitacion Valley, a facility almost three and a half miles away. There was simply no room for them at Balboa. This not only tends to be a big factor in cutting into practice sessions, but also a time-consuming one.

The only and obvious answer to why there will be no competitive swim team now is that the college does not have its own pool. Other two-year colleges on the peninsula have a pool; each has a good team — except San Francisco, which has neither.

When we think of all the money the City of San Francisco has wasted on the expensive wind studies plaguing Candlestick Park, we wonder why a small amount of those taxes could not have been used in building a pool for City College. It would have been a far better investment.

Too Good To Be True

By William Pates

Unless there is a great deal of undercover activity, the Golden Gate Conference has got to be the most carefree two-year college athletic league in existence.

For Golden Gate Conference Commissioner Louis F. Batmale stated today that he had "nothing but good things" to say about the league.

Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education at City College, was elected to the post of Commissioner three years ago following the demise of the old Big Eight League. The former Dean of Instruction here is the first and only head of the four-year-old Golden Gate Conference.

The Commissioner has had experience in athletics as a basketball coach and, later, as an official. His duties include scheduling of games, assignment of officials for games and adoption of policy.

"The Golden Gate Conference will not be affected by the realignment of the other two-year colleges in the state and it should not change in the future," Batmale stated.

"The members of the conference wanted a good, competitive league," he remarked, "and that's what they have right now.

"The basketball race was a dandy, the football was close, and the baseball season should be the same way," Batmale continued.

By and large, the Golden Gate Conference is terribly competitive despite the domination of various colleges in certain sports.

During the last ten years, City College has, for the most part, dominated basketball, tennis, track and various other sports.

The Rams came close to taking their fourth straight basketball title which would have been the sixth in eight years.

(Although soccer is in another conference, the college won its sixth straight title in 1964.)

However, there are two minor problems plaguing this trouble-free athletic conference.

Because of lack of participation, City College has abandoned its swimming team, and Foothill College, because of its domination of swimming, may have to restrict its competition.

Otherwise, things are almost too good to be true.

Business Student Helps Spanish Speakers Over Language Barrier

By Greg Frazier

There are 80,000 persons with Spanish surnames presently residing in San Francisco. It is estimated by the San Francisco Board of Education that approximately 50,000 of these persons do not speak English or speak it so inadequately that it seriously interferes with their ability to secure or hold a job.

Maurice Chavez, a 19-year-old business administration major here, feels a deep concern for these people. A naturalized citizen born in San Salvador, he donates his services two nights a week as a basic English teacher to the Spanish Speaking Citizens' Foundation's evening adult English class.

Chavez is but one of 23 bilingual teachers at the foundation's three evening classes.

"The Foundation was organized in December, 1964," Chavez explained, "because the leaders of all the nationality groups within the Spanish speaking community felt that the entire Anglo community should join with them in elevating the social, economic, educational and cultural level of the Spanish speaking people."

Heading the list of problems facing the foundation is the language barrier, followed by one of the highest unemployment rates, one of the highest school drop-out rates and one of the lowest per capita and family incomes of any minority group in San Francisco.

The advances in education made by the foundation, with the help of persons like Maurice Chavez, have been rapid and rewarding. In the space of a few months it has established, in addition to the three English classes, an evening English class for mothers with children operated in conjunction with a nursery.

The foundation has also undertaken to raise funds for project grants to other Spanish speaking organizations. Two such organizations have established classes in English for preschool age children to train them to learn English by the time they enter elementary school at the age of six.

Some other projects of the foundation are the construction and operation of several additional playground areas in the Central Mission District, a youth scholarship program available to youths involved in teaching basic English to preschool children, and the planned establishment of an orientation and Americanization program.

The foundation has established a motivational research department to investigate the cause of school dropouts among the Spanish speaking population. It has also established a public relations department and is in the process of establishing a speaker's bureau, as well as preparing a well-documented descriptive brochure which will graphically illustrate the problem areas.

"We feel that the general public must be made aware of our plight," Chavez emphasized.

A department of economic and statistical research is now gathering data concerning the buying power of the Spanish speaking, the benefits to merchants and the effect of large-scale unemployment and sub-standard incomes in depressing property values.

"The foundation feels that this problem affects the economic prosperity of the entire community, particularly its businessmen and merchants," Chavez explained.

"There are 17 persons in my English class," Chavez said. "What I found most surprising was the fact that the majority of these people were born right here in the United States. They seem to find it very difficult to break away from their own people. Education is the answer to their dilemma."

Peace Corps Group Visits Campus, Relates Functions

A Peace Corps team from Washington, D.C., is visiting the college this week to explain the purposes, programs and future plans of the Peace Corps and to accept applications from interested students.

A testing center has been established in S-142 to administer non-competitive aptitude tests as needed. These tests do not require a knowledge of a foreign language, and applicants neither pass nor fail as the tests are for placement purposes only.

Optional Spanish and French language tests will also be administered as needed.

Students wishing to take the test must first fill out a questionaire and submit it to one of the Peace Corps members. Questionaires are available at most Post Offices and at the office of Dean Ralph Hillsman.

The tables in the courtyard are to be set up by Alpha Phi Omega fraternity in conjunction with the Peace Corps team and contain Peace Corps literature.

Leroy Padilla, treasurer of Alpha Phi Omega, commented that any of the Peace Corps representatives at these tables will answer questions.

"They will be able to explain the opportunities and advantages of joining the Peace Corps," Padilla said, "and they will be able to relate these opportunities and advantages to the student's personal and academic background."

Tomorrow a Peace Corps representative will speak briefly during the College Hour rally. He will explain in detail where a student can obtain more information. Featured at the rally will be The Opposite Six, a six-piece vocal and instrumental group.

The Peace Corps currently has 9372 volunteers working and promoting good will in 46 countries from Afghanistan to Venezuela.

A Peace Corps tour of duty is 24 months, and applicants must be at least 18 years of age. It is estimated that 80 per cent of the applicants come from colleges and universities throughout the nation. An information center has been set up in S-147. — G. F.

Florists Exhibit Wide Array Of Window Displays

International Flowers, theme of the retail floristry department's open house today, will be represented by displays and demonstration of florist designing. The exhibition will be open to students, faculty members and the general public from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the horticulture center.

Displays representing France, Ireland, Mexico, Holland, Samoa, Australia, China and Italy are set up in the windows which surround the Floristry section of the new center. Exhibits resulting from combined talents are set up in various sections of the entrance-way.

An example of one of these "combined efforts" is a wedding display complete with an altar covered with white satin and lace, brass candelabra, Easter lillies and peach blossoms.

Students participating are Charlotte Eberhard, Paul Masterson, Vince Amado, Vicki Cook, May Jew, Larry Janzen, Havnet Kalakian and George Gagna. Gagna explained that there have been meetings conducted for the past three weeks to plan and prepare for the best possible show.

He also commented that "colors make the biggest difference in window displays," and it is evident when viewing the sphshes and sprays of cymbidiums (baby orchids) and anemones to name two of the numerous types.

Open house was held exclusively for industry representatives last night, during which time three scholarships were presented to students of the department and prizes given for winning displays. Judges were florists J. Glotfelty, Rusyn C. Chapman and K. Fuller.

Alpha Gamma Sigma Study Clinic To Open

Alpha Gamma Sigma cited plans today to conduct study clinics benefitting City College students. Clinics are to be held next Tuesday and on April 6 and 8 in S-215.

The society will have available a 30-member task force to aid in the project. These members, who must have a "B" average or better with 12 units of work, will be present to help students who are having difficulty in their classes.

AGS President Joan Brannigan said, "The society has a potential membership of 180 in the college."

William Richardson, the Society's faculty adviser, announced that "students desiring private tutoring at any time during the semester can consult him in S-140."

AS Card Designer Proves Talent At LA Art Center

Haley Yee, designer of this semester's Associated Student card, is now taking advanced study at the Art Center in Los Angeles.

Yee's design was chosen unanimously from approximately 15 others by Associated Student officers and Student Council at the end of last semester.

John O'Brien, advertising art instructor here, said, "Yee's promise as a talented artist is indicated by his acceptance at the Art Center, since this highly accredited college requires an intense background and ability as prerequisite for admission."

While a student here, Yee showed a particular interest in the packaging phase of advertising art and design.

Special Rally To Kick Off IFC Drive

Weather permitting, the special rally which kicks off the ninth annual Inter-Fraternity Council-sponsored Blood Drive will be held outdoors.

The Blood Drive is scheduled Thursday and Friday, April 8 and 9 on the campus, and the rally will be held during College Hour April 8.

Jim Wyatt, student government adviser, stated that arrangements for the rally are being made by John Hohman, IFC president.

"We have hopes that at least 411 pints of blood will be donated this year since this is the record amount ever received in the name of the college," Wyatt said.

This record was established in the Spring semester 1962. A total of 369 pints was donated last spring.

Blood which is not used by City College students, their parents, instructors or administrators in the year donated, is given in the name of the college to the Disaster Fund, the veterans hospitals and the San Francisco Theatrical Association.

Moppets Plus Goat Complete Cast For 'Teahouse' Opening March 31

A casting problem presented itself in the preparation for Teahouse Of The August Moon, which is scheduled for four performances in the theater starting next Wednesday and running through Saturday, April 3, according to Lucile Meredith, guest director of the play.

The script called for three small children and one goat. George Stewart, of the business department, offered his 10-year-old daughter, Diane, for one of the child parts, which left only three parts to be filled.

At a rehearsal last week, Miss Meredith noticed four little boys playing around the theater's doors. In the hope of scaring them away, she threatened to put them into the play. One of the children informed her that his theatrical background included a role in The King And I.

Another one of the boys admitted that although there were no hit plays to his credit, he was willing to take a crack at show business. The third also expressed his enthusiasm, but doubted that of his mother.

The fourth surmized that his mother, who attended the college, would probably consent to his "punishment."

Upon acquiring parental consent, Miss Meredith recruited two, Jimmy Griffin and Jerry Courtain.

The goat was obtained from the San Francisco Zoological Society; there was no problem of procurement. Miss Meredith said. The problem is in storage.

Since the city will not allow a goat to be tethered on its property, Riordan High School officials were asked for permission to keep the goat on their property.

Goat space is now available, but, to date, there is no solution to the shepherd problem. Miss Meredith is seeking volunteers interested in all-night vigils with the goat.

Assisting Miss Meredith in the direction of the play will be drama student Joshua Smith, whose formal position will be that of "student assistant director."

TV's Version Of No Exit

Workshop Video-Tapes 'Exit' For Closed Circuit Showing

Jean-Paul Sartre's hit play, No Exit, recently produced by the drama department here, was re-enacted and video-taped last week in the college's TV studio by the students in the television workshop.

The tape is expected to be shown soon over the college's closed circuit TV system.

"The workshop staff and cast members put in many long, hard hours in their effort to make the program the best they could," said Henry Leff, television and radio instructor who supervised the production and acted as adviser in the control room.

To produce such a play within the limiting confines of the small TV studio, all the action and scenery in the performance had to be condensed into a very small area, in comparison with the stage in the college theater.

Workshop students re-set the lighting, hung microphones from the grid overhanging the studio, put up curtains and other scenery, stationed three television cameras, laid electrical cables and did a myriad other tasks in order to produce the play.

Rehearsals for the program were not so much a case of the cast members remembering and acting out their lines, but rather a chance for the producer-director, Bob Berke, to restage the players and choose the best camera shots available for the actual video-taping to come.

Work on the play began during the week of March 1, rehearsals began March 8, and the actual taping was made March 16.

On the day of the video-taping, a final run-through of the play was held. The rehearsal began at noon and continued until after 4 p.m. Work resumed at 6 p.m. and the televising started at 8:30 p.m.

"Since the air-conditioning in the studio was turned off at 7:30, everyone felt a bit moist from that point on," Leff said, "due mainly to the tremendous amount of heat generated by the lamps in the studio."

Taping was completed at 10:15 p.m. and everyone was sent home — except for the workshop crew, who had to take down the lighting, move cameras, strike the scenery, hang curtains, re-set lighting, put up chairs, re-set television cameras and a host of other odd jobs for the studio production.

The work was completed by 11:15 p.m.

Leff indicated that the video tape of the play will be shown to both Walter Krumm's and James Haran's drama and acting classes. "The tape will also be shown to Meyer Cahn, humanities and music instructor," Leff added, "and if he likes the production it will be available to all humanities instructors." —J. H.

Filipino Musical By Campus Talent Set For Premiere

The Filipino-American Club's musical comedy, Batas Ng Karagatan (Law Of the Sea), will be staged Friday night at the college theater starting at 8 p.m., according to Lucas Madamba, student writer and director of the play.

The play will center around an American sailor's introduction to and misadventures in the small Filipino town of his friend, Ric, played by Eddie Mendiola. Johnnie, the sailor, is played by Gil Penarando.

Dina Rosella, in the role of Maria, and Kathy Kates in the part of Tina, will play Ric's cousins who show the boys around town. Julio Hernandes, as Freddie, is the joker who always keeps the gang laughing.

Writer-director Madamba gained his acting experience in the Philippines as a player for the Sampageda Movie Company. Madamba had been selected as the Most Popular Child Actor while he was in pictures between 1951-54.

Madamba remarked that the show could be called "a cultural play in a modern setting." It will have the native costumes, a fiesta, and "songs and dances of the old Philippines."

However, he added, it will also "include recent pop numbers such as Twist and Shout, and Twang," with the appropriate dance numbers.

Choreographer is Ressurrecion Bolfango. Narration is by Oscar Penaranda. Two bands, the Playboys and the Wanderers of San Francisco, will provide the music for the show itself and during scene change intermissions, Madamba said.

The theme number, Beyond The Reef is composed by one of the Filipino Club members under the pen name Ben Quick.

Tickets are being sold for 75 cents to Associated Student card holders and for $1 to others. They will be on sale on campus and at the door.

Club adviser Joe Thorn reported that the profits from the play will go to the new scholarship started this semester by the club.

Tolerance, Understanding The Yardstick Of Measurement In Faculty-Student Relationship

SEVERAL ARTICLES which crossed this desk in the past month concerning instructor-student relationships have given THE GUARDSMAN much food for thought. That subject is simply, the mutual obligation of instructor and student.

In the lecture room, an instructor is expected to give his best at all times — this goes without saying. We will also go on record to state that instructors should be expected to show courtesy to the students. All of them do — most of the time.

APPOINTMENTS MADE POSSIBLE

There are very few instructors, if any, who will refuse to arrange an appointment with a student when it is at all possible.

And realizing that it is encouragement which could mean the difference between a final grade of C or D in a course, most instructors are quite cooperative in giving their valuable time for much sought-after extra help.

RECIPROCAL THOUGHTFULNESS

But there also comes a time when a little reciprocal thoughtfulness is due an instructor from his students. There may be an occasion when an instructor has a perfectly legitimate reason for turning down a student's request. After a lecture, he may have a special meeting, or some personal problem may have arisen which requires his personal attention.

We all have times when we do not feel up to par, when we are not at our social best, and on these occasions we are most grateful for a little understanding on the part of friends and business associates.

INSTRUCTORS DESERVE COURTESY

We think that instructors command and deserve this same courtesy. Ninety-nine per cent of the time they are more than willing to arrange appointments, give extra help and keep up with the requests made upon them by their enthusiastic, but sometimes demanding students.

All instructors on this campus have office hours for the purpose of helping their students, or perhaps, to give advice when it is needed or sought. And every student has a counselor to whom he can turn when it becomes impossible to reach the respective instructor.

JUDGE WISELY

It is not fair to an instructor to judge him hastily or harshly if YOU happen to catch him on an off-day. There are usually good reasons for an instructor's actions, even if they may not seem justified in the eyes of the "offended" student.

Instructors, too, are human, and have the same weaknesses as the rest of us mere mortals.

Often an instructor who has turned down a student's request on a particular day will be happy to make up for a seeming slight on another, perhaps more pleasant, occasion.

A little understanding and tolerance can go a long way, not only in college, but in life as well. Good public relations are the key to happiness — we think they are a very small price to pay.

Foresight

Why Johnny Drops Out: Grades, Girls And Financial Troubles

By Mike Barber

BEFORE finals are finished in June, more than 1000 students who began this semester will not be here. For various reasons they will have taken leaves of absence, been told to leave by the administration, or just plain dropped out of sight.

Those who apply for a leave of absence are asked to state the reason why. The most common cause given is financial, followed by illness and then low grades.

However, because many of those who state financial as the cause also have straight F's on their grade sheet at the same time, a question is raised as to what is the real reason.

Last semester more than 90 per cent of those who dropped out of this college requested, and were granted, leaves. About twice as many men as women dropped out, but as this is roughly proportionate to the ratio of men to women here, it at first glance seems correct.

However, it is many men's opinion that coeds are generally in a position relatively secure from financial, and subsequently, at least in part, academic worries. Assuming that this is so, that the number of working women who are at the same time putting themselves through college is relatively less, then part of the reasons for women to drop may be inherent in their sex alone.

Certainly the distressing state of unwed motherhood is a condition to which men are immune, but to shotgun weddings and other such imperative ceremonies they are not. Men seem more adept at side stepping the latter than women do the former, so the factor still remains.

Even when such a marriage, or any between college students for that matter, does occur, in this educationconscious society it is usually the wife who drops out to work so that the husband may continue his schooling.

A noble sacrifice, at first glance, but as the average man with a college degree earns about $100,000 more in his lifetime than his high school counterpart, a prudent one too for the little woman to make.

Included with those who will not complete this semester will be the unfortunates, men and women alike, who simply wake up one day and decide not to go to class anymore. Without a word to the administration, they drift off in pursuit of another dream in another world.

The full meaning of this action usually does not appear until they try to re-enter the academic world, which, for them, has in the interim assumed a new importance not present in the old dream.

The A and the F, though equidistant from center on the grading scale, have about as much similarity in terms of representative effort as everything and nothing. Fortunately, a greater number of students may be beginning to realize this.

In the Fall semester of 1963, 97 students had achieved, mainly through lack of attendance, straight F's in all their classes by the first midterm period, resulting in the cancellation of their registrations. Last semester, despite the increased enrollment, only 49 students were similarly penalized.

It may be simply a matter of chance, but hopefully those students who decide that college is not for them are beginning to realize that it might be, someday, and have enough wisdom to leave the door open.

'Teahouse' Star La Zar

Talented Thespian Starring As Sakini In Lead Role Hopes To Further Career

By Mary Parisi

John La Zar, a talented second semester drama student, has rapidly become a familiar person to all campus drama patrons.

He is currently cast in a lead role in the Teahouse Of The August Moon, which opens here next week.

La Zar portrays Sakini, an interpreter for the allied occupational forces in Okinawa, after World War II.

JOHN LA ZAR as the Okinawan imp Sakini will lead theater-goers through the zany military misadventures of the Teahouse crew. —Guardsman photo by Beverly Bartlett.

The play, as described by La Zar, is a worthwhile comedy, with some aspects of satire. "It's a beautiful light comedy, the type which is fun to do," he commented.

The college drama department ranks number one according to La Zar, who considers it fortunate to have excellent instruction and direction.

La Zar is also enthusiastic about the variety of plays selected for presentation, because of their value in experience and enjoyment. He cited as two examples of this contrast "last semester's presentations of Antigone and Goodwoman of Setzuan."

High school was the birthplace of La Zar's interest in drama and there he gained his first opportunity to act. During this last summer, before he entered the college, La Zar widened his scope of experience and made his first entry into a type of the professional world of acting by taking part in little theater chorus parts.

Possibly La Zar has gained some orientation toward the theatrical world from his father, Don La Zar, who was a stunt man in early talkies and also had a nightclub dance act.

More education and more experience are in the immediate future for La Zar, who said, "All I can predict is three more years of college. The rest will depend on my improvement."

La Zar intends to go on to San Francisco State College.

Although uncertain of his future, La Zar did say that his primary aim was to be a versatile actor. But his life ambition is to be diversified and familiar with all aspects of the theatrical world; or, in his own words, "I want to view the entire field."

Education is the valuable tool La Zar believes necessary to insure that his life's work will be deep and rewarding. "Art, literature, music and history are all connected with acting," La Zar declared, "and the good actor must understand and appreciate them all."

Love And Duty Plague Big Ben At High Noon

Civil Defense has provided many important services for the civilian population of this country.

It is responsible for bomb and fallout shelters, emergency food stores, CONALRAD stations, and a watch-setting service for students at the college.

Big Ben is located atop a utility pole between the fire house and the streetcar terminal on Ocean avenue. Every Tuesday, at exactly noon, he makes his noise. This is normal. The main reason Ben is kept hanging around is that he may be the Paul Revere of the "Soaring Sixties."

So far, since all seems quiet on the Front, he earns his salt with his watch-setting service every Tuesday. However, if an unfriendly country should see fit to attack us at exactly three minutes before noon on a Tuesday, what would Ben do?

At High Noon, he would be torn twixt love and duty. Would he make his Big Noise to warn the population or would he, thinking of his followers all ready to set their timepieces at his sound, hesitate for three minutes?

Speculation is that he would blow his electric top. —P. D.

Cosmo Vents Creative Urge With Camera

Some men, bitten by the creative urge, express themselves through the medium of the pen, the brush or through such commonplace a thing as a soldering iron. Cosme "Cosmo" Castanieto, Jr. sees fit to project his expression through the lens and mechanism of a camera.

His resulting prints are of excellent quality and show a love and knowledge of his subjects. A mere glance at any of his prints will be testimony to this.

Two of these prints are part of the Best Of Last Semester photo exhibit in Cloud Hall. One is a picture of several children playing at the beach. When Castanieto took it, the kids were so engrossed in their play that they did not notice him approach, compose and snap.

The second picture, which has also won an amateur photo contest at San Francisco's Photography Center, is a semiposed shot of several persons walking up the hill from Arts to Science Hall in the rain.

Castanieto asked two men with umbrellas to walk in front and in back of two coeds. When he got the pose he wanted, he snapped.

The result: a good grade on a final assignment and placement in two photo contests.

Last year Castanieto also placed in a Photo Center contest. He is entered again this month.

Castanieto is a second semester student here and, obviously, a photography major. He does not think it necessary to spend four years at a university. "It is what you can do, not what courses you take that counts in photography," he says.

Castanieto likes to take pictures of people and likes to "put feeling into pictures." For this, people are a wonderful topic. —K. S.

Dad Ponders Population Explosion

By Hugh Haworth

HAVING a baby may become a real decision for many in the United States now that the means for controlling birth are abundant.

However, the matter that affects the choice may not be just when the baby would be most welcome in the family or whether the family can afford the new addition, but whether the baby will be adding to the population explosion that could be eroding the "American way of life."

The population boom, according to several prognosticators, will soon result in the shrinking of recreational facilities, a depletion of natural resources and inadequate educational and cultural institutions.

To quote the Population Reference Bureau — "Outdoor recreation in these United States will have become a nostalgic memory, even perhaps before the babies born today have children of their own."

And this bureau goes on to say that if the population expands beyond a healthy ratio between the people and their recreational facilities, a rationing of national parks may be needed "permitting each citizen a brief, uncrowded holiday once every five years, then even every 10, 15 or 20 years as the population increases."

"America the beautiful," Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall feels, is a "land of vanishing beauty, of increasing ugliness, of shrinking open space, and of an overall environment that is diminished by pollution and noise and blight." This obviously is a result of overcrowded population.

John D. Rockefeller, 3rd, warned, "Americans, with our high standard of living, expend resources and energy at a prodigious rate. Minerals and most sources of energy are nonrenewable.

"When we spend them, we spend capital, not income; when they are gone, they are gone forever." No doubt the bigger populations of tomorrow will use up these resources faster.

Educators and concerned administrators are pleading for more money and help in building schools, libraries and hospitals, but all the time they are falling short of their goals and losing pace with the run-away population.

This leaves the hard decision with each parent. If he feels that the population is growing too fast for the welfare of every citizen, will he cut down the size of his own family for this reason?

The facts are a long way from being in, but city dwellers are noticing the longer and longer distances that have to be traveled to reach "the peace and quiet" of the country.

Having become the father of a little daughter only nine days ago, this columnist would find it most difficult to advocate a policy of limiting the number of "bundles of joy" allowed to each family.

And though it may become patriotic and for the welfare of the populace to restrict families to three children only, this will be one pill that many won't want to swallow.

Presently, it looks as though the only hope of keeping America from a cultural, environmental and institutional erosion that might be caused by population booms is a wider use of birth control by the many parents who want but still do not have the means of family planning.

If this fails, Americans might as well wait for the explosion and the aftermath, because they surely won't give up their freedom of choice within their own homes.

Meanderings

By Don Patten

NEVER again will the hallowed halls of the nation's airports be graced by the following words: "Your attention, please. Trans World Airlines StarStream Jet Flight 714 is now in the final boarding process. Passengers holding space on Flight 714 should now be on board."

In their place is a new bid for making flying attractive, particularly to persons in a rush, and consequently a new pitch for flight announcements.

The busy businessman still hurries into the bustling airport, brushes his way through the brisk-walking mobs and checks into the airline ticket counter in the familiar routine.

"Destination, sir?" says the ticket agent. "Thank you, sir. Baggage, sir? Thank you, sir. Plane leaves in 30 minutes, Gate 12, sir. Oh, and have a nice flight."

Into the confining coffee shop confidently cruises the busy, bustling businessman. Four cups of coffee and eight cigarettes later, the blaring voice comes over the PA system. The new pitch begins:

"Your attention, please. United Airline's Jetarama Theater, Robinson Crusoe On Mars, with special guest stars Jet Jackson and Wonder Woman, now ready for blast off at Pad 14. Astronauts holding space on Flight 714 should now be in the 'capsule'."

Getting into the plane, the busy businessman finds his seat taken and, so, rushes back to the ticket counter. Says the ticket agent, "Well sir, we have Mary Poppins to Chicago, and then I Was A Teenage Werewolf connecting direct to New York.

"Oh, no good? That's too bad. How about Abbot and Costello Meet The Creature From The Black Lagoon to Washington and then, without changing planes, a double feature, The Thing, to New York.

"Well, don't worry, all the flights I mentioned are sold out. Ah, ha, we just had a cancellation on Rocky and Bullwinkle Go To The World's Fair direct to New York." "I'll take it," shouts the businessman.

On the plane at last, and airborne. The lights dim and the show begins. Down the aisle comes the stewardess with the liquor locker offering 'your pleasure' to the passengers and, at the same time, blocking the screen. Screams of "quiet" and "move" echo through the cabin.

One movie and 3000 miles later, the businessman moviegoer arrives at his destination, relaxed and refreshed and ready for the business.

After a successful venture, the busy, bustling businessman makes ready to return home. Overjoyed by the prospect of returning on the most popular flight available, he happily steps aboard.

But, as the plane becomes airborne, the lights don't dim and the show doesn't begin. "What's happened to the show," the businessman asks the stewardess. "With the most popular flight of all, I thought I'd see an excellent first-run movie."

"The reason this is the most popular flight, sir," replies the stewardess, "is that no movie is shown."

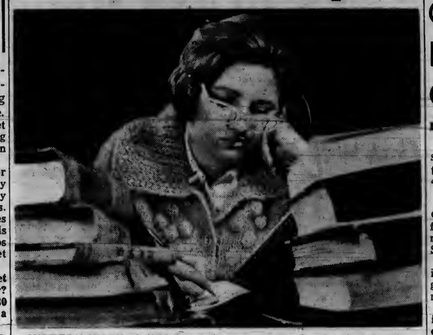
Petty Thievery Plagues College

Petty thievery reached a new high on campus last week.

On the weekend of March 13, thieves broke into the offices of Dean Ralph Hillsman, Dean Mary Golding and Registrar Mary Jane Learnard.

In denouncing the illegal entries, Oscar Anderson, coordinator of educational management, said, "If necessary, more stern measures will be employed to prevent any further occurrences of this kind."

He added, "If necessary, the college will install electric eyes to solve the problem."



Anderson also cited the petty thievery which has plagued the college throughout the semester. He requested that "students who see or hear of anyone contemplating such acts should try to discourage the individuals."

Anderson referred to theft from lockers and to books from Smith Hall and the library.

"We do not want students witnessing such acts to become 'stool pigeons,' but to discourage personally the acts," Anderson added.

Anderson emphasized, "The theft of the articles is only of minor importance. The real crime is the hindrance of the entire educational system which results from the acts."

Midterm Misery

MIDTERM WEEK IS HERE and that means time for the old cramming session again. Judy Tank, student at the college, is pondering weak and weary over the mounds of work she should have been studying for all through the semester. But as usual, waiting until the last minute seems to be in vogue and such is obviously the case here. Of course, no one will wait until midterm week next time. —Guardsman photo by Bob McQuilkin.

Awards Commission Grants Blocks To College Shooters

By Richard Heintz

Approval was granted last week by the Athletic and Awards Commission of the Associated Students to permit members of the Campus Police pistol squad to be eligible for block letters for the first time in the squad's history.

Tim Foley, sponsor of the team, said this is justified since shooters often have to put in long hours of practice and time at matches.

At a match last semester at Coyote Point in San Mateo, there were 2700 shooters participating, with the match starting at 8 a.m. and ending at 7 p.m.

Concerning the future of his team, Foley said, "We are starting with a relatively new group this semester, but we are confident the team will do its very best. Any further projection would be premature."

Matches for the team are not prescheduled, but Foley decides where the team will compete from a list published by the California Rifle and Pistol Association, which contains the schedule for matches throughout the state.

Practice for the team calls for a minimum of two hours a week to as many hours as any individual wants to put in. Practice is at Coyote Point in San Mateo.

After a successful venture, the busy, bustling businessman makes ready to return home. Overjoyed by the prospect of returning on the most popular flight available, he happily steps aboard.

But, as the plane becomes airborne, the lights don't dim and the show doesn't begin. "What's happened to the show," the businessman asks the stewardess. "With the most popular flight of all, I thought I'd see an excellent first-run movie."

"The reason this is the most popular flight, sir," replies the stewardess, "is that no movie is shown."

Release Permits Required For Non-Local Residents

Students here who are legal residents of school districts other than San Francisco's are required to submit renewed release permits from their resident two-year college district, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, said today.

Permits are issued for one college year only. If these permits are not renewed, students affected by this law will be pulled from the registration lines.

Some 328 students are involved.

This does not concern students from out of state or from districts with no two-year college, Miss Learnard emphasized. Summer session renewals are due June 1 while Fall renewals are due August 15.

They can be obtained from the two-year college of their resident district.

AS Finance Board's Problem

Passage Of $37,000 Budget Involves Multi-Phase Process

Passing a budget which reaches more than $37,000 a semester for the Associated Students is an involved process.

Initially, this job is handled by the Finance Committee composed of Chairman, AS President and members of council from both Freshman and Sophomore classes.

The Finance Committee's main purpose is to screen the separate requests for any "indiscriminate" spending. Suggestions are also made on occasion for better prices on equipment or services desired.

This semester's Finance Committee Chairman, James Doudiet, outlined the general procedure that is now studying the budget for the Fall semester, 1965.

To start with, activity fund applications are sent to more than 30 individual group sponsors. They estimate the coming semester's money needs for their activity and send this back to Doudiet.

Interviews are then conducted between the committee and each sponsor to reach an agreement on separate requisition particulars.

"All requests for funds to purchase items from companies are approved by the student finance office. The Finance Committee Chairman will generally not refute these but when necessary suggests alternatives," Doudiet said.

By staggering these interviews over February and March, Doudiet keeps the committee from being rushed before the April 1 deadline.

April 1 marks the time when all requests are to be ready for submission to Student Council for approval.

To provide a greater understanding on the council's part of questions previously reviewed by the Finance Committee on each petition, Doudiet increased his committee to include "more members of the council."

Therefore, the budget does not need to be subjected to the same extensive consideration twice.

Staying within the Associated Student income is the most important guideline for council members. In addition, a reserve is always kept for the athletic fund, bookstore and emergency items.

During some seasons there is a drain on the athletic insurance fund as a result of injuries in sports. The Ramporium needs a "working fund" at different times to cover large outlays for texts.

Presently, Doudiet estimates that 55 per cent of the student funds come from the Ramporium, 40 per cent from card sales and the remaining from the Associated Student profits from the vending machines in Science Hall. —H. H.

Council Considers Proposals For Pre-Orientation Project, Cost Of Ashtrays And Maps

By James Rauh

For the third consecutive week a "special project" has been suggested at the Student Council meetings by one of its members, this time by Jim Soletti, Freshman Class president, in the form of "high school orientation meetings about City College life."

In the weeks past, plans have been introduced for the building of campus 'cigarette wells,' by Terry Cloney, AS president, and the framing and distribution of college maps by his brother, Tom Cloney, Sophomore Class president.

Soletti introduced his project during last Wednesday's Student Council get together and at a special Freshman Class meeting last Thursday.

"The purpose of this class project is to acquaint the high school students of San Francisco with the activities and experiences at City College," Soletti pointed out.

He plans to accomplish this through the methods of visiting the different city high schools during their own Student Council meetings, senior class meetings or rallies.

As topics for discussion at these "meetings" Soletti suggested orientation on study habits, cost of texts, student government, dances and plays, clubs, fraternities and sororities, work experience training and placement service, College Hour rallies and lectures and AS cards.

Other Student Council activities involved financial matters as Jim Doudiet, Finance Chairman, gave an account of the Associated Student financial standing at the present.

He explained that at the moment the students have a reserve of $335.06 remaining from an original amount of $2000.

"However," Doudiet said, "the swim team is now defunct and the treasury will get back from them the $891.20 allocated the team for its budget."

Lori Klein, Special Committee chairman, moved, and her motion was carried, to allocate $100 to the golf team for a four-day tournament in Fresno over the Easter vacation.

The $100 will pay the green fees, lodging, food and transportation for the seven-man team along with their coach Grover Klemmer.

Nancy Hughes, Standing Committee chairman, moved that council allocate $73.90 to the Sophomore Class for its "campus map" project. The motion carried: 14-0-0.

In a post-council meeting, the Executive Committee heard Edna Pope, women's physical education instructor and Recreation Associaton adviser, submit a supplementary budget for the RA.

She listed four program activities which the RA hopes to carry out but which were not provided for in its budget:

1. A dance symposium scheduled Saturday, April 3, to teach new dances and catering to high school students in the city and colleges in the area in building public relations. Cost would be $80.

2. College of San Mateo volleyball competition, calling for $60.

3. Transportation to RA conference whose purpose is to improve and maintain college sports for women. Money, needed to finance auto trip for students and faculty attending amounts to $35.

4. A volleyball clinic at which college and high school students attending would learn from professionals, how to play better volleyball. Cost here is $25. A total budget of $220 is needed to provide for these activities.

Campus Placement Of Cigarette Urns To Begin April 19

All cigarette wells will be ready to be placed around the campus when classes resume April 19 after Easter vacation, Terry Cloney, Associated Student president, announced today.

The standing committee, established to approve or disapprove Student Council motions concerning campus improvements, passed the cigarette-well project March 8, after much consideration.

"The main objective of the project is to help with the cleaning up of the campus, and the best way we saw fit was to construct the cigarette wells," Cloney said.

The custodians are able to pick up the papers that litter the campus, but not the cigarette butts. Cigarette wells are especially needed at the door entries of the college's main buildings. Entrances to Science and Cloud Halls are the main clean-up problem areas.

The total cost of the 24 wells is $291.04. They will be manufactured by students on weekends out of solid concrete.

The urns will be 18 inches high and two feet by two feet square. They will be filled with sand, and it will be the custodian's job to empty them.

Another project being discussed by the Student Council is the installation of campus maps around the campus, Cloney added. The project, headed by Tom Cloney, Sophomore president, needed the council approval which was voted last week.

Sororities To Hold Preference Hours

Rushees interested in joining either of City College's two sororities, Phi Beta Rho, or Theta Tau, are expected to attend the Coffee Preference hours from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Sunday at individual sorority members homes, Mary Golding, dean of women, said today.

Women interested in joining sororities are then expected to file preference slips in S-150 next Tuesday. Those with an overall grade point average of 2.00 who are currently enrolled in 12 or more units are eligible to join.

Pledge days will be from April 5 to 7, at which time pledges will wear the traditional costume of the sorority pledged and perform at least five hours of service to the college," Dean Golding said.

Linda Jo Heiser Wins Campus Glamour Contest

Linda Jo Heiser, who will be a model at next week's Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, is the winner of the college's Best-Dressed Coed contest and will represent San Francisco in Glamour Magazine's nationwide contest.

Miss Heiser, a graphic design major in her fifth semester at the college, is enrolled in 16 units. As she is a contender for the nationwide Best-Dressed-Coed contest, which is sponsored by Glamour Magazine, her photographs will be sent to New York for the final contest.

When informed that she was chosen as a finalist, Miss Heiser was obviously surprised. She said that she had participated in the contest just "for fun" and had absolutely no expectation of winning the contest because she attended the interviews in her "work apparel," while some other contestants were more ostentatiously attired.

She works for Reginald Jones Design Associates. In this trade she explained, one is in constant peril of indelible ink, and she dresses "for the job."

In addition to this work, she is employed by a contemporary photographer for modeling, and she also works at the Children's Storyland Contact Zoo.

Her hobbies are ice skating, interpretative dancing and photography. Last year she participated in the United States National Figure Skating competition, and in the 1963 Pacific Coast championships in Los Angeles, she and her partner won second place.

She said that she designs half of her wardrobe, thereby insuring originality. She has no use for "fad" or "vogue" items such as boots, printed hosiery, imitation suede, snake or lizard raincoats.

While a student at Lincoln High, she represented the school in a fashion show at I. Magnin.

Tracksters Tame Jaguars, Out To Upset Owls Friday

By Ivan Temes

Intent on making their initial home appearance a success, the upset-minded Ram tracksters seek to parlay their top effort of the year into a victory over the talent-laden Foothill Owls at 3 p.m. Friday.

Since San Mateo is virtually a cinch to make a runaway of the Golden Gate Conference race, this week's match, pitting the Rams, 84-52 victors over San Jose in their opener and over a visiting club which fell to the Bulldog powerhouse, 88-48, against the Owls, should decide the runnerup spot.

The invaders, who outscored the Red and White, 72-37, in the league relays, boast a quartet of the top early-season performances in the State.

Big Chuck Smart has already heaved the shot and discus 51-9 and 160 feet, respectively, and is expected to lead a sweep of these events while Max Low, a 6-10 leaper last year, has high-jumped 6-6¾.

Ram mentor Lou Vasquez, who feels, "A couple of weeks ago it didn't look as though we had a chance," believes his forces have developed quickly enough to bring an upset.

The likeable pilot maintains, "Foothill is extremely strong in some events, but in most cases we're weak in those areas anyway so their performances won't really hurt us. However, our sprinters have practically got to sweep their events, and a lot of other men must come through for us to win."

Vasquez cited speedster Lee Benton's winning 50.6 in the 440 at San Jose, teaming him with Chris Davis as quarter-mile threats, and the durability of Rich Klemmer who took the mile and two-mile with clockings of 4:30.6 and 10:07.4, as examples of the team's new spark.

The locals fell before the top-notch timings of Rich LaVinge—9.6 in the 100 and 22.1 in the 220—and were disqualified in the 440-yard relay for faulty baton passing, but any one of the foursome of Chris Ransom, Bob Prince, Vern Bradford and Benton can cop the sprints on a given day.

Hal Johnson and Laisene Malaulu both came through with a pair of wins over the Jags. The versatile Johnson raced to a 15.6 time in the 120-high hurdles and 41 flat in the gruelling 330-yard intermediate hurdles. Hard-working Malaulu heaved the shot 42-2 and the disc 125-8½.

Defending champ Chris Ferrigno earned first place with a 1:58.8 half-mile, while another triumph was brought home by Dwight Tucker with a 43-5 triple jump.

JV Nine Wraps Up Season Tomorrow

With the last game being played tomorrow against San Rafael High School, Bob Quigley, junior varsity baseball coach, considers the season to have been "highly successful."

"In our pilot program we have bloomed at least one JV member into a varsity player. Murray Jacobs was batting .400 with us until he secured a first string position with the varsity squad," Quigley said.

Other varsity material include pitcher Wayne Cheso who has won two games and fellow hurler Don Meechum who has an even one and one record.

Quigley pointed out that in all probability the entire JV pitching staff will join the varsity squad after the final season game with San Rafael.

Also slated for possible varsity action is third baseman Vince Anderson batting .360 and second baseman Mike Salmon who has established a .300 mark.

A recap of the JV season reveals a three and six record. "We have uncovered quite a bit of varsity material which, in fact, is the main function of a JV team," Quigley commented.

Golfers Slosh To 23-7 Diablo Win

City College golfers sloshed their way to a decisive 23-7 victory over the Diablo Valley Vikings in their opening league match last Friday and go against Chabot this Friday.

As yet, Grover Klemmer's charges are undefeated. Through four practice matches, and one league contest, the hackers have shot consistently good golf.

This is chiefly due to the efforts of Jim Schroeder, who carded a par 72 on the difficult Harding course, and his teammate Tom O'Cane who turned in a 74.

Klemmer added a note of praise for his lads when he stated, "The scores turned in were surprisingly good for two reasons. First, Schroeder played the course in 72 strokes, a seldom-seen par. Secondly, the match was played in pouring rain. This, added to the wind from Lake Merced, made conditions terrible."

Only when goaded will Klemmer admit that his men are evenly matched with San Mateo and San Jose, two very strong teams.

Esponda Takes 4th Place

Ram fencer Gerald Esponda took fourth place in the individual competition at the Western Intercollegiate Fencing meet at San Francisco State College March 12.

Esponda is now the fourth best fencer of all colleges west of the Rocky Mountains.

University of California placed first in all-around competition with the Air Force fencing team coming in second.

Rams Crush Diablo, 107-29

Chris Davis, Hal Johnson Set New College Records

By Arturo Rodriguez

Combining strong individual performances with all around team depth, the City College track team picked up its second Golden Gate Conference victory, a 107-29 trouncing of Diablo Valley at Berkeley last Saturday.

Hosted by the University of California Freshman team, who competed unofficially, the Ram's victory saw them set two school records and capture 13 out of 16 first places.

City proved its superiority in the sprint events as they won all three places in 100, 220 and 440 yard runs. Bob Price won the 100 with a time of 10.0 followed by Chris Ramson 10.0 and Vern Bradford 10.3. In the 220 it was Ramson, 22.5; Prince, 22.5 and Sam Johnson 23.0.

The 440 yard run saw Chris Davis set a new City College mark with a time of 50.0. Lee Benton finished second at 50.4 and Rod Coleman completed the sweep with a time of 51.3.

The other college mark set was in the 330 yd. intermediate hurdles, where Hal Johnson was clocked at 39.0. Rich John's 43.0 and Oliver Mitchell's 43.8 gave the Rams another 1-2-3 finish.

Leroy Woods jumped 6 ft. 4 in. to edge out Ram teammate Dwight Tucker, 6 ft. 3 in. in the high jump. Later, Woods nosed out Tucker again when he won the triple jump with a jump of 45 ft. 5½ in. to Tucker's 43 ft. 2 inches.

Hal Johnson added to his record setting victory, a win in the 120 yd. high hurdles, 15.2, to become another Ram double winner.

Both of the Red and White relay teams were victorious in the meet. The 440 yd. relay team of Bob Prince, Ramson, Bradford and Chris Davis turned in a winning time of 42.5. The mile relay team of Lee Benton, Rod Coleman, Chris Ferrigno and Davis ran in 3:22.7.

Although Diablo Valley's Dwayne Benofsky won the shot put, 48-2½, and the discus, 141-11, City's Laisene Malaulu placed second in both events with 46 ft. 3 in. and 140 ft. 9½ in. respectively.

Other Ram victories were turned in by Joe Singer, 10.03, two mile run; Rick Klemmer, 4:23.1, in the mile run; and Bob Incerti in the pole vault, 11 ft.

In what was probably the closest event of the day, City's Sam Johnson barely picked up a victory in the long jump by jumping 27 ft. ½ in. This edged out teammate Larry Barnes, who jumped 27 feet.

Although the Cal Freshmen team's points did not affect the dual meet results, had the meet been scored as a triangular meet, the score would have run as follows: CCSF 34½, Cal Frosh 62½, Diablo Valley 23.

Local Nine Sweeps Twin Bill, Dumps Vikings, 4-1, 5-3

By Pete Franklin

San Francisco's gallant Ram nine fought to the bitter end last Saturday, and pulled one out of the hat when they squeezed by Diablo Valley's Vikings, 5-3.

The come from behind effort was a small miracle as the Rams had but three hits before their 7th inning rally.

Henry Scott flied out to open the final Ram attempt in the last frame of the second game of the twin bill. San Francisco was down 3-1 at the time. Pinch hitter Bill Booth hit a clutch single and when Bob Farmer was hit by a pitch, the Rams were on the move.

Mike Carli ripped a single to load the sacks and Biff Barnes drew a base on balls forcing in a run.

George Alvarez, the Ram's top stickman, hitless in eight previous trips to the plate, blasted a long two bagger for the tying tallies, and Mike Dunne got the final run over with a sacrifice fly to left. Ken Sickinger flied out to end the inning.

Bing Kunzig came on in relief in the bottom of the seventh and held Diablo down.

In the first game, San Francisco was on top all the way scoring three in the sixth and one in the seventh while hurler Bob Lee, who went the route, held the Vikings to a single run in the seventh.

"Our trouble all day was that we were hitting the ball hard, but right at the other team," Coach Ern Domecus attested. "This club hits better than any we have had recently, and their hustle is great."

Top guns for the Ram team were Barnes who was four for seven on the day and Dunne, two for three with a sacrifice fly in the second game.

Outstanding efforts of the day were Alvarez's clutch double in the seventh inning of the nightcap, and Kunzig's relief stint which, though only half an inning in length, made victory real for San Francisco.

RA Officers Attend Pacific Conference Of College Women

Recreation Association officers of the college attended a conference at Asilomar Conference Grounds near Monterey, California, last weekend.

A total of 40 colleges from all over the United States including Hawaii attended the 1965 Pacific Southwest Regional Conference For the Athletic Federation of College Women.

City College was the only two-year college at the conference, RA President Barbara Kontis said.

Miss Kontis described the conference as a retreat in which members of the various colleges "exchanged ideas in physical education" as applied to the 1965 conference theme, Creativity In Leadership.

The keynote speaker was Dr. Ralph Hollman, associate professor of philosophy at Pasadena City College. Dr. Hollman spoke of the importance of creativity and leadership in recreation.

The RA officers, Miss Kontis, Pam Maul, Gay Kurrell, Rose Donaldson and Irma Tabares attended the conference. They were accompanied by faculty members Edna Pope and Phyllis Vasquez.

Volleyball and bowling were the highlights for this college at the Cabrillo sportsday March 13. RA representatives from here were awarded first place trophies for their winning efforts in both sports.

The college was second in the all-round competition with 34 points.

Entertainment and dancing followed the distribution of awards at the sports day. Music was provided by a combo composed of Cabrillo College students.

College of San Mateo has invited the college RA to a sportsday Saturday, March 27.

King, Cahill Selected To 2nd Club All-League Quintet

By William Pates

Despite the rather frustrating end to the 1965 basketball season, coach Sid Phelan and his club have some reason for happiness with the recent selection of Henry King and Mike Cahill to the second club of the Golden Gate Conference All-Conference teams.

Still, the appointments to the mythical club are small consolation for losing a championship that was easily in the Rams' grasp a good deal of the season.

King, who played in the shadows of Art Adams and Jerry Chandler last year, and Cahill, who will return next year, were two of the bigger reasons for the "success" of Phelan's cage club this year.

Center King was the primary member of the club's rebounding force as well as being the squad's second best scorer and a defensive artist.

In the Rams' first conference contest of the season "t-bone" teamed up with forward Ed Wilson to hold Foothill's "gunner" Dick Treglown scoreless, an interesting phenomenon considering Treglown scored 27 points the next time the two clubs met.

King averaged better than 13 points a game in conference contests and had some of his best performances go for naught in losing efforts including the Rams' two overtime losses to Contra Costa in which he scored 18 and 20 points, respectively, as well as a 17-point achievement in the club's 83-63 loss to Chabot.

He did manage 20 points in the college's 79-69 beating of Merritt as well as a 19-point splurge in an overtime win over San Jose and 17 in a 77-59 battering of Diablo Valley.

Cahill, club master in the art of outside shooting, had only one real attribute—he could shoot, and he was sent out on the court with but one job in mind—to shoot and score.

The former Riordan star did not spend all his time on scoring, although this was his primary function. He put in his time covering the offensive and defensive board as well as defensing opponent "gunners."

Cahill scored better than 10 points a game in 16 straight contests during the year and ended the season with 203 points in conference action, the eleventh best in the league.

His best night of the season was in the Rams' 78-61 revenge victory over Chabot when he came up with 36 points, three short of the record set by Chabot's Russ Moe.

The 6-8 forward had great nights against the Merritt Thunderbirds with a total of 43 points against them, all but three on field goals.

Happily for Phelan, this high-scoring though poor ball handling forward will be returning next season and provide a major part of the squad's offensive power.

Curious Props Spotlight 'Teahouse'

Getas, cricket cages, a bamboo wheelbarrow, a goat named Astor and an army jeep are among the assorted array of props to be used for the play, Teahouse Of The August Moon, which opens today in the theater and runs each night through Saturday, April 3.

Cast in the lead roles of the play are John LaZar, Ray Lynch and Mike Dobrinski. Guest director is Lucile Meredith. For full details see story on page 3.

Car Parade Initiates IFC's Promotion Of Annual Blood Drive Scheduled April 8, 9

By Kathi MacDonald

Garnished autos, uniformed escorts and a van loaded with lively musicians will form the car parade scheduled to leave at 7 p.m. Monday from the Ferry Building. This event will serve as the kick-off for the Inter-Fraternity Council's annual blood drive, with actual donation scheduled to take place here, Thursday and Friday, April 8 and 9.

This year, as in previous years, benefits from the drive will be doled out not only to donors but to competing fraternities as well. Pint-giving participants will be eligible for unlimited withdrawals from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, trustee of deposits from City College.

Eligibility is extended to the donor or an immediate member of his family for a period of one year. During this year the donor may transfer up to eight pints of blood to anyone of his choosing. However, he then relinquishes the rights gained by his initial deposit.

Fraternities on campus will be competing for awards to be won by recruiting the most donors for the two-day drive. The club winning first place will have its name inscribed on the perpetual trophy which is on display in the Stadler wing. Individual trophies will be awarded to second and third place winners.

"Competition isn't limited exclusively to the fraternities. All campus organizations are invited to participate," stated John Hohman, IFC president.

Student government adviser, Jim Wyatt, expressed the hope that this year's drive will see contributions of more pints than ever before; 410 pints is the highest existing record for City College's donations.

Regulations provide that donors must be at least 21 years of age or, for those between 18 and 21, a permission slip must be submitted from a parent or guardian. Signup tables will be set up in Smith Hall prior to and during donation days and permission slips can be obtained there.

An Irwin Memorial Blood Bank crew will arrive on campus Thursday with its mobile equipment, staff and, of course, the orange juice and cookies. Coffee will also be provided for those who prefer it, by courtesy of John Dunn and the hotel and restaurant department.

Donors will be directed to C-249 where approximately 25 contributors can be accommodated at one time.

He will discuss broadcasting and the experience he has had in the professional field.

New Periodicals Added To Library

The City College library is currently receiving 489 different periodicals, Amerigo Ciani of the library staff announced today.

"Whenever the college adds a new course to the curriculum, the library supplies that course with four or five periodicals," Ciani said.

As an example he pointed out that the college has added a course in salesmanship and the library has therefore provided this class with such periodicals as Sales Management, Journal of Marketing and the Journal of Retailing.

"These are provided in addition to other magazines the library had been subscribing to," he explained.

Only two new periodicals were added to the library this semester. These were Flight International and Space World.

Forum To Accept Literary Works Until April 19

Contributions of literary types are now being accepted for possible publication in Forum Magazine.

All work submitted will be evaluated by Forum's editorial staff, with each artistic material or written contribution judged on its own merit, Vicki Powers, Forum secretary said.

This opportunity is given to students only once every spring. Students who are currently enrolled or were enrolled last fall and would like to have something published were encouraged to submit material to the Forum Magazine staff.

Contributions in any literary form, short stories, short one-act plays, essays not exceeding 1500 words, serious or humorous, critiques of books, authors, institutions or art, articles of current interest and poetry or light verse may be submitted.

Satirical or humorous material in any form is especially encouraged, according to staff members.

The deadline for submitting material is Monday, April 19. Manuscripts must be on 8½ by 11 inch paper and should be typed with double spacing. Material may be turned in at the Forum office in C-331a or to any member of the Forum Club.

Material may also be given to Miss Powers, G. Frank Cooney, advertising manager, or to William Brown.

Dean's Office?

By Greg Frazier

"All the world is a stage," says the bard, and Dean Ralph Hillsman's office is no exception.

Every day at 8 a.m. sharp the curtain rises and a tragi-comedy unfolds, filled with tears and laughter and not to be terminated until 4 p.m. when the lights are dimmed and the curtain falls on the last act.

A typical day in the Dean's office is like a typical day in a nursery, a police station, a circus, a lonely hearts club, a confessional, a small claims court, a large claims court, a lawyer's office, a marriage counselor's office, a real estate office and last but not least, a Dean's office.

An irage young lady loses her coat at a student dance and demands restitution from the Student Council. To whom does she direct her demand? You guessed it! An unfortunate young man is jailed for involvement with the police. To whom does he go for legal advice? Right again!

A landlord wants a student's back rent, a student wants better housing, another student, here with a government scholarship, faces cancellation because he married, thereby violating the terms of the scholarship.

A visiting Peace Corps representative wants to know why he got a ticket for parking in the faculty parking lot, a hospital calls for eight pints of blood for open heart surgery, a student wants certain data removed from his high school transcript, a death in the family, etc., etc., etc., ad infinitum.

These are just a few of the acts played out in Dean Hillsman's office. The list is literally endless. Makes one glad one's a student and not a Dean.

Applications Due Thursday For Ten RIS Scholarships

Applications for the R.I.S. scholarships, which may be obtained in S-150, are due tomorrow, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

These scholarships, which consist of ten grants of $1000 each, are awarded to men students majoring in a business field.

R.I.S., Inc., is a nonprofit educational foundation established to make annual scholarship grants to young men enrolling in upper division work in a four-year accredited college or university program that is business oriented.

The majors which qualify for the grants are business administration, law, radio, teaching of business subjects, journalism, advertising, sales, commercial art and world trade.

Women students interested in the Denman Scholarship may obtain applications from Dean Golding in S-150.

This scholarship, the oldest presented at City College, is in memory of James Denman, a former San Francisco superintendent of schools and Board of Education president.

The award was started by Denman's son, the late Judge William Denman, and the latter's sister, Mary Denman Cheatham, and was first presented as a medal to a promising girl in the eighth grade.

The Denman Scholarship consists of two awards of $150 each which are presented to outstanding women students who are graduates of San Francisco public high schools, and who are in their third or fourth semester at City College.

Recommendations, usually written by the deans of men and women, are required of the applicants. Applications for the Denman awards are due Monday, April 19, along with applications for all other scholarships available.

Nonresidents Must Pay For Summer Session

A new rule will go into effect this summer session that will require nonresident students to pay tuition.

Nonresidents in Fall and Spring semesters had only to pay for enrollment in more than six units.

Summer session will require them to pay $10.20 per unit, up to the maximum of $61.20 for the full load of six units, Robin Dunn, representative of the College President in matters of nonresidency, explained.

Dunn said, "All nonresident students should come and see me before May 21, deadline for applications. These students will not be able to register for classes, June 1 through 4, until they are cleared through my office."

Tuition cost for nonresidents went into effect last Fall.

AWS Tea Tomorrow Features Spring, Summer Ensembles

By Lee Larson

Our Fairest Ladies is the theme of the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea which is scheduled from 3 to 5 p.m. tomorrow in Smith Hall. Spring and summer fashions will be modeled.

Mrs. Maree Stuber, fashion coordinator for H. Liebes, will preside as fashion commentator, and Mrs. Harold Spears, wife of the San Francisco superintendent of schools, will present awards to Linda Jo Heiser, winner of the Best Dressed Coed contest.

The Inter-Sorority Council trophy will be awarded to the freshman coed who has achieved the highest grade point average during the first midterm period.

Also attending the fashion show and tea will be Dorothy Newman, from the News-Call Bulletin, who will select two of the models to be photographed for the Grand National.

Mannequins in the fashion show will enter through a pink-flowered arch, and in keeping with the theme, hats will be worn by all of the hostesses. Many of the decorative effects have been provided by the Warner Brothers Studio office here in San Francisco.

Modeling the ensembles from H. Liebes will be Miss Heiser, Jean Arana, Phyllis Bacigalupi, Jean Baptista, Sylvia Fernandez, Sharon Hunter, Galina Ivashikoff, Socorra Rivera, Theresa Santos, Sharon Strauss, Cindy Louise Wilkin, and Susanna Wong.

Alternates will be Sharyn Grantz, Deri Leong, Dixine Gillespie and Cheryl Morris.

Miss Heiser, a graphic design major in her fifth semester at the college, will represent San Francisco in Glamour Magazine's nationwide contest. Besides her work here, Miss Heiser is employed by Reginald Jones Design Associates, Children's Storyland Contact Zoo, and a commercial photographer for whom she models.

Entertainers Garo Mirigian, Magda Jacobs and Alan Viau will take over the spotlight following the fashion show. Mirigian will play piano selections from My Fair Lady, and soloist Viau will sing numbers from the same production.

Following the musical selections, Miss Jacobs will take over the runway and perform a routine to Wouldn't It Be Loverly, also from My Fair Lady.

Debate Club Calls For New Members Who Like To Argue

A request for students who like to argue, who are interested in politics, world affairs, drama or humor to join the Forensics Club was issued today by Glen Fahs, Forensics club president, and Carol Powell, team captain.

The club was rejuvenated last semester after a period of inactivity; at present, there are ten active members.

Many persons think that Forensics, which is a debate club, has nothing to offer but dull debating over capital punishment or one of the old standby high school debate topics, Miss Powell said. Actually, she added, it offers a variety of topics and presentations.

Major categories of debate include oratory, which is a ten-minute talk on any subject; impromptu, where the speaker is given a topic and one minute to prepare a talk on it, which induces on-foot fast thinking; dramatic, humorous and oratorical interpretation, as well as regulation debating.

Fahs said that he is especially looking for people from the Radio, Drama and Speech departments.

"Joining our club is better than carrying signs," Fahs said, "and less exhilarating physically, for the strain is on the brain, not the feet."

If one has something to say, Fahs added, and wants to be heard and criticized intelligently, the Forensics Club provides him with the opportunity to do so.

The ten active members of the club are Larry Petersen, Lisa Sodastrom, Mark Cummings, Bill Zahiroff, Rosemarie Adams, Phil Adams, Bill Paulbitski, Al Lukin, Miss Powell and Fahs.

Frightening Rush For Human Rights

By Mike Barber

THE present "crises in values" was the subject of a College Hour lecture given here several weeks ago by Robert Thornton, professor of physics and dean of the School of Physical Sciences at San Francisco State College.

Touching on the subject of democracy he said, "We have taught people democracy for so long now that at last they have believed us. They have taken us at our word. It's terribly frightening."

Thornton did not expand on the statement, which seemed actually to be an aside, more or less divorced from the general content of the speech. However, the statement has broad applications.

Citizens from across the nation have rushed to Selma, Alabama, to make democracy work. It is frightening to know that almost 200 years after the signing of the Constitution many Americans are still denied rights guaranteed them by federal laws.

It is even more frightening to see officers of the law and public officials resorting to violence to impede a people's struggle for rights which are legally theirs as Americans.

No one need look so far as Selma to be frightened. Across the bay students have challenged an institution by laying claim to certain rights heretofore denied them by administrative law.

It is a sad fact that many officials in the administrations of public colleges and universities have assumed proprietary status over the campus and its students.

Thornton, as an administrator, admits to finding the present situation frightening. Is it that he finds the scope of his strength and influence, his proprietorship, possibly threatened if the outcome of the Berkeley conflict sets precedents favoring the students?

The Filthy Speech Movement brings up the enigmatic question of who should declare what expressions so offensive as to warrant punishment by law. How far may censorship intrude upon the freedom of an individual to read or publish what he pleases? If someone finds something offensive will it really harm him? Have his rights been infringed upon because he has been offended?

Who is to decide, and for whom may he decide? There are as many answers as there are individuals, and it is to the individual that the decision should be left.

It may be comforting to some, and frightening to others, that there will always be someone, eager to enhance his self-importance, who will make the decision for everyone else if given the opportunity.

If the people of the United States care to retain, or in fact fully recapture, their rights as Americans they must believe in the democratic ideals and principles upon which this nation was founded.

The situation will be frightening to Alabama State troopers and black or white racists. It may even make educators worry about whether they have helped to create some sort of Frankenstein's monster.

The proprietorship of an authoritarian administration need not exist where the students have responsibly assumed the hard-won freedom to govern themselves.

Is The Stigma On Exercise, Physical Education Justified?

IT IS RIDICULOUS to picture anyone content to eat or sleep twice a week. Yet, there are countless students here who begrudge the mere two hours a week they spend in a physical education class of one type or another.

The correlation between eating, sleeping and exercising isn't as farfetched as it may appear. There's hardly a student on campus who would bother to argue the worth of eating and sleeping. Both activities are vital for the normal biological functions of the human organism.

So is exercising, but for some reason everyone seems to be armed with a quick rationalization—a negative rationalization concerning this "necessary evil."

At first, it seemed as if students might be justified in their feelings on exercising in general and physical education in particular. But first-hand analysis of the situation over an extended period of time has proved all arguments pointless.

Granted, the gymnasiums aren't exactly "in your own backyard," but for that matter neither is the Statler wing nor the ornamental horticulture center.

Through the years in college circles most subjects have acquired the almighty student "seal of appeal," but hardly physical education. Heavens no, exercising and the like are designed solely for the individual who is interested in sports.

If this reasoning is fairly accurate, then eating and sleeping must also have their prerequisites and limitations.

It seems rather senseless to remind students of the late President John F. Kennedy's emphasis on physical fitness. Sadly enough, students can't be bothered with programs and such; they're just for kids.

The same rule of thumb applies to all those television shows concerned with exercising, except for one minor detail. These shows are intended for individuals affectionately dubbed "housewives" who as everyone knows have nothing better to do all day than attempting to shed or to rearrange some of their poundage.

Will exercising and physical education ever gain the rightful place on campus they should occupy? Perhaps the strange stigma attached to both activities will someday pass, but before this can happen, the students must do one thing—grow up!

• Grades Or Knowledge?

Editor, The Guardsman:

I disagree with the following statements in your March 17 editorial, Non-grading System Makes Its Mark on the Education Scene.

Namely, "... these apparently brilliant minds could turn their efforts from getting grades to that little-talked-of-subject, knowledge." And "If one learns no more than how to cram for a test in four or six years of university level work, who is to benefit?"

The first is incorrect as there is usually a high correlation between the grade received and the knowledge obtained in any given class, provided the instructor is objective (as he usually is).

The second is a good example of naiveté on the subject of learning. A student who desires good grades and a large amount of knowledge shouldn't "cram" before a test but space his learning evenly between examinations. In other words, he should keep up with his assignments.

It is doubtful that the student who "erams" is going to get as high a grade as the student whose learning is cumulative and who reviews before the examination.

As for the ungraded system, it will have to have a lot of incentives toward learning to replace the present graded system.

Because aside from the fact that grades provide an incentive to the otherwise disinterested student they provide an easily recognized difference, for the outside world, between the hard working student who has obtained knowledge and the less ambitious or drop-out.

Gas Warfare A Contender In Arms Race

By Hugh Haworth

EXCRUCIATING pain was inflicted on millions of World War I soldiers in the form of gas warfare. In fact, one million, three hundred thousand casualties resulted from this military strategy. Now, the Department of Defense announces that it is using gas in Vietnam.

Before jumping to any drastic conclusions, it's best to observe the use of this military strategy. First, the Pentagon brass informed the press that the only gases being used were nauseating, but not fatal, gases.

Second, the purposes of the gas are to rout the Viet Cong when they are taking captives, to set back the opponents when government troops are pinned down, and to up root the Viet Cong supply lines.

Third, and most ironic, is that the South Vietnamese soldiers do not know how to utilize gas, are skeptical of it, and they themselves are grossly ill supplied with gas masks. For instance, several units were checked and only one-third or one-fourth of the men had gas masks.

Since it will be a while before a unified military front can be affected there with any new weapon, it will be months until cries of foul play will be heard.

However, there is the greater picture including the Soviet Union, China and the United States. Gases which have been developed and can be used by these powers range from extremely lethal ones to mild incapacitators, and their uses vary.

Military leaders are telling U.S. citizens that they're losing the chemical-biological warfare race. The Soviet Union, they say, has stock piles of the most deadly type of chemical agents, enough to wipe out hundreds of large cities.

But, strategists say this is not all that Americans have to worry about, because there are many subtle forms of incapacitators which could be smuggled into the country and send the population into an economic slump by spreading disease or inflicting agriculture with pests.

The beauty of these weapons is that their users can go undetected since a small bottle of agent in an aerosol can may be spread for miles and effect harmful results. The blame for the act of aggression can be shifted to anyone.

Whether or not U.S. citizens want to change their abhorrence for chemical warfare and prepare with stock piles of gas bombs is the question they have to ask themselves. If it's true that a war of this nature can be avoided in the same way atomic war has been, that is, by making sure the enemy can be deterred by a "show of force," then arming with new gases is needed.

Of course, this is just seeking an adequate defense and not peace between nations. It is, for sure, devising more "human" ways of bringing the enemy to its feet.

Yet, this might be another Doomsday Machine button, once every nation has used this warfare because it was "forced" by its opponent's tactics.

Presently, the U.S. should make definite efforts to know all possible chemical-biological agents and their defenses so the Americans can be ready. But, a blunt challenge to the Soviet Union and China that a new destructive force race is on should be the last, very last, measure.

This threat only means counter-threats and action. They'll know well enough through regular spy channels where the U.S. capabilities stand.

Not Fit For Garbage

THIS SCENE IS TYPICAL OF the despicable condition in which the campus garbage containers now exist. Over the years they have served the college valiantly through the thick and thin of the battle against litter. But now, as they enter their twilight years, even the litter seems to reject their unsightly appearance. —Guardsman photo by Beverly Bartlett.

Campus Litter Cans Seen As Authentic Treasures Of Past

The garbage cans on the college grounds could justly be termed, by an observant student, as bordering on the deplorable. By this it is meant that the condition of the litter containers situated around the campus is very poor indeed.

In order to prove the validity of this statement, an investigation was called for to establish the truth of the situation.

Last week an energetic student took a somewhat extensive trek around the college campus. He found that the grounds have been invaded by a swarm of unwanted guests known as litter-bugs, which have left their telltale signs in and around every part of the campus, except in the garbage cans.

Besides noting the general emptiness of the garbage cans and the absolute infestation of the flower beds, bushes and shrubs with numerous types of paper bags, milk cartons and wrappers, this roving individual discovered (without much effort) the thick precipitation of "tobaccus domesticus finis," otherwise known as cigarette butts, which cover the grass, stairways, gardens and walks of the campus grounds.

There are, of course, a number of receptacles for waste which adorn the campus and are used to a certain extent. The total number of cans which make up the waste facilities are the four or five beautiful garbage cans and about six lovely, rust-covered pots which augment the attractiveness of some of the more utilized thoroughfares about the City College real estate.

The City College garbage cans are in a class of their own when it comes to awards for beauty of design, color and historical authenticity. Each can is a treasure in itself, and no two are alike.

Each individual receptacle has its own unique variety of dents, gouges and scratches deftly administered by some personage who apparently wished to carry on the tradition of pop art on the college campuses.

The coat of paint which covers each adorable garbage can may only be termed as superb from the standpoint of color choice, brush stroke and imagination in style.

Every repository has a skillfully-applied coating of vibrant red paint, along with a generous sprinkling of chips and scrapes. All in all, the containers are somehow trying to convey a message or illustrate a point to the onlooker—like filth, scum, vermin, pestilence or plague.

The remainder of the waste facilities on campus is made up of a number of alluring little five-gallon cans pleasingly encrusted with a layer of rust and mildew dating back some four semesters into the history of the college.

These cans are strategically placed in obscure places in order that the student desiring to rid himself of some refuse will inevitably discard the waste on the ground. The very few of these containers which can be seen and used by the students and faculty are so disgustingly dirty that one might think he was degrading his refuse by patronizing such a waste container.

For the reasons stated, it is a rare sight indeed for a passerby to feast his eyes on the intricate design and workmanship of every garbage can on the college grounds. There is no doubt that somebody put countless hours of hard work into the destruction of these pitiful-looking containers.

The findings have been presented, the points have been made, but one must judge for himself how "sick" the campus looks with the presence of these more than unsightly litter cans.

Meanderings

By Don Patten

THE DAY BEGINS clear and calm, the rising sun casting brilliant fires on the crystal bay. Aboard the yacht, the young man begins to feel the gentle rise and fall of the heavy ground swell making its way down the coast of California. A perfect day for salmon fishing.

The yacht, rounding Point Bonita, bravely meets the watery mountains head on and plunges to the next encounter. Up the coast travels the vessel, making its way with the rest of the salmon fleet to the fishing grounds off Point Reyes.

AT TROLLING SPEED . . .

At 8:30 a.m. the first of the vessels in the fleet slows to trolling speed and throws its lines with heavy iron sinkers into the depths. Down, down, down travels the baited hook—10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 40, 50 feet and deeper to wait for a strike.

Up above, the yacht rises and falls gently on the long Pacific swell, maintaining just enough power for trolling speed. The loud chatter of the anglers over the marine radio seem to blot out the quiet, calm solitude associated with the mystery of the ocean.

IN ANOTHER WORLD . . .

The young fisherman feels this solitude even above the conglomeration of sounds from the radio. Eight miles off the coast, with only the sounds of the gentle waves breaking over to form white caps on the somewhat tranquil water, he finds himself in another world.

Then, ten minutes after dropping lines overboard, STRIKE! The young man begins the long task of reeling in his hopeful prize. Some moments later, a spear of silver flashes into view below the surface. Then it breaks the water, spreading in its path a wisp of sea foam.

THE SALMON YIELDS . . .

Terrified, the fish dives deeper, seeming to sense the danger of the coming human contact. Eventually exhausted, the silver salmon yields to the net and is taken aboard the yacht.

The young fisherman, elated by the sight of his prize, bags his fish and eagerly thrusts his line back into the depths to await another strike. Several times during the day, playful porpoise cavort happily around the vessel, obviously without the slightest care.

AS THE DAY GROWS . . .

Now the crisp morning ocean air has given way to the warmer temperatures of the growing day and the young angler sheds some of his heavy gear.

With the afternoon comes a slight breeze from the Northwest and the watchful eye of the skipper deciphers the possible danger it can afford. The velocity increases and the ocean surface becomes a white blanket of foam.

Although still early in the afternoon, the skipper knows the time has come to head for home. Lines are brought in and the long journey to the Golden Gate begins. "Don't move too fast with the swell," the skipper reminds himself. There is always the danger of broaching.

ROLL, PITCH, YAW . . .

Plowing through the waves of white and pushing aside tons of sea water, the little ship moves down the coast toward its destination. The sky has become darker and the yacht rolls, pitches and yaws uneasily trying to regain its balance on the confused terrain of the sea.

The gulls follow the ship, eagerly awaiting any scraps that someone may throw overboard. And usually, this is what happens and so the "seavengers of the sea" keep their stomachs full of a variety of foods.

Off to port, the young fisherman at long last observes the lighthouse at Point Bonita. Another 15 minutes and the vessel slides quietly under the Golden Gate Bridge and into the bay. The ocean is behind the yacht and its passengers, and the constant motion has ceased.

The quiet waters of the bay provide a smooth roadway for the little ship and its crew.

A LONG DAY . . .

Into the harbor at last and safely tied up at the dock, the vessel is home and now the young fisherman prepares to go home. It's been a long day but a wonderful one. The fisherman has three beautiful salmon as his trophies of the day and now darkness is settling over the bay.

The chill air runs right through the young man; it's time to put back on the heavy gear. It will be good to get home and into bed, it will be good to fall asleep. It has been a tiring day.

Council Approves Resolution For 'Host' Program

By James Rauh

Busy Jim Soletti, Freshman Class president, in keeping up with his unusually active pace, once again made his presence known at the Student Council meetings last week by introducing a series of three "resolutions directly affecting the student officers, in particular."

Soletti's first resolution moved for what he termed as "the appointment of a host and hostess whose job it would be to welcome the new members of the Student Council elected each semester, at their meetings, and to greet the outsiders who wish to attend a council meeting."

Since Student Council meetings are open to anyone who wants to attend, Soletti explained, "it is our place to make these people and also the new council members feel at home."

He added that the reason for his resolution was that "at the start of each semester, all of the well-acquainted council people seem to form cliques of a sort, leaving the novice members sitting by themselves in a corner, afraid to speak."

Soletti urged the passage of this first resolution to "terminate the somewhat unfriendly atmosphere at the council meetings." Council voted and passed his move, 9-1-3.

Second on Soletti's improvement agenda was a recommendation that all of the Student Council officers should spend at least one hour per week mingling with the students, talking with them about student government and getting their general interest.

"As it is," Soletti stated, "the only time that council members talk to, or even see members of the student body is during the election campaigns each semester."

Response to his second proposal was not so great as to his first, and the resolution barely passed, 5-1-7.

It appeared that on Soletti's introduction of his third resolution he was pushing his luck. Council had already been gracious enough to pass two of his proposals, but this third one proved too much.

Soletti indicated that "most of council's time is spent either in class or somewhere else on the campus, and that almost everyone is free on Fridays from noon to 1 p.m."

He suggested that an informal council meeting should be held in that time slot on Fridays to discuss "betterment of the campus and community."

The Student Council didn't even give him enough time to finish making his proposal as they strongly objected to it.

Council voted against even considering voting on it by a vote of 7-2-2.

Nina Jacobs, Associated Women Student president, submitted a supplementary budget for $161.00 needed by the AWS for two purposes.

Miss Jacobs announced that there will be a turn-about dance on April 23, and "with a total of $125.00, the AWS could finance the rental of a room at the Forest Lodge and refreshments."

The other $36.00 requested was for the purchase of a 20-yard runner for the AWS fashion show held each semester.

As Dean Mary Golding put it, "The rug we now use is worn through from the many years it has served its purpose, and at present it represents a safety hazard, as many of the models for the shows have been tripping on it."

The $161.00 was allocated to the AWS by a vote of 12-0-1.

Bach-Mozart Group Presents Concert Here

The Bach to Mozart Players, seven distinguished Bay Area musicians, are presenting a program of chamber music during College Hour tomorrow in the theater.

In addition to the usual members of the group, Raymond Duste, oboe; Edward Haug, trumpet; Ellen Dessler, cello; Margaret Fabrizio, harpsichord; Frank Houser, violin; Carole Bogard, soprano and Edgar Jones, baritone, for this performance will be joined by guest artists Ruggiero Pelosi, violin, and Linn Sobotnick, viola.

The group, whose members are all soloists in their own right, and who often perform individually, was formed in 1959.

Sponsor of the Bach to Mozart players' appearance on campus is the recreation and transcription fund of the American Federation of Musicians.

Midterm Grades To Be Available After Friday

Midterm grades will be available to students through their counselors after Friday or through their instructors by posting or announcement, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced today.

Parents who wish information on students' grades will be referred to counselors, Miss Learnard added.

Miss Learnard issued a reminder that next Wednesday, April 7, is the last day to file petitions for withdrawal from individual courses.

She also stated that students attending City College by virtue of a release from another two-year college district must renew the release if they plan to attend the college during the summer or fall semesters.

AMS Leagues In Second Week Of Intramural Action

A total of 19 teams have entered the Associated Men Students-sponsored three league Intramural Basketball competition which started March 23 in the men's and women's gymnasiums.

The second week of intramural action starts tonight when the Chancellors meet the Castoffs in the women's gymnasium, and the Irish meet the N.B.A. Rejects in the men's gymnasium. Both games will begin at 7:15 p.m. Later the same evening, the Do-Humps will go against the Mice.

Tonight's Fraternity League action will pit Zeta Phi Sigma against Beta Tau.

Next Tuesday night's competition features the Newman Club Vikings opposing the defending champion Filipino-American Club in the men's gymnasium, while the Lawson's 10 go against the H&R in the women's gymnasium, both games beginning at 7:15 p.m.

At 8:15 p.m. The Guardsman will oppose the Freshmen in the men's gymnasium.

Some minor changes in this semester's schedule calls for the fraternities to play Tuesday and Wednesday nights instead of Wednesdays only. The Club league will play on Tuesdays and the Independents will play on Wednesdays only instead of Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Last Tuesday's action saw the H&R nip the Filipino-American Club, 36 to 35. High point scorers for the H&R were Wallace with 11 and Harder with 10. High point men for the Filipino Club were Wendell Fox with 12 and Bernie Piper along with Minasian with 8.

In Fraternity League action Alpha Phi Epsilon trounced Alpha Sigma Delta, 55 to 7. Big guns for Alpha Phi Epsilon were Calvin Peterson with 29 followed by Frank Taylor with 14.

'Teahouse' Opens 4-Day Run In Theater Tonight; Lynch, La Zar, Dobrinski Head Cast

Teahouse Of The August Moon, the drama department's first major production of the semester, starring Ray Lynch, John La Zar and Mike Dobrinski, opens a four-night run at 8 p.m. today in the college theater.

The story unfolds in a little village on the island of Okinawa in the Pacific, during the occupation following World War II.

It depicts the people of a small village on the island, which is occupied by a band of American troops, struggling to understand the "get up and go" of the strangers from the United States.

The troops try to bring the concept of democracy to the villagers, who are a bit skeptical of the soldiers' efforts.

Lynch plays the romantic lead role of Captain Fisby who is a complete military failure. He has been through every phase of military service, and in each line of duty something has always gone haywire.

Fisby is sent to the village of Tobiki to bring democracy to the villagers, or, in other words bring his civilized way of life to their uncivilized one.

Of his role, Lynch had this to say. "Fisby is a very inept individual who always gets into a lot of trouble, an adult Charlie Brown. The part of Fisby parallels my own inept career, so I will enjoy acting the part," he quipped.

"Teahouse is not as soul-searching as King Lear," Lynch added, "but it is good enjoyment."

Dobrinski portrays the part of Colonel Purdy who is the comic lead. He is an "old soldier," very pedantic, who is in search of recognition for himself to gain promotion and a general's star.

Dobrinski commented, "Colonel Purdy is a loud-mouth who is full of hot air, with not much upstairs. The part is a very funny one, with which you can do a lot. It will give me a chance to show what I can do."

When the inept Captain Fisby is sent to Colonel Purdy for duty, Purdy sees the assignment as the chance for the recognition he has been seeking. He sends Fisby to the village of Tobiki in the hope that he will accomplish his own aims.

Doors will open for tonight's performance around 7:15 p.m. Admission is free with an Associated Student card, 50 cents with any other student body card and $1 general admission.

Tryouts for the college's next drama production, Shoemaker's Holiday, a farce by Thomas Dekker, will be held at 2:15 p.m. tomorrow and Friday in the theater. Walter Krumm, play director, announced.

Tryouts are open to any student enrolled here, Krumm said, adding that musicians who play a reeorder, taber or lute are needed.

Astor Forsakes Zoo To Become A Working Goat

By Mary Parisi

Getas, cricket cages, a bamboo wheelbarrow, a goat named Astor and an army jeep are all among the unusual collection of props collected for the play entitled Teahouse Of The August Moon, which opens here tonight.

"Much leg work was required of students in the Drama 19 class, who collected props," Lucile Meredith, Teahouse' director, said. All the hard-to-get items required by the play had to be found or made.

One humorous problem which arose was that of finding a student willing to give Astor, the goat, a home for ten days during presentation of the play. Astor was lent to the play by the San Francisco Zoological Society.

Another highlight of the play is the judo exhibition performed for real by two students of the college. They are Takehito Hamasaki and Ohya Tadashi, both fourth degree black belt holders. They have devised their own act and will furnish their own costumes.

"Cost Plus and Chinatown supplied the play with many uncommon Oriental imports. "Cost Plus even had cricket cages, an item for which there can't be too much demand in this country," Miss Meredith commented. These sources also yielded other everyday Oriental items such as chop sticks, fans and straw hats.

The jeep and other army apparatus was secured from the Presidio by a faculty member. The army also lent the drama department a col, mosquito netting, field telephones and other accessories.

Many actors have created their own costumes, however, the costume crew has labored busily to create realistic costuming for the actresses.

Phyllis Melmon, who is in charge of props, stated that the most difficulty arose in finding props and getting actors accustomed to using them. She agreed that the major problem was having a live animal on stage and finding a place to house him.

Yoko Murakita Models For BOAC Billboard

Versatile Coed Here Will Follow Career In Commercial Art

IT WOULD UNDOUBTEDLY be a most delightful experience to fly to Hong Kong, Tokyo or any other place, for that matter, with either of the lovely stewardesses pictured above.

Not many instructors here have seen one of their students pictured on a billboard. But John O'Brien, advertising art instructor, almost drove off the freeway upon seeing one of his students, Yoko Murakita, smiling down at him from a BOAC billboard.

The petite, 5-4 Miss Murakita was born in Kyoto, the cultural center and ancient capital of Japan. Her first view of the United States was at the age of nine when she sailed under the Golden Gate to her new home.

"I've been in love with San Francisco ever since," she said. She attended Washington High School and was graduated in 1963 at which time she enrolled here.

Although the 19-year-old beauty plans to make a career of commercial art, she also intends to continue her modeling. She began modeling school two years ago at the House of Charm, which is also a modeling agency, and has been working professionally for a year and a half.

She has appeared in The Chroniele as one of the Emporium's Junior Petite models and in The Examiner's Pictorial Living section.

The list of Miss Murakita's accomplishments is impressive and indicative of her future success. She has won two scholarships: one from the Art Academy and a Graduates-of-1963 scholarship here.

Miss Murakita was voted Best-Dressed Coed of 1963 and is active in the Junior Japanese-American Citizens League. She also appears as an actress in the league's annual play.

In addition, Miss Murakita studies Japanese dancing and performed here at the International Show last semester.

Her hobbies, "when I'm not thinking about my boyfriend, Lance," are tennis, dancing, "... and of course my art work." She is an excellent artist, adept in sketching, water color and oil. "I plan to continue my training at the Art Center in Los Angeles," she commented.

When queried as to her success as a model, she replied that hard work is the key to a model's success. "A model must keep meticulous, forever watching her diet and general health," she emphasized. "I excreise faithfully for ten minutes every day. Some days I feel like forgetting to excreise, but I know I must."

Miss Murakita also warned prospective models that they must have strong legs and feet and be able to stand for long periods of time. "Fashion shows are a strain," she said.

Only A Pool Can Save Swimmers

By William Pates

Coach Roy Burkhead stated today that the College's swimming squad, which was dropped a couple of weeks ago, will probably be suspended for an "indefinite time."

Lack of participation in swimming is nothing new to City College swimming coaches, for it has existed as such since the beginning.

Because of this situation, the sport was suspended in 1942 after only seven years of competition. The sport gained a short reprieve from the inevitable in 1959 when it returned after a 17-year period of nonexistence. If, the present trend continues, in accord with past history, it should be at least another 17 years before swimming returns to City College.

"This problem is as simple to solve as two plus two," coach Burkhead commented, "but until the people of San Francisco see what the problem is, things are not going to get any better."

This simple answer for which coach Burkhead is crusading, of course, is the provision of pool facilities on campus.

BLUEPRINTS DRAWN

In 1949 the blueprints for a pool were drawn up, he explained, adding "That's the last we've seen of it. It would have been built in the grass area between the two gyms, which is why we have those doors and ramp leading out there."

It is apparent that, indirectly, the Park and Recreation Department of San Francisco is responsible for the lack of a pool complex. With all their community recreation pools, the park commission can't see why swim teams can't use these available facilities.

"I begged them time and again not to build this Balboa Park pool," reiterated the coach, "because I knew they would see no reason why I couldn't use the pool for training purposes. What they failed to see is that this pool is 33 and one-third yards instead of the "Olympic" length of 25 which is used in competition.

"The boys are trained intensely, right down to the point where they know how many strokes it takes them to reach the end of the pool," Burkhead continued, "and with this longer pool they are constantly bobbing up and down the last few yards to find out where they are.

SHORT POOLS DOUBLE EFFORT

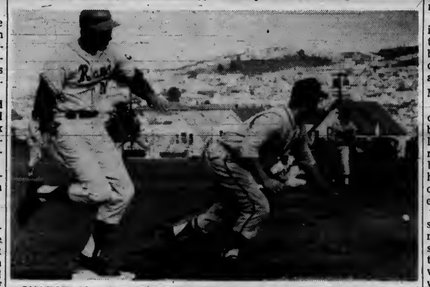
"You end up losing at least one whole body length. The real problem is that every single one of the recreation pools in this city is 33 and one-third yards in length. Because of this the swimmers have to learn everything over again."

In Marin County, the Peninsula and the East Bay, nearly every high school and college has a swimming complex on campus. Foothill College is considered the best example of the effectiveness of this program.

Burkhead expressed greater concern about the water training than the team aspect of swimming.

PUBLIC 'SHORT-TIMED'

"The people aren't getting the training they should in San Francisco. The public isn't getting the true value out of their pools. They should be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for school and team training use and, instead of closing at 3 p.m., they should be kept open until 10 p.m. for use by adults," the coach remarked.



"If they would provide the water here at the college," he added, "we could get a swimming program.

"It takes a lot of 'water proofing' to train a swimmer because it is not one of our natural abilities. We should begin training in junior high, extending it into high school and college, thereby giving the individual six years of swimming experience. This is how long it really takes to develop a good swimmer," he explained.

"Even if we start now it will take a long time to correct our problems — possibly six years until we even get close to the surrounding counties," Burkhead philosophized.

"We're just beginning to scratch the surface in swimming in this country," commented the frustrated swim instructor. "People don't understand why San Francisco doesn't have the same conditions that surround it on nearly all sides. All that needs to be done," he continued, "is to have the commission copy one of the better programs found throughout the country and develop it here in the city.

"Until the people of the city see this, building more pools is not going to solve the problem if they aren't developed on campuses," coach Burkhead reiterated. "It's a shame," he said, "to deny people the chance to develop their swimming."

Thinclads Look For Twin Wins In T-Bird, Comet Dual Meets

By Ivan Temes

The pace quickens for the Ram track men as they attempt to inflict Merritt College with its first conference dual meet loss in two years at City College Stadium Friday and then must come back Tuesday to take on Contra Costa across the bay in a pair of p.m. encounters.

Both the Red and White and Thunderbirds swept past their initial pair of opponents, but Ram coach Lou Vasquez feels the defending champs are considerably weaker than last season and is confident his club has a good chance for victory.

Since the Rams and T-Birds routed Diablo Valley by hardly identical margins of 108-28 and 96-35, respectively, and boast equal strength in most events the meet is expected to be extremely close.

Contra Costa, on the other hand, is a heavy underdog to the locals. The Comets held the Oakland entry to a 78-58 triumph.

The versatile sophomore swept to four wins with timings of 14.6 and 38.9 in the high and low hurdles, respectively, and took the triple and long jumps with leaps of 46-2½ and 23-3½ along with helping pace the 440-relay quartet to a victory.

Two of Rogers' Ram opponents, triple-jumper Leroy Woods and low hurdler Hal Johnson, hold City College records of 45-1 and 39.0 set this season.

Other top performances include speedster Bob Prince who has dashed to 9.7 and 22.4 clockings in the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes and Chris Ransom with marks of 9.9 and 22.5 in the same events. Their battle with Merritt's Bill Sanders and Ed Phillips looms as the highlight of Friday's meet.

Local 440-yard threats include Chris Davis and Lee Benton with respective 50 second and 50.4 timings while Chris Ferrigno tops the half-milers with a 1:58.8 mark. Steadily improving Rick Klemmer has lowered his mile standard to 4:23.1 and two-mile to 10:01.4 where he is pressed by Joe Singer's 10:03.3.

Johnson and Oliver Mitchell are credited with 15.2 and 15.6 second high hurdle timings while they are continually lowering.

Dogged Lalane Malauulu has become a real threat in the shotput and discus with heaves of 46-3 and 140-½.

Both the high jump and broad jump have provided stiff competition among the Rams. In the former, Woods has leaped 6-4, Dwight Tucker 6-3 and Obie Goodrich 6 feet. A quartet of long, long-jumpers — Sam Johnson, Larry Barlas, Carson English and Benton — all are threats, none having a best of less than 20-4½.

Tennis Club Routs Jags, 7-0, Faces Chabot Friday

San Francisco netters made it two in a row in conference play when they dropped San Jose's Jaguars, 7-0, in a match here March 19. They will take on underdog Chabot College Friday as visitors in another Golden Gate Conference encounter.

The Rams' newly crowned No. 1 player, Fred Suessman, up-ended Yoshiteru DeGuchi, 6-0, 6-4, and George Pontikoff dumped Jack Nash, 6-2, 6-2. Ben Levy trounced the second DeGuchi brother, Noshinobu, in "love" sets.

"Louis Engelstein played one of his stronger games of the young season," several squad members stated after he walloped Fred Appleby, 6-1 and 6-0, using his "blasting forehand." In the last singles Mike Price topped Bob King, 6-1, 6-0.

Suessman and newcomer Steve Jones defeated Y. DeGuchi and Nash in the doubles by giving them one game, while Price-Levy shut out N. DeGuchi and Bob King.

The next day the Rams took on highly-rated American River of Sacramento. Most of the matches were very close but finally ended up in the Rams' favor, as they romped to a 6-1 win.

The match was highlighted by Price and Jones. The Price victory put the match on ice for the Rams. Price presented himself with a 6-3 triumph in the first set. The second set was tied at 8-8 when he broke loose and collected a 10-8 match clincher.

"Jones is going to get a real shot at a position on our club," coach Roy Diederichsen said before match time. Jones dropped Ron Wagner, 6-4, 6-4.

He made his move at the time when he was behind 4-1 in the opening set. He put in four out of his five serve tries and his opponent was unable to return them. He also captured the next four games to win set number one, 6-4.

San Mateo Dumps Ram Nine In Clash On Soggy Dirt, 4-2

By Pete Franklin

Stormy weather and on-the-spot groundskeepers spelled the end of any Ram hopes for revenge in Saturday's scheduled doubleheader with the Bulldogs of San Mateo. San Mateo took the only game played, 4-2.

When San Francisco's diamondmen arrived at San Mateo for a proposed twin bill, they found that the soggy weather conditions had somewhat incapacitated the host's infield, and so had to consider postponing the contest indefinitely.

Never-at-a-loss San Mateo however decided that nearby public ball field, Fitzgerald Park, was as good as any.

Upon arriving at the park, the two ball clubs discovered much to their disdain that the well organized groundsmen had been watering the field for some hours and that it could not be used for several hours.

It was 2 p.m. when the game finally got underway, only three hours late.

George Alverez opened the Ram effort with a 360 plus round-tripper in the top of the first, only to see the Bulldogs come back in their half of the frame with two to lead the game 2-1.

Both clubs hung goose eggs on the score card until the fifth when a Ram error allowed Fiermore to lit up. In the bottom of the seventh, San Mateo got to Ram mound ace Bob Lee, who went the distance, for the deciding two.

Lee walked a man to start the inning, then threw a double play attempt as the second batter of the inning bunted to the box. With two aboard, Lee fanned two in a row, and worked the next man to a one ball and two strike count before he was touched for a triple which spelled the Ram downfall.

San Francisco rallied briefly in the ninth but fell short with two men left on base.

Lee whiffed nine men in his hurling stint, while allowing only two men to first on balls. He also pushed for his own cause at the stick as he tapped two singles, the only Ram of the day with more than one hit.

"The second game was postponed because of the lateness of the hour, and will be replayed tonight if the weather holds," according to coach Ern Domecus.

Ram Nine Rallies For 7-4 Triumph

City College's baseball team came from behind, on 15 hits, to blast a fine Chabot nine, 7-4, March 23, at Balboa Park.

After a shaky start, in which he gave up a 450 foot homerun to Chabot's Mitterwald, pitcher Ken Dyer settled down and allowed only six hits while whiffing seven.

With the Rams trailing, 2-0, George Alverez led off the fourth inning with a single and moved to second on catcher Mike Dunne's second hit of the game. Dunne was forced at second on Bill Booth's grounder, and Alverez moved to third. From there he scored on a Chabot miscue. Centerfielder Barry Carli tied up the game in the fifth when he singled, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on Biff Barnes' single.

Chabot came on strong in the sixth with two more runs, but the Rams scored two to knot the score at 4-4.

With one out in the eighth, Sickinger singled and so did Murray Jacobs. Bill True then flied to right. With two outs, Dyer singled home Sickinger with the leading run. Carli hit a low liner to right, which Chabot's Lockhart missed, and the hit went for a triple.

Golfers Seek End To Local Title Drought

For the first time since 1952, City College golfers may well be on the road to a Golden Gate Conference championship.

A glance at the Rams' impressive record forces even the most skeptical observer to admit that the heretofore luckless hacksters have a favorable chance to go all the way this season.

Thus far, the team, in winning five practice matches and its first two league outings, has a perfect record.

—Ram golf coach, Grover Klemmer, declined to make any predictions. Instead, he chose to note, "The Golden Gate Conference is very evenly matched this season, and we really had to scrap to beat Merritt, 16-14, at Peninsula Country Club. Also, we play new, unfamiliar courses."

Grid Signups April 8

City College grid coach, Dutch Elston, announced today that any student now enrolled in the college who is interested in going out for this year's football squad should meet with him or coach Alex Schwartz during College Hour next Thursday, April 8.

Last year the Ram gridders placed third in the Golden Gate Conference, along with Merritt College, with a 4-2-1 record.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Smith

EVERY semester this college's Recreation Association engages in a number of sports ranging from archery to volleyball. But the association seems to thrive on volleyball more than the other activities.

Many persons have the impression that volleyball is a minor sport dwelling in the shadows of such giants as basketball, football and baseball. Yet, unlike the latter two, volleyball is more of an international sport than a national one.

Similar to basketball, which was invented in 1891 by a Y.M.C.A. director named Dr. James Naismith, volleyball also owes its origin to that association, and to a couple of other sports as well.

MINTONETTE

Four years after the fantastic success of the new indoor game of basketball, another Y.M.C.A. director, William G. Morgan, attempting to start a new indoor game that would out-do basketball, strung a tennis net across his gymnasium, took the bladder out of a soccer ball, and started a game called Mintonette.

Perhaps the unusual name for a sport prevented it from having the rapid success basketball enjoyed. For several years the amateur athletes in the Holyoke, Massachusetts, Y.M.C.A. were the only persons in the world who played "Mintonette" regularly.

SPORT SWEEPS EAST

Then for some strange and unknown reason, this sport, which later changed its name to the one we now know, swept the entire Atlantic seaboard.

It was also about this time that America was experiencing two new social movements in physical training programs in schools, and the establishment of public playgrounds, and somehow, Mintonette was a big part of these movements.

In time, hundreds of thousands of volleyball courts were set up at resorts, schools, beaches and parks. Then in 1916, the first rule book was published.

Twelve years later, the United States Volleyball Association was formed to control the sport, and in 1947 The International Volleyball Federation was established. Today there are 67 nations in this organization.

In 1949, after American soldiers restored the popularity of the sport in many parts of the world, the first world championship was inaugurated. It was won by the Soviet Union.

OLYMPIC GAMES DEBUT

Volleyball has been growing ever since its beginning 70 years ago. Just last year, this sport which was once called Mintonette, made its debut as an Olympic Games sport.

Now, how can a sport such as this be classified as "minor" when, according to the National Federation of state high school athletic associations, it is ranked third in the world as a recreation team sport, the leading competitive sport in 30 nations and has more than 50 million active players in the world ever, with six million of them in America, and with 85,000 in 2560 of this nation's high schools?

Volleyball Team Tops RA Tourney

Volleyball at this college has had "very little recognition," Alex Bondarenk, team manager, complained today.

Bondarenk, who is in his fourth semester with the Recreation Association team, said that last semester the team won two championships out of three. The first was at San Jose City College, November 21, and the second game was won here, "but we got no newspaper coverage for either game."

The team is keeping with its tradition of victory again this semester. At the first sports day of the semester, held at Cabrillo College March 13, the Ram volleyball players won each of the five games played.

They conquered Foothill, Monterey, Hartnell, Cabrillo and San Jose Colleges, winning first place.

Members of the team include Mell Wong, Joe Marni, Rosemary, Donaldson, Nancy Elkington, Jim Torpis and Manager Bondarenk.

Substitutes are Larissa Diatschenko, Dorothy Littlejohn, Bill Matsu and Gay Kurrel, who was forced to leave the first team because of a leg injury.

The team is coached by faculty member Laurine Bergin.

IFC Blood Drive Starts Tomorrow

By Kathi MacDonald

With Give From Your Heart as the theme, the Inter-Fraternity Council-sponsored eighth annual Blood Drive begins at 8 a.m. tomorrow. Irwin Memorial Blood Bank technicians will take donations until 3 p.m. and from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday in C-249.

This year, as has been the tradition since its inception, there will be inter-group competition. Fraternities, along with the other interested campus organizations, will strive to recruit the most donors. The group which scores the highest will have its name inscribed on the perpetual trophy on display in Statler wing.

Individual awards will go to first, second and third place winners. Students may designate credit to a fraternity or club by simply submitting the name at the time of their donations.

Student government adviser Jim Wyatt expressed the hope that this year's drive will see contributions of more than the college's highest existing record, 410 pints. Total Blood Drive contributions made here have amounted to more than $100,000 worth of blood.

Dorothy Kriger, an official at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, emphasized that benefits gained from individual donations "are certainly worth taking time out for.

"Many persons seem to retain the idea that a blood donation is similar to contribution to a charity rather than a form of health insurance," she said, adding "painless minutes of time now may mean relief from emotional and economic stress later."

According to Mrs. Krieger, the 45-minute procedure is a fairly simple one. Upon arriving in C-249, the donor's medical history is taken orally by a physician. Then temperature and tests are taken to determine the hemoglobin content. The actual process of taking a pint of blood involves only 5 to 15 minutes.

A rest period, time varying, is required immediately following this. Orange juice and cookies are on the menu, and John Dunn of the hotel and restaurant has promised to provide coffee.

During past drives, a number of prospective donors have been disqualified for various reasons, including sub-minimum weight, recent illness or recent innoculation. However, Mrs. Krieger added that reasons for disqualifications "are so individual in nature that it is impossible to list specific things."

Pint-giving participants will be eligible for unlimited withdrawals from Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. Eligibility is also extended to an immediate member of the donor's family for a period of one year.

During this time the donor may also transfer up to eight pints of blood to anyone of his choosing. He then relinquishes, however, the rights gained by his initial deposit.

Regulations provide that donors must be at least 21-years-old or, for those under 21, a permission slip must be submitted signed by a parent or guardian. These can be obtained in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S-148, at one of the signup tables manned by members of the IFC or from today's Guardsman.

Fraternity representatives will distribute pamphlets that have been made up for the drive. These include a donation pledge form which asks for the specific time the donor will contribute. It also lists eligibility requirements.

Donations will be accepted at Irwin Memorial in City College's name for two weeks following the campus drive.

Several years ago before any and all forms of hazing were outlawed by the state of California, pledges, before initiation into the various fraternities on campus, were required to give one pint of whole blood to the blood bank. Thus, what was once a profitable form of hazing has now become the IFC Blood Drive.

College Hour Blood Drive Rally Features Top Talent

Top quality entertainment will follow the opening of the Inter-Fraternity Council's two-day Blood Drive, when three big-name acts spark a College Hour rally tomorrow in the men's gymnasium.

Terry Kilpatrick of the English department here, and adviser to Alpha Kappa Rho, assisted the fraternity in obtaining "the best entertainment available." His methods of securing the performers for the rally included personal interviews with the talents and their agents.

Top billing will be given to Joan Rivers who is currently playing a five-week engagement at the hungry i. A native of New York, she entered show business five years ago and has been featured as a comedienne at various Greenwich Village night clubs for the past three years.

In a recent interview with Miss Rivers, she explained that she writes her own material and has written for stars such as Phyllis Diller and Zsa Zsa Gabor. During her stay in San Francisco she will tape two shows, one with Jack Parr, the other with Johnny Carson's Tonight show.

Miss Rivers seems to have no trouble getting ludicrous material. "People are my material, I just sit back and take notes," she said.

She added that her future in the business has brightened a great deal just recently, and her sprightly offstage personality radiated with excitement as she commented, "I used to get fired so often that I was afraid to unpack."

Following her stay here she will go to New York for two weeks and then leave for Chicago.

Asked if she would continue to travel after marriage she said, "I wouldn't leave a cute husband for one little minute!"

Following Miss Rivers' act, the Harlequinns will take the spotlight with rock and roll songs. This is a lively group which hails from San Diego and includes Frankie Carreiro on drums, guitar player Tim Bailey and C. C. Jones who beats on the piano and a set of conga drums.

They have recently finished an engagement in Las Vegas and will open next week at Pierre's here on Broadway. The Harlequinns accompany their debut in the Bay Area with promotion of their first record, Greenback Dollar.

The third act features Tom & Lee, a folk-singing pair, now playing at the Purple Onion. The result of one year's work together will be available May 29 when their first album, Meet Tom And Lee, is released.

Former Student To Appear With Fantasticks Here

Former City College student John Rose is cast in The Fantasticks, a musical comedy which will be presented on campus Tuesday, April 27. Curtain for the play will be 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

The production presently holds the distinction of being the fourth longest running musical in the history of New York City, where, with a different cast, it is still playing. In longevity it stands behind only My Fair Lady, The Threepenny Opera and Oklahoma.

Rose, who attended this college for two years, is cast in the musical as the girl's father.

Other members of the company include Tina Hermansen as the girl, Jerry Wyatt as the boy, Gerald Lyly as the boy's father, David Canary as the narrator, Arthur Meyer as the old actor, Fernando Tore as the Mute and John Keith as the man who dies.

Some of the musical highlights of the two-act production are Try To Remember, Never Say No and It Depends On What You Pay. Piano will be played by music director Don Demaree, and Alice Dillon Stevens will be at the harp.

Tickets for this Associated Student-sponsored production will go on sale today for $1 with AS card and $1.50 for general admission. They may be purchased from Sophomore Class members at the silver pole and from AS officers in Bungalow 5.

Tickets will also be sold at 7 p.m. on the night of the performance at the box office, located at the main entrance to the men's gymnasium.

While attending City College, Rose appeared in plays including The Cubicle, Petrified Forest and Inherit the Wind.

While serving two years with the army, he directed Under The Yum-Yum Tree and Bus Stop.

Political Hopefuls Will Seek Party Nominations April 19, 20

By Karen Carlson

Nominating conventions for the election of next semester's Associated Student officers will be held in Smith Hall April 19 and 20, Election Commissioner Biff Barnes announced today.

This semester the policy of separate conventions for the two main college political parties will be continued. The Students Representative Party will convene on Monday, April 19, while the United Students Party will meet Tuesday, April 20.

Conventions will be held from 7 to 10 p.m., and all interested members of the student body may attend, Barnes said.

Those students who are interested in running for office should align themselves with one of the present parties or start their own party, he added.

Three or more students can institute a new party, Barnes commented, adding that new parties should confer with the Election Committee as soon as possible.

"We hope that all of the students will be interested in the election, both as prospective candidates and as voters in the May 12-13 elections," Barnes stated.

Petitions are to be distributed at the nominating conventions, and will be due Wednesday, April 28. The candidate must obtain the signatures of 15 Associated Student card-holders, of his counselor, the registrar, and the appropriate dean.

A fee of $2 is charged candidates for the offices of AS President and Vice President, Associated Men Student and Associated Women Student Presidents, and the Presidents of the Freshman and Sophomore Classes. Candidates for the 14 Student Council seats will be charged $1, Barnes stated.

These fees are payable to the AS bank, Barnes explained. Students must present proof of payment at time of filing their petitions.

Candidates for the AS Presidency and Vice Presidency must have completed at least 42 units with an overall grade point average of 2.5.

Hopefuls for the Presidencies of the AMS and AWS need a grade point average of 2.2, with completion of at least 30 units.

Candidates for the office of Sophomore Class President must present 28 units of work with a 2.0 average, while nominees for the Freshman Class Presidency need 14 units with an average of 2.0.

New ROC Party Slates Organization Meeting

Reform On Campus, a new student political party, will hold an organization meeting at 4 p.m. tomorrow in S-136, James Kendrick, ROC promotion chairman, announced today.

ROC representatives will outline the party's purpose and goals, and will be on hand to answer questions. They will talk with students interested in running for Associated Student office on ROC's platform.

Kendrick urged all students interested in the political activity of the college to attend.

Eastwood Plaque Dedication Set For Tomorrow

Members of the San Francisco Garden Club will dedicate the Alice Eastwood awards plaque tomorrow in the horticulture center here, Harry Nelson, head of the ornamental horticulture department, announced today.

The plaque will be in honor of the late Alice Eastwood, one of the outstanding botanists of California. It will list the names of past winners of the Alice Eastwood Scholarship and will be hung, along with a picture of Miss Eastwood, in the new ornamental horticulture building.

The Alice Eastwood scholarships, ranging from $25 to $100, are awarded to City College students on the basis of potential possibilities in ornamental horticulture, scholarship and need.

City College will in turn present the club with a book containing pictures and histories of what Alice Eastwood scholarship winners since 1949 have done in the field of horticulture since leaving here.

William Irvine, Jr., the first winner of the award, will present the book.

A copy of the book will also be put in the archives of the Alice Eastwood section of the Academy of Sciences in Golden Gate Park.

Students in the department will enter an exhibit in the annual Oakland Spring Garden Show which opens May 1, Nelson added. Bay Area nurseries, greenhouses and garden clubs participate in the show.

The theme of this year's show is the United Nations, and City College will represent Switzerland. The Swiss Consulate helped to determine plants common to Switzerland and sent for plant specimens from that country.

Last year City College won a first prize for its entry.

"The students are very eager this year, and judging by the looks of their plans and their working model, they will do their usual outstanding job," Nelson commented.

Easter Bunny Rides Again; 'G' Plans 2-Week Recess

This is the last issue of The Guardsman, until April 28, when issue number seven will appear. The reason for the two-week abstinence is, of course, the Peter Rabbit bit.

Rabbit time, according to the college catalogue, will begin Monday, April 12, and go up to and include Friday, April 16.

A weekend was placed, for student convenience, on each end of the vacation period, so that a five-day vacation could be stretched out to nine days, thereby giving them ample time to peruse their local libraries, to complete "long range" semester assignments and to read their textbooks.

Rosemary Cosdin Wins ISC Award

Rosemary Cosdin, a business administration major, won the Inter-Sorority Council award and trophy for the freshman woman student with the highest grade point average for the first midterm period.

The announcement was made at the Associated Women Student tea.

A Lincoln High School graduate, Miss Cosdin achieved a B-plus average. She plans on transferring to the University of California, and is studying to be a certified public accountant.

Dental Forms Due April 23

Deadline for students interested in applying for admission to the curriculum in dental-laboratory technology is Friday, April 23, according to Frank Szehner, director of the dental program here.

Enrollment will be limited to a class of 25, which convenes annually in September, he said. Applicants must take the competitive aptitude tests, in addition to the regular tests required for entrance to the college.

The tests are scheduled May 5 and 6, and also will be administered on the evening of May 7. All examinations must be taken on campus.

Students who apply after the May competitive dental aptitude tests have been administered may file applications to compete by examination, for vacancies that may occur when the class begins in September.

In addition to a good scholastic record, and ability demonstrated in the aptitude tests, applicants should possess mechanical ability and manual dexterity, Szehner commented.

Mechanical ability, Szehner further stated, "involves the coordination of inner attitudes to achieve a creative end, while manual dexterity calls for the manipulation of the tools used in the trade."

The success of a dental technician is largely dependent upon temperament and personality. All the work, the dental director commented, is "painstaking and tedious."

Szehner strongly urged all dental laboratory owners and technicians in the area who know of capable individuals interested in the field, to encourage them to apply for admission to the dental program.

Currently, the college is one of five schools in the United States offering a dental-laboratory technology curriculum.

A Small Sacrifice Can Mean A Life-Saving Contribution

A HUNGRY CHILD needs food, a naked child needs clothing, a lonely child needs love, a sick child needs medicine and an RH factor child needs blood.

The necessities of life for some become the luxuries of life for others. What does all of this mean to college students? If they are sensitive to their environment and to the less fortunate of the world, then it should mean a great deal to them.

Philanthropic organizations, religious groups and charities are doing their part in helping the underprivileged. The money and effort they inject into their work are paying them higher dividends than any financial institution could hope to pay — because these persons are giving themselves.

How can college students help? Quite frankly, they can give themselves, or more accurately give their blood tomorrow and Friday to the blood receiving stations set up on campus.

Students 18 to 21 must have parental consent. Those under 18 cannot contribute. The donated blood will be deposited in the City College fund at the San Francisco Irwin Memorial Blood Bank.

Since the annual Blood Drive's inception on campus some eight years ago, the donations have been increasing. This in itself is excellent proof that more students are realizing the importance of this project sponsored by the college's Inter-Fraternity Council.

Prospective donors may be interested in knowing that they may transfer a limited amount of their credit in the fund to any person who needs blood, or an unlimited amount to a member of the immediate family.

The success of the drive lies in the veins of all students.

To give is to join the select group of other individuals who have realized that the donation of blood costs nothing but a few minutes of time, and that the donor himself is the primary beneficiary.

A word of caution, however, to the glory-seeking students. If they are expecting a special citation, success, financial gain or perhaps a grade of A in a course, then it would be better if these students quickly by-pass the blood stations.

But if students wish to receive the satisfaction of knowing they have helped someone — then donate. A little bit of blood could mean a lot of life.

The time is near. The place is here.

Foresight

Jam-Packed College Lacks Togetherness

By Mike Barber

CITY COLLEGE has reached maximum capacity. Qualified applicants were turned away last semester simply because there was no more room. But those unfortunate students who couldn't be accepted weren't the only ones who suffered.

The sheer number of students attending the college gives rise to internal ills also. Overcrowding threatens parking, library and cafeteria facilities, to name the most moaned about.

But the more serious problems lie with the closing out of classes during registration, packed classrooms and high student to teacher ratios, and how being a small part of such a large, institutionalized mass may affect the individual students.

The students who find at registration that most or all of the courses they have chosen have been closed out suffer a major educational setback.

Those students, once enrolled, may be unprepared for large classes and the highly competitive race for grades which often begins on that first day of class.

Bewildered, the student may mentally withdraw from the competition for a period to overcome his disorientation. By the time he thinks he is straightened out enough to rejoin the race, the bulk of his classmates may have left him so hopelessly outdistanced that, at best, he'll only wind up as one of the also-rans.

No ample places protected from the wind and fog exist where students and faculty may gather informally simply to sit and talk. Classrooms are for classes, the library for reading, the cafeteria for eating if you can find a seat, and so on.

This situation tends to produce a depersonalized atmosphere in which students have very little feeling of belonging to, or of being a dynamic part of, City College. It's a contagious sort of apathy and a deadly killer of college spirit.

The cause, of course, is easily traced back to that old bugaboo — the plague of cities, states, nations and the world — growing population. Any administration called upon to handle increasing amounts of people tends, for the sake of efficiency and economy, to centralize and consolidate.

So there are 9000 or so students at this college whose only real bond is that they commonly occupy at some time during each day some seat in some room on this hill.

Is there an answer? No practical one seems available, no efficient one that might be acceptable to the taxpayers who support this "junior monster" of the educational world. College life, which is such a vital part of so many smaller, and some not so small, colleges and universities that have provided on-campus or near-campus housing for their students, seems not destined for this college.

However, in the future a district planning a public two-year college might be able to squelch the causes of this insidious apathy. The problem could be met by constructing and staffing more colleges with more instructors and fewer students.

This would facilitate closer relationships between students and faculty, and among the students themselves. The students might see this part of their lives spent in college as a dynamic, personalized part of learning, an exploitable resource that is wasted if apathy is allowed to reign.

Man is flexible, but he is also a creature of habit. There seems to be little reason to expect a person who does not care about the social or political atmosphere of his college, who has in effect learned apathy, to make any significant changes in his socio-political way of life after he has been graduated.

An apathetic citizenry weakens any nation, and weak nations inevitably perish.

San Francisco's Little Old Lady

Cartoons Provide City Guide

By Greg Frazier

The little old lady causing such havoc on the Powell Street cable car is a zany, lovable character who sprang from the vivid imaginations of two former students of the college, Bill Shilling and George Albertus.

This cartoon is but one from a collection Shilling and Albertus put together in an amusing 64-page cartoon book entitled The Little Old Lady's San Francisco.

The book traces the Little Old Lady's hilarious escapades throughout San Francisco and serves as a visual guide, complete with a cartoon map (on which City College is the only college pictured), to the many points of interest in the city.

Nearly two years ago, Shilling, a San Francisco salesman, began compiling notes and sketches for the book during his morning and evening commute from Marin County.

Not being a professional cartoonist, he teamed with Albertus, an award-winning professional illustrator specializing in commercial cartooning, in the development of the book.

"I was looking for a cartoonist with a unique styling," Shilling recalled, "one out of the ordinary who could capture the flavor of the character I had in mind."

TOURIST MEMENTO

The pair, armed with several hundred rough sketches and notes, began putting the pieces together into what was to become an amusing book, one attractive enough to capture the imagination of tourists as well as San Franciscans as a tongue-in-cheek memento of their visit here or possibly an addition to city memorabilia.

"Actually, I was delighted with the response to the project that I received from Albertus," Shilling said, "for in order to make this a successful venture, I strongly felt that a great deal of any success we might achieve was dependent on the art and its application to our central character."

After nearly two years of working nights and weekends sorting and revising their material, Shilling and Albertus submitted the book to a national publisher who, although praising the contents, rejected it as having only regional appeal.

The pair concurred with the publisher's opinion and resubmitted the book to a San Francisco printer who immediately accepted the manuscript.

The book proved a tremendous success, and is presently selling in 11 western states, as well as Hawaii and many eastern cities. Publicity was received from seven local radio stations who plugged the book with more than 90 minutes of air time.

PRESS APPRECIATES

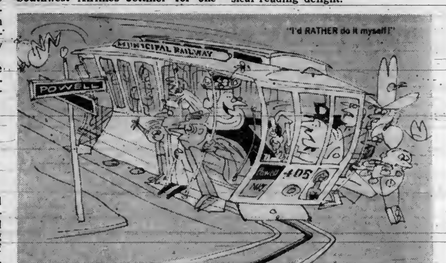
Charles Denton picked up the idea and ran several features on it in his Examiner column. The Chronicle, Marin newspapers and KPIX-TV also helped spread the Little Old Lady's fame.

The most notable publicity event was a contest sponsored by KABL and The Examiner to find San Francisco's real life Little Old Lady.

The city's little old ladies responded with more than 2000 applications. The winner of the contest, Mrs. Angelita Shearer, was awarded an assortment of prizes among which was a Pacific Southwest Airlines Jetliner for one hour and a trip to Disneyland.

Shilling attended Washington High School and graduated from the college in 1953. He went on to Cal, continuing as a pre-legal major until his graduation in 1955. In the Army, he served as a public information specialist in London and was formerly a public relations representative for the Hamm's Brewing Company.

"My two years at the college was excellent preparation for my university work, and in many respects much harder," Shilling said.



Albertus is a native of San Francisco's outer Mission and a graduate of Balboa High School. He attended the college prior to World War II when he was drafted and sent to Europe.

ALBERTUS GUEST LECTURER

He returned to the college in 1946, ran track and was Art Editor of Forum. Albertus has since been a guest lecturer in the graphic arts department.

"Bill Eckert, one of the graphic arts instructors at the college, was instrumental in my decision to choose commercial art as a career," Albertus recalled.

The team, heartened by the overwhelming success of the Little Old Lady, is presently putting together another book, The Little Old Lady's USA. A first printing of 25,000 copies is scheduled for national distribution. It will cover the USA in the same manner as The Little Old Lady's San Francisco, and promises to be a whimsical reading delight.

THIS LITTLE OLD LADY, bane and spirit of San Francisco, was created by two City College alumni. —Cartoon courtesy of Shilling-Albertus.

By The Gallon, Or By The Pint, Blood Is Life

Even in early historical times blood was suspected to be some kind of life-giving fluid. Early scientists proved the necessity for blood by cutting people open and pointing out that, if the subject had bled for some time, he would surely die. It never failed.

Gathering these valuable notes from other experiments, they coneluded that blood had something to do with life.

Alexander S. Wiener, A.B., M.D., said, "Pliny and Celsus describe the custom of the people who crushed into the arena to drink the blood of dying gladiators." People believed then that blood was "the vital force of the body" and that it was also "the seat of the soul."

Today, people prefer to get blood through transfusions, and these people depend on donors to supply the blood. Tomorrow and Friday the arena at the college will be furnished with cots, equipment and personnel. These persons are experts in taking blood from donors by using the more modern methods.

(Anyone who watches his television faithfully knows how it is done.)

And anyone who gives a mere pint of blood, as compared with the unfortunate gladiator's two gallons, will be issued orange juice or coffee, a few macaroons, a warm inner glow deep down inside, and a key to the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank for himself, a member of his family or a friend.

Contemporary Saga: The Pure White Suit

By Hugh Haworth

ALTHOUGH probably not intentionally, many of the TV western producers make very good humor for today's viewing public. An example might be this former cavalry officer who was branded a coward and sets out to prove that he really is made of tougher stuff.

Pride-soothing (de Gaulle-ish) is the real purpose of his roaming around the West — and East — playing hero. So it would be best to focus on this sword-drawing figure who has the wisdom and sense of justice of a Solomon, and the strength and speed of Superman, as he rides, tall in the saddle, into another mess.

In the script, an old-time Chinese buddy of Tex (the hero) had been in a tight bind for the last few years in the southeast part of the state.

Passing through, Tex offers help to his side-kick, Dien (Has) Ben Poo, so that the encroachers from north of the Yahoo River can be corralled and taught a lesson in Western Ways — the best and the only Ways in the West.

In short, the feud smoldered over these certain, prized grazing lands hankered for by Has-Ben's northern neighbors (Chinese, too), led by Ho G. Grin, who is also popping off with some new-fangled farming ideas. Grin (bad guy) is supposedly a stooge for the big boys out East — Mo the Gun and Joe (End-All) Ly.

According to the producer's version, Has-Ben was living peacefully in My-Con valley in his peaceful, old-fashioned manner, keeping his cow-hands basking happily in the traditional style of hundreds of years.

Then, these glib and split-tongued Northerners breezed in with talk of a new and modern world for the cow-boys — better grub, mechanization of the ranch work, better working conditions, a cowboy confederation. This was all hog-wash to Has-Ben, a staunch upholder of the past.

Then out of the West, toting a ten-gallon hat, bright and shiny silver spurs and a tailored, pure-white cow-boy suit, complete with do-dangles, rides Tex, sporting a yellow rose in his button hole.

To make a short story long (Hollywood style), Tex goes, single handed, into the box canyon where the trouble-making marauders (revisionists) are holding out. Yep, once well in the canyon, fire comes from all sides, and Tex gives a quick and "measured" response (he's shooting blindly) with his sparkling automatic Colts (latest model).

Sure enough, two dozen armed-to-the gills (some shooting arrows, some throwing rocks) Indians (rebels) are picked off with 20 bullets without reloading.

Mo the Gun and henchman End-All Ly, looking on from the opposite bluff, fade back to their side of the river to change their ranches into old, but traditional, subsistence-level chicken farms before Tex mosseys through their neck-of-the-woods.

Reading between the Hollywood lines, it's found by an old-timer (Lippman) that Tex was picked up by a retreating Dien (Has) Ben Poo. Tex had lost his silver spurs, hat, and he looked as though his suit had been in a mud hole and received two shots in the buttocks. (They were silver bullets with U.S. engraved on them.)

Later, Tex was seen in San Francisco parlors talking of writing a book, How I Won The West, and his friend, Has-Ben, opened a Chinese laundry. He is still trying to remove the spots from Tex's pure-white suit.

Meanderings

By Don Patten

THE DAY has finally arrived. As he waits in the station at Oakland for the streamliner to arrive, his mind is filled with excitement and anticipation.

Then he hears the drone of the whistle and the big silver and red locomotive, with its many cars trailing behind, pulls into the station.

Ahead lie countless miles of track and his destination. Upon boarding the California Zephyr, the porter shows him to his compartment and soon he feels the gentle lurch signaling departure.

Many travelers immediately move to the Vista Dome for the scenic 360 degree view it affords. Soon the train is out of the residential areas and begins to pick up speed and the rhythmic clackety-clack, clackety-clack of the wheels going over the rails far below.

THE ZEPHYRETTE . . .

It is noon, and the Zephyrette, the train's hostess, passes through the train accepting dinner reservations. Now, however, is lunch time and the long walk to the dining car.

Hold on — watch those turns — the train is going better than 65 miles per hour!

A gourmet meal, with all the elegance of the best San Francisco restaurant, is served in the dining car. Fine China and fresh flowers from the Rockies grace the table. The waiter fills the coffee cup only half "way" so it won't spill. After lunch, back to the compartment or perhaps the Vista Dome.

From the window he observes that the flat country has been left behind and he feels the train slow to the speed required in mountainous regions. For the Zephyr has begun its 118-mile scenic trip through the Feather River Canyon.

Off to the left and hundreds of feet below the rails, he sees the rushing torrent of the river with its many surging cataracts plunging downward.

Tunnels abound along the way, and the train is constantly going from bright sunshine to inky blackness. It's comfortable inside, for the temperature outside is a searing 95 degrees. What a wonderful thing air conditioning is.

Some afternoon refreshment? The Zephyr has its own cozy club car at the rear of the train.

Darkness approaches and the Zephyr has left the Feather River Canyon and again gradually picks up speed as it moves out into the great deserts of Nevada.

A breathtaking sunset adds glamour to a fabulous roast beef dinner in the dining car. Then back to the compartment or maybe just one more trip to the Vista Dome before retiring.

MASS OF SILVER . . .

He gazes out the windows high above the rails, and the desert is a mass of silver in the moonlight. All is quiet in the Dome because everyone is already in bed. It is midnight and he feels the train slowing. He asks the conductor the reason and learns that the next stop is Winnemuca, Nevada.

The train comes to a stop and he steps out, breathing the pungent fragrance of desert sage brush. "Don't go too far away," the brakeman warns, "we'll only be here for five minutes." Moments later, back aboard, the familiar lurch — and in seconds the Zephyr is rushing on.

He moves into his compartment, the bed has been readied by the porter. He gets in and pulls up the shade, sees the black, lonely wilderness of the desert. He cannot sleep — not through this unusual and exciting experience.

But the motion of the train, the clackety-clack accent of its rhythm overwhelm him. He falls asleep quickly — he hasn't been still all day — and dreams of tomorrow and all its new experiences.

After all, this is his first trip — to Chicago!

Graphic Arts Hosts NorCal Printing Industry's Two-Day Spring Seminar

Management Techniques '65 Heads Agenda

City College, in cooperation with the Graphic Arts Employers Association, will host the Northern California Printing Industries of America Spring Seminar, Friday and Saturday, William Svabek, graphic arts department chairman, said today.

Seminar subject is Management Techniques '65.

The seminar, Svabek emphasized, is not open to the public, but advanced students in the graphic arts department here will be present in the capacity of guides.

The Graphic Arts Employers Association has been in existence for more than 40 years, and its main purpose is to increase the knowledge within the industry and to represent the employers in negotiations.

With changing times, products and equipment require revision of management techniques. Since investment and management demand working with people, attention is drawn to investment and management personnel to insure value for time and money invested.

The Graphic Arts Employers Association, through the PIA profit and improvement program, makes it possible to upgrade all levels of management, Svabek explained.

Designed for the experienced individual to sharpen management tools rusty from disuse, the college's graphic arts program has been developed to provide new management tools for the experienced as well as the neophyte foreman.

The seminar will open with Steward Norris, vice president of Schmidt Lithograph Company, presiding. Coordinator of Technical-Terminal Instruction at the college Louise F. Batmale will welcome the visitors.

Greetings will be offered by Wayne C. Wade, director-secretary of the employers association, and George McKiernan, chairman of the PIA Seminar Committee, will preside at the seminar report.

The field of communications will be discussed with Louis A. Allen, president of the Louis A. Allen Associates, Incorporated, presiding.

Formerly serving as consultant to the staff of Booz, Allen and Hamilton, Allen has conducted a three-year study of organization and management of 150 companies for the National Industrial Conference Board.

Also a visiting lecturer at Stanford University, University of Chicago and New York University, he is the author of Management And Organization And The Management Profession.

A discussion on the topic, A Profitable Attitude, will be led by Irl Korsen, chief executive officer of Ray Burns Incorporated, and morning intermission will follow with printing displays.

Korsen, a native of California, has held every office in the Los Angeles section of the PIA, including two years as President, Vice Chairman of the Board, Chairman of the Education Committee and Chairman of the Long Range Planning Committee of the PIA.

General Manager, Oregon Printing Industries, Glen Cruson will discuss Profit By Comparison and Management By Exception.

Cruson has worked for many years in Portland and the Bay Area as a printer and is known in the printing industry as "Mr. Profit Improvement." Serving on many PIA committees over the years, he is currently a member of the Graphic Arts Executives and the American Society of Association Executives.

Human Relations — Motivation will be the topic of conversation with Samuel Trull, Ph.D., consultant-lecturer at the University of California at Berkeley.

Trull, with background of experience as an industrial consultant and university professor, has performed consultant duties for Moore Business Forms, the Association of Industrial Consultant, the state of California and the Department of Agriculture and the Air Force.

As well as being the author of several works for the industry, his research projects include Improving Productivity Through Balance in the Work Group and Dynamics of Advanced Management.

Herb Goodwin will discuss Work Simplification.

Goodwin, a native of Boston, received his B.S. degree, one of many, from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and in 1940 was appointed instructor in the department of business and engineering administration in the Sloan School of Management at MIT.

Currently a member of the Society for the Advancement of Management and numerous other organizations, he was awarded the Gilbreth Medal in 1956 for his contributions to industrial engineering and management.

Svabek stated that there are numerous job opportunities in the field of graphic arts, but no students to fill them. "Each year we receive job requests for 50 to 60 students per semester, but we only graduate about 12 students each semester. As a result, there are three to four jobs available per student," he said.

IFC Presents Five Days In April Friday Night

Five Days in April is the theme of the Inter-Fraternity Council dance scheduled for 9 p.m. to midnight Friday in the Statler wing, IFC President John Hohman announced today.

"It is a couples only dance, $2.50 a couple, semiformal and all students are invited," he said "and it's one of the good socials of the semester."

Jim Wyatt, student government adviser, pointed out that though all students are welcome, "at least one member of the couple must be a student enrolled here."

Tickets are available at the tables in front of Smith Hall where IFC members are signing up blood donors from 9 a.m. to noon through Friday of this week and at the student government office in Bungalow 5, Wyatt stated.

Gene Reilly, IFC vice president, has not yet decided on the band that will play for the dance.

Choir To Attend Music Session

Fifteen members of the campus Chamber Choir, under the direction of William Grothkopp, will participate in the Western Division Music Educators Conference in Long Beach, California, from Sunday through next Wednesday.

The Tuesday evening general session of the conference has been designated Junior College Night. Two-year colleges from the five western states, Arizona, California, Hawaii, Nevada, and Utah, will supply a major musical event, utilizing the talent from as many performing groups in the five states as possible.

The Chamber Choir will be part of a 1000-voice festival chorus of two-year college choirs directed by Roger Wagner.

Chamber choir members are Jacqueline Reed, Beth Carter, Gertrude Rees, Lenore Schnitzer, Robert Jones, Jon Wood, Walter Hight, Dari Broehmann, Patricia Hartzell, Andrea Fulton, Joy Green, Henry McClain, Maurice Shum, Robert Budlong and James Powell.

April — Busy Month

Busy much? Never let it be said that there aren't enough activities to go around at this campus. And April seems to be the busiest month to date. With the successive deadlines for activities, heads will spin throughout these 30 days.

● Forum, the college's literary effort, published yearly, cites Monday, April 19, as its final date for accepting contributions from future Hemmingways and the like.

● Although a campus date bureau is in the making in preparation for the Associated Women Student Turn About Dance, to be held from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday, April 23, at Forest Lodge, coeds don't have that much time to get what the title of the dance implies, a date. So, they'll do the asking.

Tickets for the dance cost $1.50 per couple. Who pays will be an interesting consideration.

● Freshman Class representatives from the college will be interviewed on KSOL radio, Sunday, April 25, on the subject of a class project to visit high schools in San Francisco.

● City College will be represented at the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference in Palm Springs, April 22 through April 24.

● April 24 is the next deadline of significance, as the Golden Gate Conference President's Association will sponsor its second annual art contest, with the 24th the deadline for entries. The festival will be held at San Jose City College from April 29 through May 1.

● If everyone hustles back from the art festival, he will be just in time to make the air tour of San Francisco and the peninsula which is sponsored by the students of Business 154 on May 2. One catch. The flight costs $5.25 per student, payable not later than April 23.

So now it's April, but if one doesn't stand still, one will find, that it's almost May. — P. F.

Cloneys Resort To Ready-Mix Cement In 'Well' Project

By James Rauh

With a little perserverance, and a lot of money, almost anything can be accomplished.

Such must be the motto of Terry Cloney, Associated Student president, and his brother Tom, Sophomore Class president, as the latter submitted a supplementary budget at last Monday's Student Council assembly for their cigarette well project which "experimentally" flopped.

Some three weeks ago Terry and Tom Cloney, backed by the $291.04 allocated them by Student Council, undertook the task of constructing the proposed "cigarette wells" in an effort to combat the unsightly problem of cigarette butt litter on the college campus.

SATURDAY WORKDAYS

Every Saturday since then they have worked on the building of molds for the wells, and have made "progress reports" to the council on the following Mondays.

It appears that in concocting the cement mixture they added "too much" sand which explains why, when the wooden molds were removed from the wells, five out of the six collapsed from lack of strength.

During last week's Student Council meeting, a recess was called so that the council members could feast their eyes on the fruits of $80.04 worth of effort. The wells were built outside bungalow 5.

After the brief recess Tom Cloney explained, "We need $102.68 more if the cigarette wells are to be completed."

PROPER MIXTURE NEXT

He indicated that with the new money he would have a "ready-mix" cement truck bring the proper mixture to the construction site, the ready-mix cement costing more.

"The ready-mix cement costs $22.50 a yard, as it is poured from the truck," Cloney said; "we will use about four yards per Saturday for the completion of the 24 wells."

After a rather lengthy pro and con disscussion on the question of whether to continue the project, James Wyatt, student government adviser, added some words of wisdom to the melee of conversation.

"WELLS A NECESSITY"

"The wells are a necessity to the campus," Wyatt said, "and, although I hate to see the cost of expenses get any higher, it is a very worthwhile project."

Terry Cloney also submitted a bit of information, saying, "Even with the new allocation we will still be saving money in the project by doing the actual construction ourselves."

Following a void in the flow of topic debate, council reluctantly agreed to submit to a vote on the contested issue. It was moved and seconded to allocate the $102.68 for continuance of the cigarette well project. The motion was unenthusiastically passed by a vote of 4-0-6.

Jim Doudiet, student finance chairman, announced that the wrestling team needs a total of $257.50 to compete this semester.

Coach Arthur Elston had forgotten, in submitting the wrestling team's budget previously, that the wrestling season lasts for both semesters. So, he wanted the money for trunks, tights, entry fees and travelling expenses for the team. The money was allocated to the team, 11-0-0.

Mary Anne Ducommun, AS vice president, told of the Council of Organization Festival to be held April 30, and said that help is needed in its preparation.

MATEANS ASK SUPPORT

Wednesday's Student Council meeting centered around a letter which was sent to Terry Cloney from the student leader of College of San Mateo.

The letter asked for City College's Student Council support of San Mateo's proposed movement against filling in San Francisco Bay with garbage.

The "movement" would consist of a rally against the bay fill and a possible "float-in," a new type of demonstration in which the participants bob around the bay tidelands on inner-tubes voicing their opposition . . . kind of a free splash movement.

In order not to oppose, outright, the San Matean's request, Student Council voted, 7-1-3, to return a letter to the college indicating City College's support of their movement, but not necessarily City College's willingness to participate in it.

Ram Cindermen Stun Favored Owls, 75-61

Duffers Trounce Chabot, Bulldogs, Stay In Lead Tie

City College golfers pushed their Golden Gate Conference record to 4-0 last week by trouncing Chabot, 20½-9½, on March 26, and nicking San Mateo, 18-12, the following Tuesday.

Coach Grover Klemmer considered the San Mateo match a very important victory. "In the past few years San Mateo has been one of the strongest teams in the State, so this victory was of great significance to us," he said.

But the Ram linkers are not in first place alone. They share that top spot with San Jose, whom Coach Klemmer tabs as "the team to beat," and the Contra Costa Comets of Richmond.

According to the golf coach, although San Jose has what is considered one of the most powerful teams in the conference, the other teams are also tough to cope with. "This is a well-balanced league," Klemmer stated, "and any team has a good chance to win the title."

The Rams will not meet San Jose until the last match of the season, April 30. Thus far City College has beaten two teams, Chabot and San Mateo, that San Jose has also defeated.

Friday the Rams will take on the Foothill Owls who have lost one match so far. Two weeks later the linkers will travel to Contra Costa for their next-to-the-last-match of the regular season.

During Easter week, the City College duffers will engage in the Intercollegiate Tournament in Fresno which will feature competition from all over the State.

Netters Dump Chabot, Remain In Second Place

City College's tennis team rolled to their fourth straight conference win and remained in second place by dumping Chabot College 7-0 last Friday afternoon at Golden Gate Park.

Ben Levy, starting off as No. 1 man for his first time, copped the opening singles. George Pontikoff, Fred Suessman, Louis Engelstein, and Mike Price each followed with singles victories.

The Rams' victorious doubles teams were Levy-Suessman and Pontikoff-Engelstein. No match in the meet went to three sets.

In other weekend action, the Ram nine dropped the first half of a twin bill last Saturday to Contra Costa, 2-1, but won the second game 8-2 to bring their conference record to 5-4.

Bob Lee, who pitched the first game, allowed only two hits and two unearned runs. Bing Kunsig won the second game for the Rams.

THE RAM SPRINTERS had a field day against Foothill. Bob Prince, breaking the tape above in the 100-yard dash, and Chris Ransom (right) were the big guns as they finished 1-2 in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes. —Guardsman photo by Daryl Tucker.

Prince, Klemmer Sparkle To Keep Unbeaten Streak Alive

By Ivan Temes

Talented, tough and confident, Foothill failed to scare the tenacious Ram tracksters who came through with splendid performances all over the field to shock the Owls, 75-61, at City College Stadium March 29.

The triumph for the ever-improving Red and White, unbeaten after three Golden Gate Conference dual meets, shattered the early-season prognostications which rated San Mateo and Foothill far above the remaining competition.

Aware of his club's upset capabilities, Ram coach Lou Vasquez reiterated his contention that the key to victory rested with the sprinters and the local speedsters proceeded to mesmerize the opposition, not allowing them to garner even a single point in five events.

Leading the grand display, Bob Prince, Chris Ransom and Gary Walsh finished 1-2-3 in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes while Chris Davis posted a 50.2 second clocking to edge Lee Benton and Rod Coleman in the 440-yard sweep and both relay quartets finished on top — 42.7 seconds in the 440 and 3:30.6 in the mile.

A happy Prince, with winning times of 10.2 and 23 flat, declared, "We know we've got a real fine team now and we're going to try to take that number one position away from San Mateo."

Gritty Rick Klemmer more than neutralized the fine Owl harriers as he remained undefeated in the mile with a 4:26.2 effort and came back with a 9:49.3 two-mile where he finished a close second to highly-touted Ed Ortegon.

Foothill's Al Withers copped the 880 but Chris Ferrigno picked up valuable points with a runnerup 1:59.7 time.

Owl national leaders Max Lowe and Doug Olmstead came through as expected. The former high jumped 6-9¼ and the latter led a sweep of the triple jump with a leap of 47 ft. 10 in.

Chuck Smart paced Ken Matsuda's visitors to 17 out of 18 points in two events with a shotput toss of 51-10½ in the Foothill sweep and a discus heave of 163-¾ as improving Ram Laisene Malauulu salvaged third place.

Edged in the 120-high hurdles by invader Rich McClung, Hal Johnson raced to a 40.2 second Ram win in the 330-yard intermediate hurdles with teammate Bob Coleman scoring in both events.

Local vaulters Bob Incerti and Ed Garro added a 1-2 feat in the pole vault.

Switched to the long jump to bolster the team, Dwight Tucker and Leroy Woods managed a 2-3 finish behind Olmstead's 22-4½. The hard-working duo reversed the 2-3 order in the high jump with season highs of 6-7 and 6-5.

In the hotly-contested encounter, new Foothill-Ram meet standards were set in the mile, triple and high jumps, 330-hurdles and 440-relay.

Sturdy Diamondmen To See Three Weeks Of Top Talent

By Pete Franklin

A sturdy Ram nine, with a season record of five and four including their postponed game with the Bulldogs of San Mateo, which the Rams lost, 5-4, last Thursday, will face some of the Golden Gate Conference's top talents in their next three outings.

The Rams stood first in the conference with a four won and none lost record before their two mishaps in a row, at the hands of first the powerful San Mateo team, and then the San Jose Jaguars in a 2-1 cliffhanger.

Saturday, the home stalwarts will host Merritt College in a twin bill in the hopes of repeating their first effort against the T-Birds. The Rams downed the Oaklanders in their initial conflict, 8-6, in a game that the spirited club had sewn up from the first pitch.

Ram Nine Bows To San Jose Jags, 2-1

The Ram baseball team lost a second close game in a row March 30 to the San Jose Jaguars, 2-1, on foreign soil. It was a game of close plays, and the Rams just didn't get a break, though they out-hit their opponents seven to five.

Southpaw Ken Dyer went the route for the Rams whiffing eight and contributing one hit to the losing effort.

San Jose scored both runs in the first inning when Dyer walked the leadoff man, Jim Gama, and Rocha singled him to third. Pat Cavataio then singled home Gama.

But Cavataio tried to stretch his hit to two bases and was caught in a run-down. Rocha advanced on the play and tried for home. Second sacker Bill True threw home but Rocha was called safe, in a close play.

The Rams got their only run in the fourth as Barry Carli led off with a bunt single and moved to second on Biff Barnes' hit. George Alvarez singled but was picked off first. Mike Dunne then scored Carli with a sacrifice fly.

ALVAREZ TURNS PRO

Houston Astros Baseball Scout Bill White signed Ram outfielder George Alvarez to a bonus contract last night. The terms of the contract were not disclosed but the bonus was reported "substantial."

Alvarez is to report Sunday to the Astros' minor league base at Cocoa Beach, Florida.

During the Easter recess all eyes will be turned to the San Jose City College Easter Tournament, which is not league competition, but is indicative of the degree of talent each team has acquired since the beginning of the season. The competition takes place April 12 and 13.

The first Ram encounter following the tourney will come after a seven-day layover when the locals will host a weak, but not incapable Diablo Valley Club. The Rams swept their doubleheader with the Vikings, 4-1 and 5-3.

On April 24, the stalwarts will journey to San Leandro to meet the Gladiators of Chabot College.

The Bulldogs will be in town for a single game with the Rams on April 27, riding high on the hopes of dumping the home club by a greater margin than in the first round, 4-2.

Angels Read Guardsman? Presto — A Pool Appears

Someone in the Higher Heavens must've been reading The Guardsman last week.

The sports headline blared, "Only A Pool Can Save Swimmers" and like magic one appeared as the reservoir began to fill with water from Above.

Unfortunately, coach Roy Burkhead and his men couldn't accept the challenge of the spritely blue 1965 Volkswagen as it waded its way through as if to say, "The water's fine. Come on in."

Thinclads Stifle Merritt, Battle For Crown Friday

Continuing their unbeaten ways, the fired-up City College cindermen swept past defending champion Merritt, 81-55, at home last Friday to hand the Thunderbirds their first league loss in two years and set up a title showdown against San Mateo at 4 p.m., Friday at Stanford, where the talented Indian freshmen act as hosts.

Though both clubs boast 4-0 Golden Gate Conference marks, the task which lies ahead for the Rams, heavily favored against Contra Costa yesterday, is formidable since the Bulldogs are tabbed by Red and White Assistant Coach Larry Lawson as "possibly the best in the State."

However, Lou Vasquez' men are intent on bucking the odds once again as they challenge a foe vulnerable in the jumping events but loaded otherwise, claiming such standouts as 4:14 miler Ralph Likens, 1:53 half-mile star Bill Skrifvars and 14-7 pole vaulter Dennis Phillips.

Against Merritt the Ram speed was neutralized, but Laisene Malauulu's double win, a 46-7 shotput and 139-7 disc toss leading a sweep, and fierce competitor Dwight Tucker's 11 points were instrumental in overcoming the T-Birds.

Tucker high jumped 6-7 for a victory and finished a close second to a pair of teammate performances, Leroy Woods' 45-2 triple jump and Larry Barlas' last try 21-5½ long jump.

Other Ram triumphs included Mike Conroy's surprising 9:49.4 two-mile, Chris Davis and Chris Ransom finishing 1-2 in the 440, Bob Prince's swift 22.5 220 timing, high hurdler Hal Johnson's 15.2 clocking and a 3:23.3 effort in the mile-relay.

Though barely edged by double-victor Terry Forbyn in the 880 and mile, respectively, Chris Ferrigno and Rick Klemmer posted their season highs of 1:57.7 and 4:23.1.

In meets following the Easter layoff, the locals entertain lowly Chabot in the conference finale at 3 p.m., April 20 and go in the Northern California Relays at 10:30 a.m., April 24 at San Mateo.

Quigley Foresees Future JV League

With season play of the Junior Varsity baseball team ended, coach Bob Quigley foresees an "expanded program for next year."

"Our junior varsity program has captured the interest of many of our conference opponents, and I don't think it will be long before a JV league is organized," Quigley predicted.

Although there is still one game remaining to be played, the pilot indicated, "It is so set off from the previous games that it is not considered to be in the JV's season. We will play Oceana today, with a core of mainly varsity players."

Since this was their first year of existence, the yearling Rams underwent a short baptismal season.

"But now that colleges have learned of the team we are already receiving invitations for next season," Coach Quigley said, adding, "This means that next year we can expand our program to accommodate a full schedule."

A recap of this JV season reveals a three and six record. "We have uncovered quite a bit of varsity material like Murray Jacobs who batted .400 with us." Jacobs is now a first string outfielder on the varsity club.

Volleyball Squad Lands On Top Again

Recreation Association volleyball and bowling teams again took first place at the San Mateo sports day March 27.

Alex Bondarenok, volleyball club manager, said that in the eight games played, all of which the Rams won, Foothill College gave the most competition by scoring five points; 15 points are needed to win a volleyball game.

Bondarenok attributed his team's winning efforts to "great team work."

The bowling club which has placed either first or second at each sports-day this semester, stayed with tradition by taking another first, also at San Mateo. Bowler Pam Maul remarked that though they were all bowling below par, "we still managed to place first."

Bowlers are Stan Angel, Garry Nell and Carol Hodgkinson.

AMS 'Mural Loop Now In Full Tilt

The third week of Associated Men Student intramural competition will see Alpha Sigma Delta face Beta Tau in the women's gymnasium tonight. In other games slated, the N.B.A. Rejects will meet the Castoffs, the Mice battle the Chiefs and the Irish will take on the Chancellors.

The defending champion Filipino Club defeated the Lawson 10 last Tuesday, 47 to 35. H&R beeat the Newman Club, 48 to 46 and Alpha Sigma Delta lost to Alpha Kappa Rho, 49 to 22. Frosh Class beat Ski Club, 36 to 31.

RAMBLINGS

Last Year's Champs Could Do It Again

By Mike Smith

IN THE PAST few years, City College tennis squads have established a dynasty in the four-year-old Golden Gate Conference, but Foothill's Owls seriously threatened this Ram rule when they handed the local netmen their first and only loss, last March, in the young conference's history.

Although the local netters won the crown last year, it was the first time in the soaring sixties that a Roy Diederichsen coached team won a title without a number one man such as he had in Larry Draper, Jack Brachen or Bob Siska.

'64 SQUAD BALANCED

Last year the netters won their third straight Golden Gate title, and their fifth straight league title if the old Big Eight Conference is counted. This well-balanced squad of Fred Suessman, Louis Engelstein, Ben Levy, Mike Price, Al Brambila and Vince Chinn were all on a par with one another. (The latter two are not with this year's team.)

At the start of this season, George Pontikoff, a very capable and experienced player, was tabbed to occupy the top berth, and Suessman was chosen for the second spot on the tennis ladder. Now it is vice-versa.

So why did the Rams lose that one meet? Veteran netman Engelstein summed it up best. "We were playing them too early in the season, and we just underestimated them. If we had to play them later in the year instead, then we would have definitely beaten them."

Two weeks ago the Rams just barely, 4-3, squeaked by one of the tougher teams in the conference, previously undefeated Diablo Valley.

"LOSE ONE . . . LOSE TITLE"

If the statement made last year by Coach Diederichsen still stands — "Every game is crucial, and when you lose one match in this conference, you're practically eliminated from the competition" — the Ram dynasty might be in trouble.

But the City College netters still have a spark kindling in the fire, and if Foothill drops one match, which is very possible in this conference, the Rams may very well burn up the conference again.

SRP, USP Merge Into USRP, Nominate Sweeney, Kontis To Head New Party Ticket

The new United Students Representative Party met here on April 21, nominating Dennis Sweeney as its candidate for the fall semester Associated Student Presidency. Wardene Oliver presided.

Gary Ettin, AS president a year ago, explained the consolidation of the Students Representative Party and the United Student Party into USRP as "a move to strengthen our party and avoid confusion. We're not afraid of ROC. We welcome their interest in student government."

Sweeney's nomination was the result of a close race with current Associated Men Student President Earl Braverman for the candidacy, Sweeney receiving twelve votes and Braverman ten.

Represented were a large number of campus organizations, among them AMS, Alpha Kappa Rho, Newman Club, Sophomore Class, Recreation Association, Beta Tau and Associated Women Students.

Placards were also seen denoting Phi Beta Rho, Block SF, Rally Committee, Freshman Class, Forensics, Theta Tau, Ram Ski Club, Alpha Sigma Delta, A Cappella Choir, Merchandising Club, Filipino-American Club, Council of Organizations and Engineering Society.

Barbara Kontis defeated Carol Anselmi for the nomination by USRP for the AS Vice Presidency.

Mary Maurer and Stan Angel were unopposed in their bids for the candidacies for the Presidencies of AWS and AMS respectively.

Four candidates vied for nomination for the position of Sophomore Class President, Braverman defeating Lynn Barker in a run-off contest.

Nominated for the Freshman Class Presidency was Mike Nygren.

Receiving the bid for the seven freshman seats on council were Chris Bilby, Larry Bingham, Karen Carlson, Eileen Cooper, Bruce Fisher, Percy Jones and Ernest Woodcock.

AS Office Petitions Due With Registrar Today

All petitions of candidates for Associated Students' offices in the Fall, 1965, semester must be in the registrar's office by 1 p.m. today.

The petitions must include the signatures and AS card numbers of 15 AS members. Each candidate must also show the signatures of his counselor and a finance official.

Verification of payment to the finance office of campaign fees is also required.

The registrar will check each petition for grade point average and number of units, and then transfer it to the respective Dean and the Election Commissioner for final approval.

Campaigning will take place from May 3 to 8. Constitutional rules will govern expenditures and extent of the campaigns.

Elections are scheduled for May 12 and 13 with voting at eight campus locations scheduled from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

ROC Announces Party Candidates

Reform On Campus convened April 20 and announced its backing of five candidates in the May 12 and 13 Associated Student election.

Presiding chairman Jim Kendrick, announced that Alex King is ROC's candidate for the AS Presidency.

Nomination procedure was dispensed with as a means of facilitating the meeting. Each candidate spoke briefly upon accepting his nomination.

Chris Bilby was announced as running for the Freshman Class Presidency on the ROC ticket, but he was not present and later announced that he would seek office on the rival United Students Representative Party slate.

Candidates for positions as sophomore council members are John Becker, Doug Bianchi and Hugh Haworth.

Nini Maida seeks election on the ROC ticket to a freshman council seat.

Second Reservoir Unlikely To Provide Parking

Prospective plans for attaining the unused reservoir for parking are far from being a reality, Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, said today.

Of the 9600 students enrolled in the college, 1964 have been issued parking permits to 1870 stalls. This, said Edward Lawson, Campus Police adviser, is a clear indication of the parking problem which faces the college.

Lawson added that Lot E, the new 150 stall faculty parking lot, helped solve part of the problem.

He also stated that in an attempt to alleviate the dilemma altogether, the Campus Police were hopeful of acquiring the reservoir adjacent to the one now being used for parking.

Anderson, in reiterating information from the San Francisco Department of Public Works, stated that the reservoir is not available. He added that the infeasibility of constructing a ramp into the reservoir is preventing its use as a parking lot.

Because of the Hetch-Hetchy water canals, both reservoirs will be completed to fill their original function. The Department of Public Works is considering plans to cover both reservoirs, one of which will again be used for parking.

Anderson said that the question of whether the top of the second reservoir will be allotted for parking, or designed as a public recreation field, has not been answered.

College To Host State AGS Meet

City College will be host to the state-wide chapters of Alpha Gamma Sigma on November 13, 1965. "We are quite sure that the national conference of the chapters will be held at City College May 6, 1966, William G. Richardson, honor society adviser here, said.

Richardson emphasized that there are only two more study clinics this semester. "Persons interested should check the bulletin board in Science Hall for future dates," he said.

"We would like to have more participation by our own members," Richardson added, explaining that a ruling to the effect that an incoming and active AGS member must have an Associated Student card next Fall is under discussion. "All members should voice their opinion so a decision can be made quickly," he said.

Persons graduating in June who think they meet the requirements for permanent membership can consult Richardson in S-140.

Requirements call for membership in AGS three out of four semesters, at least a 3.3 grade average and no final grade of D in any semester.

SF Bay Is Topic Of C-Hour Lecture

San Francisco Bay — Past, Present, Future, will be the topic of a lecture to be given by Harold Gilliam, specialist in conservation and columnist for the San Francisco Chronicle, during College Hour tomorrow in the theater.

Gilliam has a BA in political science and an MA in economics from the University of California. In 1963 and 1964, he was consultant to Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall, specializing in the National Park System, conservation history, and urban and regional conservation.

He has written five books and is currently working on a picture book of the bay and a natural history of the city. He also writes a weekly column, This Land, which appears in the Sunday Chronicle's magazine, This World.

Agitation Replaces Apathy As Civil Ruckus Stirs Campus Organizations

By Mike Barber

The recent emergence of the political party, Reform On Campus, climaxes a series of events that have taken place at this college since March.

"ROC" says a handbill distributed by that party, "has been formed by a group of students who are disturbed by the apathy which characterizes campus life and by the bland and ineffectual nature of student government at City College."

Part of the ROC program has been to enlist outside support for their programs. The Contemporary Affairs Forum is the campus organization where initial agitation for much of the recent activities seems to have taken place, and out of which ROC was born.

Led by chairman Earnest Thalinger, the CAF invited Earnest Besig, Northern California Executive Director of the American Civil Liberties Union, to speak on Political Freedom at Junior Colleges.

CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE

Before an audience of approximately 150 students, Besig opened with "I want it well understood that I am not here to encourage civil disobedience. I always urge the most painless way to test the constitutionality of the law."

Quoting freely from the State of California and State Board Of Education's Codes, Besig read, for instance, sections that, in effect, made it illegal for sectarian clubs such as the Newman Club to distribute literature or post bulletins on campus.

"Ordinarily, administrators don't abide by all these laws, but they may pick and choose to serve their own will," Besig said. He also said that the present administrative regulations "Sound terribly paternalistic."

When a coed protested that she had been told by a member of the administration that the Young Republican and Young Democrat organizations were illegal as on-campus organizations and would be denied on-campus representation, Besig suggested that "these organizations apply to the ACLU to represent them, and get a writ of mandate against the school, and challenge the constitutionality of the law."

This meeting was attended by Coordinator of Instruction Lloyd D. Luckmann. When later asked about the coed's complaint, Luckmann replied, "I don't know where or how she got that idea. It is true we don't encourage these groups on campus. However, they are allowed."

Commenting about those students attending the meeting, Luckmann said, "We don't mind YR's and YD's, but, judging by their appearance, these were the students more interested in being Young Socialists and W.E.B. Du Bois's."

ADMINISTRATIVE ENTHUSIASM

Luckmann was in general agreement with Besig, and was enthusiastic about ROC's emergence. "I'm very glad to see the formation of a new political party. Maybe this will discourage apathy and encourage students to take an issue with a party," he said.

Present at the Besig program was another student soon to capture the limelight, Ron Cuddy, committee chairman for the Ad Hoc Committee for an Active Campus Today (ACT).

Clearly stating that his actions were separate and divorced from association with ROC, Cuddy and five supporters met with President Louis G. Conlan on April 9.

At this meeting Cuddy presented for Conlan's consideration a document stating ACT's proposals for the formation and regulation of three free speech areas, to be located at the Ram, the courtyard between Cloud and Science Halls, and near Arts Hall, and the distribution of literature on campus.

REPLY DUE TODAY

At this meeting Conlan was given until today to reply with documentation of his own stand and proposals toward the issue.

"Until that time," Cuddy said, "I shall continue to rock the boat. I shall continue to solicit support from the students and to awaken them. I shall keep on speaking."

Conlan replied, "Fine. But remember that things must be kept within the limits of the laws of the state and the policy of this campus. No one has the right to inflict himself on others to their detriment. The students have certain places where they may gather, and they have the right to gather there and hear or not hear speakers, as they please."

A ROC meeting was held to urge students to attend their convention and to air discussion of their platform last Tuesday, April 20, prior to their convention, which was held that night.

Listed among the 16 proposed platform planks were the right of any and all political groups to function on campus, The right of any group to meet in any available room at the time of its own choosing, and Greater emphasis in the curriculum on the contributions of minority groups to American history and culture.

SPACE LIMITATIONS

Attending this meeting was Luckmann. Commenting on the proposal concerning the "right of any group to meet in any available room" he explained that next fall there would be approximately 8400 day students enrolled and about 330 faculty members. He announced that "space will be absolutely subject to schedule and at a premium until new buildings are built."

About the proposal concerning changes in the curriculum, he said, "We'll try anything that a qualified instructor wants to teach. If the students will support it, it's in. If it's true that popular subjects have been denied, then we will stand corrected."

Spring Festival To Feature Carnival, Dance Friday Night

The Council of Organizations will present the annual Spring Festival, an event featuring a carnival and dance, at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Smith Hall, according to Mary Anne Ducommun, Associated Student vice president and chairman of the council.

"Everybody is working really hard to make the festival a success," Miss Ducommun said, and "we want it to be one of the most important campus events of the year."

The festival will consist of about 25 booths from campus clubs and organizations. Students, friends and families will participate in throwing pies at fraternity members, throwing darters at paper legs, picture booths, food booths, the dunko and many other attractions.

The theme of the festival is Roaring Twenties. Students are invited to come dressed in accordance with the theme, but it is not necessary.

In the past the festival has been held in the Cow Palace and has yielded a profit of approximately $1600, Miss Ducommun stated. "If the festival proves to be a success this year, we hope to get it back to the Cow Palace," she said.

A dance will follow the carnival, and entertainment will be provided by the college's stage band. The 25-cent entrance tickets will be sold at the door of the Smith Hall. A rally promoting the Spring Festival will be held tomorrow at the Ram.

Nominations Open For Soph King And Queen Candidates

Plans are under way for the selection of the Sophomore King and Queen who will be announced at the Sophomore Ball, Tom Cloney, president of the Sophomore Class, disclosed today.

Letters were sent to campus clubs and organizations requesting that each sponsor candidates for Sophomore King and Queen, Cloney said. The deadline for nomination is Friday, May 7.

It was also requested that each club contribute money or a prize which will be awarded to the winners of the contest, which is headed by Carmine Meyer, vice president of the Sophomore Class.

Cloney is considering posting pictures of the candidates in the Statler wing and Smith Hall. "This idea seemed to work very well in the past," he commented. The candidates will be introduced to the students during a College Hour rally on May 20.

The winners will be chosen by the penny-a-vote method. The proceeds from the election will go to the scholarship fund which will be awarded at the commencement assembly.

The theme of the ball, suggested by Miss Meyer and agreed upon by the Sophomore Class, is Polka Dots And Moon Beams. The ball will be held May 21 at the St. Francis Hotel.

Alpha Sigma Delta Tops Blood Drive Donations

The annual City College Blood Drive of 1965 resulted in a total of 389 pints, and came close to breaking the all-time high.

Still unmatched is the record established in April, 1962, when 410 pints were donated.

The fraternity winning the annual trophy for recruiting the largest number of donors is Alpha Sigma Delta. Student Activity Adviser Jim Wyatt stated today.

In second place for donations, Wyatt said, was the faculty, and Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity came in third.

Information on the percentage of donors is still undetermined.

Who Said The 'G' Would Not Publish Letters To The Editor

MISCONCEPTION IS THE hallmark of an individual who has been misinformed about certain facts surrounding a situation.

Recently, The Guardsman learned that many students on campus have the erroneous idea that the paper would not publish letters to the editor. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The Guardsman stands ready to accept and print all letters received by the editor provided they are in good taste and meet the 10 a.m. deadline each Wednesday.

Exactly where the idea regarding letters originated is something of a mystery. The Guardsman has been printing letters to the editor since its inception almost thirty years ago. Why is should all of a sudden stop printing letters this semester for no apparent reason is absurd.

Or could it be that the stinging tentacles of student apathy have finally taken hold of their victims paralyzing their minds as well as their hands?

In the past, apathy has been known to destroy students' desires to become involved in campus activities. Then, would it not become ludicrous to manufacture and publish letters that don't exist?

Apathy is a sickness for which there is no cure. It is not discriminating or prejudiced. It could cripple and stifle even the most creative of students — except for the fact that creativity is fast becoming a lost art.

But letter writing is not lost, hidden, or supressed, nor should it ever deteriorate to these levels. Instead let all students consider writing as one great poet did, "The writer's needs are three: the Microscope to discover the reality of Man; the Telescope to reveal the ideality of Man; and that mastery of language known as Style, which combines the maximum of achievement with the minimum of means."

Interested letter writers have done their part.

Foresight

Ignorance Breeds Rumors, Discontent

By Mike Barber

THE ABSENCE of communication existing between students and administration, student groups and the students themselves is destined to exposure, and subsequent attack, in the near future.

Although not total, the lack of communication has been serious, giving rise to problems and prejudices throughout the student body. Cries of "apathy" and "depersonalized atmosphere" are common to the plaintive bleatings of the student flocks.

Each factor seems to enjoy both cause and effect roles in the communication problem. Is it that the students don't care enough about their problems to talk to neighbors, or don't they care enough about their neighbors to voice their common problems?

There has lately been a small increase in student to student communication due primarily to the efforts of student groups and individuals who have focused directly upon this problem.

The recent improvement in the area of general student-administration communications is undoubtedly duc to the imminent threat that individuals agitating for a free speech movement would pose to this campus.

The administration is an authoritative body rarely seen personally or publicly by the general student body, and, in its role as an authority, it must carry out duties and responsibilities delegated to it by higher authorities.

Ignorant students who find certain rulings inhibitive of their actions tend to make a mysterious, omnipotent ogre of the administration, something which must be subdued and mastered if it is to be dealt with.

These same students, out of total ignorance or only partial familiarity with the facts, are the ones responsible for the persistent circulation of half-truths and rumors. Those referring to the adamancy and unfairness of an administration deaf to the various needs of the students are an example.

The College administration has never claimed that it is free from human failings. If it has erred, then corrections should be made. However, if its disputed actions are the result of the rulings of a higher authority, then the blame must be displaced to those ultimately responsible, and corrective action then taken through due process of law.

Due process of law is often a painfully slow, inefficient route to take. It is, however, inherent to the so-called democratic way of life. It has both virtues and vices. Although due process is slow in effecting justifiable change, it is this same slowness that is the scourge of red-hot revolutionaries who tend to go off half-cocked.

Due process of law has its place on this campus, although the few who are aware of its presence seem intent upon ignoring it. Students should be reminded that the Student Council is not just a social club for popular campus personalities.

Those who bear legitimate complaints, and those interested in bringing about campus reforms should not forget that their elected representatives meet every Monday and Wednesday at noon in Bungalow 5, where it is their duty and business to coordinate and handle student relations.

The Student Council is, in part, a communicative organization, familiar with the legal channels through which the desired changes and reforms must move. Associated Student President Terry Cloney did say in his campaign, "I know how student government is run, and you can almost always get your way if you present it right."

Letters To The Editor

Readers Comment On Physical Fitness, Gas Warfare Enigma

• Need For Exercise

Editor, The Guardsman:

As a long-time teacher of physical education and also a concerned parent, I want to thank you for the far-sighted words of your editorial regarding the "physical education requirement."

Of course a college education can only have meaning when young people begin to think in terms of enhanced personal competence, mentally, spiritually and physically. Those of us who believe this can take heart from words like yours which seek to reject the prevailing super-market transcript stuffing, in favor of a chance to be beautifully and excellently human. It is a pleasure to be associated with you and your staff who are courageous enough to regenerate "old-fashioned" aspirations.

Gloria Dunn, instructor

• Farfetched 'Analogy'

Editor, The Guardsman:

I was inspired upon seeing the article on the importance of physical fitness. If for no other purpose it served to remind the reader that it is important even if not through the vein of your rationalizations which I object to.

I am thinking out and writing this letter in the hope that you, and even more hopefully I, might come to a clearer and better understanding of the need for exercise.

I think that your first great misconception was the analogy of eating and sleeping to exercising. The first two are impromptu biological needs which need no thought before they are fulfilled. The latter relies on a person's intelligence and his realization of the need for exercise. Your analogy was "farfetched."

Your second, and greatest misconception was your statement that reminding students of John F. Kennedy's emphasis on physical fitness is "senseless." It is not senseless.

The fault is that of the educator, and you I feel serve in that role. If the students were reminded of Kennedy's sentiment concerning physical fitness; if educators demonstrate its importance instead of corralling students into gymnasiums, and telling them to ape all sorts of body contortions and if there still were no response, then I think your statements would be justified. The human is above an animal because he wants reasons for his actions and the orders given to him before he will execute them.

Granted that he may be a fool for not giving himself a good reason for exercising, but, if he can't, then help him.

I also concede that many have been educated to the importance of exercising but we are always in need of reminders.

Perhaps the strange stigma attached to both activities will some day pass, but before this can happen the students must be educated.

Frank Mancini

(Editor's Note: The Guardsman certainly intended no disrespect to the late President Kennedy's emphasis on physical fitness. Rather, the editorial said, "It seems rather senseless to remind students of the late President John F. Kennedy's emphasis on physical fitness. Sadly enough, students can't be bothered with programs and such; they're just for kids.")

• Campus Cleanliness

Editor, The Guardsman:

According to the column by James Rauh (Wed. 7 April, 65) on the latest adventures of the Student Council, I was very pleased to see that the council was approaching the cigarette problem on a sophisticated level. For this is a very important issue.

As I have gazed around the campus there appears to be quite a sufficient number of trash cans (painted an inconspicuous red). Why aren't these utilized? Most likely for the same reason the new disposal units won't be. It appears that many smokers are too lazy or they don't have the strength to lift the top of the can up or the students don't really care about their cigarette butts anyway. The latter reason is probably the most valid as it appears to be the attitude in vogue on the CCSF campus.

The total sum of the money spent ($393.72, derived from figures quoted in The Guardsman) appears to have only the value of educating Terry and Tom Cloney in the art of cement preparation.

Another item of interest was the letter from a "student leader" of San Mateo Jr. College requesting endorsement of a proposed movement against filling in San Francisco Bay.

I cannot see under what jurisdiction the Student Council had the right to endorse or even vote on the issue of a noncampus political activity, even those which are conceived on another campus.

I understand there are rules which prohibit individual students from announcing their proposed political issues without approval on the CCSF campus (Election rules Sec. IV, part h. 1965).

If this is true for individual CCSF students would this not be true of the CCSF Student Council who are elected representatives of the student body?

I do believe that the Student Council should have solicited the approval or disapproval from the student body through a vote. Or, have said in their letter that "they" back the San Mateo student leaders' proposal as individual students and not as the CCSF Student Council, as they are prohibited from backing any proposal by the rules governing student government and student conduct here at CCSF.

Robert D. Behr

• Truth About Vietnam

Editor, The Guardsman:

Mr. Haworth's non-informational column on the use of lacrimating and sternutating gases or smokes is necessary to properly rebut on the basis of facts technically correct and lucidly presented. (sic) Mr. Haworth takes the opportunity of his column to beat the tin pan about "arms race" and heads his tirade with a non-factual paragraph which I quote: "Excruciating pain was inflicted upon millions of World War I soldiers in the form of gas warfare. In fact, one million three hundred thousand casualties resulted from this military strategy (sic; the correct word is tactic if appropriate). Now, the Department of Defense announces it is using gas in Vietnam."

Mr. Haworth stays clear of absolute charges of falsehood by hedging in his message, which in sum is that the employment of these non-lethal irritants in Vietnam may open the way for the employment of lethal gases. Nothing could be more removed from the truth.

The material empioyed to mightily embarrass the Viet Cong and rescue Americans in their clutches is of two types, known as "CN" and "DM." I was first explained the uses of these gases and exposed to a sampling of their effects at the tender age of 15 in the Maryland State Guard.

Taking off my gas mask in a room filled with CN — Chloracetephenone — produced nothing more objectionable than a strong stinging in the eyes, and much tearing — heavier concentration would produce greater irritation, up to a point. The effect passed in a matter of minutes in the fresh air, but while exposed to its effect, the slightly greenish gas was very disturbing and would have taken my attention off warlike pursuits had it been used against me by surprise. The DM — Diphenalimine-chlorarsene — is an arsenical derivative known as a sternutator, or irritant smoke.

It is very much more disabling, but entirely non-lethal and no fatalities or permanent injuries are known through its history of use. It causes extreme vomiting and nausea, and will definitely put out of action the most pusillanimous individual who may be otherwise unprotected. Its effect may last as long s 24 hours, about as debilitating as a good stiff hangover. But, it will make possible the surprise liberation of captured prisoners.

These are the gases used in Vietnam — the one causing tears, the other nausea, about as serious as a bad cold. To speak of their use as leading to an "arms race" is to express the ridiculous in overly dramatic phrases. To suggest that cries of "foul play" will reasonably ever be heard is to express what must be considered a wishful but unrealistic thought on the part of the columnist: fair enough editorializing, but false newspaper writing.

To contrast these with the effect of far more lethal gases, it is necessary to use only one instance typical of the general employment of poison gas in World War I. (Incident derived from text on poison gas in Encyclopedia Brittanica, 1964 edition, City College library.)

During the Somme offensive March, 1918, at Ypres in the St. Quentin area, the Germans used 500,000 mustard gas (vesicant or blister-inducing gas) shells. Gas casualties were 7000 — that is, people put out of action by the effect of gas — ONLY 87 DEATHS RESULTED.

The American Expeditionary Forces did sustain nearly 27 per cent of total casualties from gas, yet of these persons injured or incapacitated by gas during the attacks, only 2 per cent of these casualties, an infinitesimally small number as statistics go — died from the effects of gas.

By comparison, of total AEF non-gas casualties, from small arms fire, explosives, artillery, etc., 26 per cent RESULTED IN DEATH. The conventional arms of war are therefore THIRTY-FIVE TIMES MORE LIKELY TO PRODUCE FATAL CASUALTY than lethal, toxic, death-dealing poison gases; and these dangerous gases; lewisite, phosgene, mustard (not a gas, but volatile oils), are not even concerned; we cry out in alarm at mere cry-baby stuff. This is viewed with alarm as "escalation" of the war? Who is kidding whom?

Democracy, Free Speech Inseparable

By Hugh Haworth

THANK GOODNESS a fresh breath of free speech has come to City College — not the sit-in, resist-the-law type of free speech movement, but a desire on the students' part to voice opinions, to organize for exchanging ideas, and to substantiate their positions in front of the listening public.

Educators should be bailing this blossom of activity as a demonstration of healthy democracy, and just in time. At a recent "exercise of free speech" at the Ram on April 19 a few students stated they did not want to be bothered with this mess of free speech.

Of course, they don't want their narrow minds challenged. It might upset their equilibrium of assimilating predigested education and viewpoints they feed upon from official sources.

However, there was, also, hope at that same "exercise." Many spectators kept asking for specific issues and specific facts. They were not readily supplied very time. But, now at least some are willing to open their ears and express what they feel.

Now, all political, social and religious reformers, conservatives and radicals can come to the fore.

But, they better study their notes well first, since apparently these students at City College are exacting in seeking the truth once they awaken.

To calm those fearful of the students' tender constitution, let it be noted that a justice of the United States Supreme Court, Felix Frankfurter, had enough confidence in the American citizenry's ability to think for themselves to note that the truth would have to uphold itself in the "market place" of the community's mind.

Therefore, the students who are the "market place" shall discern for themselves what and what not is the truth in each particular.

Besides, in the words of a Harvard president on starting a college from scratch, he said he would first build a dormitory, a school plant second and provide teachers third. Which means to him the greatest value of college is the gathering of stndents in debate and mutnal aid seeking wisdom.

So let the free speech flow. Let democracy flourish in expression of many-sided opinions. And if a group is trying to promote a favorable climate at City College for more political clubs and means of publicity and expression available to students, it should be welcomed.

Increasing the opportunities to bring the contemporary outside world on campus for full consideration by the students is a healthy extracurricular activity. More power to whoever may accomplish it.

Meanderings

By Don Patten

WITH THE coming of the Easter Bunny and all he signifies, the college student takes off for the mountains and as such, Squaw Valley enjoys one of the most profitable weeks of its season. This year's vacation was certainly no exception.

The early part of the week dawned clear and calm, promising fabulous skiing conditions with a few inches of powder from the previous snowfall. As the week grew older, the afternoons brought a few dark, forboding clouds, but everyone was having too much fun to notice such things.

Wednesday afternoon contained dark clouds with wisps of cool wind whipping across the mountains and relocating the snow drifts into small dunes abundantly scattered over the terrain.

Dancers rocked each night at the Village, and for the poker fans, an all-night game was played in room 274 of Chalet St. Moritz. The new lifts, Shirley Lakes and Emigrant were in full operation until Thursday when Emigrant was closed resulting from high winds.

Oddly enough, and especially during Easter week, no long lines were seen at Squaw, possibly as a result of the new lifts constantly being constructed.

Thursday morning Siberia lift was running at half speed or slower because the severe winds caused chairs to collide with towers along the way. An employee at Squaw reported 70 mile per hour winds at the top of Siberia and temperatures reaching 10 degrees below zero.

The Gold Coast Bar and Restaurant were jammed as usual, but unfortunately, the restaurant at the top of KT-22 contained a meager number of hungry wayfarers. Most likely the answer is the fact than everyone now meets at Gold Coast. With expansion comes loss and a good example is the KT restaurant.

Thursday's moon rose hidden almost entirely behind coal black clouds racing across the mountain tops. A storm was approaching. Then, at mid-evening, small flakes of snow gently began to fall to earth and as the hours wore on, they came more frequent and with greater force.

Dawn brought a glistening world and trees leaning over from the weight they were burdened with. The first sounds of morning were the heavy snow removal equipment pushing back nature's work so the avid skiers could make their way to the lifts.

The snow continued to fall and the chain control was stationed at Donner Summit. All the lifts were running, but the crowds weren't there; everyone was moving between room and car with heavy suitcases jammed tightly closed.

One last breakfast at the Village dining room and the meal ticket received its final punch. The stay had ended and everyone piled into cars which made their way slowly over the summit and down into the flat valley and finally the shores of the Pacific and home.

Now it's back to the rigors of academic life and perhaps sweeping into the political uproar now striking the campus.

One week, you breathe the crisp mountain air without a care in the world. The next week you find yourself breathing in the smoggy air of the city and pushing onward to attain new heights of freedom.

Life and all it signifies can certainly change in a short period of time.

Thespians Ready For Second Play

Plans for the college's second dramatic production of the semester, The Shoemaker's Holiday, are now underway, Walter Krumm, drama instructor and director of the play, announced today.

The play, an Elizabethan comedy by Thomas Dekker, will be presented May 19 through 22.

"Tryouts for the play were held before the spring vacation," Krumm said, "and all but one role has been filled. We are still looking for someone to fill the role of the serving man."

According to the costume manager, Anne Henderson, the drama department will take full advantage of the Elizabethan styles when outfitting the cast. "Elaborate costumes will be rented and there are tentative plans to dress the ushers in the same manner," Miss Henderson disclosed.

Science Department Finds Homes For Its Old Bones

The college has a skeleton in the closet; in fact, it has eight skeletons in eight closets.

Actually, the college's science department always had eight skeletons hanging around, but it only recently acquired the closets.

The science department really needed those closets, and no bones about it. Why every time they'd leave a skeleton out, unattended, he'd be the victim of cruel practical jokes; he'd be made sport of and ridiculed mercilessly.

Now, skeletons are people too; well, they were, anyway. They have feelings also, only they can keep them inside better than most people can today. They would never speak out against their transgressors, so the science department took the matter into its own hands.

The department purchased eight wooden closets that will house the $300 per capita skeletons when they are not in immediate use.

Walking-talking type people might think it's a bit inhuman to pen somebody up in a little closet, but the skeletons don't mind it. They were, themselves, walking-talking type people for a long time, but they tired of walking and talking, and so they withdrew.

Some students, when rushing to and from classes, from exam to exam, from classes to work, pass the closets and say that some times, they hear a snicker from within — usually on Tuesdays. P.D.

Nigerian Student Delivers Speech Here Explaining Pan Africanism

By Bea Takeuchi

Dominic Nwoke Nzerem, part-time Nigerian student here, discussed Pan Africanism with the International Relations Club.

The soft-spoken psychology major, who is also a student at the University of San Francisco, explained Pan Africanism, in an effort to clarify newspaper reports on the subject.

He said that there was a "meeting of minds" of Nigerian students in England with students who were educated both in America and in England. "From these students came some of the leaders of Nigeria.

"Nigerians would like all African countries to unite someday. It will take some time but someday we hope to see a United Africa. Our idea was to be neutral before. Now we are aware of Communism and we feel that neutrality is not good for any country," Nzerem said.

He defined the difficulties involved in acquiring higher education in his country, and pointed out that there is "no such thing as a part-time job."

When asked his views on the present civil rights demonstrations, Nzerem said, "That is a problem which no other country but America can comment on. It is their problem. I do not know enough about it to make a statement."

No Open House— A Lack Of Interest

City College will not have an official open house during Public Schools Week, April 26 through 30, according to Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management.

Education-Business day is slated tomorrow to which businessmen are invited to visit classes, to bear talks about City College and to tour the campus.

In past years, from 1946 to 1960, City College did have open house.

Anderson said, "Public interest is not enough to warrant keeping these programs. We feel that open house should not be limited to just one week anyway, but that parents should come any time during the year. At City College visitors are always welcome."

He also commented that "when you put on a special show for Public Schools Week it becomes too involved."

Luckmann Visits Council, Tells Of Assembly Bills Affecting Campus Affairs

By James Rauh

Lloyd D. Luckmann, dean of instruction and last week acting president of the college, made a surprise appearance at Wednesday's Student Council meeting to tell of two bills recently introduced to the state assembly.

The bills will directly affect all the Bay Area two-year colleges.

He also discussed the new student political groups which have arisen on the campus.

Taking the place of President Louis Conlan who was on a trip to the East, Luckmann first discussed the student groups.

The groups under discussion were ROC (Reform On Campus), a newly-organized student political party trying to establish itself, and the Ad Hoc Committee for Active Campus Today (ACT), a group with largely the same motives as those of the University of California Free Speech Movement.

Luckmann informed the Student Council that "events of the past week have given President Conlan reason to pause on his trip to Boston," as information has been sent to him about the student groups.

Referring to the organizations in question, Luckmann quoted Conlan as saying, "Any constitutional campus groups must develop from the Associated Students."

In answer to the protests lodged by the groups indicating "preferential treatment" toward some campus organizations, Luckmann said that there had been "no preferential treatment given to anyone."

"The student elections will provide a democratic chance for these groups to prove their worth," Luckmann said.

In the second part of Luckmann's two-fold visit to the meeting, he informed council of the two new bills introduced into the state assembly by a pair of Bay Area assemblymen.

"Last Monday," Luckmann stated, Assemblymen Waldy and Miller introduced two bills, brought about by Contra Costa College, which will directly affect the two-year colleges in the Bay Area."

"One asked for the broadening of the scope of political party organization on junior college campuses," he said, "more than just the Young Republicans or the Young Democrats."

He pointed out that the other bill involved the "governing of procedures on the distribution of political literature on campus and the collection of funds for political purposes.

"Although it is late in the session for bills to be introduced to the assembly," Luckmann said, "City College should be prepared for the possible appearance of many new groups which can arise on campus as a result of these new bills."

Luckmann added that Contra Costa College officials had called and informed him that City College is "rocking the boat" from the standpoint of the passage of their bills, inferring that the events which have taken place on the City College campus recently could spoil the chances of passing the bills.

ROC In Council Debut; Bay Fill Project Bypassed

Following a week's Easter recess, things began popping right and left as ROC (Reform On Campus), a new campus political party, bowed at the Student Council meetings of last week.

Doug Bianchi, representing the executive committee of ROC, introduced both himself and his organization.

Bianchi first asked that the election campaign period be extended and start April 22 instead of May 3.

Following expression of many viewpoints on why the campaign period should remain at its scheduled length, Bianchi gave his reasons for the "extension" request and a clarification of his party's position.

NEED FOR TIME

"We are a new political party and we need time to inform the students of our position on certain points relative to campus affairs," Bianchi said. "Secondly," he added, "Reform On Campus has no affiliation with the Free Speech Movement in the Bay Area."

The latter point was Bianchi's answer to the remarks made in Student Council as to ROC's associations, for many of those at the meeting started mumbling Communism as soon as Bianchi introduced his party.

Bianchi extended his apologies to the Student Council for the confusion created last week by the distribution of ROC leaflets stating its aims on campus.

"We have been informed," Bianchi said, "that any more distribution of ROC information will result in its disqualification from the campus."

REQUEST DENIED

Lori Klein moved for a vote on the change of the campaign period. The measure was thumbed down by the SRP-dominated executive council by a lop-sided vote of 0-10-3.

Reversing its former decision to support the proposed opposition to the San Francisco Bay Fill by College of San Mateo, the Student Council, prodded by Jim Solletti, Freshman Class president, decided that they were not representing the Associated Students in taking such a stand.

Council found that it was not their place to vote on such an issue if it didn't represent the students and voted 7-4-1 to rescind the vote.

Council decided to pass on any further Bay Fill information to the students for their own consideration.

FALL BUDGET PASSED

Jim Doudlet, Finance Chairman, submitted the Fall 1965 budget to Student Council for a vote of approval. The entire Fall budget, totaling $41,983.76, was approved and passed by a vote of 12-0-0.

Lori Klein, sophomore member of council, moved to adopt the charter of the newly-formed Political Science Club. A speaker for the group described its purpose which is to "bring political speakers to the campus in an effort to inform students about political events and government affairs, and to discuss socio-economic problems."

COUNCIL SEAT VACATED

A special announcement was made by Terry Cloney, Associated Student president, as to a "vacancy to be filled on Student Council."

"Due to the absences of Rosemarie Adams, freshman member of council, at the Student Council meetings," Cloney said, "she has been asked to leave."

This move was due, apparently, to the remarkably consistent number of absences which Miss Adams has managed to compile during the semester thus far.

CJCSGA Delegates Attend Workshops

Six Associated Student officers and James Wyatt, faculty adviser, attended the 39th semiannual conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association, held last week at Palm Springs.

The six members attending the conference were Terry Cloney, AS president, Mary Anne Ducommun, vice president, Wardene Oliver, State Information chairman, Penny Brown, Sophomore Class council member, Jim Soletti, Freshmen Class president and Sandy Castelli, student card sales coordinator.

"The primary purpose of the conference was the getting together of representatives of student government of the various 78 two-year colleges of the state, Wyatt commented.

Every college had a delegate attending each of the workshops held concurrently. These workshops involved topics such as AS presidents' conference, campus organizations, campus attitudes, campus communications and the functions of student government.

All of the representatives attended the General Assembly held at the last portion of the conference, discussed resolutions that were made during the workshops and voted on them.

Golfers Clash With San Jose For Crown

Tracksters Take Second Place

Spikers Top Comets, Chabot, Beaten By Bulldogs, 78-54

By Ivan Temes

Though explosive enough to equal two City College records and better another, the Ram tracksters were still subdued in their quest for a Golden Gate Conference title by champion San Mateo, 78-54, on the Bulldog field April 17.

However, the Red and White — entered in the conference trials today at 3 p.m. at Foothill and the league meet set for 10 a.m., Saturday at San Mateo — finished in second place with a highly respectable 6-1 mark by downing Contra Costa, 82-54, on April 6 and Chabot, 85-43, April 20.

Stanford Frosh and Santa Rosa also ran at San Mateo, and the four-way scoring read San Mateo 61½, Stanford 54, Rams 46 and Santa Rosa 11½.

The Rams opened and closed the meet in spectacular fashion, winning both relay events.

In the 440-yard relay Lee Benton, Vern Bradford, Chris Ransom and Bob Prince combined for a 41-9 clocking to equal the City College mark set last year.

It took the best time in the State this year and a new local record to do it, but the mile-relay foursome of Benton, Rod Coleman, Sonny Johnson and Chris Davis came through with a 3:17.7 time to hold off the Bulldogs in a photo finish.

Benton, credited with a 48.7 quarter-mile in the relay, earlier in the day had matched the City College mark of 48.9 in the 440 set by Owen Moore in 1949.

Ralph Likens and Dennis Phillips of the winners provided highlights during the competition. Likens ran the top two-year college times of the year with a 4:12.2 mile and a 9:20.7 two-mile while Phillips bettered the listed pole vault record with a leap of 15-2½.

Johnson, Leroy Woods and Dwight Tucker all unleashed top performances for City College. The former won both hurdle events with 15.2 seconds in the 120-highs and 38.5 in the 330-lows. Woods high-jumped 6-7½ and triple-jumped 44-9½ to finish 1-2 with Tucker in both events.

University of San Francisco also ran in the Chabot meet but the Rams won in the tri-scoring in the rain with 79 points to 49 for the Gladiators and 36 for the Dons.

Laisene Malauulu got off his top shotput of the year, 47-4, and came back to take the discus, joining hurdler Bob Coleman as double-victors.

Earlier in the month the Red and White had to use superior depth to overcome Contra Costa, whose Nick Rogers had his usual fine day winning four events, both hurdles and the long and triple jumps with respective leaps of 23-8 and 46-11½.

Benton turned in a 49.6 440 win while Klemmer doubled with a 4:29.4 mile and a 9:46.8 two-mile.

RICK KLEMMER's victorious 1:59.9 mark in the half-mile was not enough to help the Rams in their first season loss to San Mateo, 78-54. —Guardsman photo by Daryl Tucker

Spikers Fifth In Relays; Netters Dump Merritt

By Tom Csekey

Weekend sport action had its up and downs as the Ram netters romped to their fifth consecutive victory on behalf of Merritt 7-0. For the local thinclads, fortunes stayed away in the Northern California JC Relays as they finished a meager fifth at the San Mateo track last Saturday

The red and white netters, who haven't dropped a match since the league opener at Foothill, are pending down the "silver" behind the conference-pacing Owls.

San Mateo was nosed out by Foothill, 4-3 last Wednesday and with that result the Owls just about assured themselves of the three year old Ram crown. The Bulldogs were the locals last strong hope to overcome the Foothill bandwagon. The conference net finals are set for Diablo Valley, Saturday, May 1.

The absence of Lee Benton hurt the Ram chances this weekend not just on individual basis, but also forced Chris Ransom to scratch from the 120 HH in order to save strength for the more important relays.

Sprinter Bob Prince must be accredited as the Ram standout since he took part in four races and never finished worse than second.

He tied the meet record in the 100-yard dash (9.7), held by Bill Hall of Fresno CC, 1961, and Travis Williams, Contra Costa, 1964. Prince also paced the Ram mile combination to a first (3:18.2). His role was essential in the second placing of both the 440 and the 880 relay teams.

The only other fact of Ram significance was the fourth place finish in the high jump by Leroy Woods. Woods strived across 6-6¼, but was aced out of third place.

The team title went to the hosts with 56 points, and the top teams to follow were, Fresno CC 54, American River JC 38, Foothill 36 and CCSF with 35 points.

Hurlers To Face San Jose Nine In Doubleheader

The Ram baseball team takes on first-place San Jose in an important doubleheader Saturday at Balboa Park, and winning both games will be a necessity, for if the Rams lose they can kiss their title hopes good-bye.

They are currently tied for third place with Foothill and San Mateo, each boasting a 5-5 record. San Jose is tied with Chabot for first place with a 7-2 record.

The Rams have lost their five games by a total of six runs. Their pitching has been good and their batting adequate, but untimely errors have spelled defeat in each ball game.

Kenny Dyer, Bob Lee and Greg Sinclair have paced the mound-staff while Barry Carli and Mike Dunne have led the Rams at the plate. Carli is a definite all-league candidate. The swift centerfielder with the rocket arm is currently batting at a .450 clip.

Excluding any more rained-out games, the City College baseball men have three more games left before the end of the season.

Next Tuesday, May 4, they will clash with the Contra Costa Comets on Comet grounds. The following Saturday, the Rams will close their season with a double header against the Foothill College Owls.

Last year the Rams finished in fifth place with a 10-11 record.

Rams Seek To Reverse Fresno Tourney Loss In Friday Match

Ram golf coach Grover Klemmer isn't pulling any punches as he prepares his squad for its show-down with San Jose this Friday at Almaden in San Jose.

His team, undefeated as well as tied for the Golden Gate Conference first place with the Jaguars, has "scouted the opposition as thoroughly as possible." It has just returned from the Fresno tournament where in four days of 72 holes, the local favorites met San Jose and were beaten by only two strokes.

"This shows how evenly matched the two teams actually are," Klemmer stated, adding that in such a long match, "there is usually a big difference in scores."

The Jaguars' home course advantage, usually a large factor in an important match, has been somewhat depleted by the fact the the Ram team played the Almaden course on their way to the Fresno Tourney.

Klemmer noted that with these preparations his team is as evenly matched with San Jose as possible.

San Francisco's hopes lie with Jim Schroeder, the team's rapidly developing big gun. In his last two outings, Schroeder carded an even par and a remarkable score of two-below par.

These scores are emphasized even more by the fact that both matches were played in the rain. In horse racing parlance, Schroeder would be described as a mudder.

Friday's meeting, in addition to being the championship and final match, is also a preparation for the Golden Gate Conference tournament to be held next Monday at Castlewood Golf Course.

Linkers Move Into Top Spot With Owl Win

By William G. Pates

Coach Grover Klemmer's golfers braved the wind, rain and cold of Harding Park April 9 to dismantle the Foothill squad, 26½-3½, for their fifth straight conference win and vault themselves into first place with San Jose, the team to beat.

This was the second time this season that the City College squad has come up with a smashing victory in the stormy confines of the lake surrounded Harding course.

Last Friday afternoon, April 23, Coach Grover Klemmer's golfers came through with their sixth straight conference victory by downing the Contra Costa Comets 23-7 on the Comets home field.

In this Friday's championship match with the San Jose Bulldogs, Coach Klemmer tabs the Bulldogs as slight favorites because of their "home field advantage."

Thus far the Rams have managed easy wins over Diablo Valley, 23-7, Chabot, 20½-9½, and Foothill, 26½-3½, while beating San Mateo, 18-12, and edging out Merritt College, 16-14.

It is obvious from their 11-0 season record that the linkers don't have too much room for improvement although there might be somewhat of a subconscious inferiority complex regarding their meet against San Jose, because of their come-from-behind rush in the last round of the Far Western Tournament during Easter vacation.

In the first round at Fresno, San Mateo finished sixth at 322 followed by San Francisco at 323, Merritt College with a 325 and San Jose tied for twelfth with a 330 score.

After two rounds San Mateo was tied for eighth at 645, Merritt was in ninth with 650 and San Francisco was alone in tenth with a 652. San Jose was still back in twelfth at 660, fifteen strokes out of eighth place.

In the third round Merritt stayed consistently even with their previous play lengthening their lead to four strokes over City College, while San Mateo began to fade and San Jose remained in twelfth only seven strokes behind the Ram linkers.

San Jose showed its late strength by making up seven strokes in the last round to edge out City College by two strokes for ninth with a finishing score of 1280, while Merritt continued its consistent play, finishing eighth at 1277 and San Mateo faded into the distance.

Freshmen Surprise Former Champs In Intramural Action

By Frank Cooney

Two unique events have recently sparked intramural competition. The Filipino-American, undefeated last season, suffered a crushing loss at the hands of the new Freshman team. . . and, The Guardsman has finally organized a team.

Following the non-competitive Easter vacation week, intramural Club league play picked up April 20 with at least one surprise. The Filipino team, last year's champs, met a tidal wave of Freshman scoring to be drowned in a 73 to 42 dousing.

Another April 20 club league clash saw Lawson's 10 romp over the Ram Skiers in a 49 to 37 tilt.

The Guardsman team, going into just its third game of actual play, lost to the Newman Vikings in the last two seconds of skirmish.

An extra free shot, awarded by the referee because the first two foul shots were made under harassment, proved to be the difference in a 41 to 40 conflict.

April 6 activity in the club league saw Lawson's 10 defeat H&R by a 47 to 42 tally. Also on that date The Guardsman team awed coach Jack Gaddy by showing up for the first time this season. They were promptly beaten by the Freshman club, 58 to 13.

In the Fraternity league, Alpha Phi Epsilon dropped two games in as many outings.

The only other game in the Fraternity league had Alpha Sigma Delta squeezing through to come out on top in a 13 to 11 game against Beta Tau. Frank Cellilipo marked up 7 points for the winners.

The Independent Irish team lost to the Chancellors by 62 to 56, while the Chiefs buried the Mice in a 41 to 25 slaughter. In the one remaining Independent league battle, the Castoffs won out over the NBA Rejects in a 57 to 46 contest.

Four more games were played last Wednesday. In the women's gymnasium Alpha Kappa Rho met Beta Tau and came out on top in a 54 to 10 whitewash. Also in the women's gymnasium the Irish were victorious against the Do Humps, 42 to 37.

The Romans stressed mainly one type of education, that of the soldier. But Greece strove to educate the whole man — the soldier, the scholar, the statesman and the athlete. Needless to say, this was the culture that has given more to the world than most.

Meanwhile in the men's gymnasium the Castoffs got a mark in the win column in a 40 to 24 clash with the Mice. Again in the men's gymnasium the NBA Rejects scratched up a victory against the Chiefs, 76 to 50.

Scholastic Versus Sports Competition

RAMBLINGS

Measuring Worth Of Physical Education

By Mike Smith

A NUMBER OF students in certain circles of this college have been knocking the physical education program as a waste of time. There is further resentment, among these same students, to the tendency of the general student association to look upon "athletic excellence" as being superior to "academic excellence."

However, it is also a fairly common opinion among other students here, that a half-unit physical education class takes up valuable space that could be filled by a three-unit course which would be worth much more to any college degree.

Many colleges across the nation apparently agree, because they have poor physical education programs, and others are considering dropping it as a requirement. If these classes were to be dropped, then the varsity sports in many small colleges, such as this one, would be in danger.

A great part of the intelligentsia would be overwhelmed with such a situation for they feel that this is the age of higher education where a college graduate will soon become as "common" as a high school graduate.

But why do these "academic groups" urge complete abolition of sports, recreation and physical education from the educational system?

A reason often given is that sports and games are too dramatic, tense and competitive — particularly for secondary school and college students — and that nothing is gained from playing games in a place designed primarily for development of the mind.

Yet they do not mention anything about a college like San Francisco State or a university like Cal where hundreds of students are turned away because they failed to compete against others adequately, and they do not knock the competitive "class average" grading system. Nor do they realize, if they even stop to think about it, that sports, recreation and games are among the greatest socializing forces of any age.

These members of the intelligentsia who began pushing hard on the importance of academic excellence were prompted to do so when the Soviet Union sent up Sputnik, and they were justified in their complaints. But weakening the athletic world will not strengthen the academic world. It will only split the two further apart.

However, those in physical education have never sought to abolish higher education because such action would be ridiculous. But they also realize that academic superiority is limited, and that only so many people can achieve the title of the "educated man."

Any person or group that privately or openly urges a college to stress only one kind of education, academic for example, should take a look into history at two ancient cultures.

The Romans stressed mainly one type of education, that of the soldier. But Greece strove to educate the whole man — the soldier, the scholar, the statesman and the athlete. Needless to say, this was the culture that has given more to the world than most.

Yanks, Giants Are 'G' Choice For '65

Every year about this time 20 major league teams begin a grueling campaign which ends 162 games later with the crowning of the world's best baseball team.

This year, as in the past, it looks like an exciting season coming up, with many new faces sparkling the major league teams.

A poll of The Guardsman Sports Staff gives the following predictions for the 1965 season:

AMERICAN LEAGUE: 1. New York Yankees, 2. Chicago White Sox, 3. Baltimore Orioles, 4. Minnesota Twins, 5. Detroit Tigers, 6. Los Angeles Angels, 7. Cleveland Indians, 8. Boston Red Sox, 9. Washington Senators, 10. Kansas City Athletics.

ROC Leaders Cancel Unauthorized Rally

Suspension Threat, Hope Of Negotiation For Free Speech Area Sway Party Speakers

A rally unauthorized by the City College administration was instigated by the newly emerged Reform On Campus political party at the Ram during College Hour last Thursday. An estimated 500 students noisily thronged the platform to hear only that the rally had been postponed by ROC.

Forty-five minutes before the rally was to take place, the speakers for the ROC party knew that if they proceeded with their marching and planned reading of American documents they would be suspended.

At this time a quickly gathered group of faculty members and Dean of Men Ralph Millsman went to the President of the college, Louis G. Conlan, to intercede on behalf of the students to start negotiations on the establishment of a free speech area.

After an half hour these intermediaries relayed to ROC Conlan's request that the ROC leaders give up their rally and meet for a parley May 3.

On their own initiative, faculty members asked that the speeches be cancelled so another try at negotiations could be attempted between the college President, ROC, faculty and the Student Council.

With this in mind, ROC publicly called off its rally in order to approach the administration. The crowd then surged around the speakers.

An angry and bitter ROC executive, Doug Bianchi, said, "I find the conduct of the students here appalling. The least they could do is just sit down and listen."

Surrounded by puzzled students, ROC executive and Contemporary Affairs Forum Chairman Ernest Thalinger explained:

"ROC called the rally. The purpose of the rally was to read the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. Such a reading would have been in violation of administrative policy.

"Dean Hillsman told us this morning that we would be suspended if we proceeded with the readings. ROC postponed the rally upon assurances from the administration and the faculty that meaningful and substantial negotiations toward the establishment of a free speech area would begin on Monday.

Thalinger declined to make a prediction on what the outcome of negotiations, held Monday, would be. He did say, however, "We are not going to be put off. We know what procrastination smells like."

Go-Go's Billy Riley To Sing At Book Drive Rally

Alpha Sigma Delta will sponsor tomorrow's College Hour rally featuring Billy Lee Riley, R&R vocalist currently appearing at the new Whisley-A-Go-Go.

Riley comes to San Francisco from Los Angeles where he recently finished an engagement at the famed Hollywood Whiskey-A-Go-Go. The rally is being staged to publicize Alpha Sigma Deltas' third annual Asian Book Drive.

Jerry Harris, Alpha Sigma Delta president, will make a brief appeal for book contributions at the rally.

A dance is also being presented by the fraternity starting at 9 p.m. on Friday at Smith Hall.

The dance is entitled The Book-A-Go-Go as the price of admission is five acceptable books or $1 per person. Both money and books will be donated to the Asian Book Foundation. "We would like to stress the preference for books, although cash is acceptable," Harris said.

A live "A-Go-Go" band will provide the neceessary rhythms. Men are required to wear ties and the dance is Stag or Drag.

In his plea for contributions, Harris commented that most homes have a few old, unused and forgotten books lying around that can be put to valuable use overseas.

"Many of the students of Asia don't have the means to buy books of their own," he said. "By contributing some of these old books, a needy Asian student will be helped along the road to education, and education is his strongest weapon against Communism."

Books of any educational value, both hard cover and paperback as well as novels, will be accepted.

Administration's Statement Of Present Policy

The following statement was read to Student Council and released to The Guardsman by President Louis G. Conlan last Wednesday:

Certain individual students and student groups have requested that a number of regulations governing out-of-class activities be liberalized. These requests, which cover a great many areas, fall into several categories:

1. Those governed by existing law. We can do nothing in this category until such time as the laws applicable are modified to permit a change. If interpretations of these laws are required, such interpretations will be obtained from the proper source.
2. Those governed by Board of Edu-

Fantasticks Score High On Basketball Court

By Eugene Rosendahl

The men's gymnasium floor, normally accustomed to the sound of basketball dribble, lent its ears to a "fantastic" sound April 27.

No, it wasn't a sound of mystic origin creeping in the night, but the sound of the play, The Fantasticks, composed of slapstick comedy, quiet solitude of young love, and the heartrending musical arrangements, flowing to an attentive crowd.

Overwhelmed with the reception they received at last week's performance in the college's theater, the cast members relayed the events to the manager of the Little Fox Theater.

As a result, it was decided that in the future, minors will be allowed to attend performances at the Little Fox as well as enjoy a 50 per cent discount with an Associated Student card.

The cast, composed of only eight, Fernando Toro, David Canary, Chris Callahan, David Michael, Gerald Lyly, John Rose, Richard DeFaut, and John Keith, brought riotous laughter, ominous quietness and yet, tender compassion from the audience.

This variation of human emotions was accomplished by the outstanding acting which stimulated the audience's imagination, without the use of elaborate props, stage scenery or other burdensome acting paraphernalia.

Equipment was limited to a minimum: a raised platform, curtains, lights, four poles and a cardboard moon and sun.

Tinkling by the harpist, Alice Stevens, and the rolling melodrama of the pianist, Dan Demaree, added the final touch to the dramatic musical comedy.

Conlan Speaks Before Council

PRESIDENT Louis G. Conlan who issued a statement last Wednesday concerning regulations governing out-of-class activities.

'Nothing Taken Away... No Special Privileges Granted'

By James Rauh

Official word was issued last week at the Wednesday Student Council assembly when City College President Louis G. Conlan said, "Nothing has been taken away from any organization on campus, nor have any special privileges been granted anyone."

Conlan and many other VIP's, including William McElligott, assistant superintendent of schools for business affairs, Irving Breyer, legal adviser to the San Francisco Board of Education, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction and Dean Ralph Hillsman were present either to speak their piece on the subject matter or merely observe.

The President's statement was in answer to the questions and remarks posed, by the newly arrived student organizations, about special treatment or favoritism given to certain groups on campus.

PRESSURE OUT

"The administration," Conlan made clear, "is not going to let any pressure organization hurry it into enacting any rules governing student affairs."

"The greatest desire of the administration is to continue in its effort to satisfy the wants of all the students of the college," he stated.

Conlan indicated his somewhat limited ability to correct or change any student government or political affairs situation by saying, "The President of any junior college is appointed to administer the codes and regulations set up by the state and local boards of education, and the California State School System."

MEETINGS WITH COUNCIL

He expressed his desire to meet immediately with the Student Council to discuss and consider the requests put to him by the newly risen political party and other organizations.

Conlan emphasized, "Any recommendations concerning improvements on conditions which now exist on the campus, should be directed to me through Dean Hillsman for discussion and consideration by the administration."

"As it stands," Conlan added, "the present regulations governing student government affairs will remain in effect."

LEGAL ADVISER'S MESSAGE

Of the two messages delivered to the Student Council, the second, delivered by lawyer Irving Breyer, stated the legal position of the college in reference to the problems which have arisen at the college.

Breyer, legal adviser to the San Francisco Board of Education, pointed out that "no real changes in state school laws have taken place for years.

RESPONSIBILITY DELEGATED

"The public schools of California are under the jurisdiction of the state board of education," Breyer said; "the board sets up all of the administrative rules and regulations for those schools, delegated to be carried out by the head of each school.

"Looking objectively at the basic principles, junior colleges are part of the regular secondary school system of California including junior highs, high schools and junior colleges," Breyer said.

AUTHORITY AROUND CLOCK

Expressing his own legal opinion on the affairs at hand, Breyer said, "The authority of the college president does not end after classes or begin when classes commence but exists around the clock, on and off the campus.

"My opinion," Breyer explained, "is that any rules adopted by the school administration governing student behavior, may be enforced legally unless they are so completely out of line that they would be considered arbitrary or capricious."

Strict Campaign Rules Set For AS Office Candidates

Candidates for Associated Student offices next semester must adhere to a strict set of rules governing their campaigns.

Mimeographed lists of regulations were distributed to the candidates at the nominating conventions two weeks ago by Election Commissioner Biff Barnes.

Party expenditures are limited to $200. Individual candidates for the AS Presidency may spend up to $50; all other candidates are allowed up to $25.

Candidates for the "top six" offices, AS President and Vice President, Associated Men Student, Associated Women Student, Freshman and Sophomore Class presidents may display six posters. Four posters may be displayed by candidates for council.

Each party may distribute up to 2500 throw-aways. Presidential candidates are allowed 2000, and all other hopefuls 1000 each.

Posters may only be placed at designated campus locations, including limited lawn and window areas, bulletin boards and selected areas in the buildings.

The election will be held next Wednesday and Thursday. Students may vote from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Voting precincts will be set up in Smith Hall, outside the library, at the Silver Pole, men's and women's gymnasium, Arts Hall, the lobby of the theater, and at the south end of the basement of Science Hall, Barnes said.

Green Man Next In Film Series

Next on the agenda for the Spring movie series is a British film entitled The Green Man, to be shown at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the college theater, James Haran, drama instructor, announced today.

The film, to star Alistair Sim and Terry-Thomas, according to Haran, is a "depraved British situation comedy in which the audience hopes that the bad guys get away with their wrongdoings, but, of course, they never do.

"The story is very complex," Haran explained. "It is based on the efforts of an anarchist to murder a member of the British parliament."

The member of parliament is having a clandestine affair with one of his secretaries. "From then on," Haran said, "the story becomes so complicated it is difficult to explain."

When asked what kind of films he prefers to obtain for showing in the series, Haran replied, "It is not so much a case of my personal preference of films as it it the availability of the movies at the time a film is needed."

Tickets for the film are free and can be obtained from any English drama instructor. Admission is open to both students and the faculty.

Better Behave Yourself, Junior; Mommy Is Going To College!

THOMAS MACAULAY, the English historian, once observed: "The first business of a state is the education of its citizens." City College has recognized this need and has given students through the years the foundation for successful careers and cultural development.

More recently, however, a new "citizen" has appeared on the college campus. Unique in many respects, this student isn't interested in cavorting around her classes seeking a date for the upcoming weekend. In fact, she really doesn't get involved or indulge in activities that may brand her as an average college student.

The casual observer would describe her as a typical city matron, but the informed person recognizes her as a Mother.

Around the hallowed halls of college life Mommy doesn't ask for or expect special privileges. The same rule applies in her humble domain. She wants an education and is willing to pay the price of countless long hours of sweat and toil to get it.

After dinner, when her neighbors have tucked their kiddies into bed and are relaxing in front of the television set, Mommy is busy laboring over her assignments in zoology, chemistry, journalism, history, sociology, or whatever other courses she is currently enrolled in.

Where, moments before, Mommy was mild mannered and unassuming, what one may envision as the perfect wife and the ideal mother, she is now transformed.

As a college student Mommy must be able to keep up with the mental and physical rigors of higher education. And keep up she does. Oftentimes, Mommy is tops in her classes.

Many students slowly concede that Mommy is no slouch. She is a fierce competitor in every sense of the word, and is making her presence felt on campuses everywhere.

Better behave yourself, junior; Mommy is going to college has become the battle hymn of the collegiate republic!

In all seriousness, Mommy is a pretty wonderful person on or off campus. This Sunday is set aside as her day. The Guardsman bows in tribute.

Foresight — Is Security A Case Of Written Policy?

By Mike Barber

DURING THE RECENT free speech ruckus on this campus, great emphasis was placed by proponents on getting everything "put down in writing." Ultimatums demanding written policies shuttled furiously between opposing parties.

WRITTEN PROPOSALS

Proposals were issued to the administration demanding that written statements of policy be given within a specified time limit. The Guardsman was asked to put its editorial policy and the rules governing its publication "on paper."

The need for statements of policy on this campus reflects the insecurity of the student position. The students want to know where they stand. Knowing "where they stand" in relation to those about them, particularly the administration, may give those students who are protesting their lack of freedom solid ground on which to take a stance.

Groups and individuals are intent upon extending and defining their freedoms, and restricting the authority of the administration.

MAGNA CHARTA

If they succeed in having these statements legally recognized and recorded, and the number and length of these miniature Magna Chartas is not allowed to bog the movements down, they should be extremely careful that they do not in effect erect a Great Wall of China around themselves where free and open spaces now exist.

Prisoners in a penitentiary enjoy one of the most secure ways of life existing in this country today. But what a price they must pay to know exactly where they stand.

GIVE AND TAKE

It is clearly apparent that the need for an easily accessible administrative definition of formal position and policy exists. But, when the students ask the administration to pin itself down, they must be ready to pin themselves down too.

It is very doubtful that there will be any giving without a proportionate amount of taking.

People enjoy the sense of security, however false, that the written agreement gives them. They tend to believe that words in black and white are inviolate and absolute in meaning. And if a loophole or weakness exists, then it may easily be patched up with more words.

CONSTITUTION AND SECURITY

California bears the dubious honor of having the third longest constitution in the world, standing behind only India and Louisiana in garrulousness and complexity. But the people of these places don't seem to have a better idea of their legal standing than any others. Having so much written down for them hasn't really made them more secure or given them a more workable definition of their standing in the eyes of the law and society.

If the students and administration press this issue to the point of coming to a written agreement, then both parties must be wary that they confirm, without confusing or confining, their freedoms.

Feminine Mystique

PART TIME STUDENT and full time mother of seven, Mary Ellen Barbieri, sociology major here, manages to combine the very busy life of a student and the doubly active life of a mother within the limits of a 24-hour day. Huddled around Mrs. Barbieri are her children. Standing are Steve, 14, and Pete, 10. Seated are Tessie, 13, Mrs. Barbieri with Julie, 4 months, and Sukie, 12. On the floor, Lelly, 8, and Elly, 6.

Return To College — Twenty Years And Seven Kids Later

By Bea Takeuchi

A mother of seven children needs a keen sense of humor.

Mary Ellen Barbieri, sociology major here, has this gift of wit. She manages to make good grades in spite of being preoccupied with the details of child raising, the family help, mid-term exams, getting to class on time, her husband's dinner party and finding a parking space.

Mrs. Barbieri returned to college after 20 years, when her youngest child was but two months old.

"My husband is baffled but more resigned to the idea now. My kids said 'Mommy, are you out of your cotton-picking mind to go to school when you don't have to?' but I'm here anyway.

"I was forever involved in committees; luncheons and other charitable organizations, all of which left me frantically bored. I sewed and tailored suits until I was blind, and it all wasn't enough," she said, trying to explain her motives for returning.

"Then came the 'Feminine Mystique,' the book by Betty Frieden. I started to think about those lost years. I had one and one half years at SF College For Women, and then I held three very fascinating jobs.

"I was a French translator during World War II, a Red Cross Assistant Field Director and assistant to a personnel director of a world-wide construction firm. I also modeled for charities," Mrs. Barbieri said.

She tested herself with a questionnaire in a local newspaper. The answers revealed that she had a very high learning potential. Although Mrs. Barbieri was not fully convinced, she enrolled in a summer course in anthropology at San Francisco State College.

"I was pregnant for the seventh time, but I wore a sweater to conceal it and I carried crackers in my purse for emergencies. It was during this time that I was convinced I could go to college again," Mrs. Barbieri said, adding,

"I had put off a term paper until the last minute. Pretty soon the deadline was the next day, and I became panicky. I asked my husband to drive the kids to the country, and I labored over that term paper and finished it."

This convinced her that she could handle college courses.

Robert Barbieri, her husband, is a local attorney. Both he and Mrs. Barbieri belong to the families of the original San Franciscans who settled here during 1850.

Their children, three boys and four girls, are 14, 13, 12, 10, 8, 6 and 4 months. "I made one big goof, though. I nicknamed Leslie, 'Lelly.' Then I nicknamed Ellen, 'Elly' and confusion reigns.

"Whenever I call 'Elly,' two faces appear. When I call 'Lelly,' two faces appear. But I'm darned lucky to get any to appear, you know," she remarked, and laughed again.

RAMifications — Wayne Morse And Oregon Republicans

By Hugh Haworth

OREGON has come up with a couple of political anomalies which bear watching in the future. One is the Republican Party change of attitude up there, and the other is the strong opposition to Johnson's policy in Vietnam by Oregon Democrat, Senator Wayne Morse.

The Republican State Conference of a couple weeks ago decided to seek "organized labor" support, a "re-emphasis on Republicans' traditional role in promoting civil rights," a "re-dedication to progressive solutions . . . to world peace under law, automation and population," and lastly a "Republican appeal to youth and to intellectuals."

As the Republicans are saying up in Oregon now, they want to be "for and not just against." If this positive and progressive approach catches on around the country, there might be some constructive campaigns in '66 and '68.

GOP's AIMS

The main hope here for the GOP is their desire to gain ground with unions, youth and intellectuals. This would be quite an influential backing should they obtain it.

Morse has asked for the resignations of Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara for their mismanagement of U. S. foreign policy in Vietnam.

Though Morse will probably not see his recommendation heeded, he has been gaining congressmen on his side in attacking the administration. Many of these opponents are from the Democratic Party itself. Foreign policy might be a crack in the Democratic unity which will give ammunition to Republicans.

NEW PROBLEMS OVERSEAS

Overseas new problems are looming ahead for the State Department and communist-containment-strategists.

Thailand is deciding whether the more blantant banditry along its main highways is part of increased red subversion. Right now, U. S. officials are studying the police force and Army training programs there. It might mean soon groups of MP's and Special Forces will be heading to the Thai's help.

Unfortunately, the United States has too often come into these subversive messes too late. Instead of winning the people over to the present government, discontent is left to ferment until the Red fish are able to swim amongst the people with impunity.

Looking to the future, the Republicans and Democrats have their work cut out for themselves as they try to figure whether the majority of the American tax dollar is going to be spent to satisfy the people of the world in meeting their goals or whether the money will fatten the bureaucratic pockets of the developing countries.

Letters To The Editor — RAM'S HORN

• Appeal To Guardsman

Editor, The Guardsman:

On April 19, the free speech movement, which has plagued other colleges and universities in California, regrettably showed its face on the City College campus. Not to my surprise a crowd assembled by the Ram to hear what a few unsatisfied agitators had to say about our college. Fortunately, the greatest part of the crowd was aware enough not to be influenced by what was being said by a very small part of the student body.

I made a statement at this rally, which was quoted both by television and newspaper reporters. I claimed that these people, who claim to represent the City College student body, were going to turn this college into another University of California. My hope was to encourage City College students to prevent our college from becoming another object of national publicity and criticism.

To my disappointment, my picture was printed alongside the agitators of this so called free speech movement, and my words were printed so as to be misinterpreted by many readers. Therefore, I appeal to you, the voice of the college, to clarify and strengthen my stand AGAINST this unnecessary free speech movement. The only reform needed on the City College campus at this time is that of eliminating those who claim reform is so badly needed in our college.

I would like to take this opportunity on behalf of Mr. George Albertus and myself to thank The Guardsman and Mr. Greg Frazier for the delightful story about our Little Old Lady of San Francisco.

Kegler, Softball, Volleyball Teams Take First Place

Victory was a threesome when softball joined the bowling and volleyball teams from the college in placing first at a recent Oakland sports day.

The volleyballers, who have an undefeated record so far, listed enthusiasm as a major ingredient in winning a game. This was illustrated at Oakland, according to Alex Bondarenok, team captain, when the absence of most of the first team forced the substitutes to take over.

"They competed with the ambitious teams of four colleges," Bondarenok said, "but Foothill gave us the most trouble; they were beating us 14 to 11 till we managed to get our score up to 16."

Bondarenok revealed that it was a "hard time taking first," but the "extraordinary spirit" of the team helped to pull them through.

At this point, the team has a three win-no loss record and is trying for a defeatless season for which, Bondarenok has reason to believe, the chances are good.

When asked if he thought volleyball could become a regular sport on campus, Bondarenok said that the sport was "really developing" and there was no reason why it shouldn't be as popular as football or basketball.

Lack of enough bowlers to complete both a men's and women's team disqualified the bowlers of this college from team competition, RA Vice president Pam Maul commented.

"But we combined into one group," she said, "and won the individual competition."

According to Miss Maul, the softball team, captained by Chester Craft, won two games, both of which were against San Jose City College. The first score was a clobbering 29-13, the second was 10-4.

Reflections On The Activist Movement

(Editor's Note: Michael Lo Presti, phychology instructor here, wrote the following article in response to student inquiries.)

By Michael Lo Presti

Is the progress of the activist movement the measured pace of a smouldering giant, plodding across the American campus threatening anarchy and even the very stability of our educational system?

Or is it a long-awaited cathartic, cleansing encrusted energy-draining micro-organisms from the digestive tract of our educational institutions?

Most frequently, the question asked is, "Where are these activist movements leading?" The answer usually comes forth in a fury of condemnation or in a nascent fervor of endorsement.

Some quietly smile and say that the drama being staged on the American campus represents the cyclic recurrence of a pent-up "activity drive" harnessed during the winter months and now, like spring, "starts bursting out all over."

Thus, in the manner of the typical college capers of the past (and present)—panty raids (and "four-square") —it can be charged off to an adolescent fervor which affixes itself to the outlet of the times.

There are others who blame the mass media for this social phenomenon. Are certain movies, magazines, radio and TV programs spewing forth from their unhygienic mouths social germs?

And are such germs in the form of aggressive feelings aroused, for example, by aggressive TV episodes whose action patterns tend to be carried out by some viewers when faced with similar conditions?

If this be so, then instead of a harmless release of hostility while viewing the program, there may be produced instead a continuing response by identifying specific authority symbols as displacement targets.

More likely, however, the crux of the activist pattern centers upon what some philosophers today describe as "the crisis of the personal."

That is to say we have in the past neglected in our theories and our acts to give due place to the person and the forces of personalization.

This condition, these theorists state, has now reached a climax and there is emerging a new sense of personal transcendence which brings man into direct confrontation with social and institutional determinisms.

Hence, on the American campus we see activist leaders demanding a functional autonomy without any administrative interference for certain patterns of behavior.

In general, the existence of authority in a community has always been justified by the need which the community has of it, if the community is to be able to exist at all. Only if there is a central power, can such a common good come into being. (This power, of course, must be capable of coordinating the activities of all for the inclusive good of all concerned.)

Obedience to legitimate authority is likewise justified on the same basis. The individual's submission is required for the achievement of the common good — a good which is precisely as common as also his own.

Now, it is not intended that the individual take a purely passive stance in the presence of authority. Such inaction would be tantamount to irresponsibility.

Activist leaders might do well to reflect upon these ideas when attempting to gain the proper exercise of rights and privileges.

- Finally, if communication lines between student leaders and administration are continuously open —
- If activist groups avoid bargaining from an in-group out-group sociometric pattern of hostility —
- If personal maturity is cultivated and esteemed in interpersonal relationships —
- If empathy and intelligent compromise displace egotism and inflexibility at the conference counter —
- If our differences serve not to divide but to unite us, and if love and a common brotherhood guide our attitude and our actions, we shall survive.

Broken Rope — Painter Falls Three Stories To Death

Gilbert Louis Martin, age 53, fell to his death at 8:58 a.m. last Wednesday from scaffolding outside the third floor of Science Hall, as a result of a broken rope which secured the scaffold to the side of the building.

Preston Mitchell, Martin's 51-year-old co-worker, narrowly escaped death by hanging onto a rope which several students held taut while he lowered himself to the ground. He was treated for rope burns, shock and a possible back injury before his release from the hospital.

Dean Ralph Hillsman commented on the tragic event by saying, "I would like to cite five students, Robert Behr, Louis Cierra, Roy Boyd, Sharyn Granz and Dennis Shea. They heroically tried to aid the victim, even though there was a possibility of falling debris from the broken scaffold.

"These five students should be commended, as they showed the necessity of beeoming involved in time of need. They have set an example of bravery and willingness to accept responsibility. I am tremendously proud of them," Hillsman emphasized.

"Jack Billwiller, dean of instruction, should also be thanked, as he took the initial control of the situation until help arrived on the scene, and didn't hesitate," Hillsman added.

The Campus Police answered the call promptly and did an adequate job of diverting onlookers so that ambulances could enter the courtyard.

Two, one from Alemany and one from the fire department, arrived within three minutes.

This college has always been one community of students, faculty and administrators working cooperatively to develop a program that will serve the best interests of all students concerned.

The official student group in this college is the Associated Students which has been constituted under the authority of the Education Code of the State of California and the adopted policies of the San Francisco Board of Education.

It has been the policy at this college to permit the student government group to be self-governing insofar as it is possible to do so under existing laws and Board of Education policies and this policy will be continued in the future.

It is the opinion of the administration of the college that recommendations on the part of any students relative to the aforementioned changes in policy should proceed through the official student government organization and such students are entitled to participate in that organization's deliberations.

I shall meet immediately with those concerned with the student government and activity program in order to develop the procedures for considering these many requests.

I shall also invite a group of representative faculty members to join with the members of the administrative staff to consider these problems.

It should be clear that the suggestions would involve changes in regulations and procedures that have been in effect for some time and have been accepted in a college community which has encouraged study, investigation and discussion both in and outside classes.

No new regulations or interpretations have been promulgated; no one has been denied any privilege which previously had been granted.

Until such time as authorized by proper authority, the present regulations will remain in effect. Questions regarding these regulations should be directed to Dean Hillsman.

The administration of the college has no intention of permitting any kind of pressure or threat to harry it into action that does not follow these orderly procedures or into hard decisions that would deny proper hearing to any of the official campus groups involved.

Orchestra, Band Perform For Student Concert Series

The City College orchestra, concert band, and ensembles will take part in the Student Concert Series at 8 p.m. next Tuesday and in College Hour on May 13 in the college theater, according to Meyer Cahn, instructor of music.

The orchestra will play Bastien and Bastienne by Mozart, La Perichole by Rudolph Goehr, and Symphony No. 1 in C by Beethoven. Pieces played by the band will include All Glory Be To God On High by Bach, Petite Suite by Bela Bartok, Prairie Overture by Robert Ward, The Last Pavan by Enrique Granados, and Variations on a Shaker Melody by Aaron Copland.

The students have been preparing for these performances during the entire semester, Cahn said. The band has just returned from a concert band festival which took place in San Mateo two weeks ago.

The student concert series will be the orchestra's first public performance of the semester.

The musicians will be conducted by Cahn, and Harriet Schindel, first violinist, will be concert mistress.

"I would like to have the students attend the concerts, Cahn said, "the student musicians would be very gratified to get the support of their colleagues."

He urged students to bring their friends and families to the performances. Admission to the concert series is free of charge.

Phi Beta Delta To Aid Dead Painter's Family

A fund for the family of the late painter, Gilbert Martin, who died last Wednesday at City College, is being organized by Phi Beta Delta.

"This is a worthwhile project and I am sure all the fraternities and sororities will help in raising funds to make this a successful drive," stated John Holman, Inter-Fraternity Council president.

The date the contributions can be given has not been announced yet, but Holman said notice would be posted.

'Shoe Maker' Due For Three-Day Run In Little Theater

The little theater will be transformed into an Elizabethan playhouse for the production of The Shoe Maker's Holiday, an Elizabethan musical comedy written by Thomas Dekker in 1599.

The play will be presented Wednesday, May 19 through Saturday, May 22. It will be the final spring offering of the drama department.

A platform especially built for the performance will grace the stage, according to Walter Krumm, play director. Since there will be no curtain, Krumm said that all set changes must take place in the dark.

"In keeping with the Elizabethan theme, the ushers, as well as the actors, will wear Elizabethan costumes," Krumm emphasized.

Included in the cast are: Al Hughes, as Simon Syre, chief shoe maker who later becomes Lord Mayor of London; Adrienne Reilly, as his wife Margery; Nelson Cole, as Rowland Lacy, the hero in love with Rose, portrayed by Andrea Fulton.

Krumm explained that the play is a traditional love story with a complex plot. Lacy disguises himself as a shoe maker, so he will not have to leave his lady love to fight Henry V's French Wars, and doing so meets the madcap shoe makers led by Mike Dobrinski, as Firk.

"The three-fold plot," Krumm stressed "tells of Simon Eyre's rise from shoe maker to Lord Mayor of London."

One role, that of the serving man, is still to be filled to complete the cast for the Dekker play.

Employers To Be On Campus During Recruitment Day

Joseph A. Amori, City College placement director, has set next Wednesday, May 12, as the date for the tenth annual engineering and business graduate recruitmcnt day when 200 graduates from 28 terminal programs will meet with 60 employer-recruitment teams representing business, industry and government.

Recruitment day, initiated here ten years ago to expedite the transition of graduates to the labor world, will bring leading employer groups from five Bay area counties to the campus. These teams will conduct personal interviews with the June 1965 and February 1966 graduates.

The Wall Street Journal recently explained management's newly found interest in two-year colleges when it quoted a Pacific Gas Company Personnel Director as saying, "We go where the manpower is, and the 719 Junior Colleges across the country are a virtually untapped source."

The recruitment day program begins at 8 a.m. in the Statler wing dining room with the traditional breakfast. The keynote address will outline the entire day's program as well as present the motivating forces behind the program. Amori will preside.

In addition to the employer groups, members of the press, administration, instructional staff and departmental representatives will participate.

The personal interviews will start at 9 a.m. in Cloud Hall, where each recruiting team will have private interview spaces at its disposal.

The personal interview will bring graduates and employers together in realistic work environment. Approximately 25 percent of the graduates can expect to be offered full-time positions immediately. The remainder will be hired at later dates depending upon demand.

Amori stated that the greatest demand is for students with technical training, but he added that "accountants, clerks and salesmen are also in great demand."

Florists Enter Oakland Show

Students enrolled in the floriculture department here entered an exhibit in the annual Oakland Spring Garden Show which opened last Thursday.

The name of the show this year is Gardens Of The World and the theme is The United Nations.

Switzerland is the country which the college will represent. The exhibit will be made up as a Swiss chalet decorated with masses of different colors. Members of the Swiss consular staff helped to determine plants common to Switzerland and sent for plant specimens from that country.

The winner of the event will receive a ribbon and a plaque.

Students who are participating in the show are Philip Arcuri, Richard Bisazza, Tom Burke, Charles Christman, Lillian Echols, Eric Edwards, William Henderson, Harold Hong, Priscilla Huston, Jon Huttinger, Fred Kozlowski, Lawrence McDougald, Paul McLaughin, Terrence O'Brien, Charles Purcell, Ronald Pusateri, Steve Sheffield, John Tiner and Harry White.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Smith

IN THE United States today, the number one sport is fishing. Using the rod and the reel is not only America's favorite outdoor activity, but it is also as popular in the rest of the world.

The world's second favorite sport would more times than not be considered hunting. In this nation today there are over 14 million hunters, which means that one out of every 13.5 Americans is a hunter.

If this average is applied to City College there would be close to 695 hunters.

This adds up to quite an arsenal of weapons, and what's more, hunters are not the only ones who own firearms. There are many other persons who own weapons for reasons other than to control the rapid growth of wildlife.

Some use their weapons for target shooting, a few for numerous other legitimate purposes; but then there are those who use guns for taking what they can not obtain honestly or legally.

GUN LAW PROBLEM

At this point, the complex gun law problem steps in. Many supporters on both sides refuse to deal with the question, should or should not the citizens of America be required to register all their firearms?

Advocates for the registration of firearms believe that such a law will achieve these main objectives:

- The reduction of crime by making it difficult for convicts and undesirables to obtain weapons.
- Swifter tracing of weapons used in crimes.
- Prevention of possession of weapons by minors, drunkards and drug addicts.
- Faster return of lost or stolen firearms to their owners.

CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT

These principles appear to be an ideal answer to most acts of crime committed in the country. However, the above objectives are not aimed at the lawbreakers themselves, and they tend to violate the Second Amendment of the Constitution, which in part states, "the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed."

A registration gun law will hurt honest citizens more than the dishonest, especially since the latter will not comply with the law anyway. Moreover, the majority of guns used in crime are stolen. The FBI has reported, over the years, hundreds of thefts from government arsenal supply houses; and this is just federal property.

However, the tragic assassination of President Kennedy and the mounting national crime rate points out that something must be done.

Perhaps the mail-order houses should be abolished because of their dangerous tendency to sell weapons to anyone, with no questions asked. But if the mail-orders were done away with, would the government be guilty of abolishing a private enterprise?

STRICTER LAWS, PENALTIES

So where do we go from here? Another possible answer could be stricter laws and punishments for gun crimes. Maybe persons requesting the purchase of guns should have to get a character reference, somewhat like that of a credit rating. But as for thefts, no law seems possible to prevent this.

Another question that is often heard is, "If you don't object to registering your car, why to guns?" First of all, the registering of a car is an automatic procedure. But the registering of guns would give the law the right to say who could and could not own guns, which would undoubtedly invade the domain of civil rights.

Secondly, a registration law would produce a list of firearm owners in the whole nation. When Hitler and Mussolini were in power, they used such lists of German and Italian gun owners to disarm all who would oppose them and arm only their own factions.

TAXATION ON WEAPONS

Furthermore, a gun registration list could only serve one real purpose to our politicians, the taxing of firearm ownership.

Finally, this statement which has appeared in a number of National Rifle Association publications should be weighed carefully before any registration law goes into effect:

"No dictatorship has ever been imposed on a nation of free men who have not been first required to register their privately owned weapons."

Rams Will Send Nine Men To Modesto NorCal Trials

City College of San Francisco spikers turned in a third place finish in last weekend's Golden Gate Conference track and field meet at the College of San Mateo, and qualified nine men for the Northern California Junior College trials at Modesto, May 15.

The host of the meet, San Mateo Bulldogs, nabbed the conference track crown by amassing 166½ points; Foothill College took the runner-up spot with a 126½ tally.

San Francisco just barely nudged out Merritt College who finished in fourth place with only one-third of a point behind the local trackmen.

The Rams won the opening and the closing relay events, and placed third in four more track events.

In the opening 440 relay Chris Davis, Vefn Bradford, Chris Ransom, and Bob Prince combined for a 42.2 clocking.

Davis and Prince, along with Rod Coleman and Hal Johnson gave the Ram spikers their only other first place victory in the 880 relay with a 3:19.2 timing. San Mateo was only two-tenths of a second behind the local relay squad in this event.

Rick Klemmer placed third in the mile run with a 4:20.5 mark behind Bnlldogs Ralph Likens and Marcel Hetu who finished 1-2 with 4:15.1 and 4:16.6 timings.

In the 330 hurdles, Ram Harold Johnson saw Rickey Rogers of Contra Costa break his old 38.5 stadium record with 38.1. Johnson finished third this time with one-tenth of a second off his fallen record. Johnson also came in third in the 120 hurdles in 15 flat.

One of the key men in San Mateo's five first place victories in the 16 events was Bill Johnson who led the team with a 9.8 win in the 100 yard dash, and a 21.8 triumph in the 220.

The Ram's best effort in the 220 was a 22.0 timing by last week's Nor Cal relay champion, Prince.

Final team scoring was San Mateo 166½, Foothill 126½, City College 63½, Merritt 63, Contra Costa 59, San Jose 9, Diablo Valley 7, and Chabot 2.

Twin Loss To Oakland Drops Locals From Pennant Race

By Bob Lee

City College's baseball team has been knocked from the running for the Golden Gate Conference championship. Arch-rival Merritt turned the trick by swamping the Rams, 12-2, and 10-2, in a doubleheader at Balboa Park April 23.

It was the first time this season that the pitching has fallen apart. Bob Lee started the first game and threw three hitless innings before the T-Birds started to get to him. He left the game with the score 5-2, and Ram hurlers Nick Etérovich, Wayne Cheso and Mike Calegari followed.

Bing Kunzig started the second game and lasted one and two-thirds innings and gave up four runs. He was followed by Calegari and Cheso, both making their second appearances of the day.

Only bright spots of the day were four hits by centerfielder Barry Carli and three more by second sacker Bill True.

The next day the Rams traveled to San Leandro to take on second place Chabot, in their second twin bill in two days.

In the first game, diminutive Kenny Dyer tossed a seven-hitter and lost, 3-2, the big blow being a solo homer by Chabot's Kurtz in the seventh inning. Dyer's Chabot counterpart, Englehardt, gave up nine hits but was saved by some key defensive plays and the fact that he struck out 14 Ram batsmen.

Ram Greg Sinclair fired a nifty five-hitter and won the second game, 2-1.

Sinclair himself scored the winning run in the bottom of the fourth inning when Barry Carli doubled him home.

In the sixth inning Sinclair's win was saved when leftfielder Eterovich caught a fly ball and hit the relay man, third sacker Ed Sickinger, with a good throw and Sickinger fired a perfect strike to catcher Ralph Mayer who tagged out Chabot's Muniz, who was trying to score from third after the catch.

On April 27 the Rams won their second straight, 4-3, over San Mateo.

Lee went the entire route and got credit for the win. Lee gave up eight hits, including four bloop singles and the Rams were victimized by their own fielding.

The Rams were trailing 3-0 in the eighth and there were two out when True reached first base on an error. Three pitches later Mayer blasted a 400-foot home run to leftfield off San Mateo's Ferrer.

The Rams still trailed 3-2 as leftfielder Murray Jacobs singled to open the ninth. First sacker Henry Scott reached base on an error. Biff Barnes moved the runners to second and third, and Ferrer then hit Lee to load the bases.

Ferrer worked Carli to a 2-2 count and the slim centerfielder blooped a single to left to score both Jacobs and Scott and win the game. The hit brought Carli's streak to 15 games.

San Jose is presently leading the Golden Gate Conference, playing well above .700 ball. Chabot is second, and Foothill third.

This Saturday, the Ram nine will take on the Foothill College Owls for their last scheduled games of the season. Last year the Owls finished in third place with a 12-9 record as compared to the Rams 10-11 fourth-place mark.

At the time The Guardsman went to press, the Rams' leading hitter is their 18-year-old centerfielder, Carli, who owns an unofficial batting average of .463.

The Rams are currently in fourth place with a 7-8 record. However, five of those losses were by one run, and the Rams still have a chance for a second place finish.

Football Chosen As Favorite Sport

Sports fans throughout the nation have lately been puzzled as to what sport really holds the nation's favorite. For a long time now, baseball has held the esteemed position of the national sport, but many articles have been written and much has been said about this.

A representative variety of City College students was asked by The Guardsman to name the three sports they most enjoy, either as spectators or as participants. The results of the poll gave the following figures:

Of 50 students interviewed in Smith Hall, 32 students placed football as number one or two choice. Nine students placed it as third choice, thus making 41 students who named football on the ballots.

Baseball was named on 28 ballots. It received 23 first and second places and 5 third places.

Running behind football and baseball, basketball was named on 18 ballots. Others scoring high were track 15, soccer 13, and wrestling 9.

Netters Place Second Behind Owls In Tourney

By Tom Csekey

In weekend net action the local stars traveled to Diablo Valley for the Golden Gate Conference Tournament and finished a strong second behind favored Foothill College.

Every man on coach Roy Diederichsen's squad bagged at least one victory before bowing out of the tournament. Ram aces George Pontikoff and Fred Suessman were seeded three and five at the start of the tournament. Foothill star Raul Contreras who is ranked No. 9 in his native Mexico drew top seed in the talent cropped field.

Suessman met Contreras in the semi-finals, but seemed so eager to win that he was unable to play his usual game and by the time he settled down the Foothill star had things well under control. George Pontikoff also reached the semis, but fell to a superb Tony Bardsley from Diablo Valley, 6-1 and 6-4. In the finals Bardsley was demolished by Contreras 6-0, 6-1.

Ram stroker Mike Price was "upset" by Contreras in the first round. Price qualified to play the Mexican Davis Cup contender through a 6-0, 6-1 erasing of Charlie Perkins from Merritt.

Lonis Engelstein fell in the second round to seeded San Matean, Wes Hoffman. Ben Levy got by his first ronnd opponent in straight sets, bnt in his second bid he was edged by Stewart from Foothill in three.

Suessman and Contreras turned in what must have been the best effort in stopping Contreras' winning streak, as they forced him and teammate Kurber to three sets in the doubles semi-finals. Engelstein and Steve Jones lost in their bid for the semis to the San Mateo pair of Bryant-Phillips.

The eight best in both categories qualified for the Northern California Championships to be held in San Francisco this weekend. The locals will be represented by Suessman-Levy and Engelstein-Jones in the doubles and by Suessman and Pontikoff in the singles competition.

Third place in the team standings behind Foothill and CCSF, went to Diablo Valley while San Mateo ended up in fourth.

Trackmen Headed For West Coast Relays In Fresno

By Ivan Temes

A small but potent squad of City College trackmen journeys to the West Coast Relays in Fresno this Friday and Saturday where it will be pitted against some of the top two-year college opposition in the country.

Coach Lou Vasquez has tentatively slated the Ram record-holding relay quartets, 440 and mile, along with high-jumpers Leroy Woods and Dwight Tucker, sprinter Bob Prince and weightman Lai Malauulu to compete in the highly-competitive annual event which has everything from grammar school to open divisions.

In the 440-relay Lee Benton or Chris Davis will team with Prince, Chris Ransom and Vern Bradford, putting their 41.5 second mark against such opposition as Compton and Santa Ana with 41.4 clockings and Fresno which edged the Rams in a photo finish at the Northern Cal Relays.

The Ram mile-relay standard of 3:17.7 was the State's best until Santa Ana came up with a 3:13.5 at Mt. San Antonio, but Vasquez feels his men can still improve.

Benton, co-holder of the City College quarter-mile record with a 48.9 best, or Prince will combine with Sonny Johnson, Rod Coleman and Chris Davis in seeking first place.

Prince, with a top of 9.7 seconds in the 100-yard dash, goes against the likes of Compton's Pablo McNeil, 9.4; Santa Ana's Fred Kuller, 9.4 and Fresno's Alvin Mann, 9.6. The local speedster already holds an upset win over Mann this year.

Woods and Tucker, both 6-7 leapers, will probably have to make the 6-9 height they have been flirting with to score, since the competition includes 7-foot jumper Max Lowe of Foothill and Santa Ana's Ed Caruthers who boasts a 7-1½ high, the nation's best this season.

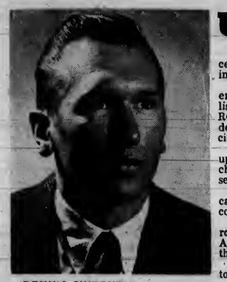
His performance wasn't accepted as a two-year college record since the bars were placed too far apart.

Malauulu, probably the most improved Red and White entrant, has season highs of 47-4 in the shotput and a discus toss of 143 feet.

Domecus Bemoans Alvarez Signing

By Frank Cooney

Early in April, City College baseball was bolstered by the powerful hitting and swift fielding of George Alvarez. On April 6, the enticing monetary offers of a Houston Astro scout created a gap in the Ram outfield.



Alvarez, who was hitting .300 for the college cleaters, is now roaming the outfield in Cocoa Beach, Florida.

According to college baseball coach Ernie Domecus, "If Alvarez had been in a four-year college, then the majors could not have touched him until he became a junior.

"Unfortunately," Domecus added, "two-year colleges have no such protection against the majors; what we need is a ruling that once a student starts a junior college he cannot be touched for at least two years."

Although the last signing date was April 30, there will be a first annual event coming up next April, namely the major league draft. While San Francisco does not expect to lose any more players, it is quite possible that a few of the other Golden Gate Conference teams may still suffer losses.

League coaches suspect the possibility that Chabot may lose two players.

USRP Statement...

COLLEGE STUDENTS have traditionally been concerned with the workings of democracy as a useful tool in molding a free society.

BEING APPRECIATIVE of democracy, students generally have had great respect for authority and established laws, but presently a small group of students, ROC, is attempting to create dissension among the students of City College by completely ignoring the Associated Students and other democratically formed bodies.

THEREFORE, as USRP's presidential candidate I call upon all students to use the already existing democratic channel, Student Council, and in so doing show themselves respectful of democratic means of reform.

IT IS THROUGH these democratic procedures that candidates of USRP will endeavor to solve the lack of communication between the students and administration.

WE FEEL that there is an immediate need for a representative of the Associated Students to be on the Advisory Board to the President of the College, so that the views of the students can be expressed.

THEREFORE, with your interest in mind I urge you to vote for all the candidates of USRP.

DENNIS SWEENEY

ROC Statement...

THERE ARE TWO illnesses inflicting the College. The first illness is student apathy to which there is an easy cure, namely by eradicating the second illness, which is the inability of the administration and the Associated Student government to handle student interests.

THE MECHANICS of this cycle is apparent. There is, in the beginning, student interest, but due to the inability of the groups best equipped to nurture this interest, the interest soon dies and apathy, like a cancer, sets in.

REFORM ON CAMPUS has formed in order to inject the cure into City College. It is currently negotiating with the administration to see if it will listen to its present students rather than to the shadows of its past students.

AND THE BEST way to break open the cemented walls of the AS government is from the inside. If ROC can be elected into the AS government, as a representative of all student interests, then apathy can be cured.

IT MAY BE significant that the motto of City College is incomplete. For, "SEEK YE THE TRUTH . . ." and then ". . . the truth shall make you free."

Large Turnout Expected For AS Elections

Voters Will Cast For USRP Or ROC Today And Tomorrow

The Guardsman

Official Publication of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco

VOLUME 60 SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA — WEDNESDAY, MAY 12, 1965 NUMBER 9

Election Commissioner Biff Barnes predicted yesterday that 2500 to 3000 students will vote in the Associated Student elections today and tomorrow.

"We expect a large turnout as a result of direct and well-publicized competition between Reform On Campus and United Student Representative Party, rather than a get-out-the-vote campaign," Barnes explained.

Last semester 1297 votes were cast.

HING OPPOSES SWEENEY

ROC's Alex Hing opposes USRP's Dennis Sweeney for the AS Presidency.

John Becker, Douglas Bianchi, Hugh Haworth, Jerry Dresner and Lincoln Pain of ROC seek seats as the seven Sophomore members of council.

USRP's candidates for Sophomore members are Lynn Barker, Dorene Berkson, Joe Buondelmonte, Roy Boyd, Tom Cloney, Elizabeth Lewis and Jim Soletti.

"The campaigns have been excellent," Barnes commented. "No violations of the regulations have occurred."

Large and small posters of both parties were to be seen at many campus locations last week. Mimeographed copies of the party platforms were distributed to students.

Voting will take place from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. today and tomorrow.

To cast a ballot, a student needs only his green registration card, Barnes stated.

PRECINCT SITES LISTED

Precincts are located in Smith Hall, outside the library, at the Silver Pole, men's and women's gymnasiums, Arts Hall, the lobby of the theater, and at the south end of the basement of Science Hall.

USRP candidates who run unopposed are Barbara Kontis for the AS Vice Presidency, Mary Maurer and Stan Angel for the Associated Women Student and Associated Men Student Presidencies, respectively. Earl Braverman and Mike Nygren seek the Sophomore and Freshman Class Presidencies, respectively.

Also unopposed are USRP's candidates for the seven Freshman candidates for council seats: Chris Bilby, Karen Carlson, Eileen Cooper, Carol Craig, Bruce Fisher, Percy Jones and Ernie Woodcock.

'Shoemaker' In Final Rehearsals; Debut On May 19

The City College drama department is in the last week of rehearsals for its upcoming presentation of Thomas Decker's The Shoemaker's Holiday which will run May 19 through 22 at the college theater, Walter Krumm, play director, announced today.

"This will the college's first attempt to put on an Elizabethan production in the time I have been here," Krumm disclosed. The production will feature elaborate costuming of the entire cast, as well as ushers, in the styles of the Elizabethan period.

According to Robert Rushalk, who plays the part of Ralph, "Because the play has three essential plots, there is really no leading role in the play."

The lead is equally shared by at least six members in the cast. These are Al Hughes as Simon Syre, Adrienne Reilly as his wife Margery, Nelson Cole as Rowland Lacy, Andrea Fulton as Rose, Mike Dobrinski as Firk and Rushalk as Ralph.

A highlight of the production will be the performance of the Elizabethan Morris dance. "With the help of the physical education department the cast is being prepared to perform this dance on the stage," commented Anne Crichton, who has the role of Sybil in the play.

Other members of the cast include John Lazar as Hammond, Phyllis Melmon as Jane, Henry Cabrera as Lord of Lincoln, Thomas Dotzler as Lord Mayor of London and Andy Archibold as Master Warner. Carlos Cardenas is cast in the part of the serving man.

In traditional Elizabethan style, the play does not call for a curtain.

ISC Cotillion Scheduled For Friday Night

By Joan Barney

Loveliest Night of the Year is the theme of the Inter-Sorority Council's traditional spring cotillion scheduled for Friday in Statler wing.

Dean Mary Golding, ISC sponsor, described the cotillion as "a major event of the season" to which all are invited.

For the occasion Statler wing will portray a ballroom costumed in a "lovely" array of spring flowers and resounding the music provided by the band of Dino Senetti.

The intermission will feature the formal presentation of the 17 sorority pledges, ten of which are claimed by Theta Tau, according to Gerry Maloney, president.

They include Nancy Thomas, Bobby Lacibello, Dianne Neuman, Janis Gelberg, Eileen Cooper, Betty Forencich, Jerry Barrish, Janice Goodrick, Shari Cornsweet and Judy Balaring.

Mary Mauer, Phi Beta Rho president, lists Joan Arndt, Starr McGregor, Karen Green, Nancy Smith, Margot Harbaugh, Anne Marie Karsant and Kathy Harris as new members.

Parents of the pledges will be guests at the cotillion.

A sidelight mentioned by Dean Golding is that a motion picture producer will be on hand to film segments of the dance. The films, she said, will probably be shown in the theater.

The evening will be sponsored by Mary Riordan for Theta Tau, Eileen Rossi and Cornelius McCarthy, both for Phi Beta Rho, and Dean Golding.

Horizontal Raindrops

The college and Candlestick Park have something in common. They share a wind.

The winds, which are a source of much complaint at Candlestick, pass City College first and at much the same velocity.

Besides plaguing baseball fans at Candlestick, the treacherous air currents do much damage at the college, breaking windows, tearing small limbs from the eucalyptus trees in front of Science Hall, ruining countless umbrellas, and all but knocking many people right off their feet.

Nor is it unusual, on a rainy day, to discover that the raindrops, rather than falling from directly above, come straight across. It literally rains sideways.

Max MacDonald, climatologist with the State Climatologist Weather Bureau, explained that the winds generally come from the sea, or marine area. They blow past the college, through the Alemany Gap to Candlestick and the bay.

The winds are caused when the land mass becomes warmer than the ocean. Cooler air from the sea rushes to fill the void caused by the warm air which rises off the land.

The winds are more severe over higher areas, like the college, because the air is compressed as it moves over hills.

MacDonald said that winds are usually most severe during the months of May, June and July, due to the greater discrepancy in land and marine temperatures.

Normal San Francisco winds range up to 20 miles, but, MacDonald explained, winds ranging from 30 to 40 miles would not be unusual in such an area as the one in which the college is located.

Soph Ball Penny Pinching Begins

Candidates for King and Queen of the Sophomore Ball will start their campaigns this week at City College, according to Sophomore Class President Tom Cloney.

Candidates will solicit votes for themselves by collecting pennies, each penny representing a vote.

The pennies will be counted the afternoon of the ball on Friday, May 21.

"By Wednesday of last week, only a few clubs had turned in their nominations," Cloney said. Nomination deadline was Friday.

Commenting on the lack of money turned in with those nominations Cloney said, "I would like to be able to get all the candidates something for their efforts. Last year, the men received tie clasps as tokens of remembrance."

In regard to posting pictures of the candidates in Statler Wing Cloney said that the only thing delaying posting was getting all the photographers and candidates together to take the pictures.

Representatives From Business And Industry Interview 200 Graduating Students Today

Some 200 graduating students enrolled in terminal technology or semiprofessional programs, will join today in the tenth annual Business Recruitment Day when 52 representatives of business, industry and government screen them for employment.

This year the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company will be honored for its contributions to student welfare, Joseph A. Amori, placement director and program chairman, said.

Special guest speaker is Ted Saenger, the Assistant General Manager of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. for the San Francisco Bay Area.

The theme of Saenger's talk is to be the utilization of two-year college graduates in business, industry and government.

To qualify for Business Recruitment Day, Amori stated, students must have completed one of the 33 two-year technical or semiprofessional training programs.

Some 140 to 150 persons are expected for the breakfast at 8 a.m. this morning. They will include 52 employers accompanied by "teams" made up of personnel specialists, technical training people and engineers.

Speakers at the breakfast include President Louis G. Conlan, Dr. Harold Spears, superintendent of public schools, and Dr. Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal instruction.

At 9:30 a.m. the entire assemblage will journey to Cloud Hall where each business representative has been assigned a faculty office cubicle on the third floor.

"The faculty will be cleared from these offices for this one special day," Amori explained.

Amori pointed out that each of the graduating students selects 10 agencies with whom he desires interviews for employment. All interviews are to be 15 minutes in length.

As the interviews are scheduled, the employer receives a file on each of the prospects to be interviewed consisting of a personal data sheet, job inventory sheet and three rating sheets filled out by the student's instructors.

Amori added, "If the employers feel the students are sufficiently qualified, they generally hire right on the spot."

Hiring is also based on age, previous experience in the major field, military training, if the student is a veteran, and scholarship.

"The hot fields of employment today," Amori explained, "are accounting, civil engineering, electronic technology, secretarial, clerical, marketing and merchandising."

In listing estimates of what students who are hired can earn, Amori stated that they could earn anywhere from $330 to $550 per month.

KRON-TV, channel 4, and also members of the press including The Examiner, the Wall Street Journal and The Guardsman have been invited.

Successful Spring Festival — $680

The Spring Festival, which was presented by the Council of Organizations, was highly successful, according to Mary Anne Ducommun, Associated Student vice president and chairman of the council.

Miss Ducommun exphasized that there were 644 paid admissions at 25 cents each, and that $680 was collected from the 24 booths as well as from the admissions. In 1963 only about $400 was collected from the festival.

The Newman Club booth attracted the largest number of persons. They threw dimes attempting to make them land on plates and stuffed animals were awarded as prizes.

Ron (Rhonda) Hough, sponsored by Phi Beta Rho, won the queen contest. Other contestants and their sponsors were Tom (Tillie) Miller, Merchandising Club; Brian (Madame) Engle, Alpha Phi Omega, and Gordon (Gordina) Bernstein, Newman Club.

"In 1952 the college had its festival on the West Campus, where the south reservoir is now located," Miss Ducommun commented. She said that in the years after 1952 the festivals created a great deal of enthusiasm.

"If there had been a rally," Miss Ducommun explained, "more interest might have been generated, and the attendance increased."

Future Student Leaders Should Be Chosen After Careful Probe Of Minds Rather Than Hearts

EVERY SEMESTER when election time rolls around, The Guardsman campaigns for an unbiased, non-partisan election of candidates based on ability rather than favoritism.

Time and again the final election results have indicated that a majority of students used their "hearts" above their heads in voting. This is not meant to be a criticism of this very human failing. Human nature being what it is, there's not too much that can be done about it.

THE PRIVILEGE TO VOTE

However, there is one aspect of elections which students most definitely control, namely, the privilege to vote. Unfortunately, too many students feel that their responsibility as students ends as soon as they leave class.

Automatically extracurricular activities become something they choose not to dabble in. So who suffers? In an election, primarily, the candidates.

There are a great many reasons why students enter government. It is not an easy activity, but there are several rewarding compensations. For many, one of the things they seek is recognition, and rightly so. Every activity has its own awards and honors, and certainly student government is no exception.

Some of this recognition however, is left to the students to bestow on their colleagues at election time, for it has long been felt that students are in an excellent position to spot and judge leadership qualities and to vote accordingly.

BALLOTING A SERIOUS MATTER

Therefore, The Guardsman believes it is the duty and obligation of all students, to the candidates to whom these elections mean so much, as well as to the college itself, to give voting matters serious thought and study before casting their ballots.

Become acquainted with the candidates. Understand, question, probe and challenge if necessary their position on campus issues. Above all, do not accept them on face value.

Conserve the past. Preserve the present. Vote for the future.

SF State's Attempt To Balance Budget

By Mike Barber

LAST WEEK, at last, San Francisco State College officials announced that they were not accepting any more applications. With almost four times as many applicants as predicted openings, it seems that it was about time.

Of course, they had to wait to find out how much money would be allotted to them by the state and how many new faculty members could be recruited so that an enrollment ceiling could be set.

ACCEPT AND CULL

Also, not everyone who applies is eligible, so standard practice is to accept a lot of applications and cull out the unacceptable, admitting the rest on a first-come, first-serve basis.

However, is it necessary to accept 11,500 applications? SF State planned to make available spaces for 350 more new students than last semester's 14,850.

This, coupled with an expected turnover of graduating students and dropouts, leaves room for about 3000 admittances. Yet the college took in more applications than it presently has full-time students. Why?

At least part of the answer lies in the dealings between the state college system and the state government. SF State is required to give the state a certain amount of money each year, which seems rather contrary in itself.

STATE SETS AMOUNT

The amount of this remittance is set by the state for the upcoming year, and is therefore a quota which the college is required to remit. The source of this money is parking and application fees.

Parking fees are limited by the number of students with cars and the number of available parking spaces. But that non-refundable five dollar fee that must accompany every application for admittance is dependent only upon the number of students who, thinking that they have a chance for admission, may be induced to apply.

Governor Brown's budget for 1965-66 demands from SF State an estimated $26,500 more in parking and application fee remittances than the college thought it would take in.

Since this $26,500 would have to be paid for out of funds earmarked for instructional purposes if the fees aren't enough, it is no wonder that the college was hesitant about shutting off the application money as a source of income.

KISS THE FIN GOODBYE

As long as students are allowed to apply, the college (or the state, for that matter) is practically guaranteed a strong source of income. Most of those who applied to SF State this year will have to simply kiss their five bucks good-bye, and get another fin ready for next semester.

Unless a system can be found which doesn't take unfair advantage of a hopeful applicant's ignorant position, there seems to be nothing to keep future applicants from throwing their five dollars into the state college wishing well.

• Publicity Seekers

Editor, The Guardsman:

Today we have seen a demonstration of civil rights in reverse. For over a week an exhibit of units of the San Francisco Police Department had been planned as part of Public Schools Week.

This exhibit was for the benefit of all interested citizens, whose tax money goes to pay for such elements as the celebrated dog units. Students in the criminology department were also looking forward to this exhibit and so were many other responsible citizens.

This authorized and legitimate demonstration had to be called off, disappointing many because of the childish attitudes of certain members of our student body.

These persons have prostituted our precious rights, hard-won by our forefathers. Under the guise of "Free and Equal expression" they called what will probably go down in history as the world's most farcical attempt at a rally.

To begin with, these bearded demagogues attempted to perform crowd control and traffic functions which would have been gladly provided them had they chosen the lawful way.

They gathered several hundred people, and representatives of the news media, only to whisper a few words into a bullhorn and conclude the rally.

They had to accomplish their purpose however. I submit that these so called "reformers" are actually children seeking attention. They wanted to get their pictures on television. They care nothing about rights, and know nothing about law. Nor do they care to learn.

They treat our valuable rights as playthings and make mockery of justice. They penalize law-abiding members of the student community by causing long-scheduled activities to be suspended.

These are not the greatest crimes committed by R.O.C., however. By their inept handling of the rally in front of newsmen, they have shown themselves too immature to lead any movement.

Anyone watching their stuttering, stammering and indecision would receive a rather low impression as to the ability of City College students in general.

If R.O.C. was granted a so-called "free speech area," judging by today's performance, they would be incapable of using it without an interpreter.

• Rights Still Intact

Editor, The Guardsman:

I have been a student at CCSF for several semesters, and I must say that at no time have I felt that my "constitutional rights" were infringed upon or denied me.

I have never felt the need to come to school dressed in a loincloth or a suit of armor, nor do I wish to stand on a soap box and preach my political beliefs to others. Am I, therefore, apathetic?

I am attending CCSF for one reason alone, as I believe most of us are. My sole purpose is to earn enough credits to transfer into a four-year school.

Most of us are transients here, and because we are concerned with earning units and somewhat less inclined to spend time with various and sundry activities, certain new elements on campus have labeled us, "apathetic."

If apathy is synonymous with singleness of purpose, then I'm apathetic.

I have never at any time been treated as less than a gentleman by the faculty and administration, and I feel no more like an IBM number than a duck-billed platypus.

When I read the list of reforms presented by one of the new groups, I asked myself, "does the end justify the means?". I say no.

Even if the proposed reforms are as valid and important as the groups claim, and I doubt this, are they worth the damage that demonstrating for them can cause?

Do we want these reforms so badly that we are willing to risk our education for them? Are they so important that we're willing to fight the administration, and possibly cripple it, as in UC's case? I hope not.

If I considered any of the reforms presented thus far as essential to my well-being, I would certainly lend my support, but never would I go so far as to threaten the administration with injunctions, as one group has done.

As long as an element exists on campus which uses force to attain its goals, I will oppose it.

I must urge all students to think carefully before supporting such groups.

• Gas Is Gas To Peasant

Editor, The Guardsman:

William B. Edwards' letter in the April 28 GUARDSMAN demonstrates a typical writer's error of reasoning — confusing statistical "facts" with truth.

Mr. Edwards correctly asserts that the number of gas fatalities in the 1914-1918 war were exceedingly low. He neglects to explain that the mustard gases used in that war were intended to maim, not kill, their victims.

For every man killed in this type of combat, thousands were horribly maimed — their injuries usually internal, ugly and crippling.

As Mr. Edwards seems not to know, it is far more desirable to wound your enemy on the field of battle than to kill him, since a wounded soldier will tie up several others who must care for him. Mustard gas achieved this purpose, as Mr. Edwards' own statistics indicate.

While Mr. Edwards correctly describes the type of gas which was used on two occasions (both unsuccessful) in Vietnam, he shrugs off the fact that the average Asiatic peasant lacks his own familiarity with these weapons.

The layman's terms for "gas warfare" in the Vietnamese language, for example, draws no distinction between such lethal weapons as mustard gas (which is designed to cripple and maim) and non-lethal riot control agents of the "CN" and "DM" type.

The rice farmer who has not yet decided whether to give his loyalty to the Saigon government or to the so-called Viet Cong is likely to be swayed toward the enemy if he knows the U. S. is using any type of gas warfare.

I don't think we should have attempted gas warfare of any kind in Vietnam. Since it was tried, however, the United States overlooked a great opportunity for a propaganda success when the decision to use it was made.

If the use of nonlethal gas had been preceded by public announcements stressing the humane nature of CN and DM, and by an aerial leaflet campaign designed to convey this concern for humanity to rural Vietnam, our employment of these weapons would not have been greeted with worldwide disfavor.

The fact that these nonlethal gases were totally unsuccessful in Vietnam only adds to our national embarrassment.

Our Vietnam policy borders on the insane. The bombing of North Vietnam serves no military, political or economic purpose. Even if we should kill every man, woman and child in North Vietnam, we will continue to lose the war in the south until and unless we seek the support of South Vietnam's population.

Our tragedy in Vietnam is that we have 32,500 military personnel there who possess Mr. Edwards' masterfully cynical knowledge of modern weapons, while we have only a handful of people who know or care about the culture and problems of the Vietnamese people.

The Viet Cong control the countryside. They are South Vietnamese, and not invaders from the north. We can beat them, but not by emulating the conventional, set-piece military tactics of French generals Navarre and Cogny.

France's moment of truth in Vietnam came just 11 years ago this week, at a place called Dien Bien Phu.

Now that the Viet Cong have reached what North Vietnamese General Giap calls the "third phase of revolutionary warfare" — that is, operating in battalion and even regiment strength out in the open — we are repeating all the French mistakes and are headed inexorably toward our own Dien Bien Phu — at the Da Nang airfield.

By failing to offer the Vietnamese people a meaningful alternative to Communism, we have neglected the first rule of guerilla warfare as espoused in the textbooks of China's expert on the subject, Mao Tse-Tung: We are fighting without the support of the population.

Our failure to comprehend guerilla warfare, and to fight for the support of South Vietnam's peasantry, is particularly ironic in view of the fact that guerilla warfare was waged for the first time almost 200 years ago — at Lexington and Concord.

Student-Run Mission Adds Areas Of Help

By Hugh Haworth

THE STUDENT LEAGUE — a student-run "mission" for men and women who face the choice of staying in college or dropping out to find full-time employment if they cannot find a low-rent room, a part-time job or a few necessities of living — has taken on new developments.

Carl Mayberry, the student-director of the project who was a former day student here and now on the "night-time-side of City College," relates that the League has moved into a rent-free house donated by an understanding citizen of San Francisco.

This means wider opportunity is now available for helping those who are "walking poverty pockets" and must decide "between dinner and degree."

At the new address, 1060 Mississippi (phone VA 4-0397), seven areas of help are offered:

1. A room and bed for those in transient status. Mayberry clarified that this was for a week or two at the most.
2. Information on low-rent housing around the city.
3. Free dinners for those who cook their own meals and clean up afterwards.
4. Spot-job information.
5. Discounts on cultural activities such as the theaters, shows and on art supplies at certain stores.
6. A text-book exchange where students can phone or write in telling what books they want and need. Information would be coordinated for the trading of texts at lower prices.
7. A place for social gatherings like a Saturday night dance or get-together for chess playing, painting or sculpturing.

On this coming Sunday at 3 p.m. all interested parties who want to help out in some way are meeting at the Student League. Mayberry remarked that any new leadership that might come along in the organization is welcome, since he would like to give a little more time to pursuing his own education in graphic arts.

Stressing that the Student League is not affiliated with any religious or political organization, Mayberry noted several groups who were helping by donating food, clothing and blankets, as the American Friends Service Committee and the Volunteer Bureau of San Francisco.

And when the procedures are established in the League, grants may be made by the Ford Foundation or the Johnson Poverty Program. Even taxes on the property might be dropped if the state approves the nonprofit aims of the Student League.

"In talking to counselors," Mayberry said, "I found that many students were dropping out because of financial reasons. Most of society doesn't recognize the need of many of those not on the beaten track. Students who don't have a B- average or better can't even pick up a National Defense Loan, let alone a scholarship."

Battle For Words Turns To Battle Against Wind

Those hurricane winds that very rarely cease to sweep across the grounds of City College have presented somewhat of a problem for a politicogroup's plans for an outdoor speech area.

Whatever area the students acquire, the war of the winds will continue until either all of the words have been carried away by the breezes, or a windbreak is built. Are the Cloney brothers as handy with hammers as they are with readymix?

SAILING DAY! Perhaps one of the greatest experiences of a lifetime, a fabulous, carefree ocean voyage to far-away ports of enchantment begins when a young boy and his family, filled with excitement and anticipation, arrive at the pier, check in their luggage and proceed up the gangway.

"Welcome aboard the Monterey, sir," a smartly-dressed steward exclaims; "We hope your voyage will be a pleasant one. Now, your room number, please?" Receiving the wanted information, the young family follows the steward through the huge lounge and into a waiting elevator.

Down two floors, out the door and into one of the long corridors travels the steward. Finally stopping outside one door, the boy looks inside to a lavish yet warmly comfortable stateroom glorified by Polynesian motif.

Moving on to an adjoining room, the boy proudly surveys its magnificence for he knows that this is his!

The stateroom is full of cool, frosty coke and in his parents' room, bubbling champagne bubbles infiltrate the room's colorful atmosphere. The guests will soon be here to start the traditional beginning of any ocean trip, the Bon Voyage party of course.

Several minutes later, both rooms are filled with laughter, a few tears and hordes of cigarette smoke. "A little more champagne, my dear? Oh yes, charmed, I'm sure." And in the next room, the conversation is not so refined.

On into the afternoon the party continues until shortly after 3:30 p.m. when, a fast-walking steward moves through the corridors ringing small chimes and calling, "All ashore that's going ashore." Tearful goodbyes and last minute salutations fill the ship as visitors move ashore.

Moving out onto the open deck, the young boy and his family peer over the side of the huge white ship and amid showers of gaily-colored serpentine, wave and shout to friends and relatives covering the congested dock below.

Two blasts of the resonant liner's whistle and with the help of small, red-stacked tugboats, the Monterey moves slowly from the pier and out onto the bay.

Its surging bow is now ploughing through the blue Pacific waters and its course — ports of enchantment and stunning beauty.

Next week: Arrival — Tahiti!

Florists Win High Garden Show Honors

Nineteen students in the floriculture department brought home three first-place honors for City College from the Oakland Spring Garden Show which ended last Sunday.

City College also received three second-place and four third-place honors. A Swiss chalet, decorated with many flowers representative of Switzerland, received a second-place award for its structural design. Some officials of the Swiss consular staff assisted in the choice of flowers.

The show, which opened April 29 and ran for 11 days, was named Gardens of the World appropos of its theme, The United Nations.

The San Francisco Garden Club scholarship committee will be on campus today to interview the five candidates for the Alice Eastwood Awards. Recipients will be awarded a scholarship and a certificate.

Athletic Field Stage For Police Program

Police vehicles, equipment and police dog teams will take over the athletic field from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. tomorrow for a San Francisco police department program, Lawrence Lawson, criminology department chairman, announced.

Displays will be set up and will feature latent fingerprinting techniques, samples of tools, weapons, bad checks and other evidence collected by the police.

"A highlight of the show will be the police dogs, which should interest all students and faculty members. Dog maneuvers and their use in police work will be the main points of interest," Lawson said.

"Those students interested in police work and those interested in better law enforcement should find this College Hour to their liking," Lawson added.

College Alumnus, Ex-GI Earns Recognition As S.F. Reporter

By Bea Takeuchi

By-lines are a trademark with Bill Boldenweck, reporter for the San Francisco Examiner.

Boldenweck is known for his skillful reporting of major headline stories. His work is usually identified by his by-line, be it coverage of the Coast Guard leaving for Vietnam from Pearl Harbor, or other equally vital stories of the times.

When this nation became involved in the current Vietnam crisis, Boldenweck was assigned to cover the big story. He made the front page.

"It was quite a day. The photographer and I covered three stories in one day, and we spent a lot of time driving back and forth from one airport to the other.

"Right after breakfast, we motored all the way to Travis Air Force Base and saw the coffins of the first group of 12 people killed in Vietnam. Being confronted by those bodies was the most harrowing part of the day.

"Then we drove to another airport to get a story of the dependents and more casualties," Boldenweck related, adding, "my photographer and I covered three stories in one day."

MARINE FOR 18 MONTHS

War is not new to Boldenweck. He served 18 months as a Marine Corps infantryman. During the Korean conflict he landed at Inchon, Korea, and participated in combat.

After discharge from the Marines, he worked as an insurance clerk. "I couldn't stand it. I decided to return to school and by the wise counseling of Don Jensen, who was then at City College, I took journalism," Boldenweck said.

He was active in student government while here. He was elected President of the Associated Students and also president of the Northern California Section of the Junior College Student Government Association.

He received his A. A. degree in January 1955 and returned the following semester and served as News Editor of The Guardsman.

He entered San Francisco State College and soon became Editor of The Golden Gater. He was instrumental in persuading State's student officers to allocate funds for a daily newspaper, for when he was Managing Editor there, the college newspaper was published on a weekly basis.

After leaving San Francisco State College, Boldenweck worked for a small newspaper in Corte Madera, California. He was there only two months, then became a feature writer for the San Francisco Examiner in 1960.

FIRST BYLINE FOR H & R

Oddly, his first by-lined feature story was one about the Hotel and Restaurant department here. "Now my beat is the shipping, military and air transportation news," he said.

"I don't mind putting extra time into this job. It's the best job I've ever had, and I've done everything from truck driving and bartending to bus tour driving," Boldenweck remarked.

He is currently President of the San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild and does free-lance magazine periodical work.

Council Elects ROC Member To Vacant Seat; Hillsman Clarifies College Position

By James Rauh

Amidst the flaring of tempers, extreme differences of opinion and general chaos last week, a standing room only crowd of some 100 Student Council meeting onlookers witnessed the first legally sound step on the road of progress for Reform On Campus, as Doug Bianchi, a member of the controversial student party, was elected to fill a vacancy in the Student Council.

Bianchi's election came as much as a surprise to him as it did to those present at the meeting. For, as he stated in his brief qualification speech before the vote, "I am the one from ROC who has been causing so much trouble here in the past weeks."

As Bianchi took a seat with the council along with Chris Bilby, the other newly elected council member, a cheer came from ROC boosters.

After Terry Cloney, Associated Student president, had administered the oath of office to both men, Barbara Kontis, Recreation Association president, stood to read the recommendation reached as a result of the joint Student Council-administration-faculty ad hoc committee-ROC meeting held on May 3 concerning the requested outdoor free speech area on campus.

Miss Kontis' recommendation was as follows:

WHEREAS: 'A special interest group has expressed an opinion that there is a need on this campus for a designated "Hyde Park" or free speech area and

WHEREAS: The Student Council has, after due consideration of the matter, recognized a need for this area;

THEREFORE, Be it recommended to the President of City College of San Francisco, Dr. Louis Conlan, that a committee, as outlined at the meeting of May 3, be organized to proceed with a discussion as to the specifics of such an area.

BE it further recommended: That this committee, in deliberating upon the request of this special interest group, take into consideration the rights of those who may not wish to participate in, or be subjected to, such an area.

The recommendation was passed unanimously.

Council member Kathy Kidd then made the following proposal:

WHEREAS: The student group styled as Reform On Campus, herein after referred to as ROC, has attacked the Student Council as being subservient to the administration and incapable of decisive action; and

WHEREAS: ROC has ignored the channels of communication provided by the student government to obtain its demands; and

WHEREAS: ROC has exerted undue pressure on the administration to obtain its demands; and

WHEREAS: The tactics used by ROC to obtain its demands placed in jeopardy the good name of this college; and

WHEREAS: The administration of this college has not seen fit to refer this matter immediately to the Student Council; and

WHEREAS: The ad hoc faculty committee has ignored the Student Council in its considerations of this matter,

THEREFORE be it resolved: That this council does hereby censure ROC, the administration and the ad hoc faculty committee for the aforementioned.

The proposal was passed, 14-0-1.

Ron Cuddy, ROC supporter, declared, "The issue of the free speech area is a matter for the courts to decide, not the Student Council or the faculty."

It appeared that most of the ill-feeling of the council toward ROC concerned their by-passing the council as a means of presenting its free speech area requests to the administration.

There was just too much area to cover in the one-hour meeting, so many announcements and further discussion were postponed.

This was not true in the case of one bearded and bespeckled ROC advocate. Although the meeting had been adjourned and students were shouting and milling around him, he stood firm to scream an announcement which unfortunately only he was able to hear. So who needs peace and quiet to make an announcement?

Other matters of importance took place during last Monday's council assembly when Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, clarified the position of the college in the present state of turmoil.

In sketching a brief history of the college in political affairs, Hillsman described the appearance of Tracy Sims, ad hoc committee leader at a peace rally held in 1962.

"In 1962 our policy was the same as it is now," Hillsman said; "outside speakers had to obtain permission to speak on campus from the administration.

"Tracy Sims visited the campus to distribute leaflets and was asked to cease her activities because of the state regulations governing distribution of literature on the campuses," Hillsman explained.

"Also in 1962 the Cuban Peace Committee came to the college and became involved in many a heated discussion with students of Cuban parentage," he added, "but then, as now, President Conlan reiterated the rules of the Board of Education governing such matters.'

Hillsman then clarified the recent actions taken by President Conlan concerning ROC.

"After Dr. Conlan's trip to the east, he was faced with many other problems besides ROC," Hillsman explained, "such as organization of the faculty senate, new buildings and the hiring of instructors to meet the needs of the growing student body.

"An instant solution by Dr. Conlan was not possible," he said. "Time for discussion and consideration is to be taken by Dr. Conlan who plans to meet with ROC, disregarding the other problems he is burdened with.

"Until the change concerning the free speech area and other ROC requests can be put through legally," Dean Hillsman said, "the college is bound to uphold the existing regulations governing student politics."

One small occurrence which cannot be omitted from this report is that in which Stan Angel, Campus Activities coordinator, made a suggestion.

He requested that since there was to be no political campaigning at the council meetings, the members of ROC who were present should remove their campaign buttons. Cool move. They did.

Conlan Leans In Favor Of Free Speech Area

By Mike Barber

The possibility of outside free speech areas at City College was the subject under discussion when representatives of Student Council, Reform On Campus, and an ad hoc faculty committee met here with President Louis G. Conlan on the afternoon of Monday, May 3.

"I have studied the possibility of an outdoor free speech area. I have come to the conclusion that under the present provisions of the law, a free speech area is within the power of this administration," Conlan said.

Ernest Thalinger, ROC executive, said in his address, "We, as citizens first, and then students, think that we have rights and privileges guaranteed us by the First Amendment of the Constitution. We are trying to find the best way through which to exercise our rights."

Conlan suggested the formation of a committee to take care of specific details concerning the establishment of the area.

Three representatives of the faculty, to be chosen from the 13 ad hoc faculty members, and seven students, picked by Associated Student President Terry Cloney, will complete the Joint Committee on Outdoor Speech.

Cloney, speaking to the assembly, said he would choose five of the students from Student Council. Thalinger requested that the remaining two be chosen from the ROC party.

"Why must the two members come from ROC?" Conlan asked.

Instructor Ed Jordan of the ad hoc faculty committee offered that the "Hyde Park area is of interest to all students. ROC is an immediately interested group."

"I feel that I am being pressured into giving ROC two seats on the committee. I ask you, don't pressure me," Cloney protested.

Cloney assured the representative that Student Council would give the matter its attention at its meeting on Wednesday, May 5. The meeting was then adjourned and tentatively set to meet again on Friday, May 7.

The two-hour long discussion was tape recorded. Students interested in listening to the tape will find it available in the audio-visual aids library in Cloud Hall, room 239.

Rams Reflect—Tough Season

STANDING AROUND, in one of their rare moments of inactivity, the above 1965 version of the Ram baseball club reflects a feeling of relative contentment, as shown by their unharried countenances. The expressions seem to reiterate the timeworn but meaningful—and possibly the only—explanation of their final standings in baseball—tough season. The members of this team are, starting with the back row, from left to right, Coach Ernie Domecus, Ralph Mayer, Ron Fassler, Greg Sinclair, Bob Farmer and Murray Jacobs. In the middle row from left to right, Henry Scott, Mike Dunne, Barry Carli, Bing Kunzig, Wayne Chess, Bob Lee. Rams Close Season With Foothill Split, 9-12 Record

By Bob Lee

The Ram baseball team closed out the 1965 season by winning two of their last six ball games and finishing up with a 9-12 record.

On May 8th the Rams closed out the year by splitting a pair with the second place Foothill Owls, 5-4, 3-7.

The first game went a marathon 14-innings and both starting pitchers, Bob Lee and Brian Winnovich, went the entire route.

The Rams led 3-1, with two out in the eighth, but Lee walked two men and one of them stole third. With runners on first and third the Owls attempted a double-steal and the ball was kicked into centerfield scoring one run and advancing the other runner to-second. The next batter singled to left and Murray Jacobs threw a perfect strike to Catcher Mike Dunne but to the astonishment of all concerned, the runner was called safe at the plate!

The Rams won it dramatically in the 14th when pinch-hitter Ralph Mayer singled home Biff Barnes. Lee gave up 8 hits and his Foothill counterpart, Winnovich, who was tough all the way, gave up 19 hits!

On April 28th the Rams' squad lost a close one, this time to Diablo Valley College, 3-1. The defensive gem of the game and the call of the season happened in the eighth inning with the Rams trailing, 3-1. With one out Barnes singled and so did pinch-hitter Lee. Barry Carli then slammed a 350 foot drive to left-field and the left-fielder bobbled the ball and fell to the ground, but retained possession of the ball. Barnes, in the meantime had gone halfway to third, but after the fantastic catch, he had to go back to second and tag up and advance to third.

The base umpire then declared Barnes ont for tagging up too soon, and this killed the Rams final rally of the day.

On May 1st conference champions San Jose came to town and swept a twin-bill from the Rams 3-1, and 2-0. Ram pitchers Ken Dyer and Lee gave up one earned run between them in 16 innings but the Ram bats were silent all day.

On May 4th the Rams traveled to Contra Costa and dumped the Comets, 12-7. Henry Scott paced all hitters going 3 for 4 including a home run.

October 1 will find the Rams at home against San Joaquin Delta; October 8, at home against Foothill; October 15, home against Chabot.

On October 22, the Rams travel to Merritt College, October 29 to present champion, Contra Costa.

November 5 sees them home against San Mateo, November 12 home against San Jose and finally on November 20 against Diablo Valley at Diablo Valley.

The coaching staff will be composed of Elston, head coach, Alex Schwarz, line coach, Ernie Domecus, assistant line coach, and Larry Lawson.

Fencers Take Two Places In UC Meet

Second and fourth places were taken by Ram fencers Gerard Esponda and Vincent Nocon at the Northern California Intercollegiate Fencing Association meet at University of California at Berkeley May 1.

San Francisco State College, Stanford University and City College were among those competing in the event which, according to Esponda, lasted ten hours including a 90 minute break for lunch.

The meet was divided into three segments; the preliminaries, in which Esponda won first place; the semi-finals, where he took second place, and the finals, the deciding match in which he placed second again.

Esponda said that he lost to All-American fencer Joaquine Wolfe of Berkeley by three points. He compensated for his disappointment, however, by beating the Western Intercollegiate Fencing League champion, University of California's Michael Small.

This, in effect, means that Esponda defeated the best fencer west of the Rocky Mountains.

A freshman here, Esponda has been fencing for two and a half years.

In a short period of time he managed to become classified as a B fencer. The importance of this can be recognized, according to Frances Galloway, fencing coach, by the fact that even experienced fencers find it an honor merely to be eligible for classification; Esponda is one letter away from the highest class.

In addition, he is eligible for the national competition to take place at the University of California in Los Angeles June 26.

Grid Practice To Begin August 28

With the completion of their last football meeting which is slated for next week, members of the Ram grid squad will be ready to plunge directly into the preseason football practice to begin August 28, Coach "Dutch" Elston announced today.

"This football meeting will include a gathering of all new men plus returning lettermen," Elston said.

The Rams will open the season at Los Angeles College Saturday, September 25.

Other contests and their dates on the schedule are as follows:

Cindermen Clash In Trials Saturday For Positions In NorCal Finals Next Week

By Ivan Temes

With seven individuals entered in addition to a pair of top-notch relay quartets, the Ram tracksters will have to come up with some outstanding performances in Saturday's Northern California trials set for 1 p.m. at Modesto if they are to earn a sizeable representation in the Northern California meet the following Saturday at Foothill.

The trials which are comprised of the best men from each North State league, including the top six finishers from each event in the Golden Gate Conference meet, will send its top cindermen on to the finals next week which, in turn, will send the highest four in each event to the State meet, May 29, at Modesto.

Though the Rams, minus Bob Prince and Lee Benton in events they had a chance to win, are no threat to San Mateo for team honors, they still rate a shot at first-place in several areas.

Local coach Lou Vasquez feels, "Our best chances for winning should be with our relay teams." The Rams boast the best mile-relay mark in the North this season, 3:17.7, and their 41.5 440-relay time ties them with Fresno as co-favorites, though the Valley club won an earlier duel by inches.

Unless the injured leg of Benton, local 440 record-holder, responds, the mile entry will include Prince, Rod Coleman, Sonny Johnson and Chris Davis with Vern Bradford replacing Johnson in the 440-relay. A 440 victory would be a repeat since last year's quartet which included Bradford won with a 42.3 mark as the Red and White finished sixth in team scoring.

Prince, though eliminated in the 100-yard dash despite a pair of 9.7 clockings this year, rates an outside chance in the 220 where he is entered along with Davis.

Despite the absence of Benton in the quarter-mile, Davis' 49.2 qualifying time makes him a threat against a field which also includes Coleman.

Distant aspirants include half-miler Chris Ferrigno with a 1:58.5 high this year, and vastly-improved miler Rick Klemmer whose third place 4:20.5 in the Golden Gate meet keeps his chances alive.

Ferrigno, however, will be up against the likes of 1:51.9 880 competitor Ray King of American River while Klemmer's opposition includes the heralded duo of Ralph Likens, a 4:12.2 runner, and Marcel Hetu, both from San Mateo.

Johnson and Leroy Woods are each entered in a pair of events. In addition to the relay, Johnson goes in the 120-high and 330-intermediate hurdles while Woods competes in the triple-jump and high-jump, where an earlier 6-7 leap gives him an excellent chance to qualify for further meets against opposition like Foothill's Max Lowe, already a 7-foot jumper this season.

Duffers Lose Top Conference Slot To Jags In Finale

City College golfers, who won only one match last year, were edged 19-11, by the San Jose Jaguars for the 1965 Golden Gate Conference Golf championship on the last day of April.

Coach Grover Klemmer commented after the match, "This team is the best bunch of shooters I have had in years. They played a very fine game."

The Jaguars, however, were slight favorites in the match because of their advantage of playing on their home course.

Every one of the Rams shot in the seventies, but so did the San Jose golfers. Jim Schroder, number one man on the Ram golf ladder, shot a 74 as compared with his counterpart, Jess Vaughn, who went aronnd the course in 76 strokes.

The next two Rams, Tom O'Kane and Ron O'Conner, were defeated by their Jaguar opponents, Gil Bennett and Randy Astrella, 73-77, and 74-76.

Mike Soden came back to help the Rams by scoring a 75, one stroke more than Jag Bob Chaffin's 74 score.

Among the two squads' number 5 men, Larry Rupo of the Jaguars nicked Mike Butler, 74-75.

This championship marked the first time since 1957 that the Rams have had a chance at the golf title. In that year, the Rams lost to College of San Mateo.

The last time the City College golfers won a title was in 1954; the squad was then led by Hall of Fame nominee Eugene George.

At the end of last year's golf season, coach Klemmer stated, "If the same men return next year (1965), the team has very good potential and we might be a contender."

The Rams' two top men, Schroder and Soden did return, and they received great help from O'Kane, O'Conner and Butler.

Although the City College golfers lost the title match to San Jose, they are still the most improved team this year.

Monday, May 17, the Rams will send representatives to the State Tournament in Central California.

Freshmen Add One More Victory To Undefeated Record

The undefeated Freshman team of the club league, playing without the help of league high scorer Willie Wise, made one more team a victim to their onslaught of powerful basketball in last week's Associated Men Student-sponsored intramural competition.

In scoring what was actually their lowest one game tally of the season, the Freshman team still racked up almost twice the points of the Newman Vikings in a 40 to 21 whitewash.

That same night, May 4, another team continued its infamous waltz to a perfect record. The non-existent Guardsman team, or the five-minus-two, forfeited in favor of the Filipino-American club.

Meanwhile up the street in the women's gymnasium, the Ram Ski Club outplayed the H&R to hoop the better part of a 63 to 49 tally.

In the only fraternity league game Alpha Phi Epsilon was victorious against Beta Tau in their 59 to 35 tilt.

Last Wednesday's action was dominated by what AMS vice president, Stan Angel, terms as "the midterm slump." A lack of complete teams materializing to compete resulted in two forfeits.

The Mice, with two (whole) players, won by forfeit against the not present Chancellors. Likewise, Alpha Phi Sigma won via forfeit against Zeta Phi Sigma.

The Do Humps scratched a mark in the win column in a 77-53 war with the NBA Rejects. Sixty-two points were three times ample for the Irish in opposing the Chief's mere 18-point tally.

Netters Look For Upset In NorCal

Big time tennis will arrive here this weekend when the Rams offer their home grounds for the Northern California Regional Tennis Championships.

Fred Suessman, who in this tournament a year ago made the biggest news by upsetting number three seeded Dale Macgowan, will be one of the Red and White representatives in the singles competition along with rookie star George Pontikoff.

Doubles combination of Suessman-Ben Levy could come up with the big surprise this year since they proved themselves able to play in big company. They barely lost the Contreras-Kurber during the Conference tournament at Diablo Valley May 1.

The team as a whole finished second behind Foothill in last year's tournament.

The weekend of May 21 and 22 will see the locals take to the road and journey to the "Smog City" for the State finals.

Eight Ex-Ram Greats In Race For Two Hall Of Fame Spots

Eight ex-Ram athletes will be on the ballot this week for the annual selection of City College of San Francisco's Athletic Hall of Fame.

Of the eight nominated, two will be selected to the Hall of Fame for 1965 by a committee of four judges: Bill Fischer, counselor, Jack Gaddy, athletic director; Tom Wilson, health department, and Dean Ralph Hillsman.

Players must have left the college at least two years before they can qualify for this honor.

Nominated this year are Bob Farber, Frank Gable, Eugene George, Ernest Ibarra, Jim Lynch, Tom Pigee, Bill Sakovich and Bob Tealer.

Farber (baseball 1959-60) led the 1959 and 1960 baseball teams in hitting with a remarkable .422 batting average. He was a member of the All-Conference squad in 1960 and was also chosen as the Rams' Most Valuable Player.

Gable (baseball 1961) led team in batting with a .444 batting average. He also led the team in doubles and triples and was chosen as the Rams' Most Valuable Player. He was selected All-Conference third baseman.

George (golf 1953-54) number one man of the Rams' championship squad in 1954. He placed first in the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate championships and was also second medalist in the 1953 State Tourney.

Ibarra (football 1956-57) was All-Conference tackle in both years and All-American two-year college tackle in 1957. He was chosen Most Valuable Player in 1957.

Lynch (soccer 1959-60) was the leading scorer on the college's soccer championship team in 1959 and again in 1960. Lynch was a member of the Northern California Intercollegiate Conference team in 1960.

Pigee (football 1960-61) led the 1960 and 1961 football teams in rushing with 675 yards in 1960 and 742 yards in 1961. His average gain per carry was 7.4 yards. Pigee also led the 1961 squad in scoring with a total of 70 points. He was a member of the All-Conference team both years he played. In 1960 the Rams chose him as Most Valuable Player, and in 1961, he tied for the honor of The Back Of The Year.

Sakovich (swimming 1960) was the college's second All-American swimmer. In 1960 he set the Ram marks in the 100 and 200 backstroke, and was selected as the Most Valuable Player.

Tealer (basketball) All-Conference forward in 1957. He scored 46 points in a single game at the 1957 State Tourney, and in that year was the team's top scorer with 375 points.

College Theater Turns Elizabethan As Shoemaker's Holiday Opens Tonight

By Art Rodriguez

The Shoemaker's Holiday, directed by drama instructor Walter Krumm, opens a four-night run at 8 p.m. today in the college theater with Al Hughes in the role of Symon Eyre leading a cast of 35 members.

Set against the background of Henry V's French wars, the three-fold plot recounts Simon Eyre's meteoric rise from shoemaker to Lord Mayor of London.

The gay and lusty Elizabethan musical comedy will be a very elaborate production. Members of the cast, as well as ushers, musicians and dancers, will be fully costumed in the style of the Elizabethans. There will be several dancing and musical interludes to coordinate and highlight the action of the play.

John Mann, a City College music major, has combined several Elizabethan pieces and has composed some original scores for use in the production.

"The music will be provided by four recorders, forerunner of the flute, and a guitarist," Mann said.

The recorder players will be Judy Winters, Roger Christiansen, Edna Brandt and Bob Olstad. Anna Einhorn will play the guitar.

"This production has taken a tremendous amount of cooperation of all involved," commented Anne Crichton who plays the part of Sybil in the play.

The set was designed by Victor Vaio, technical director of the drama department, who was assisted in its decoration by art instructors Jess Hover and Paul Crowley.

William Grothkopp from the music department arranged the vocal numbers and Cynthia Barrel of the physical education department has worked with the dancers in the creation of an authentic Elizabethan Morris dance.

Hughes, who is participating in his fourth play at the college -- he is best known for his portrayal of the Father in Winslow Boy -- said of his role, "Simon Eyre is an exciting role, the type an actor enjoys doing because it is fun. It is also very challenging."

"We expect to have a large turnout for the play," Krumm said, adding, "a special display of color and black and white pictures of the drama performances of the last two years will decorate the theater lobby, along with a scale model of the Elizabethan stage."

The play will run through Saturday, and tickets for all performances may be obtained from any of the drama or English instructors or at the Silver Pole, Krumm said. There will also be tickets on sale at the door. The price of admission is $1; Associated Student members will receive free admission.

Employers Hire One-Third Of Business Day Applicants

By Greg Frazier

Approximately 35 per cent of some 200 graduating students interviewed here were hired on the spot last Wednesday during the tenth annual Business Recruitment day.

At a breakfast in the Statler wing, Joseph A. Amori, placement director and program chairman, launched the day's activities by introducing members of the administration and special guests.

Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, explained the role of the two-year college in preparing students for university work, and stated facts concerning the college enrollment and curriculum.

Guest speaker Ted Saenger, assistant general manager of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph, emphasized the debt that business owes to education.

"Over $160 million is given annually by business in the interest of education," Saenger said. "Business and education must be linked in partnership."

Saenger, quoted from an article which appeared in the Wall Street Journal stating that only 26 per cent of all high school graduates choose business as a career, and that only 14 per cent of last year's Harvard graduates elected to enter into big business.

The article also stated that many college students frequently express the opinion that the business world would be an intellectual Siberia. Saenger said, "We are looking for persons who don't want to be part of any intellectual Siberia."

After breakfast, and a group picture outside Smith Hall, the assemblage went to Cloud Hall to meet students in 15 minute interviews.

Each representative had personal and scholastic data concerning the student to be interviewed as well as an evaluation sheet made out by the student's major instructor.

Trade Group Dance To Honor Foreign Exchange Students

The eighteenth International Ball will be presented Saturday starting at 9 p.m. by the Junior World Trade Association of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, Joseph Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here, announced today.

A few bids are still available and can be purchased in S-155, Jacobsen said.

The ball will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, climaxing activities of the Golden Gate World Trade and Travel Week.

The program will honor the Foreign Commercial Consular Corps, World Traders and students from abroad studying in the Bay Area.

Miss International Student Queen of the ball will be presented by B. T. Rocca Jr., acting president of the association.

Entertainment, under the direction of Jacobsen, will be provided by foreign students enrolled in Bay Area colleges.

Invitations admit one couple for a dollar donation, and black ties are optional.

Choir On Campus For Two Shows

Two choral concerts will be presented in the theater, one at 8 p.m. next Tuesday and the other during College Hour Thursday, May 27, according to William Grothkopp, choir director.

"These concerts are free, and everyone is invited," Grothkopp emphasized.

Among the selections to be sung by the Chamber Choir, Grothkopp said, will be Alma Redemptoris Mater by Palestrina, Adieu Sweet Amarillis by Wilbye, and To Yonder Lovely Grove by Janequin.

Grothkopp explained that the choir will sing Gloria by Poulenc with Jackie Reed the featured soloist, and Robert Sheldon at the piano. "Accompanied by strings and oboes, they will sing Utrecht Jubliate by Handel," Grothkopp commented.

Richard Fenner, Women's Choir director, said that the group will sing I Hear A Harp, by Johannes Brahms, and will be accompanied by Myron Mu on French horn.

Conlan Approves Area For Student Speakers

President Louis G. Conlan approved committee recommendations made Friday "that a supervised area near the Ram be established for impromptu meetings of students."

Only City College students may use this podium, and permission to speak in the area is to be obtained through the office of the Dean of Men and Activities in S-148.

Concurrently the arrest of four off-campus agitators and the suspension of Active Campus Today leader, Ron Cuddy, climaxed an unauthorized rally at the Ram last Friday.

Arrested were Eugene Peters of San Francisco State College, Hugh Naimis, a local free-lance writer, Tom Freel, State's leader of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, and Al Kutchinsky, also a student at State and affiliated with SNCC.

Tackling the problems of deciding what site would be used and what regulations shall govern such use are representatives of the administration Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management; Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of men and student activities, and James Wyatt, student government adviser.

Representing the college faculty are Edward Taylor, committee chairman, William Bell and Edward Jordan. Associated Student President Terry Cloy has appointed himself, Barbara Kontis, Kathleen Kidd, Joe Sullivan, Jim Doudiet and Doug Bianchi, and ROC executive Ernest Thalinger as student members.

In the first two meetings, held Monday and Wednesday of last week, it was decided that a formal committee should be organized to handle the eligibility and scheduling of speakers. It was suggested that the existing student-faculty relations committee determine speakers for the area until a formal committee is decided upon.

Eligibility of speakers for the Hyde Park area was considered. Qualification requirements indicate that speakers need only be enrolled at the college and have requested of Dean Hillsman the time at which they wish to speak.

Recommendations concerning the placement of the area centered around the ROC proposal that the area around the Ram be given preference.

Proceeding cautiously, an administration representative reminded the committee to beware of "traffic dangers involved with the area."

The committee is continuing its deliberations.

Sweeney Wins By 154 Votes As Party Sweeps 17 Offices

By Karen Carlson

Dennis Sweeney of the United Student Representative Party secured the Associated Student Presidency in elections held here last week.

A forty-five per cent increase in the number of voters over last semester's 1297 was noted as 1761 students turned out at the polls.

USRP captured 17 of 20 offices, repeating the Students Representativc Party feat of last semester.

Sweeney edged Alex Hing of Reform On Campus in the presidential race, capturing 943 votes as compared to Hing's 789.

Sweeney's margin was 154.

Sweeney commented on his election, "I would like to express my gratitude to the student body for placing confidence in my capability to lead our student government.

"I feel voting for USRP's candidates has expressed the desire for an orderly and democratic government.

"My primary objective as President will be to work diligently toward resolving the issues presented during the campaign. I would also like to see increased active participation in student government, and I will direct my efforts toward rallying interest in student affairs.

"Furthermore, I would like to remind you that this is your government, and the officers elected by you are here to speak for you.

"In conclusion, I again would like to thank all those who voted in this election."

ROC managed to gain a foothold in student government as three ROC candidates won Sophomore Council seats in the only other contested race. They were Doug Bianchi, with 851 votes, John Becker, with 822, and Lincoln Pain, who received 809.

Other Sophomore Council members for next semester are USRP's Tom Cloney, with 968 votes, Jim Soletti with 924, Lynn Barker with 884, and Dorene Berkson with 802.

Unopposed candidate Barbara Kontis received 1167 votes in her bid for the AS Vice Presidency.

Also without competition in the election of the Presidents of Associated Men Students and Associated Women Students were Stan Angel and Mary Maurer, who received 1074 and 1101 votes, respectively.

USRP's Earl Braverman confirmed his membership on the 'top six' by receiving 1088 votes in his bid for the Sophomore Class presidency.

Mike Nygren will serve as next semester's Freshman Class President, having received 1067 votes. Both he and Braverman lacked opposition.

Freshman members of next semester's council, all of USRP, and their votes are as follows:

Percy Jones 1055, Bruce Fisher 1017, Eileen Cooper 1012, Chris Bilby 1010, Carol Craig 998, Karen Carlson 997, and Ernie Woodcock 961.

Defeated in their candidacies for Sophomore members of council were ROC's Hugh Haworth with 769 votes and Jerry Dresner with 704. USRP also-rans were Roy Boyd, 783, Elizabeth Lewis, 771 and Joe Buondelmonte, with 767 votes.

Soph Class Sets Annual Spring Ball For Saturday Night

Polka Dots and Moon Beams will be presented by the sophomore class in the form of a spring ball from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel.

According to Tom Cloney, Sophomore class president, the dance music will be provided by Maury Wolohan and his orchestra.

A coronation ceremony officially proclaiming the king and queen of the ball will take place at intermission.

The royal couple will be selected from a tall stack of copper pennies rather than a long line of blue-blooded ancestry.

The pennies, which represent votes for couples with aspirations to the throne, are being collected on campus now and will continue to be gathered up to 10 p.m. Friday.

Cloney stated that the monetary votes are to be added to the sophomore scholarship fund. He has hopes of making a sizeable amount of money through the contest. He said that in past contests up to $600 has been collected.

Among the couple entries are Jim Stull and Penny Brown, representing the Freshman Class; Mel Casali and Carol Anselmi, sponsored by the Sophomore Class, and John Wallace and Grace Amcral, sponsored by Alpha Kappa Rho.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Humiston, of the counseling staff, agreed to be sponsors at the ball, for which semi-formal dress is required.

Bids for the dance are available at the information booth in Science Hall or at Bungalow 5. They are free with an Associated Student card and $2.50 a couple for those without a card.

New Leaders Must Prove Equal To Responsibilities Of Office

HOW DOES ONE measure the merit of a person? Unquestionably it's hard to do, but there are many accurate yardsticks with which to judge.

One quality of a man can be ascertained by asking him a controversial question. Will he answer it truthfully, in a straightforward manner, or will he dodge the issue and change the subject?

The candidates in last week's student election didn't dodge the timely campus issues and now to the victors belong the opportunity of proving themselves in a difficult capacity.

A DIFFICULT TASK

Their task will not be an easy one. It will require much patience and hard work to carry out the many duties and responsibilities which these government positions entail.

Instead of looking out for the welfare of one particular campus organization, everything must be viewed from an impartial and impersonal standpoint.

Above all, the newly elected owe a debt to the students whose votes they campaigned for and secured. They also owe a debt to the college to present and enforce the strongest measures deemed necessary to keep the campus solely as an institution of higher learning.

As custodians of the law, they should set an example for the student body. At all times they should exert tact and extend respect in their dealings with administrative officials.

STRONG PERSONS IN STUDENT GOVERNMENT

The need for strong persons in student government who are fully aware of what is going on around the campus, and who will put the best interests of the student body first is essential during these crucial times.

What lies ahead for the new officers is hard to predict. In a chaotic world it is necessary for the sake of growth and progress to find something secure and durable evolving solely for the benefit of mankind.

Generally speaking, this should be student government.

• Gun Problem

Editor, The Guardsman:

The recent Ramblings column (May 5) in The Guardsman sports page by Sports Editor Mike Smith was one of the most irresponsible articles I have read on the subject of gun regulation.

The writer dismissed the idea (and refuses to believe) that crime with guns can be controlled — the Sports Editor acts like he wants to give up. Well, I am not ready to give up — I am willing to try something — anything — to make life in this nation better for all people.

Some decades ago, we had great trouble with liquor, and we still do, so we tried to do something about it by enacting prohibition — and it failed miserably. But now we know what without work because we have experimented.

Mike Smith implies that gun lists might end up in the hands of dictatorships that want to take this nation over, but the countries he used for examples in his column were not the United States — they did not know our form of government. The Sports Editor seems to be looking for the hidden danger that does not exist. He also fears that our guns might be taxed. I would like to ask him this question. Is a little more money more important than the safety of our streets and our presidents?

However, he does admit that something should be done about gun crimes but his ideas — what there was of them — are too "soft."

One of his arguments concerning regulation of guns was that it would be different from the simple and non-discriminating registration of automobiles. How does he arrive at this conclusion?

I suggest that the Sports Editor continue writing sports and stay out of political science. He almost sounds like a minuteman which I am very sure he is not because his column did show some signs that he attempted to deal with the problem fairly — but he missed two points to the real problem.

The ever increasing acts of violence with guns and the growing armies of right-wing-groups are the real dangers to our country, and it must be stopped by a strong gun-regulation law.

Seemingly human nature has within itself a natural mechanism for drawing analogies. As with all natural things this mechanism has possibilities both for good and for bad. This mechanism, when exhibiting its possibility for good, has had great value for humans and their growing civilization.

For example, the invention of the wheel could well have resulted from this mechanism being used while watching a log roll down a hill. Many men have saved their lives by drawing an analogy when faced with a danger-

Feeding Time In S-307 Open To Public Monday Mornings

By Eugene Rosendahl

Menu today: Meal Worms - wiggling. Frog Meat - diced. Dandelions and Poppies - open face. Fruit Flies - swarming. Mice - running. Tree Frogs - croaking. Lettuce - tossed lightly.

It sounds like rather a grim menu, except to the slinky devourerers who daily subsist on it.

The epicureans referred to are the reptiles and other amphibians residing in the biology storeroom, ranging from a boa constrictor, shown recently in the window display, to a five-legged freak red frog, who is suffering from a condition known as erythrism, a disease causing the red skin color to become greatly accentuated.

THE CHEF

Menu planner, caretaker, and the procurer of this growing collection is Robert C. Drewes, student lab assistant, whose "table guests" apparently never heard the old adage, "never bite the hand that feeds you!"

Drewes has been subjected to some of these strange "thank you for the meal" gestures by his daily guests but enjoys the unusual pastime of caring for these animals.

At the end of last semester, Drewes officially started the collection with the boa, a specimen he previously had kept at home with his private collection, until forced to "evacuate it from the premises," by his wife who would put up with the other reptiles but "not one that eats live mice."

After contributing the boa to the reptile collection here, making a total of two, the other, a Pacific rattlesnake owned by Charles Steward, biology instructor who has had the specimen around the college for almost seven years, Drewes was encouraged by other instructors to enlarge on this "cold-blooded menagerie."

Now, the biology storeroom not only houses the boa, the rattlesnake and the red frog, but also many other specimens.

There are three iguanas, one that has to be force-fed by Drewes and an assistant, Judy Winters. There are also a black African armadillo lizard and a baby caiman.

THE ROMANCE

Western toads, unleashers of a voracious appetite, consume more than half the meal worms eaten by the animals in the "zoo." There is a small turtle collection that includes red eared turtles, and two African clawed frogs of opposite sex that Drewes hopes will eventually breed when the ideal environment for reproduction is simulated.

A chuckawalla, a fearsome looking lizard who relishes flowers as a diet, prefers dandelions and poppies, and of course there is a garter snake that keeps down the growing number of tree frogs that are raised in the storeroom.

BREAKOUT

The garter snake holds the escape record by getting out twice. The last time Drewes found him in Science Hall during Easter vacation. "A very wily individual," Drewes commented.

Money-wise, the only output for food is the monthly order for 3000 meal worms, costing $6, from a firm in Los Angeles known as the Sure-Live Meal Worm Company . . . that's the real name.

The rest of the menu is cost free, for the lettuce comes from the trimmings at grocery stores, the mice are drafted from the stockroom in the from the genetics class, and the frogs that have been disected by students in the science labs solve the "high cost of meat" problem.

There is room for new specimens in the collection, and students with a likely candidate are encouraged to seek out Drewes in the biology storeroom located on the third floor of Science Hall. "Contributions will be appreciated, especially in the turtle tank," Drewes commented.

The boa has received considerable attention by passers-by, so Drewes announced for students who are interested in the feeding of the boa that boa feeding time is Monday between 11 a.m. and 12 noon.

NEVER PET SHEDDING SNAKE

"He is now just eating live mice since he is only seven months old," Drewes said, "but as he grows we will feed him live rats; incidentally, he is very docile, an excellent pet, except during shedding, when he cannot see very well, and may strike."

The menu remains unchanged for tomorrow. . . .

If Haworth Were Ruler Of The World

By Hugh Haworth

IF THIS columnist ruled the world, he would have President Johnson and Mao go to a little, clapboard school house on the 17th parallel to learn Esperanto. They may go armed if they please.

Also, he would mediate between the proletariat and the bourgeois to organize a permanent picnic plan where both could meet on Sunday each week after church and have a fun day together. The proletariat would foot the bill, and the bourgeois would take the cooking and clean-up committees.

Moreover this writer would set a precedent in appointing a Swahili-speaking United States president for the betterment of relations with the African Continent.

There would be nothing he couldn't solve. He would have the Indians and the Pakistanis come together in order that they might devise another game along the lines of China's Go. All three countries could jointly sell their two products around the world for big capitalistic profits.

In all his power, this writer would heal Malaysia's Rahman. Rahman could then, without his glaucoma, see Sukarno to settle matters. And likewise, Sukarno would be treated passionately to cure his liver ailment so he wouldn't be bilious toward Rahman.

Inspired, the author of this program would make the membership on the House Un-American Activities Committee appointive.

With this, he would select General Walker, Gus Hall, Dr. Martin Luther King and a man like the late Muslim Malcolm X to search out un-Americanism.

With supreme cunning, he would incite infiltration of Latin American insurrectionists into the United States. Over the years, as the Chinese have, the U.S. citizens would envelope these discontents and surfeit them with the American-way-of-life. Then retreating back to their own countries these rabble rousers would sell the U.S. free of charge.

In his omniscience this writer would nominate Count Marco as the most important man in journalism today for his gulding light to students of satire, who, before Marco, had hope for themselves.

But, since this columnist cannot do this all himself, he will have to resign this power to a world-accepted group who would be given the capabilities and respect that were Solomon's.

Above all, he would seek to find the group that could do this job, and the motivation in mankind to search for this with the means of communication and reason that would be needed for the task.

The world will never see one man fill the perfect bill for leader. It's the enlarged contribution of individual initiative that will combine for effective world leadership.

Controversy's Fate — Summer Oblivion?

By Mike Barber

THE ENTHUSIASTIC interest that has been generated on campus by the controversial actions of the new student groups is in danger of dying.

Apathetic students who did little more in the past than complain about apathy have felt the need to take a stand. They've had to evaluate the actions and proposed reforms of various parties and actively defend their views from the arguments of those around them.

As this semester enters its final few weeks, however, students will be forced to switch their concentration from political to academic matters.

Interest in reforms and outdoor has begun to pale and final examinations loom in the near future.

This is just the beginning of the hard times. The flagging interest of the students can hardly be expected to revitalize itself throughout the course of the long, hot summer. And only about half of those present now, this year's freshmen, will return to this campus.

These students will be the only ones able to recall vividly from their experience the battles that were hard fought and won by the reformers. The passing of time can only serve to cool the ardor of these returnees. This campus may find itself in much the same apathetic condition next semester that it began with this year.

If the new Student Council is to be truly as representative of the students as it claimed to be at last week's rally, then the students who are on campus next semester will have to care enough about their position to demand that this representation be used.

The life of the reforms instituted this semester will be dependent upon those who make use of them in the next. An outdoor speech area with no speakers has little more value than no speech area at all.

This year's freshmen have had the time to orient themselves toward the responsibilities of the college atmosphere. They, then, will be the ones who will have to be the real leaders, the major ball-carriers, in the Fall.

Meanderings

By Don Patten

ALL AFTERNOON the Monterey has left a wide path of foam as it makes its way slowly down the coast to Los Angeles. Slipping into the Southern California port at nine the next morning, the great white liner welcomes the remainder of its adventurers and that same evening again moves out onto the broad Pacific waters.

Eight days of sea-going luxury surround the young globetrotter and his family as the Monterey makes its way through the southern latitudes for its first port of call, Papeete, Tahiti.

TAHITI BECKONS

The sun rises above the horizon casting bolts of brilliance on the first landfall. Perched above the horizon like a massive jewel, Tahiti beckons all to its shores.

Securely moored to the dock, the neophyte traveler and his family step ashore amid the hustle-bustle characteristic of the quaint French atmosphere that is Papeete.

A tour of the island begins with an exploration of Papeete's byways of treasure-laden shops and cafes. Moving on, there is a visit to the famous hideaway of artist Gauguin and then the tomb of Tahiti's last King, Pomare V, historic Point Venus, Pierre Loti's Pool and the island of Moorea, Michener's exotic Bali Ha'i.

UNFORGETTABLE PARADISE

All along the way, the young wayfarers marvel at the unforgettable paradise of verdant hills and blue lagoons.

Inside the distant coral reefs surrounding the island, the waters remain tranquil and calm while outside these natural barriers, the mighty Pacific continues its merciless battering as it has done since time began.

Many times throughout the tour, the island wanderers have time to refresh themselves in the cool waters of a Tahitian pool, enveloped in dense jungle foliage and flowers of every color in the rainbow.

They say time stands still in these islands of paradise, but to the tourist, time has wings and soon, in the instance, the long, low drone of the Monterey's whistle signals departure.

SAILING TIME

Passengers rush back aboard, and the liner soon leaves Tahiti in the distance and once again, the leisure life at sea begins.

After a few days of travel, the Monterey raises Rarotonga, a small island in the Cook group, and for one day, circles the island while natives come aboard in outrigger canoes displaying their wares. No deep water harbor here so docking is impossible.

The next landfall is New Zealand with metropolitan Aukland as the specific destination. The neophyte travelers realize this city will be in sharp contrast to Papeete and eagerly look forward to arrival.

Forum Magazine Available June 1

Forum, City College's student-written annual literary magazine, will be available to students on June 1.

Al Pelligrini, editor of Forum magazine, said, "Approximately 130 contributions have been received which is about the normal amount."

An editorial staff has been sifting through the manuscripts in an effort to find the most readable material. The staff, under the advisership of Catherine Connolly, English instructor, critically reads each manuscript and gives comments and a grade to the paper. Works surviving the critical eye of this staff are possible candidates for publication.

Members of Pelligrini's editorial staff include Alastair Beattie, Judith Winters, Michael Foster and David Britten. "Without their hours of volunteer reading the literary publication would have been literally impossible," Miss Connolly commented.

"Others who have contributed valuable help are G. Frank Cooney and Sue Wilson," Pelligrini added. Cooney served as Forum's advertising manager. Miss Wilson is responsible for the cover design on this 1965 issue. A Dante scheme governed her design.

Students possessing Associated Student cards will be able to obtain the book free of additional charge. A token of 50 cents will be required for non-AS members.

Pelligrini and the staff expressed appreciation for the cooperation students have given this year in submitting material for the magazine.

Entertainment, Awards Set For Hawaiian Luau Tonight

A South Seas Shindig will be going on from 7 to 10 p.m. tonight in the activities room of the women's gymnasium. Otherwise known as a Hawaiian luau, the Recreation Association is sponsoring the seminnual affair for the purpose of presenting awards to its members.

Barbara Kontis, RA president, will introduce the managers of the various clubs and they in turn will present blocks, shields and stars to their members. The awards are given to deserving coeds who have maintained a 2.0 grade point average and have attended at least three-fourths of the association's meetings and functions.

First semester awards are in the form of shields, second, blocks and third and fourth, stars. Members have a wide choice of clubs in which to earn these, such as softball, basketball, folk, modern and social dance, fencing, swimming, bowling and volleyball.

The Hawaiian theme has been provided through the decorations, refreshments and entertainment planned. Ham, rice and Hawaiian salads will be served to the guests as they are surrounded by palm leaves, grass mats and pineapples.

Alan Viau, a student here, will be present to display his talent with a gong, as will Lynn Goodrich, a former Associated Student vice president who is now doing professional work.

Following the singing, a Philippine stick dance will be performed, after which three coeds here will dance a hula.

More Letters To The Editor

ous and unfamiliar situation. A list of the implementations of this mechanism for good use is probably endless.

So too is its implementation for bad use. The Dominican crisis is a recent example. For two weeks the A.P. carried sporadic reports of unrest in the Republic without any conclusions being drawn. With the sudden entrance of the military into the unrest and their demands for the return of the democratically elected, though exiled, President, Juan Bosch, it seemed that the analogy-drawing mechanisms of the CIA and of the Executive Staff jumped into gear.

Immediately the President dispatched troops to the island ostensibly to evacuate Americans but simultaneously they sided with the Air Force's Wessin y Wessin. They expressly were to aid him in remaining in power against the wishes of the Army and the majority of the Dominican people.

This action of not remaining neutral needed to be explained to the American and world public and therefore the non-documented accusation of Communist control was attached to the revolt. In that the CIA was caught off guard in 1958-59 and Castro was able to come to full power in Cuba, one can see how wary the CIA would be in Caribbean affairs.

Undoubtedly, as the unrest grew into a full rebellion, the CIA, lacking contacts with the leaders of the revolt, were faced with an unknown and dangerous situation.

With only their analogy-drawing mechanism to use for a quick decision the parallel to Castro was drawn even though no real documentation except the rumor of 58 Communists fighting with the 20,000 rebels comes from Washington and though many protestations of innocence are received from Bosch, the rebel leaders, and many Latin American scholars and diplomats, the intervention has crossed the Rubicon and the image of the United States must suffer as a result of the action.

The writer must now draw an analogy to political developments at City College. Here too the human mechanism has been at work with its possibility for bad. Students at the college were, a semester ago, exposed to week-in and week-out coverage of a movement on the Berkeley campus agitating for free speech.

Over the months the tactics of the movement invariably produced the pre-judgments of pro and con in every City College student to some degree at least. With this underlying schism of the student body, ROC enters into negotiations with the administration and into the AS elections. As soon as the first mention of "free speech" the schism over the FSM became a similar schism over ROC.

With knowledge humans need not depend solely on natural mechanisms and such is the case here at City College. My suggestion to all the students is to not feel as though faced with a crisis where quick analogies are demanded for survival but in a time that demands the most well-informed actions from all citizens.

To become informed as to what ROC is and how unlike the FSM it is, an interested student need only look over some of the leaflets handed out by the organization or by questioning someone at the ROC table on campus.

It is not unexpected that many will immediately turn back to their original prejudice but it is hoped that with more information many will also be convinced of, shall I say, a new prejudice.

Council Raises Inquiry As To Distribution On Campus Of Faculty Evaluation Pamphlet

By James Rauh

A question was raised at last week's sessions of Student Council as to the legality of a proposed pamphlet, to be distributed on the campus for a price, which would contain evaluations of City College instructors and courses.

The evaluating information would be compiled from the results obtained through a questionnaire given to the college students.

Thomas Allen, representing a private enterprise made up of students here interested in distribution of the pamphlets, asked for Student Council's support for an endorsement to circulate the questionnaire.

After distributing copies of the questionnaire to the Student Council, Allen explained, "The questionnaire consists of evaluations of instructors and courses, advising students as to the best possible courses to take.

"Courses would be judged on the basis of informativeness, reliability and quality," he said.

The point was raised that the issue under discussion was already under consideration by the student-faculty relations committee.

The subject was referred to a committee for further investigation as to its legality on the campus.

But, as last Wednesday rolled around, the committee had failed to look into anything. For as Nancy Hughes, head of the committee, stated, "It was not our place to investigate the legality of the issue if it is in the hands of the administration to decide."

LEGAL ADVICE GIVEN

Barbara Kontis, who had met with Irving Breyer, legal adviser to the Board of Education, related the gist of their meeting.

"Mr. Breyer recommended that the Student Council should not be involved with the legal aspects of the situation," Miss Kontis stated; "he asked if the students at City College really want this."

RESOLUTION COMMENDS

Miss Kontis introduced a resolution recommending commendation of Walter Potter, campus policeman, who on May 6 in Smith Hall was attacked by a trespasser whom he was escorting to the Campus Police headquarters.

Potter had two front teeth knocked out and a cut on his face as a result of the attack. He underwent surgery and is recovering in the hospital.

Miss Kontis asked also for commendation of Walter Johnson, maintenance man, who aided Potter following the attack.

This recommendation led to a lengthy discussion of whether or not to use the phase "speaking for the Associated Students" in the text of the resolution.

Student Council members finally decided that they do represent the Associated Students, and therefore would not be acting radically if they used the phraseology.

With the move of Doug Bianchi to vote on the recommendation, Student Council passed it, 14-0-0.

Chris Bilby moved, and it was seconded, that City College have a handbook which would contain all recommendations and resolutions passed by the Student Council, all rules affecting student affairs established by the Board of Education and the regulations of the State Board of Education governing the Associated Students.

Greg Moore climaxed the meeting by reading a statement issued by a "non-faculty college employee group" concerning its stand against the proposal for change in the regulations governing coed attire on campus.

Awards Banquet Will Feature Paul Speegle

Paul Speegle, Bay Area journalist, will be the guest speaker at the student government awards banquet, which will be held at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Statler wing, according to Mary Ann Ducommun, Associated Student vice president.

The banquet is held every semester in order to give recognition to students who have participated in student government and to those students and faculty members who have helped the government's officers in promoting their cause.

At this time, Miss Ducommun added, the new AS officers are formally sworn into office. In addition to the guest speaker, President Louis G. Conlan and other administration and faculty members will be present at the banquet.

Conlan Presides At June 3 Commencement

City College President Louis G. Conlan will preside over and be the principal speaker at the annual commencement awards assembly to be held in the college theater from 10 a.m. to noon, Thursday, June 3.

Nancy Hughes and Bernard Feldman are the two student commencement speakers chosen from among students with a grade point average of 3.5 or better who entered tryouts sponsored by the commencement committee.

Over 32 awards will be presented by Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator, division of instruction; Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal instruction; Mary Golding, dean of women; and Ralph Hillsman, dean of men.

Musical selections will be played by the college orchestra, led by Meyer Cahn, and two numbers will be sung by the Men's Glee Club. The two selections will probably be Landsighting, by Grieg, and Serenade, by Schubert, William Grothkopp, choral director, stated. Andrea Fulton will sing the contralto part in Serenade.

Dean Mary Golding explained, "President Conlan will give a formal address to the graduates, and the response will be given by Tom Cloney, president of the Sophomore Class, who will make requests for contributions to the scholarship fund, raised by the class of 1966, to be awarded to graduates in the Spring of 1966."

Honor students, award winners and parents will be formally invited to the assembly and the reception following that will be held in the horticulture center, Dean Golding said.

The reception will be sponsored by Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, and the hotel and restaurant department will prepare the refreshments to be served.

Free Speech, India-Pakistan Conflict And Education On College Hour Agenda

College Hour tomorrow will feature three discussion sessions sponsored individually by the Newman Club, International Relations Club and the Student California Teachers Association. They will take place in S-204, S-136 and C-260, respectively.

The Student Opinion Forum has been started by the Newman Club solely for the sake of student expression. Each week during College Hour, a new topic and guest moderator are presented to the audience of interested speakers and listeners.

J. N. Bhat, Consulate General of India in San Francisco, has been invited by the IRC to discuss the India-Pakistan problem. Joseph Jacobsen, IRC adviser, predicted that Bhat's talk will cover the historical background of the India-Pakistan separation, the Kashmir problem and the present problem along with its possible solution.

Two professors, Robert Moore and Robert House, from San Francisco State College, will speak on the subject of teaching credentials.

Moore's lecture, emphasizing elementary teaching, will be in C-260 and House will speak on secondary teaching in C-261.

Netters Tie Foothill Owls For North State Title 12-12; Suessman, Levy In Finals

By Tom Csekey

The Rams equalled Foothill's effort 12-12 as the two teams tied for first place in the Northern California Junior College Tennis Championships held on the Golden Gate Park tennis courts last Friday and Saturday.

This marked the first time since the Rams won the league title last year, that the Owls did not beat them out in a tourney.

The local duo of Fred Suessman and Ben Levy provided the 200 plus fans with plenty of excitement as they upset the second seeded doubles combination of Klyce-Creighton from Marin College 6-2, 6-1 in the quarterfinals. They followed up with a great match against the Diablo pair Bardsley-Saputo and pulled it out 6-4, 6-3 after being behind in both sets.

This granted them a ticket to the finals against Raul Contreras and Jeff Kurber of Foothill. The Owl stars showed the hometown favorites no mercy as they romped to a 6-2, 6-3 decision over the tired local combination.

Suessman was once more in the limelight as he upended one of the tourney favorites, Tony Bardsley of Diablo. It took the Ram three sets to accomplish his feat, but he copped the two final sets in order to emerge as a 1-6, 7-5, 6-0 victor. This put him in the semis where he bowed to finalist Alberto Olmedo from Modesto.

Olmedo in turn lost to Contreras in the finals after being out on top 5-0 in the second set. The Foothill ace had captured the first set 6-3 and settled for a 7-5 call in the second to take home the gold.

Ram George Pontikoff also made a name for himself as he upset another tonrney favorite Harvey Klyce from Marin in straight sets. Pontikoff also played doubles with Steve Jones where the two made it to the quarters, but in the bid for the semis, they faced Contreras-Kurber who beat the local pair handily 6-1 and 6-2.

Pontikoff in his semifinal match also ran into Contreras who was just too quick for the 28-year-old Ram rookie. Pontikoff afterwards said, "On every play he (Contreras) was half a step ahead of me."

Coach Roy Diederichsen mentioned that "my boys went quite beyond expectations and we all look forward to another great weekend at Fullerton." The State Championships will be held there next weekend and it looks as though the current trend will continue and this could mean top spot for the talent-filled Ram squad.

Every San Franciscan entering last weekend's engagement qualified for the state tournament.

Rams Tie Merritt For League Golf Title

Fencers Refuse To Be Foiled, Win First NorCal Championship

By Joan Barney

Fencers of this college proved that a hex can be broken when they broke precedent by taking first place at the Northern California Intercollegiate Fencing Association Championship May 8.

Until now the NCIFA first-place trophy has been the exclusive property of four-year colleges. For example, San Francisco State College had it for six years in a row, and University of California at Berkeley took it for the last three years.

For the first time in the existence of the NCIFA, a two-year college possesses the cherished gold plated award.

No magic charms were used to crack the barrier. A bit of luck may have been involved, but on the whole the college's extraordinary fencing team, coached by Frances Galloway, relied on the more potent powers of skill and endurance.

After dueling six colleges, the Ram team won the tournament with an unmarred record. University of California at Berkeley came in second with one defeat.

The last match was between City College and Stanford University. This was the decider. If the college lost to Stanford, it would have to compete with UC in a fence-off for the championship. "Naturally," commented Esponda, "the UC fencers were really rooting for Stanford."

But the cheers had no effect on the City College fencers who later left the Berkeley campus with the first-place trophy and a few cheers of their own.

Besides Esponda, who is in his first year of collegiate competition, the team included George Pena, also in his first year, and Wayne Spencer.

Freshmen Still 'Mural Leaders; Filipinos Slide

By Frank Cooney

A wierd turnover of events in recent intramural activity left an unusual mark on the record books. The Guardsman team, consistent losers, usually by forfeit, won its game . . . by forfeit, yet!

Off the record though, to be consistent, The Guardsman team, or the three plus two, were defeated in a non league game. The H&R, though the club had but four players (thus the forfeit) smashed the journalists who also played with four. The score . . . 78 to 41.

If consistency was law for last week's competition, then the Freshmen team broke no laws in remaining undefeated by picking up a fifth victory, this one from Lawson's 10.

This latest victory proved to be the Freshmen's toughest triumph. Having almost doubled the score of their competition in previous games, the statistical champs received quite a scare from Lawson's 10 in the 31 to 29 squeeker.

The Filipino Americans continued their skid from last season's stardom by losing to the Ski Club, 39 to 43.

Wednesday night's chillers saw the Chiefs achieve victory over the unchallenging Chancellors via forfeit.

The Irish trounced the Mice in a mad massacre, 55 to 20. Tom Courtney of the Irish almost stuffed enough points through, with 20, to beat the rodents with just his tally.

That same Wednesday night a battle for the Independent league championship was fought between the Do-Humps and the Castoffs. The outcome of that tussle left the Do-Humps in possession of the better part of a 51 to 38 mark up.

A semifinal championship conflict will be battled tomorrow between two of the three league's top teams.

Jags Defend Crown; Rams Tie For Fifth

San Jose City College made it two straight in 1965 as they successfully defended their 1964 Golden Gate Conference baseball crown with an 18-3 record. The Jaguars were 30-5, for their overall record.

The Rams boast two players who will make definite bids for post-season honors. Centerfielder Barry Carli finished the season with a .338 average, and catcher Mike Dunne turned in a .373, 15 RBI year at the stick.

Spikers Face Tough Area Finals Odds

By Art Rodriguez

The City College Rams face stiff competition as they try to earn as many state championship berths as possible in the Northern California Track and Championships Saturday at Foothill College.

Trying to stop the Rams' bid will be some of the state's top track talent. Although at press time the qualifiers for the meet had not been decided, one thing is certain, the competition will be very tough.

Strong contenders for the team title will include defending champion Merritt, San Mateo, Fresno, American River, Foothill and College of the Sequoias.

All will be trying to capture one of the four berths in each event which will qualify them for the California State Track Championships May 29 at Modesto.

Ram chances for the Nor Cal team title look slim, but at trial time they hoped to make a bid for several individual honors. Last year the team's biggest glory came in winning the 440-relay.

Hoping to better last year's sixth place finish, coach Lou Vasquez commented, "Although the competition will be a lot tougher, we should do better this year. We may not place any higher, but I expect we will qualify more men for the state meet."

In the West Coast Relays at Fresno on May 8 the sole Ram points were earned in the 440-relay as Chris Davis, Vern Bradford, Chris Ransom and Bob Prince combined for a fourth-place finish with a 41.4 time, only two-tenths of a second behind winner Bakersfield.

Though the Rams still hold the North State best of 3:17.7 in the mile relay they were knocked from contention with a 3:20.3, hindered when Rod Coleman was nearly knocked down on a turn in the close competition.

Local high jumpers Leroy Woods and Dwight Tucker both leaped a respectable 6-6 but couldn't score as Santa Ana's Ed Caruthers won the event with a high of 7 ft. ¼ in. Lai Malauulu failed to pick up any points in the shot and discus as Steve Fite of Chaffey set a new national two-year college shot standard of 60-8½.

Trying to recuperate from his injured leg, Lee Benton ran a 10.1 hundred, losing to Jim Kuller of Santa Ana who equalled the national mark of 9.3.

Schroder Leads Duffers In State Tournament At Visalia

By William Pates

After ten successive futile years, the City College golf club came through on points to tie with Merritt College as co-champions for the 1965 Golden Gate Conference Golf championship and qualify for the California State Junior College tournament played at Visalia this week.

It was first believed that the Rams' loss to San Jose in the final match of the season gave the conference title to San Jose and relegated the college golfers to a second place position,—but this was not the case.

Inasmuch as the Rams defeated Merritt College, Merritt College upset San Jose, and San Jose had a tie contest and then beat San Francisco, the Rams are co-champions with Merritt, and San Jose falls to third place.

It's like this—City College edged out Merritt's linkers who later upset San Jose. San Jose defeated the Rams who had beaten Merritt who had beaten San Jose who also had a tie.

Since Merritt had beaten San Jose and San Francisco hadn't, and San Francisco had defeated Merritt and San Jose hadn't, and San Jose had a tie match besides, there existed the tie for first place.

In the Golden Gate Conference tournament at Castlewood, May 3 to 7, which is strictly individual competition, the Rams fared none too well except for number one man Jim Schroder who shot a 36 hole score of 140, good for third in the tournament.

Schroder shot an opening round 69 and closed out the competition with a 74, no doubt two of his best rounds of golf this season.

Despite the fact that the club's other four men all posted relatively high scores, it was no hindrance to the club's chances for the State tournament.

Because of their co-championship status, the entire squad automatically qualified for that tournament.

However, they all enjoyed one "good" round of golf out of the two-round tournament. Tom O'Kane, the squad's number two man, shot an opening round 75, which is about his average, and slipped to a 78 on the final 18, ending the competition with a 153, ten strokes behind team leader Schroder.

Mike Butler, the club's number five man, shot two very fine rounds and, according to coach Grover Klemmer, "has come along very well over the last few meets." Butler shot an 82 for the first round which is his average score and came through on the closing 18 with a rousing 75.

Ron O'Conner and Mike Soden both suffered through two fairly "puffy" rounds of golf, teeing with scores of 161 for 36 holes. "Soden's closing score of 78 was quite good for him while his opening round 83 was but one stroke over his average 82 score," Klemmer commented.

O'Conner is capable of much better rounds than he played at the tournament with rounds of 82 and 79, both somewhat over his "usual" play.

The winner in the conference tournament was the Diablo Valley club's Rich Mace who shot the two rounds in 140 strokes. Mace was pretty much of a one-man team during the season, with City College, for example, rolling over Diablo by a 23-7 score.

San Jose's fine squad will be represented by Jess Vaughn who lost to Schroder by two strokes in the closing match of the season. Vaughn was but one stroke behind Mace and two ahead of Schroder.

Looking forward to the 1966 Golden Gate Conference golf season, three of the college's five man team will be eligible to return.

Schroder will be gone as will Soden, but O'Kane and Butler will be eligible for another year of play.

Netters Vie For Top Honors This Weekend

This year's two-year college State championships will be held at Fullerton College Friday and will feature some very fine players in heated competition for top honors, according to tennis coach Roy Diederichsen.

Competition is bound to be strict. Modesto's Juan Olmedo, relative of the great Davis Cup player of the United States, Alec Olmedo, is deemed the best player in the valley, Diederichsen said.

"The best player from the north," he added, "is Raul Contreras from Foothill."

Last year's championship went to Foothill College, however, as far as predictions go, Foothill will take no more than third. Pierce College, said Diederichsen, will come away with top honors.

Last year, in championship competition, Foothill came out on top followed by Pierce College in second position and City College took a fair third along with San Mateo. This year, the Rams are expected to come in either third or fourth.

Coeds Go Cowgirl For Awards-Recognition Night

By Kathi MacDonald

City College coeds will go Westerama for tonight's semi-annual Women's Awards and Recognition Night. The festivities will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the Statler wing.

As Nina Jacobs, Associated Women Student president, announced the Western theme for the event, she added that "Dean Golding has approved of jeans for women choosing a costnme for the occasion."

The main purpose of this function is the presentation of awards and recognition to outstanding coeds on campus. Miss Jacobs will represent her organization by presenting an AWS award to the contributor of distinguished service to the college.

Barbara Kontis, Recreation Association president, will bestow an award on the outstanding woman athlete, the Dougherty Trophy, an award to the sorority with highest grade point average, will be presented by Geri Maloney, Inter-Sorority Council president.

Another feature planned for the party is the official announcement and introduction of in-coming Presidents for the Fall semester. AWS, RA and ISC representatives will make the announcements following the results of the recent elections held on campus.

Feature address of the program will be given by special guest speaker Dorothy Handy who is an Attorney-at-Law in San Francisco with headquarters in the Mills Building. Her topic will be Points Of Law Western Women Should Know.

Also in keeping with the Western theme, Nancy Hughes, entertainment chairman, has compiled an impressive list of performances for the program.

Susan Schwampe, last year's Best-Dressed coed, will coreograph a modern dance number to Buttons and Bows.

Manuel Torres, a student here, and Louis Sagastime, University of San Francisco, will sing tunes of a Spanish flavor to their own guitar accompaniment. Amusement will continue when Dan Christiansen and Sandy Sater add a light touch with a skit.

Clara Silva and Irma Tobares will proceed to prance around a sombrero doing what is commonly called a Mexican Hat Dance.

The hotel and restaurant department is now in the midst of preparations for the supper to be served.

Guests at the party will be treated to an assortment of Western foods which include a hot dog casserole, tossed green and fruit salads, in addition to cake, punch and coffee.

Karen Carlson, decorations chairmen, has led her committee in the planning of some effective embellishments. Swinging doors and checkered table cloths give the idea of an old western-type saloon, and scatterings of imitation cactus, horseshoes and guns add to the mood.

A call to the Wells Fargo Museum produced some stage coach wheels and Borden's Dairy Company has donated replicas of some "good" cows.

Miss Jacobs listed the names of other committee chairmen, including Rosita Pearson and Mary Bonecutter, food; Sandy Ferguson and Miss Tobares, hospitality; Nicki Pascoe, invitations; Martha Romero, publicity; Christine Williams, setup; Janet Carpiviza and Eileen Pani, serving, Mary Maurer and Mary Ann Ducommun, cleanup.

NINA JACOBS, AWS president, who will present an award tonight to the contributor of distinguished service to the college.

Dental Students To Receive Caps In Ceremony

Capping ceremonies for nine dental assistant students who have completed their third semester of studies will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the theater.

This will be the 20th Capping Ceremony held on campus, according to Ruth P. Inskipp, instructor-coordinator of the dental assisting program.

Those students receiving caps are Charlotte Agrusa, Sharon Aizenberg, Ray DeMeester, Yvonne Ishida, Bobbi Luchello, Susan MacDonald, Marilyn Moskovitz, Jorli Polison and Joyce Sato.

Isabel McKay, president of the San Francisco dental assistants society, will present the organization's $25 scholarship award. This scholarship is awarded semiannually to an outstanding woman student in the dental assisting program.

The keynote address will be by Dr. Fletcher Craig, professor of operative dentistry, University of the Pacific. The theme of Dr. Craig's address is Continued Education Of The Dental Assistant.

Harry P. Buttimer, dean of instruction here, will extend the welcome, and Carol Alger, a former dental student, will assist Elizabeth Park, dental instructor, in the presentation of caps. Miss Agrusa will respond for her class.

The senior sponsors of the ceremony are Frances Blum, Hereen Blyoder, Sandra Kipnis, Sandra MacArthur, Georgina Ong, Maryann Ordano, Mary Robledo, Sandra Salozin and Martha Turner.

Miss Turner was the winner of last semester's scholarship award. This semester's winner will be announced at the ceremonies.

There is no admission, and all members of the faculty and student body are invited. Refreshments will be served after the ceremonies.

Cuddy Arrested For Trespassing

Ronald Cuddy, chairman of Active Campus Today, was arrested for trespassing and was given an indefinite suspension from the college when he sought to enter the campus on May 17, three days after an ACT rally, which led to his temporary suspension and the arrest of four non-student speakers.

Cuddy, who was suspended for ten school days as a result of his unauthorized rally May 14, was accompanied by Hugh Namias, who was also arrested for trespassing. Namias said he came back to the campus to see why he had been arrested May 14.

On May 14, Cuddy petitioned the administration for use of the space near the Ram for a rally, but the petition was denied. He proceeded with the rally anyway and was, therefore, suspended from the college, and the four non-student speakers with him were arrested.

At present, the free speech area is open only to students at the college.

Of six signed up to speak by May 24, three did not appear.

"The use of the area by guest speakers is now under discussion by the student-faculty-administration committee. The joint committee is continuing its deliberations," Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, said in a formal statement issued May 18.

Student's Portfolio Judged Best By L.A. Art Center

Frances Gee Wong, a sophomore here, is the first student from a two-year college in the Bay Area to win the $400 first annual Art Center Scholarship, sponsored by the alumni of the Art Center, William Davis, advertising art instructor here, announced today.

Miss Wong's art portfolio was first pre-judged at the Art Center, located in Los Angeles, with the final judging taking place last week at the Peacock Gap Country Club in San Rafael.

Students entering competition were first selected by their departmental instructors in their art classes.

Advertising art and design is Miss Wong's major in which she has maintained a 3.5 average in her courses.

Her previous awards included the Bank of America Art award in 1962 and an honorable mention in the San Francisco Club Poster contest, also in 1962.

She is a graduate of Polyteehnic High School in San Francisco and plans to enter the Art Center in September, 1965.

The winning portfolio will be on display on the first floor of Science Hall starting next Tuesday.

The Art Center has twice in nationwide polls been voted the number one art training institution in the country by art directors, Davis commented.

Among those alumni present were John Liehtenwalner, president of the Society of Illustrators; Wayne Mayfield, head art director for Lennen & Newell, Inc.; Ron McKee, illustrator with Lathdpheres & Associates, and Doreen Masterson, former head of the medical illustration department at Stanford University.

'G' Takes Memorial Day Recess, Returns June 9

Classes will not meet on Monday, May 31, because of the Memorial Day holiday. In turn, The Guardsman will not be at its familiar distribution points next Wednesday.

This announcement was made by Patricia H. Dutter, Publications Board chairman and Editor of The Guardsman.

The newspaper will return for its final publication of the Spring 1965 semester next Wednesday. Following the final issue, work will begin on the Freshman Edition of The Guardsman, for distribution in the Fall to entering students.

Forum Goes On Sale June 1, Free For AS Members

Literary work which was selected for publication by the staff of Forum Magazine will be made available to the public when the student-written volume is published next Tuesday.

Those contributions which did not meet the standards set by the editorial staff, and therefore were not published, are available in C-331. Students who wish to claim their work are invited to the Forum office, where not only will their literary pieces be returned, but also evaluation will be offered by staff members.

Al Pelligrini, editor, conveyed his appreciation to all who took the time and trouble to contribute to this, the 29th annual Forum publication.

"On June 1, the combined efforts of countless individuals will be put to the critical comments of the reading public," Pelligrini predicted.

The cover of this year's Forum is governed by a Dante scheme, and was designed by advertising and graphic art student, Sue Wilson.

Associated Students who wish to obtain a copy need only show their membership card. A token fee of 50 cents will be levied on others who desire a copy of the magazine, Pelligrini said.

Choral Concert Changed To Friday In Theater

A choral concert, previously scheduled last night, will be presented in College Hour tomorrow and also at 8 p.m., Friday in the college theater.

William Grothkopp will direct the choir in its performance. "It's an opportunity offered only once a semester," he emphasized; "come early and get good seats."

Among the selections to be sung by the Chamber Choir, will be Alma Redemptoris Mater by Palestrina, Adieu, Sweet Amarilis by Wilbye and To Yonder Lovely Grove by Janequin.

Gloria, by Poulenc will be performed by the choir, with Jackie Reed as the featured soloist and Robert Sheldon accompanist. Richard Fenner will conduct the Women's Choir in its part of the program.

Summer Outlook Grim; Applicants Outnumber Jobs

The 1965 summer employment forecast is one of the poorest in years, Joseph Amori, director of personnel placement services, announced today.

"It is simply a question of too many people and not enough jobs to go around," Amori commented, adding, "the economy is in fine condition, but with the daily advent of 1000 new people in California per day, and the economy not expanding as fast, the law of supply and demand govern the employment picture."

Requirements for most summer jobs have also been raised. Summer resorts have been requiring an entry age of 19 and completion of at least one full year of college, Amori said.

"In addition to these, nearly all resorts and public and private camps are requiring previous experience," Amori added.

Because the Bay Area is jammed with colleges and universities, all competing in the same market for the same jobs, employment opportunities are going to the older and best qualified.

Nearly all employers have reduced their personnel requirements, which means, Amori explained, that those who are hired really earn their pay.

"While the City College placement service has placed many students in a wide variety of summer jobs, there are still some to be filled," Amori stated.

Students with recreational backgrounds possessing a skill in arts and crafts, music, dramatics, aquatics, nature study and the like are needed by both public and private camps in Northern California.

There will be some jobs available in the clerical areas, such as typing, shorthand and office machine operation. All students interested in summer jobs can file applications in S-188, Amori said.

VISTA Opens Volunteer Drive

City College students will have the opportunity this week to find out about Volunteers In Service To America, which is the domestic equivalent of the Peace Corps.

A three-man recruitment team will be on campus tomorrow and Friday to answer questions and assist students in filling out application forms.

The VISTA table will be set up in the court yard by the flagpole and in Smith Hall from 9 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. each day.

Volunteers are working throughout the United States in both urban and rural areas to break the poverty syndrome.

They work with non-English speaking residents, young people in search of counselling and leadership, senior citizens with nowhere to turn, former mental health patients, settlement house leaders and migrant farm laborers.

There are presently 2000 immediate openings in the volunteer program. Eight hundred openings are in urban projects, 600 in migrant labor camps and 200 in rural communities.

Volunteers sign up for one year of service and may renew for a second year. They are given room and board money and a personal allowance of $2.50 per day.

Truth Shall Make You Free— Doors Will Make You Strong

By Peter Dorn

During these times of civil unrest, of demonstrations and protests, of low-cut swim suits and of "four letter word" reforms, the crusading citizen is overlooking the rudimentary facts of life in his quest for righting philosophical wrongs.

While there is talk of assassinating the administration (any administration), of speaking freely and of dressing freely, no one has, to date, protested against the doors at the main entrance of Science Hall.

Every student must have, at one time or another, pitted his physical prowess against those colossuses of the college.

Actually, while the doors are said to be of a brass framework, there are factions at the college who insist that the doors only have an imitation brass surface, that they are really made of cast iron, with just a touch of lead for balance, and filled with cement.

For the doors are smack dab atop Hill 29, which is in the center of Alemany Gap. Now it's a known fact that the wind from the ocean in order to reach Candlestick Park and retain any of its velocity at all, chooses the path to the park that offers the least resistance, to wit: Alemany Gap.

Putting all these facts together, then, it is easy to see why a 90-pound coed, after attempting to swing a 200-pound door open into a 50 mile wind, will use one of the side or back doors until the time of her graduation.

And the civilian population in the fertile valley below says, "I don't know whyinhell they're hitting us with all these school bond issues; I never see anybody go in that place."

Submissive Female Attitude Replaced By Smug Superwomen

EQUALITY OF THE SEXES is no longer a pleasant dream. Instead it has become a frightening nightmare.

Out of this situation a problem has arisen: Women who are competing side by side in industry with men have taken on a new look — and it isn't exactly flattering.

The submissive female attitude has been replaced with a superior air that is difficult to describe. While many women, it is true, are doing a better job in certain fields than their male counterparts, this hardly gives them a license to walk around with their noses in the air.

Not all women are guilty of this crime either. A small percentage have retained their "feminine mystique," but they are far and few between.

SOMEONE MUST TAKE THE BLAME

Where does the blame lie? Certainly not on the educational system. It has never been the intention of collegiate institutions to instill this smug quality in individuals.

Therefore, the ultimate blame must come to rest upon the college-educated women. In their determination to be equal, they have become what two male writers define as "superwomen."

This doesn't mean they are super-strong, super-intelligent, or super-perceptive, but rather a blob of protoplasm that is a bit more than a woman, but a little less than a man!

Is there a miracle drug powerful enough to combat this strange disease? No. And there's little use developing one because women aren't interested in being cured.

It's so much more fun to behave this way and garner all the attention, so why should they want to change?

MEN ARE AT FAULT, SOMETIMES

But men, too, have contributed to their odd behavior. How many husbands have told their wives politely, or maybe not so politely, to get out of the house and go to work. So work they do — and, unfortunately their pay checks are superior to hubby's.

Sooner or later, the situation may reverse itself, but not until women are good and ready to take a back seat in business. This could go on indefinitely; however, that's doubtful.

It's safe to assume women are very much aware of the antagonism they have stirred up in men's circles. Ah yes, did someone say that's a woman's prerogative?

● Appreciative Loser

Editor, The Guardsman:

I would like to extend my congratulations to Mr. Sweeney on his election to the presidency of the Associated Students. I would also like to offer Mr. Sweeney my cooperation and I would like to work with him next semester in order to see that the Associated Students work in harmony for the benefit of all the students.

I also wish to show my appreciation to all of my supporters and let them know that Reform On Campus will continue, first through the Associated Students, to work in order to see that their interests are carried out.

I do not feel as though I were defeated in the elections, on the contrary I feel that ROC has won a partial victory. ROC has won three seats on the Student Council, and although this constitutes only less than 22 per cent of the whole council, the other council members should realize that these people represent 50 per cent of the electorate.

Another reason for feeling that a victory has been won is based on the large turnout at the polls — a larger percentage of students voted in this election than at the recent student elections at the University of California on the same issues. Alhough less than 25 per cent of the student body voted this semester, the increase over last semester is significant. I interpret this new found interest in student government due to the issues put forth in the elections by ROC.

With these facts in mind, I wish the new Student Council success next semester.

Alex Hing

● Good Education

Editor, The Guardsman:

I am writing in response to Robert Drewes' letter in the May 12 issue of The Guardsman.

Mr. Drewes says that the transient junior college student is primarily concerned with earning enough credits to transfer to a four-year college. He pursues his goal with single-minded resolve, and thus cannot be bothered with student activist groups (such as ROC) or issues pertaining to constitutional rights.

Just because we attend a junior college, which happens to be regulated by high school laws, does not mean that the school in incapable of aiding us to obtain a good education. (Education as differentiated from credit-getting.) Nor does the fact that we attend a junior college necessarily mean that we must be mere receptacles for facts and information until we are able to transfer.

The educational process involves relating material learned in the classroom to one's existing knowledge and perspective. It involves the application of text-book principles to not only one's personal outlook, but to the many phases and faces of humanity; may the given division be Man the Poet, Man the Philosopher, Man the Scientist, Man Making Hydrogen Bombs and Poisonous Gas, Man Fighting For His Freedom in Selma, Alabama; Vietnam and the Dominican Republic, or Man Building a Peaceable World — and/or any other facet of human endeavor you can name.

The student must throw his opinions and ideas into the open arena of discussion and debate. In the vocal expression situation he will be questioned and challenged, and thus will be forced to re-evaluate or broaden his stand. In other words, he grows. He learns dynamically.

The recent activities of ROC and the emergence of the Free Speech issue here are not constructions of irresponsible, rowdy attendees of City College. The existence of this group and their concern with a free speech area testify to the fact that there are people who know the definition of student and the meaning of education.

Beatrice Pogin

● Witness Objects

Editor, The Guardsman:

I have witnessed the recent demonstration by people who say they are striving for "civil rights." It is the purpose of this letter to question their motives.

If the students who are involved in the demonstrations are doing this for their own glory and satisfaction, I feel that they are wrong, for it has upset the academic atmosphere of the college.

If, as some of the speakers have stated, they are doing this for the student population as a whole, I hope that they will stop.

I do not appreciate their efforts as it reflects on me as a student.

The value of a college education depends to a great extent on the reputation of the school. The activities of the "civil rights speakers" have blighted the name of our college; and as one person who has been affected by their actions, I support the administration in its stand against these speakers.

A 'Best-Dressed Coed'

Alumna Rose Fang Secures Top Modeling Position, Earns $2000 For TV Ad

By Bea Takeuchi

Johnny Mathis, Pat Suzuki, Barbara Eden, Lee Meriwether and Bill Bixby were former students here. Someday another name will be added to this sparkling list.

One can catch a glimpse of her on the L&M cigarette television commercial.

She is a very important model, 24 years old, and a native of Hong Kong. Mr. Blackwell, the man who put Zsa Zsa Gabor on the "World's Worst Dressed" list, and who claims the introduction of the basic black dress, employs her as his top model.

TV MODEL Rose Fang demonstrates how to get a viewer's attention.

She still hopes for a career in fashion design although she is presently modeling and making commercials instead. "I don't really mind," she commented.

"It brings me closer to my goal. I've learned a lot about the 'rag business' and I meet many interesting people. I almost gave up making commercials, though.

"When I made that cigarette commercial, I arrived in Chinatown at the expected hour of 5 p.m. I had to wait around until almost 2 a.m. before the photographer started to pose me.

"We worked from 2 to 4 a.m. and I was exhausted. They paid me only $120 then, and I was very discouraged.

"Then about a month later I received a check for $500! The checks have been coming regularly, and I've received over $2000 for that one commercial," she said.

"Boy, now I really like making commercials. My agent tells me that I need only two or three more to be able to retire, but I can't. I help support our large family in Hong Kong," she said.

The sophisticated high fashion model attended this college as a commercial arts major and was graduated in the Fall of 1963. During that period she held the position of Associated Women Student President and won the Best-Dressed Coed contest here.

Her long list of achievements in the modeling profession reads like a list of famous name brands. Live television shows and ads for local department stores are not new to her.

Her big chance came when James Grimme, of the Grimme Agency, discovered her in a local fashion show. He selected her to compete with 12 other models for a job with Mr. Blackwell.

"Mr. Blackwell chose me, and Mimi London, that famous model.

"It was so exciting. We traveled all over the United States to show his latest creations. Then Mimi left, and now I am the sole model with Mr. Blackwell," she exclaimed.

She admits that success comes with hard work and that certain people at City College are responsible for her achieving this success.

"There are so many people at City College to thank for this. I can't begin to list their names. They know who they are, and I am very grateful," she said.

When in the city, she spends much of her spare time doing charity work for the Chinese community. "I owe them a lot," she declared, "and that's my way of showing my appreciation."

This girl who started out as a Math major and switched over to commercial art, only to become a model, is on her way up.

Watch for her. Her name is Rose Fang.

Bill Of Rights Represents US' Best Policies

By Hugh Haworth

ENTHUSIASM at City College has been seen in establishing one aspect of the First Amendment on campus—free speech.

Unfortunately, instead of having this spirit of the Bill of Rights welcomed by everyone, some people (not necessarily here on campus) displayed a reaction William O. Douglas, Supreme Court Justice, was fearful of, in that too many people in authority "are remote from basic constitutional issues..."

In fact, Douglas's remark on this issue is not too far removed from the Berkeley-San Francisco scene:

"They sound an alarm when a nonconformist is loose on a campus; they administer a sedative when a crime is "solved" by use of the third-degree method, or a man is imprisoned for his beliefs."

It's exactly this enthusiasm shown here on campus in the guarantees of the Bill of Rights that should not be snuffed out by those fearing anarchists, but instead emulated by the State Department and those in the Administration who form foreign policy.

The reason is that the first Ten Amendments, doctrines of the American experiment, are the institutions that can be acquired by foreign nationals in order to make the "world safe for democracy."

Neither the vast stockpiles of arms nor the great sell of the American market and free enterprise systems that are exported as United States foreign policy will make democracy as attractive as the freedoms Americans enjoy.

It is sad to report that "few skilled in our system of government" or even from the U.S. had any part to play in drafting the constitutions of the recently emerged nations.

This is the price the U.S. paid for being preoccupied with the arms race, power politics and foreign aid tied to military and marketing goals.

The U. S. fills these nations with tanks and tractors which are sometimes needed, but it forgets to supply their libraries in a language they could read which would present the outlines to a Free Society and services rendered by a Bill of Rights.

Instead of over-training the American representatives going abroad in the advantages of market systems and free enterprise structures as practiced in the United States, the virtues of the American experience like the Fifth Amendment, separation of church and state, and freedom of expression should be emphasized.

For it is around these and other subjects found in the U.S. Bill of Rights that basic differences between the Free Society and dictatorships are found.

Let the country take heart in students who are taking an expressed interest in the freedoms established by the Bill of Rights, because through their efforts the country gains an advantage.

As Justice Douglas has stated along these lines: "Once speech, beliefs and conscience are placed beyond the reach of government, a nation acquires a spiritual strength that will make it a shining light to all who have never known the blessings of liberty, even to those behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains".

Confucius Say: Too Many Pane Is Plenty Pain

Those who have ever had a pain that just keeps returning perhaps realize the agony being faced by the task force who recently tackled the weather-beaten exterior of Science Hall.

Pane after pane after pane... more than 400 in all, plague the plight of the painters who are currently faced with the problem of repainting each window frame.

And too... gallon after gallon after gallon of the sand-colored liquid goes toward resurfacing the scenery of Science Hall. John Daley, superintendent of the seemingly infinite job, estimated that more than 200 gallons will be used.

Foresight — Education Supplants Need For Law

By Mike Barber

ORGANIZED education takes many roles in today's world, not the least of which is that of a socializing force. As people learn why they should respect their fellow man's rights and privilliges, the number of criminals and crimes should decrease.

This is not to say that if a person doesn't go to school he will be a criminal. Nor should it be taken to mean that a man with a degree will not commit crimes. But, in a group, the degree of education has an inverse relationship with the number of crimes committed.

Therefore, as the quality and quantity of educational institutions increases, and the proportion of people who take advantage of these opportunities grows, there should be less cause for passing new laws, and fewer reasons for implementing the old ones.

Carrying this reasoning to idealistic proportions, one arrives at a lawless society that is free of criminals as well. Unfortunately, the practical believer is forced to feel that this an utopian society is like infinity — approachable, but unattainable.

Schools of higher learning, where more and more Americans are spending a major part of their life, are in an excellent position to promote the concepts and ideals, the faith in and understanding of others, that is necessary to lead a creative and productive life in this modern society.

The family is where the initial process of socialization begins. And the family is popularly blamed for producing the criminal.

Since the schools dominate a lion's share of a young person's life, they must share the responsibility of seeing that an individual matures with understanding and responsibility.

The socialization process, in school and home, should produce healthy individuals who are suited for pursuing their ideals and developing their chosen way of life without finding it necessary to violate the rights, whether civil or property, of others, or to have their ethics and morality legislated for them.

THE MONTEREY lies in the water, gently rising and falling on the long ground swell. The pilot boat moves slowly alongside the liner and up the ladder climbs the harbor pilot. Once on the bridge, the ship is his and he begins the tedious task of bringing her into Aukland harbor.

New Zealand, made up of the North and South islands, offers a great diversity of adventure. The country abounds with warm beaches and other marvels of nature. Visiting the thermal regions of Rotorua and the famous Glowworm Grotto in Waitomo Caves provides lasting memories for the tourist to this land.

In addition to a warm summer climate, New Zealand displays snow-capped peaks, glaciers and fjords where some of the finest skiing in the world can be found.

Just two days sailing from Aukland lies the fascinating city of Sydney, one of Australia's largest metropolitan areas. The Monterey enters Sydney harbor passing under Sydney Bridge, the largest of its kind in the world.

From bustling city-life to the ancient and primitive land of the aborigines and vast sheep ranches far out on the "outback," Australia offers to the tourist a variety of cultures and particular fascinations.

The final weeks of this Matson holiday-at-sea are spent relaxing aboard ship and observing all the wonders of the final landfalls — Noumea, Fiji, Samoa and Hawaii.

Fiji, Crossroads of the South Seas, provides an atmospheric feeling of a lush tropical isle as well as busy streets and throngs of people that swarm its capital, Suva.

Entering Pago Pago harbor in Samoa, the Monterey moves through the shadow of Rainmaker Mountain, displaying to its passengers one of the most beautiful harbors in the world.

Slipping past Diamond Head in the early morning mist, the Monterey arrives at its final port of call, Honolulu. World-famous Diamond Head, Pearl Harbor, Waikiki Beach, Iolani Palace and Punchbowl Crater—the Monterey's passengers spend their last days in paradise amid a clamour of activities.

But like all things, whether good or bad, time moves on and so the holiday must end. On the final morning of the voyage, the Monterey leaves the colossal Pacific in its wake and slipping under the Golden Gate Bridge, returns its passengers to a different world entirely.

From ocean to bay, a short voyage from paradise to pandemonium.

$42,000 Fall Semester Budget Gets Council OK

The 1965 Associated Student fall budget of nearly $42,000 was passed by the Student Council, Jim Doudiet, finance chairman, announced today.

The recommended budget as passed by council actually totalled $41,983.76. This was $5000 shy of the requested amounts received from the college's organizations.

Because council only had $42,000 to allocate and $2000 for supplementaries next fall, it was necessary for them to reduce the requested $48,000. This was accomplished by first deleting certain items from the individual budget and then taking a ten per cent cut from each budget.

After several weeks of discussion in council meetings the budget was passed as follows:

Administration	$ 895.00
Alpha Gamma Sigma	135.00
Associated Men Students	547.20
Athletic Injury	1,500.00

Independent Group Proposes Method To Curb Dropouts

To lower the number of students who drop courses and the red tape involved with them, a group of independent City College students is attempting to publish a course and instructor-evaluation pamphlet with publication date set tentatively for Fall 1965.

"The pamphlet will attempt to give students a definite idea of what is expected of them in certain courses. A fair evaluation of the work load, type of examination and testing and study hours required will be made," Thomas Allen, one of the students heading the project, commented.

The idea was formulated about three months ago from seeing the same type of pamphlet published at the University of California and San Francisco State College. "At San Francisco State the pamphlet is published with the cooperation of administration, faculty and students," Allen said.

Thomas Nesbitt, director of student testing, commented, "Sixteen per cent of students from every freshman class are forced to drop out. A project of this kind does not seem to be the answer as there is really no guarantee that it will be representative of the student body," he added.

"The Administration is constantly evaluating its faculty and all faculty members have questionnaire forms by which to evaluate themselves," Nesbitt said.

Alfred Young, one of the program's originators here, disclosed that Ralph Granneberg of the psychology department, is assisting in the project.

"Dr. Granneberg is helping us compile information. He has advised us that we will need at least 25 evaluations of each instructor before we may review him in our catalog," Young commented.

Seven students are now working on the project and according to Young, there has been great enthusiasm to assist in any way. "We urge all students to fill out questionnaires and fill them out objectively," Young said. He added that "this is not a gripe sheet but an outline of instructional strong points."

If it is compiled and printed during the summer, the pamphlet will go on sale at the California Book Company for 25 cents, Young said.

AMS Sports Fest On Tonight

Fisticuff, Cage Action Highlight Men's Gym Slate

Three events are scheduled for the Associated Men Student semiannual Sports Night to be held in the men's gymnasium starting at 7 o'clock tonight.

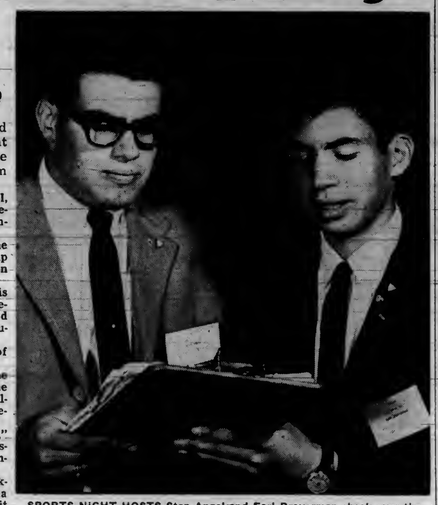
Earl Braverman and Stan Angel, AMS president and vice president respectively, specifically issued an invitation to coeds.

Major activity is a play-off for the intramural basketball championship between the Irish and the Freshmen or Alpha Kappa Rho.

High point of the entertainment is expected to be a basketball game between a team of faculty members and one of students associated with student government.

Third event is a probable slate of three or four boxing bouts.

Trophies will be awarded to the championship basketball team, to the winning boxers and to the most valuable player in the intramural competition.



"There will also be a door prize," Braverman said, "probably some passes for bowling or tickets to the hungry i."

Faculty members who were "flunked" last Fall by a 44-39 loss to Alpha Phi Epsilon are expected to "try" it again.

That much-talked about faculty team featured Terry "The Killer" Kilpatrick, Larry "The Lip" Lawson, Gerry "The Shrimp" Mullin, Bob "The Stilt" Quigley, "Jungle Jim" Wyatt and Paul "Adding Machine" Fisher.

Mullin, toward the end of the game, hit more long set shots to give himself 12 points for the game. Kilpatrick was high man for the "Old Men" with 16, while Fisher, Lawson, Quigley and Wyatt hit 4, 4, 2 and 1, respectively.

The program of activities is expected to end by 10:30 p.m.

Supplementary Requests Put Strain On Council's Budget

By James Raub

Because of the barrage of supplementary budget requests which have flooded the Student Council meetings throughout the semester, it was discovered last week that the Student Council had "gone into the hole," so to speak, by over-allocating different amounts of money to the various campus organizations.

This fact was brought out last Wednesday by Jim Doudiet, student finance chairman, during a Student Council discussion concerning the allocation of $40 to the A Cappella Choir.

Apparently Oscar Anderson, coordinator of educational management, had set the sum of $2000 as the limit to which the Student Council could allocate supplementary budgets.

LIMIT LIFTED

Doudiet reported that so far, the Student Council has already allocated $2800 to various campus organizations, but added, "Dr. Anderson has already approved 'upping the limit' for supplementary budgets, after finding out how well the Associated Student bookstore is doing this semester."

For a point of information, the bookstore is the major source of financial intake for the Associated Students.

Reconsidering the $40 allocation for the A Cappella choir, and also upset by the report of excessive financial distribution, Student Council barely granted the request by a vote of 6-4-2.

Adding still more discomfort, Doudiet read a request for another $329.80 supplementary budget for the college tennis team.

"The tennis team is tied for the Northern California Junior College championship," Doudiet explained, "it has qualified four team members for the state finals in Fullerton this weekend, and it needs the money for expenses."

Many questions were raised as to just what the expenses for the trip were. Doudiet listed the following: meals, $62.50; motel accommodations, $84; transportation, $114.30; local transportation, $30; entry fees, $14; parking and incidentals, $25.

PARKING FUND KILLED

Doug Bianchi moved to amend this allocation by striking the $25 for parking and incidentals, a move agreed upon by the majority of those present, indicated by the 8-3-2 vote in favor of his move.

The total now cut to $304.80, the vote was cast for the allocation itself. It passed, 13-0-0.

Chris Scales, chairman of the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, announced that the questionnaire concerning instructor-course evaluations was dropped from discussion and declared an off-campus activity.

"The distributors of the questionnaire are to keep their activities off-campus or else the leaflets will be confiscated," Miss Scales said.

Terry Cloney, Associated Student president, reported that a "Hyde Park" area has been set up at the Quad for use from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily.

"During College Hours on Tuesdays and Thursdays," Cloney indicated, "microphones may be used in the area."

BROKEN WINDOW DIALOGUE

As the meeting drew to a close, Jim Stull asked Cloney when the windows of the Associated Student building, most of which were broken by vandals on May 16, were going to be replaced.

Cloney replied that he had conferred with Dr. Anderson on the subject, and that Anderson said that he would look into it.

Because the broken windows permit a chilling draft in the room, Stull asked, "When?"

Cloney answered, "Dr. Anderson said he thought of covering the window frames with plastic, and had a man coming out to look at the windows."

"When?", Stull asked.

"When the man felt like it," Cloney quoted.

Service Awards Go To Lawson, Percy

Awards in recognition of faculty and student service to the Associated Students this semester were presented to Lawrence Lawson, criminology instructor, and Percy Jones at the Student Council awards dinner last night.

Jones, who has been elected as a freshman representative to next semester's council, "has consistently been an active participant and assistant in student government," Mary Ann Ducommun, Associated Student vice president, said, adding that he was chiefly responsible for the organization work on this semester's Frosh Ball.

Lawson, who is a new instructor on campus, has worked between the Campus Police and the student government to see that the rallies and all student functions operated smoothly and efficiently, Miss Ducommun added.

The banquet, which was attended by approximately 150 persons, featured Paul Speegle, San Francisco journalist, as guest speaker with President Louis G. Conlan and other administrators and faculty members in attendance.

Awards Given Out By Garden Club In Honor Of Botanist

Five students of the ornamental horticulture department are recipients of the Alice Eastwood Award for this spring.

The awards were distributed by the San Francisco Garden Club in honor of the late Alice Eastwood, botanist who died in 1953. The candidates are chosen on the basis of their potential possibility in the field, abilities as displayed, need and academic standing.

The winners are Richard Bisazza, $250; Louis Penna, $250; Harold Hong, $250; James Delfino, $100; Eric Edwards, $100.

These students were invited to a luncheon on May 20 at Trader Vic's given by the San Francisco Garden Club to receive their certificate and check.

The St. Francis Wood Garden Club recently offered a scholarship in honor of Mrs. DeWitt Taylor, a founder of the organization. Hong and Penna each received a certificate and a $50 check.

All of these recipients are students of the ornamental horticulture department which is not to be confused with the retail floristry department, Harry Nelson, instructor, explained.

Ornamental horticulture is made up of several sections, such as landscape gardening, greenhouse and cut flower production and nursery management.

"We are the growers and they are the artists," Nelson said.

Rams Fourth In NorCal

Trackmen Set Two Records, Qualify Six For State Meet

By Art Rodriguez

Sparked by record performances in the mile relay and the 330-yard intermediate hurdles, the City College Rams earned six state championship berths on the way to a fourth place finish in the Twelfth Annual North California Two Year College's Track and Field Championships held last Saturday at Foothill College.

The mile relay team of Bob Prince, Rod Coleman, Chris Ransom, and Chris Davis turned in a brilliant 3:17.2 to better the meet record set by the College of Sequoias in 1962.

Hal Johnson earlier established a new meet record in the 330-yd. intermediate hurdles with a time of 37.9. This broke the old mark of 38.4 held by Abe Johnson of Merritt College in 1964.

Davis gave the Rams yet another first place when he came through with a 48.9 clocking in the 440-yd. dash. Teammate Coleman also qualified for the state meet as he captured a 49.6 fourth place with a superb final 440-yd. effort.

"We are very happy with our finish. This year we placed more men for the state meet than in the past four years." commented coach Lou Vasquez adding, "Rod Coleman and Hal Johnson did a fine job, and Chris Davis kept us up with his ability."

In what was a disappointing result, the Ram 440-yd. relay team failed to match their qualifying time of 41.7, dropping to 41.9, and were forced to settle for a third place finish behind Fresno and Merritt colleges. After the meet, Vasquez said "I don't want to make excuses, but the wind seemed to make a real difference in the relay. The runners were running against the wind and this slowed down the lighter runners, like Prince, more than the bigger runners."

The only other San Francisco state meet qualifier was Leroy Woods who captured a fourth place berth in the triple jump. His jump measured 47 ft. 8¾ in.

The meet was dominated by a strong Fresno College team who scored a total of 84 points. Second place was a tough battle, but was finally landed by San Mateo who scored six more points than third place Foothill's 71. The Rams picked up 49 points in landing the fourth place in the 35 team classic.

The Rams will now travel to Modesto to bring to a climactic close their exciting season Saturday in the California Two Year College's Annual State Meet.

In the meet last year, the team finished in 14th place and this year's competition figures to be just as tough.

Defending state titlist Santa Ana, impressive in winning the West Coast Relays this year, boasts two performers who have bettered or equalled national marks and once again rules as favorite.

Ed Curuthers, who is credited with bettering the national high jump record with his jump of 7 ft. 1½ in., and Fred Kuller who equalled the national 100-yd. dash mark of 9.3.

In other stiff competition, the Rams will see Mt. San Ahtonio's Don Shy who boasts a 13.6 performance in the 120-high hurdles.

Cindermen Take Three Firsts In NorCal Trials

By Ivan Temes

City College's cindermen finished first in three events, broke one Ram track mark and equaled another in the highly-competitive Northern California trials May 15 in Modesto.

The effort enabled the Rams to qualify seven men and both relay squads for last Saturday's NorCal finals.

Already credited with a 41.4 second clocking this year, the 440-relay foursome of Chris Davis, Vern Bradford, Chris Ransom and Bob Prince raced to a winning 41.7 time to get even with Fresno for a pair of close earlier losses to the Valley club.

Ram Coach Lou Vasquez feels, "We're capable of breaking the national record of 41 seconds, but so are several other colleges."

Prince also qualified with a 9.7 in the 100-yard dash as eight men finished within one-tenth of a second of the 9.6 winning mark of Fresno's Alvin Mann. The local speedster finished second in the 220-dash in 21.8 seconds with teammate Davis one of a trio of sprinters timed at 22 seconds flat.

It took a clutch Ram-record jump of 47 ft. 8¾ inches to enable Leroy Woods to take fourth spot in the triple-jump, close behind the winning meet record leap of 48 feet, 2½ inches by Sequoias' Cornelius Frazier.

Quarter-miler Chris Davis came through with a clutch 48.9 to finish first, tying the Ram mark in the event held by Owen Moore and teammate Lee Benton. Rod Coleman's 50-second 440 was good enough for eighth place.

The potent pair later joined fellow Red and White men Sonny Johnson and iron-man Prince to cop the mile-relay with a 3:19.8 time, considerably slower than the Ram North State best of 3:17.7 this season.

Versatile Johnson also got into the finals in the 330-yard intermediate hurdles with a fourth-place 39.4, while local high-jumper Dwight Tucker qualified, tying for the fourth position with a leap of 6-4 and miler Rick Klemmer was clocked at 4:22.7 in eighth position.

Delbert Thompson of Fresno came up with a 24 ft. 2½ inches best in the long-jump as San Mateo's Dennis Phillips and Foothill's Max Lowe also set meet marks with a respective pole vault of 14-6 and high-jump of 6-8.

Racketmen Place Fifth In State To Close Season

The Rams traveled down south to Fullerton last weekend for the State junior college Tennis Championships, but some bad breaks made it impossible for them to rise any higher than a respectable fifth place.

The only Ram to reach the semi-finals was George Pontikoff, who bagged two victories before being eliminated by Larry Collins of Pasadena. Prior to his loss he upset Southern Sectional Champion Gary Granell of Pierce J.C. 6-3, 3-6, 6-4. Collins beat Pontikoff 6-3 and 6-4, and although Pontikoff played very well Collins exercised great overhead shots to override Pontikoff's lobs.

Collins beat tourney favorite Raul Contreras of Foothill in the finals 6-2, 6-4 as Contreras didn't play his usual smooth game. The Pasadena ace broke the Northerners service very frequently and this spelled the Owl's downfall. Every game Collins won was an upset since he only reached the quarters in the Southern Regionals.

Fred Suessman had no trouble in disposing of Los Angeles City College representative Manual Taboada 6-3, 6-0. In the quarter-finals he met Tony Bardsley, Diablo Valley's great star for the third time this year. Suessman upset Bardsley in this year's NorCal meet in three sets, but this week the tables were turned as the Valleyman defeated the Ram 12-10, 4-6, 6-3.

In doubles the two local duos entered didn't advance. Pontikoff-Steve Jones lost to the Bakersfield pair of Wood and Ogdan. The first set was an extra inning affair as the opposition emerged with a 7-5 score and then went on to cop the second round 6-1.

The Ram doubles team of Suessman and Ben Levy could possibly have copped the tourney had it not been for Suessman's leg cramps which hampered his playing. The locals fell in their "handicapped" fight 6-2, 5-4 to Bledstein-Deeb of El Camino.

The top four teams in the tourney was Foothill, who won, followed by Pasadena, Diablo Valley, and favorites Pierce College.

With this tourney the Rams have finished a successful season even though they were unable to beat Foothill for the league title.

The locals lost their first league match since entering the Golden Gate Conference, but it happened on the road so the Rams are still tops in Golden Gate Park.

The "hometown gang" will lose four-fifths of its members as only Pontikoff is clated to return for next season. Some of the junior varsity players should help the team, however.

Tealer, Piggee Elected To Local Sports Hall Of Fame

Two former Ram athletes, basketball star Bob Tealer and gridder Tom Piggee, were elected last week to the City College Sports Hall of Fame.

Tealer led the balloting with six points. He was chosen for his performances on the 1956-57 basketball team as the leading scorer with 375 points.

The ex-Ram cager, who was chosen as the All-Conference forward in 1957, once scored 46 points in a single game at the 1957 State tourney, a record that still stands.

He was also noted as a fine defensive player and one of the best rebounders in the conference.

Piggee, the other Hall of Famer, scored five points in the balloting. He was selected for his efforts in football.

The 5-10 halfback-fullback led the Ram grid teams in rushing with 675 yards in 1960 and 742 yards in 1961. His average per carry was 7.4 yards. Piggee also led the 1961 squad in scoring with 70 points.

Although, Piggee averaged a little less than 100 yards per game, he did run over 100 more than once. In the last game of the 1960 season, the ex-college fullback exploded for 157 yards. The following year, Piggee racked up 163 yards and 211 yards in two more grid games.

He was chosen as All-Conference Back-Of-The-Year in 1960 and tied for that same honor, with Cliff Kennedy of Modesto, the following year.

In the 1964 football season, fullback Piggee carried most of the load for the San Francisco State College backfield. He led the Gators in rushing with 568 yards.

Judges for the selections were Ralph Hillsman, dean of men; Jack Gaddy, athletic director; Tom Wilson, health department, and Bill Fischer, counselor.

This year's selections brought the Hall's membership up to 33 ex-Ram greats. Among the more notable are NFL great Ollie Matson, 49er Gary Lewis, City College President Louis Conlan, and Hillsman.

Duffers Fade To Eighth Spot In Cal State Golf Championships

By Bill Pates

City College's Golden Gate Conference co-champion golf team followed one average post-season performance with another to finish a distant eighth in the California State Junior College Championship Tournament at Visalia last week, as the Southern California teams dominated much of the action.

The only excitement generated by the Golden Gate Conference entrants was in the individual competition where Chabot's Brian McNally, who barely qualified for the trip to the state meet, took first-place honors with a 36 hole score of 142, beating San Jose's Jess Vaughn, who came in second, by two strokes.

The golf squad from Santa Ana College won the state championship with a score of 773 to beat out Los Angeles Valley by two strokes. Right behind them was Fresno City College at 776 in third and College of the Deserts in fourth, way back with a 787 score.

Conference co-champion Merritt College finished in seventh at 811 with City College of San Francisco's fading champions in eighth with a 36-hole total of 817, out of first place by 44 strokes.

The best individual score by a Ram linker was posted by Tom O'Kane who played two fairly consistent rounds for a 155, never blowing 80 as did every other squad member.

Commenting on his club's performance, Coach Grover Klemmer stated, "We just didn't do well. No one played very well."

Jim Schroder, the club's number one man, blew to an 80 in the opening round.

Schroder's closing round 76 salvaged him an 156 score for the 36-hole tourney.

Ron O'Conner, number three man on the club, started off well with an opening score of 75 but then blew to a 81 on the closing 18, for a tie with teammate Schroder at 156.

"I thought O'Conner was going to do real well," Klemmer commented, "but it was real hot and the boys just couldn't take it. They were taking a lot of gas, especially Soden and Butler."

Apparently the squad is used to playing in cool, windy, foggy San Francisco with the surrounding area temperatures averaging in the 50's and 60's.

Mike Soden and Mike Butler, the squad's number four and five men respectively, who shot "fat" rounds in the conference tourney, blew apart and played their weakest golf of the year.

"One of the problems other than the heat was the fact that we had to play the 46 holes on the same day," Klemmer remarked.

Carli, Dunne On All-League Team

The 1965 Golden Gate Conference baseball season came to a close today with the selection of an All-League team.

City College's Barry Carli and Mike Dunne were named to the first team. Carli led the league in hitting until the final day of the season, but the swift outfielder still batted a solid .388.

Dunne made second team All-Conference last season in the outfield but switched to catcher this year and he shares the backstop with Chabot's George Mitterwald, who signed with the Minnesota Twins for a reported $15,000. Mitterwald hit .293 while Dunne blasted away at a .373 clip.

The rest of the All-Conference team was as follows: pitchers, Bob Foderero (Chabot) 7-2, and Jim Phillips (San Jose) 4-0; first baseman, Pat Cavataio (San Jose) .394; second baseman Rich Bladt (Foothill) .318; third baseman Marty Hall (Foothill) .330; and shortstop Paz Rocha (San Jose) .333.

Joining Carli in the outfield were Jim Gama (San Jose) .382, and Bill Thomson (Foothill) .407.

To receive Highest Honors, students had to maintain a grade point average minimum of 3.75 during their semesters at the college.

An average of 3.50 is necessary to graduate with High Honors, while an average of 3.3 qualifies a student for Honors.

Some students could still be candidates for commencement honors since the recognition depends on their final grades.

Patten To Head Fall 'G' Staff

Following an editorial board meeting last week, Don Patten was elected Editor In Chief of The Guardsman for the Fall semester, 1965. Patten was this semester's Managing Editor.

Rounding out the board selections were Jim Rauh, News Editor and Bill Pates as Sports Editor. The position of Staff Editor will be filled in the fall.

Members of this semester's editorial board who are leaving the staff include Editor In Chief Patricia H. Dutter and Feature Editor Mike Barber.

Conlan Talks On Events And Issues Of Spring Semester

By Don Patten

In reviewing this semester's activities and events, City College President Louis G. Conlan commented that "what has been abnormal in the past has become normal today. Despite it all, I feel our educational program is at its highest point and am looking forward to more good work by all."

When asked for his opinions on the recently presented Student-Administration-Faculty advisory report, Conlan said he plans to review it immediately with hope for implementation without delay. "The committee has put lots of effort and energy into this report through meetings which, for the most part, took place at 7 a.m. daily.

"I believe this is a good example of the cooperative effort of students and faculty for which this college is famous," the President said.

Conlan, in summarizing his thoughts on this semester, added that this has been a very busy year what with the voter-approved school bond issue which consumed much of his time since he was chairman for the school district. "New approaches to activities were begun for which I see nothing wrong," Conlan said.

In regard to the coming summer session at the college, he announced that there has already been twice the number of enrollees, with registration still open. "We can, with our budget, accommodate approximately 2500 students," he said.

Conlan disclosed that this Fall, the highest enrollment in the college's history is anticipated. Approximately 8200 day students will be enrolled and 2500 night students. In comparison, this semester's enrollment added to 7500 day and 2200 night students.

"It will be difficult to get everyone in without turning any away, but we are confident this will not take place." Conlan also said that in addition, 25 new instructors will be added to the faculty next semester.

Reward Awaits Restorer Of Marital Bliss

Tom Dooley suffered two unfortunate experiences a couple of weeks ago. He lost his ring in the week that The Guardsman, the Big Brother to those who lose wedding rings on campus, was on holiday break.

Consequently, Tom Dooley had to wait two weeks before he could assure his wife that Big Brother had the situation in hand.

Dooley left his wedding band in the men's rest room on Science Hall's second floor, and he is very anxious to get the ring back, so much so that he has left a sizeable reward with the lost and found office in S-149, which will be issued upon receipt of the ring.

The wedding band is gold with a silver inlay, and it is filled with all the sentimental value of a year and a half's worth of married life.

Dooley looks forward to a speedy return of the ring; his wife won't let him go out of the house without identification of his marital status.

Intra Leaders Vie For Honors Tonight

The truth of a hard fought season will be determined tonight in the final 1965 intramural clash of the year . . . the championship.

The Irish, representing the Independent league, earned a crack at the championship in a spectacular double overtime triumph last Thursday against the Do-Humps. A tight 53 to 52 tally was the result of that crucial conflict.

Opposing the Irish in tonight's championship match will be the victor of a Monday night war involving the Freshman and Alpha Kappa Rho.

The Freshman represent the clubs and are coming off an undefeated season with six consecutive victories. Alpha Kappa Rho won out in fraternity league competition.

Commenting on this season's action AMS President-elect, Stan Angel, said "There have been some real good games this year and some interesting results."

Last Wednesday the Guardsman "team" was massacred by the Ram Ski Club in a lop sided tilt. The Guardsman received a victory in spite of their defeat . . . and the Ski Club got a mark in the win column too.

The simple explanation for such seemingly wierd bookkeeping lies in the fact that both teams were scheduled to play other teams. Since their opposition failed to materialize both were awarded victories and then proceeded to play each other.

Student-Faculty Committee Submits Speech Area Report

Recommendations regarding use of the newly established free speech area have been submitted to President Louis G. Conlan by the Student-Faculty-Administration Advisory Committee.

The report was submitted June 2 and recommended the establishment of a standing advisory committee to screen speakers and control the free speech area.

Students who wish to take advantage of the free speech area are required to sign up with Dean Ralph Hillsman in S-148. Usage of the area can be denied only if the student is under disciplinary action.

Off-campus speakers must be invited and sponsored by an on-campus organization. Under the recommendation, Hillsman would refer to the committee any guest speeaker whose subject or material is questionable.

Students denied the right to use the free speech area would be allowed to appeal to the committee. An additional function would be that of advising Conlan on necessary reforms or amendments to the speech policy.

Since the establishment of the free speech area on May 17, a total of 11 speakers has signed up to speak for half-hour periods, Hillsman explained. However, two speakers cancelled their speeches and three postponements were made.

Soph King And Queen Contest Nets $707

Mike Selsnik and Nancy Demetrak were chosen king and queen of the Sophomore Ball, held May 21. The coronation was the high point of a successful contest which netted $707 for the Sophomore Class scholarship fund.

The couple was sponsored by Beta Tau and drew votes amounting to $196.

Running a close second were the Freshman Class nominees, Jim Stull and Penny Brown who checked in with $146.

Student government adviser Jim Wyatt expressed his opinion of the event, saying, "The contest and the ball were both very successful. The couples this year managed to obtain, in one way or another, more than $700, $200 over last year's collection."

Kaleidoscope Of Activities Highlights Spring Semester

IT HARDLY SEEMS possible that another semester could pass so quickly; and yet once again it's time to sit down and highlight some events of spring '65.

The mid-sixties rolled in as a carbon copy of its predecessor, but before long were filled with excitement, disappointment, surprise and upset.

Excitement unfolded when a package marked "Reform On Campus" was opened and its contents were distributed minus the familiar collegiate buttons and bows.

NEW LOOK

Those sporting the new look slowly rocked the campus in an all out effort to cripple, and eventually kill the political apathy which plagues "Alemany Gap."

Disappointment came in a more subtle form when coach Roy Burkhead announced that swimming was officially dropped from the varsity program and all scheduled events were cancelled.

Amazingly enough, apathy wasn't the culprit that caused the sport to drown; of all things—the lack of a college swimming pool!

Surprise is the only word adequate enough to describe the deluge of Letters To The Editor. Interested students rallied around their typewriters to the extent that page two features became an oddity.

A HEARTWARMING GESTURE

Nonetheless, it was a heartwarming gesture which proved someone, somewhere must be reading the paper.

Upset were the plans of ROC candidates when student election results revealed they eked out a mere three of the seventeen government offices.

However, time is a great healer, and there's always next semester as the defeated prefer to rationalize.

And now as everyone's thoughts turn to vacations and such, there is but one item that merits mention. This month marks a milestone for The Guardsman, and while it is considered in poor taste to reveal a person's age — here is one who is mighty proud of being 30 years old.

Foresight Unsure Students Keep Serious Ones Out

By Mike Barber

IN A FEW months, thousands of entering freshmen will jam the colleges across the country, straining existing facilities to the bursting point. Other thousands, because of crowded conditions, will have been denied admission. Why?

Without delving into the reproductive urges of the human animal or the multitude of other factors involved, there seems to be a single casual factor that stands over all the rest. Poor planning.

The parents who eagerly raised their children to go to college were too shortsighted to see that almost everyone on their block was doing exactly the same and, subsequently, that educational facilities would have to be greatly expanded if their hopes were to be fulfilled by junior's getting educated.

PROTESTS AND TAXES

Many had the wisdom to put money away for their own children's education, but few were eager to pay the increased taxes for the facilities necessary to accommodate their youngsters. People protest high taxes, while at the same time, they deplore the crowded conditions which threaten their child's education.

Recently the legislature of this state cut back some instructors' salaries and trimmed the education budget. San Francisco State, among others, was forced to admit fewer students than it has room for because of lack of funds.

CHILDREN AND OPPORTUNITY

While all this is going on people are still having children and telling these children that they will have to go to college. Yet few are willing to put out the tax money that will insure the existence of adequate academic opportunity for them.

Probably the majority of today's students are not going to college because they want to become educated, but because their parents expect them to become a doctor, lawyer, engineer, and so on. Trying to do what is expected of them, without really having any strong, selfish goal in mind, often leaves people in a practically motivationless state of apathy. Education, without a desire to learn, is a drag.

Many of the future City College students who are graduating from high school now will ask themselves why they want to go to college; many of them won't really know. Their reasons for coming here will be based on the expectations of someone else. "Mommy told me I should." "They said I had to have two years of college to get a good job." "My friends from high school are coming here."

DROPOUTSVILLE

All education is beneficial. There is no such thing as worthless knowledge. However, encouraging someone to go to college, without first developing within himself serious expectations for his own future may be all but meaningless. These people are strong candidates for dropoutsville.

Few people can be somebody simply because it is expected of them. Even those who fool themselves into believing that another's expectations are their own are unlikely to succeed. If a person in incapable of being sincere with himself about his own hopes and plans, it is unlikely that he can be successful simply by adopting someone elses.

WAITING FOR INSPIRATION

Many people today don't develop their personal expectations until they are in college. The saddest part of the situation is that these people, while attending college and waiting to become inflamed with inspiration for a particular vocation, are taking up space in the college that could be more efficiently utilized by someone else who has strong ideas of where he wants to go and what he wants to be.

If educational facilities were unlimited, there would be no reason to deny anyone admission. But under the present conditions, students who are qualified to attend, yet have little reason to except that someone simply expects them to, are doing a disservice to those who know that college is an integral necessity to the development of their career.

'Slip-Stick Jockey'

Coed Engineer's Interests Cover Wide Range From Astronomy To Ice Skating

Engineering students come in all shapes and sizes. Amid such diversity few can be exceptional if all are. But rarities do exist.

Imagine a tall, slender blonde of pleasant proportions, athletically inclined, of warm, sociable disposition, yet with a flair for politics and such normally esoteric subjects as astronomy and ice-skating.

LONE COED engineering major, Marsha Marcotte, calculates her next move.

Marcia Marcotte, although hardly fitting the average conception of an engineering student, is just as serious about her vocational field as the dryest slip-stick jockey.

Since the age of 11, when she decided on an engineering career, until now, at 19 years of age, she has already come a long way in her field. At 16 she graduated from Drew High School.

Coming directly to City College, Miss Marcotte participated in a wide range of activities, the result of which earned her a position on the Associated Women Student dean's board and a reputation as an active member of the International Relations Club.

One of her favorite memberships is in the campus Engineering Society, of which she has been treasurer and, notably, the only woman member. Undaunted by this situation, which might make some coeds uncomfortable, she says, "The boys are very nice. Boys are much better friends than girls."

As a member of the society she helped promote the Mayo scholarship fund, which now makes available a cash award to an outstanding engineering student each year.

"I'm not sure if I'm going to apply for the scholarship or not," she said, showing more concern for other aspects of the society. "It's a good way to get in touch with other people in the field. We've had field trips to General Motors and Ames Research lab, also. And we have social events," she added.

Miss Marcotte also expressed a wish that more students in engineering and technology would join the society and take advantage of what it has to offer.

Outside of her club activities, but still on campus, she works as the lab assistant in Engineering 48. To augment her abilities as assistant, she took part in an instructor's course in Space Science at the nearby National Aeronautical and Space Administration center.

Now in her third year here of foundational preparation for an architecture and general engineering major, she manages to succeed with a full-time load which includes four architecture courses, biological space science, and courses in history and political science.

Asked which subjects she liked most and least, she replied happily, "Field surveying was one of my favorite courses," and then, after much deliberation, would only say that "architecture courses take up the most time."

After classes every day she goes off to her job as secretary for her father's firm, the Roy Marcotte Construction Company. Past employment includes work done for the South San Francisco Planning Commission and several local lawyers.

In her leisure hours, Miss Marcotte likes to relax by hiking, ice-skating, swimming, dancing, or simply listening to music, all kinds of music, from rock and roll to classical.

After graduating from City College, which she plans to do next semester, Miss Marcotte wants to attend the University of California at Berkeley. There she will study for bachelor's, masters and doctorate degrees, as well as teaching credentials, in architectural engineering.

Then, she says, she may return to this campus as an instructor. "City College is an excellent school. Every teacher I've had is excellent. It's a close-knit group, too. Teachers get to know their students."

Simultaneously with her work here at the college, busy Miss Marcotte plans also to moonlight as a designer of modern apartment buildings for her father's contracting firm. —M. B.

Birdwatching Hazardous During Mating Season

By Eugene Rosendahl

Parking lot F is for the birds. At least that is the opinion of Robert Kent, a freshman who has suffered some "irritating abuse" from several "fine-feathered fiends" that swoop down from the trees around lot F.

Kent, returning to his car after classes several weeks ago, was startled as he approached the trees when a blackbird dove down from its towering pedestal and began making swoops back and forth around his head.

He counteracted with several wild swings with a book and the bird retreated screeching, in bird language, words that if translated, would surely have added to Kent's already "ruffled feathers."

The next day Kent again strolled the familiar pathway to lot F when another incident quite similar to the first one occurred. Less viciously this time, the bird kept his distance and just sailed closely by, escorting Kent to his car.

Refusing to park at lot F for over a week, Kent finally decided to try parking there again. This time, however, he warily followed a group of other students going in the same direction. Nothing happened, at least, to the students who passed ahead through the trees.

But poor Kent! Again he was involved in an aerial-ground skirmish, and like the first time, the ground force won out with superior fire power; the power of printed matter — used as a formidable weapon.

Victorious survival, however, was not enough for Kent. He refuses to park at lot F.

"Not only are three attacks by a bird enough, but you should see what those birds did to my convertible one day when I had my top down!," he exclaimed.

His car has (or had) a new, black, rolled and pleated naugahyde interior . . . "These birds do nice work!" Kent, disgusted, commented.

Samuel Carpenter, zoology instructor here, laughingly explained the unusual behavior of the birds, saying, "This time of year, blackbirds set up a mating territory and sometimes attack other birds, including their own species, and occasionally even passers-by who invade their territory."

U.S. Aid To Diem Defeats Its Purpose

By Hugh Haworth

THE FREEDOM of expression and advocacy is a very important factor in any country's ability to stabilize itself during times of crisis. This is evident in the tragedy that has occurred in Vietnam over the last 11 years.

In South Vietnam until Ngo Dinh Diem took over in 1954, there were many nationalist parties of different philosophies. Most were anti-communist or noncommunist. However, Diem started to eliminate all his own opposition which, over the next few years, turned out to include a sizeable number of true South Vietnamese nationalists.

At first Diem won popular support by ridding the countryside of the bandits and terrorizers, but when he turned to eliminating dissenters from his regime, he forced them into the Viet Cong.

The United States promised to give aid to the Diem government in 1954 provided he had the general populace behind him. He did. But, the administration did not withdraw military aid when the people turned slowly against the Saigon regime, and especially against Diem's brother's and sister-in-law's neo-Inquisition.

Unfortunately, the U.S. commitment to stop Ho Chi Minh's extension into the South could not stop Diem's repressive actions.

Here, freedom of expression comes in. If the exiled party leaders and the banished newspapers of a healthy nationalist vein could have operated below the 17th parallel, the U.S. might today be backing a government composed of a democratic alignment of noncommunist leaders.

Now, most of those news organs have decided to choose between the lesser of two evils and side with the Viet Cong until all shades of Diem are gone from Saigon.

That they work with the lesser of two evils there is not saying that they are forcefully or tactfully being subordinated to the communist interest in South Vietnam. And although there is always the chance that they might be successful in bringing about an agreeable government in Saigon, there is no way of knowing whether they'll have strength enough to hold back Ho Chi Minh's forces from the North.

Sometimes the United States foreign policy sees too much red and not enough of the red, white and blue of the Bill of Rights.

The United States' single-minded and ever-growing support of the loudest anticommunist in Saigon who alienated the populace has given so much propaganda to the enemy and would-be allies of the past, that to complete the American mission in Southeast Asia the United States will have to eat some humble pie and hope that there are enough of the healthy dissenters left to combat communism there.

• Journalistic Ethics

Editor, The Guardsman:

Quite naturally, I read the April 28 issue of The Guardsman with great interest. As we once used to say, "the paper jumped," for the reason that some exciting things happened that made good copy.

There is, however, a matter of great personal concern to me in your reporting of my conversations. It was my understanding that the following was a privileged communication to your reporter, Mike Barber:

"Commenting about those students attending the meeting, Luckmann said, 'We don't mind YR's and YD's, but, judging by their appearance, these were the students more interested in being Young Socialists and W.E.B. DuBois's'."

In keeping with my somewhat pragmatic philosophy that students learn the most permanent lessons from their mistakes, I am asking that you call this breach of journalistic ethics to Mr. Barber's attention.

ARE YOU ready ski cat? Let it happen, Cap'n! The line becomes taut, the ski begins pushing back water, and the rider slowly feels himself become airborne. Seconds later he is skimming over the water, his skis seeming to sense his every wish and instantly obeying.

Here the skier is master.

Up ahead, a large pleasure craft closes the distance between the two oncoming craft. The ski boat slows to cross the wake and the skier feels his ski sink slightly into the water and his sense of control and mastery leave.

Bending his knees to absorb the shock of the oncoming waves, he smashes head on into the watery mountains, and soon the boat has increased speed and once again, the feeling of exhilaration and freedom command the skier's thoughts.

Moving back and forth across the boat's creamy wake and then edging close to the river bank, brushing within hair's breadth of stumps and rocky bottom, the skier seems to thrill in the dangers this great sport affords.

From the ski boat, the observer signals to the skier that the time is approaching to cut and that a beach landing can be made. The skier welcomes this method of landing as it is still early in the year and the water is somewhat uncomfortable.

Approaching the beach, the ski boat increases speed and the skier, leaning far out to the side, quickly releases the ski line and at the same time executes a series of cuts to slow this 30 mile per hour bulk so as to hit the beach at a safe speed.

Suddenly, the skeg of the ski strikes the bottom and the skier, coming out of the ski, is sharply lurched forward and in the next instant, finds himself dry and content on the warm, sunny beach.

As summer rapidly approaches, thousands upon thousands will be flocking to the state's lakes and rivers to enjoy this most popular water sport. The one thing to remember is that with so many ski enthusiasts, the danger of accidents increases many fold.

Over the Memorial Day weekend, such a situation was the case and with the number of skiers racing across and in front of one another, it is indeed surprising that there were no injuries.

So when the hallowed halls of this institution of higher learning have been cleared for the long vacation, by all means head for the water but remember to use good sense at all times. The skier is master when he skis but the water is master at ALL times.

Student Council Climaxes Year With New Allocations Policy, Okays Fencing Team Request

By James Rauh

Further resolutions were passed and a new policy governing allocation of funds was introduced and adopted as the final meetings of the college's Student Council were held last week, bringing to a close student government affairs of this Spring, 1965, semester.

The policy concerning financial allocations, introduced by Doug Bianchi, was set down to correct the manner of allocations to different campus organizations during the semester.

"Budget requests should be made," Bianchi suggested, "in council by a representative of the organization desiring the allocation so that he might answer questions pertaining to the allocation."

He then moved for the adoption of the following policy: first, the Council of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco will consider special allocations of funds only if a representative from the organization requesting the funds is present at the meeting when the request is presented. The representative will be expected to have detailed information on the necessity for these funds and on their proposed distribution.

Secondly, the president of the Associated Students will instruct the Finance Chairman to provide copies of these regulations to organizations requesting special funds.

This policy was adopted by a vote of 12-0-0.

Barbara Kontis, Recreation Association president and Associated Student vice president-elect, representing the fencing team, made a request for $142.50 to finance a trip to the 1965 National Fencing Championships for Girard Esponda, of the fencing team, and a sponsor.

Question was raised as to the need for a sponsor on the trip to Los Angeles, where the competition is to be held later this month. The question was followed by a move for amendment of the request by cutting the allocation in half.

Accordingly, $71.25 was voted to the fencing team for the trip. But then Miss Kontis asked for at least the plane fare for the sponsor, Frances Galloway, indicating that "she would pay for the rest of the expenses."

Following this plea, and also a note of commendation to Miss Galloway by Miss Kontis for her hard work in developing fencing here, Student Council reversed itself and gave the entire $142.50 to the fencing team.

John J. Brady, coordinator of student welfare, gave council a gavel that had been his father's, the late John F. Brady, assistant superintendent of schools in San Francisco.

Six H&R Students Will Fly With Pan American

Pan American World Airways will employ six hotel and restaurant students as stewards for world flights this summer, Larry Wong, the department's personnel director, announced last week.

Only six students were chosen from 37 applicants. They will train at San Francisco International Airport next week.

The applicants include Gerald Henas, Michael Dunn, Tony Nuccio, Ben Koenig, Max Greenspan and Patrick White.

Besides a regular salary and uniform allowance, students will earn two units toward graduation. However, each may not travel and work on this same plan again.

"We will try to give other students a chance at these colorful jobs. With jet travel so popular nowadays, airlines are requesting more and more trained personnel," Wong said.

"I believe that we are the only two-year college in the States that was chosen to send students for these summer jobs. We have many students who work full time with overseas airlines, though," he added.

"We hope to continue obtaining airline employment for our students," Wong emphasized.

Qualifications for these summer travel jobs are that students be at least 20 years old, U. S. citizens, in good health, a certain height and weight, above average grades, and that each student have the ability to maintain good public relations.

Job Hunters Find Doors Closing In San Francisco

Thousands of school and college students from all parts of the country have descended upon San Francisco in search of summer vacation jobs, but most are finding closed doors, Joseph A. Amori, placement director, commented in an interview last week.

San Francisco has been the hardest area hit of all the cities in Northern California, Amori said. "There are just too many people for the available jobs," according to a personnel director of one of the largest airlines in the area.

"I would recommend," Amori said, "that students enroll in summer session and compete for a part time job." Students interested in summer jobs can file applications in S-108.

While the number of applicants far exceeds the number of jobs available, employers have cut down on the number of jobs because of increased costs of production, operation and administration. However, Amori said, there are many permanent full time and part time jobs available to qualified applicants.

Students with special skills, such as typing, shorthand, bookkeeping, office machine operation, arts and crafts, who desire jobs on a 20-hour week basis were advised by Amori to report to the college placement service where there are openings. All applicants will be thoroughly screened and tested.

The economy of the San Francisco Bay Area is in excellent shape even though there is now a 5.5 per cent unemployment rate, Amori commented, adding, "Seventeen hundred new people move into the state of California each day of the week and contribute to the overall unemployment."

Employment opportunities are going to the older, best qualified, and experienced students. But although the City College placement service has placed students in a variety of summer jobs, there are still some to be filled.

Austenal Donates Dental Lab Equipment Valued At $3000

By Patricia H. Dutter, Editor

The Austenal Company of New York and Chicago, a division of Howe-Sound Company, recently donated to the college Vitallium processing equipment and supplies valued at $3000.

"Thus a new technique has been added to the dental laboratory technology program," commented Frank Szehner, director of the curriculum.

This technique involves using a non-precious chromium-cobalt metal called Vitallium, widely used in dentistry to construct partial denture frameworks and full dentures.

The Vitallium process consists basically of the ancient art of "lost wax" casting, with the addition of modern electronic equipment for semi-automatic operation, Szehner explained.

A casting pattern, he continued, is made of wax invested in high heat-resistant investment material consisting of silica flour with controlled grain size and tetraethyl silica as a binder, forming the mold. A wax spruce connects the pattern to the outside of the mold.

Szehner explained that the automatic gas electric furnace controls time and temperature of burning out the wax in the mold and preheating of the investment mold, assuring a properly expanded mold just prior to casting. The mold is preheated in the furnace for a period of one hour and 45 minutes to a 2150° F temperature.

The mold is then placed in a spring-wound centrifugal force casting machine where the Vitallium metal is melted by means of an oxygen-acetylene torch.

A Radiation Pyrometer records the exact level of the molten alloy and at the precise moment releases the casting machine, which spins, throwing the molten Vitallium metal into the mold, creating in metal an exact duplication of the original wax pattern.

The actual casting operation takes approximately 80 seconds.

Paul Shellhouse, technical service representative for Austenal Company in Chicago, visited the campus last month and instructed students in the dental curriculum with regard to the proper technique used in the Vitallium process.

While on campus, Shellhouse was special guest at a dinner-party where former students, present students, leaders in industry, and owners of commercial dental laboratories connected with the work-experience phase of the dental curriculum, gathered to view the Vitallium equipment and tour the dental lecture and "shop" area.

Explaining the effect of the new equipment with relation to the college program, Szehner said, "Every effort is being made to maintain the dental technology curriculum content in keeping with the latest advances in dental techniques and the science of dental materials.

"We are indeed fortunate to be the recipient of such a generous gift from the Austenal Company," he added, and "we take pride in the confidence this international dental manufacturing company has in our dental technician training program and will strive to uphold the high quality and excellent reputation of the Vitallium product."

Dr. Fine To Join Sociology Staff Next Semester

Dr. Alvin Fine, formerly rabbi of Temple Emanu-el, will join the City College sociology department in September as an instructor of social problems, sociology G11, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, announced today.

Dr. Fine is a graduate of Reed College in Oregon where he received his Bachelor's Degree as a major in sociology. He then prepared for the rabbinite and was awarded the degree of Master of Hebrew Literature.

Dr. Fine served on the faculty of Hebrew Union College in New York and also as a chaplain during World War II in the South Pacific.

After his retirement from Temple Emanu-el, Dr. Fine was awarded the Doctorate in Humane Letters by the University of Santa Clara. He continues his activity in community affairs as member of the Board of Directors of the San Francisco Human Rights Commission and the local chapter of American Civil Liberties Union.

Dr. Fine's Sociology G11 classes will meet Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 2 and 3 p.m.

Phi Beta Rho Wins Dougherty Trophy

The Dougherty Trophy was awarded to Phi Beta Rho, the sorority with the highest grade point average, and the outstanding service award was presented to Priscilla Miles, at the women's awards and recognition night program on May 26.

One hundred and fifty women attended the program held in the Statler wing.

A western style showdown, staged by Mary Maurer and Nancy Hughes, got the show under way. "The showdown got everybody in the mood for the program to follow," Nina Jacobs, Associated Women Student president, said.

Guest speaker was Dorothy Handy, attorney-at-law.

The three presidents, Miss Jacobs, AWS, Barbara Kontis, Recreation Association, and Gerri Maloney, Inter-Sorority Council, introduced the new presidents for Fall 1965. They are Mary Maurer, AWS; Pamela Maul, RA, and Carol Jiminez, ISC.

The AWS presented Miss Jacobs with a gift for her service during the past semester.

The program was concluded with some old, western style, home movies furnished by Miss Maurer.

Sports Night Spectators Watch Faculty Beat Students, Irish Victory, Pugilistic Battles

By Frank Cooney

A surprising upset in championship cage competition, a first round knock out in boxing, and a legally authorized conflict between faculty and students added up to create a "completely successful Associated Men Student Sports Night" May 26.

In one of the many highlights of what AMS President-elect Stan Angel terms "an outstanding Sports Night," the Freshman Club cagers were halted three points shy of a perfect season in their tight tilt against the Irish, 65-59.

After having trounced all comers in regular club league play as well as walking over the Fraternity League champs in a semifinal feud, the Freshman team found tough competition in the form of the Irish team.

The fourth quarter of the final game ended with the underdog Irish five having equaled the play of the Freshman by fighting to a tie.

The ensuing crucial overtime battle ended with the Freshman team in possession of an insurmountable three-point deficit and the Irish team in possession of the Spring, 1965, intramural championship trophy.

Willie Wise caged 26 points in vain for the Freshman, while Pat Kerns of the winning squad racked up 22 points.

The other basketball game of the evening saw the faculty maintaining their supremacy over the students by defeating the "boys from student government" in a close 18 to 16 skirmish.

Representing the best sole effort of the faculty was Terry Kilpatrick of the English department. Kilpatrick amassed a total of 4 points in spearheading the faculty squad to victory.

Angel of the "boy's" squad was responsible for 8 of the losers' 16 points.

In addition to basketball, another event which captured interest was a boxing exhibition.

With the controversial Liston-Clay championship match having been fought on the previous night, Sports Night spectators were treated to some real boxing action at the hands (literally) of coach Roy Diederichsen's musclemen.

Nary a round of fighting had passed before a boxer hit the deck. In the first round of the first bout Steve Chuckins could endure only 45 seconds of Rojer Blattler's punishment before he went down... and out!

The ten scheduled three rounders included some well-matched, hard-fought battles, and the action was a timely exhibition of the good sportsmanship and exciting action that is involved in this highly competitive sport.

All competing boxers were awarded trophies for their "timely exhibition."

Trophies were also given to deserving teams and players of the three intramural leagues.

The overall champion Irish team was granted a well-deserved trophy for its upset victory earlier in the evening. The Irish also captured the Independent league honors.

Although the Freshman team was defeated, a medal for taking part in Sports Night as well as placing second in intramural competition was given to the team captain, Bobby Johnson. The team also received a trophy for surviving the club league circuit.

The first place team of the Fraternity league, Alpha Kappa Rho, was also honored with a trophy.

Second place teams of each league were recognized and received medals. Placing second were the Do-Humps (Independent), the Ram Ski Club (Club), and Alpha Phi Epsilon(Fraternity).

Hard-working individuals did not go unnoticed in the festivities. High point scorers from each league were John Wallace of H&R (Club), Tom Courtney of the Irish (Independent), and Calvin Peterson of Alpha Phi Epsilon (Fraternity). Peterson was highest high pointer with an astounding 24.1 point average per game.

Esponda To Bid For '68 Olympics

Gerard Esponda, Class B fencer here, took sixth place at the Pacific Coast electric foil fencing championship matches last Saturday at the Presidio.

In the preliminaries which started at 9 a.m., Esponda won three bouts and lost two. He made the finals along with eight other fencers and lost fourth place by only two touches.

The meet, according to Esponda, was not collegiate; it was stiff professional competition.

Among the fencers there were two women from the United States Olympic team. They were Tomi Angel's who incidentally took first place in women's competition at Saturday's meet, and Harriet King who took second.

Esponda's next challenge is the U.S. National Fencing Championship June 19 to be held at University of California at Los Angeles.

If he places high at this meet he will be a possible candidate for the 1968 Olympic team.

Esponda gives credit for his success and that of the college's fencing team to Gerry Biagini, who in 1958 was on the U.S. Olympic team.

Record Performances Place Rams Eighth In State Meet

By Ivan Temes

With nearly all its entrants going faster and higher than they had ever done before, City College's track men overcame a freak incident in the opening running event of the day to finish a respectable eighth in the State junior college championships on May 29 in Modesto.

Santa Ana compiled 59 points to defend its crown successfully against the challenge of Fresno with 53 and Foothill who scored 32½ as the Rams tallied 23 points for their best effort since 1960.

Only six of the 16 existing State meet records were able to withstand the onslaught of the superbly conditioned athletes, so Ram coach Lou Vasquez wasn't kidding when he said, "This competition is getting tougher and tougher so it's a real accomplishment when you can take several places as our men did."

Dwight Tucker headed the City College entry with his lifetime best high jump of 6-8 to finish runnerup to Foothill's Max Lowe who broke the 7-foot barrier by half an inch.

Sonny Johnson, Chris Davis and Rod Coleman also picked an appropriate time to come up with the best performance of their track careers.

JOHNSON PLACES THIRD

Hurdler Johnson knocked two-tenths of a second off the local standard with a swift 37.7 clocking in the 330-yard intermediate hurdles, good enough for third place behind the 37.3 state record by Contra Costa's Ricky Rogers.

Davis sped to a 48.8 second quarter-mile—bettering the Ram mark of 48.9 he and Lee Benton had equaled this year—for fifth spot with teammate Coleman in the next slot at 49.3.

Another City College record was yet to fall as sprinter Bob Prince, Coleman, Johnson and Davis roared to a 3:16.4 mile relay—almost a second under their old record—to take third behind Pierce and Orange Coast.

Naturally, against such top-flight opposition everything didn't come out smelling like roses for the Rams whose big disappointment came in the first event, the 440-relay, where they felt their best chance for victory.

That's the way it looked, too, for three-quarters of the race as Davis, Vern Bradford and Chris Ransom had the Rams in front. Unfortunately, in the frenzy Ransom and anchor man Prince couldn't get together and the baton never did get handed off as Fresno took over to win.

Naturally disappointed over the quick turnabout, Vasquez declared, "That's the first time anything like that happened to us this year, but it sure was a bad time since we would have been third in the state if we could've held the lead."

The only other Red and White entrant, Leroy Woods, triple-jumped 47-7, almost equaling the Ram standard of 47-8¾ he set the previous week, but it wasn't enough to score as Mike Woods of East Los Angeles won the event with a leap of 49-9¾.

Some of the top first place performances of the day included: a 4:12.9 mile by San Mateo's Marcel Hetu; a 9.5 100-dash and 21.2 220-yard dash by Santa Ana's Fred Kuller; 25-7 long jump by Modesto's Gary Ard; 1:49.5 half-mile by San Diego Mesa's Bob Rose; and a double by Chaffey's Steve Fite, 58-1¾ shotput and 182-1½ discus toss.

For the Rams who came through, it was a case of hard work and dedication reaping dividends.

DAVIS UNDER 50-SECONDS IN 440

It took Davis more than half the season to break the 50-second "barrier" in the 440, but when he finally did he became best in the North State, winning both the NorCal trials and meet. Against the southerners he was up against men all of whom had run 48.3 or better but still ran his best race to finish well in the running.

Johnson, termed a "fierce competitor" by those observing him, seemed hung up at the 38.5 second mark in the intermediate hurdles, and things looked worse when he fell to a 39.4 time for fourth in the NorCal trials, but he came back to win the NorCal meet in 37.9 to advance to the State.

Tucker, recovering from an injury, and Coleman took the last available qualifying spots in both the NorCal trials and meet and the spunky little quarter-miler who opened the season with a now-forgotten 52.3 440 modestly felt, "We had a real good coach and his patience finally paid off."

Kezar Hosts First Pro Soccer Game In State's History

By Art Rodriguez

City College soccer fans, who followed the twice State Championship Ram team through its 12-2 season record, got their first look at soccer football in California sports history when Kezar stadium played host to a 6-2 struggle between two of Europe's finest soccer teams, Nottingham Forest of England and Hannover 1896 of Germany last Wednesday.

Combining precision passing, excellent ball control and constant pressure, the English eleven were masters on the field on the way to their second triumph in the four-game United States tour.

The scoring got started early when inside left, John Barnwell, took a shot at the goal which bounced off the goal post toward Christopher Crowe, outside right, who fired it into the net for a 1-0 Nottingham lead.

Hannover came back quickly to score on inside right Werner Graeber's shot to give the Germans a 1-1 tie.

From then on, it was Nottingham's half. For the rest of the half the Nottingham Forest crew showed Ram fans how it's done, applying constant defensive pressure on the German eleven thus refusing to allow any sort of Hannover penetration.

With 20 minutes gone in the half, the Nottingham team went up on the scoreboard once again. This time the score was set up by a combination of short passes which terminated with Colin Addison, inside right, putting the ball through for a 2-1 Nottingham lead.

The English upped the score to 3-1 with only a few minutes left in the half on a 12-yard boot by Barnwell after a pass from Crowe.

The second half scoring got off to a quick start as Nottingham drove deep into Hannover territory. In the course of the drive a foul was called, and the Nottingham crew sent Alan Hinton to attempt the penalty. Hinton was true to form, running the score up to 4-1.

It was here that the Hannovers made their finest try. Four times they penetrated deep into English territory, finally scoring on center forward, Walter Rodekamp's 25-yard shot.

Hannover, racing against time, began to put pressure on the Nottingham defense. Again the team drove deep into English soil, but were unable to find the range.

Hannover's center forward dribbled past the Nottingham defense, and only a great play on the part of the English goalee prevented the score.

Nottingham quickly woke up and began to stiffen its defense. Using a series of passes, the team moved down field and put the game on ice. The score came when Crowe lofted a perfect pass to center forward Dave Wilson who used his head to put it through in beautiful style.

When a foul was called on Hannover, giving Nottingham a penalty shot, the 96's goalee refused to cover his position in protest, and Hinton put by him easily for the final tally.

RAMBLINGS

Potential Of Golfers Is Finally Realized

By Mike Smith

THIS YEAR, the only spring sport to win a championship was coach Grover Klemmer's golfers. Last time the Ram linkers won a title was 11 long years ago in 1954 when the present Dean of Men, Ralph Hillsman, guided the City College linkers to the league title.

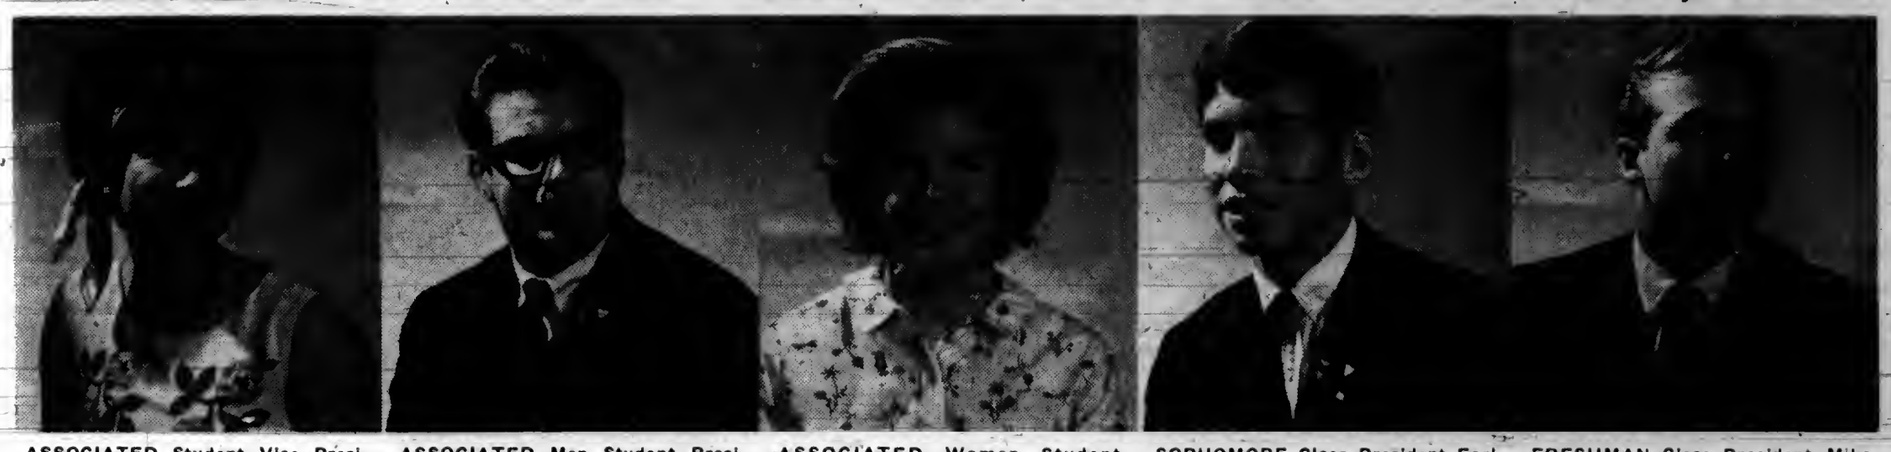
Beginning in 1955, Coach Klemmer took charge of the golf squad. In the following six years, the golf mentor's teams finished second three times, fourth twice, and fifth once.

Two years ago, in 1963, marked the first time a Klemmer coached team lost more matches than were won in league play. But the overall season record placed the linkers aboue .500.

Despite the Rams' one-win record last year, the local linkers began making their move for the championship then. The league was very close in 1964; five of the conference's eight squads, including the Rams, finished in the lower half of the standings with only one-half point separating them.

During that season last year, the college linkers showed that they had potential by winning nearly all their nonleague matches. What's more, at the beginning of the '64 season, the local golfers were shooting in the middle eighties, but at the tail end of the year, they were averaging in the high seventies.

After it was all over, coach Klemmer stated, "We did very well in our last three matches, and our top three players, Jim Schroder, Mike Soden and Mike Moore improved as the season progressed. I think with a year of settling down, we might be contenders."



Early this season, "after a year of settling down," two of those top three, Schroder and Soden, returned to the City College golf squad along with three fine rookies in the persons of Tom O'Kane, Ron O'Conner and Mike Butler, to put the Rams in contention—all the way to the top.

The 1965 version of the City College golfers also repeated the past year's feat of turning in an exceptional exhibition record; this time they won all their nonleague matches to compile an overall seasonal mark of 12-1. Not bad for a team that won only one conference match a year ago.

Lively Arts

Drama, Music, Journalism Aid Creativity

IT WAS TOLSTOI who said, "Art is a human activity having for its purpose the transmission to others of the highest and best feelings to which men have risen."

Students with the urge for self-expression in the fine arts as well as the applied arts and the lively arts, can achieve this release here on campus by participating in the many diversified programs offered by the college.

But by far the most popular form is in the lively arts which have a cultural value at the same time that they stimulate and encourage local artists.

MUSIC ENRICHES

The College Orchestra gives formal concerts and performances throughout the year, offering students the opportunity to practice and perform all styles of musical works, ranging from classical music to "soul" jazz.

The A Cappella Choir, Chamber Choir, Men's Glee Club, Women's Choir, and vocal soloists take part in two annual vocal festivals and present choral concerts throughout the year. In addition, these groups provide off-campus concerts.

The department of music and the Associated Students also present the fall and spring Concert Series, featuring outstanding professional ensembles, instrumentalists and vocalists. The department also presents the annual Christmas concert.

DRAMA TRAINS, ENTERTAINS

The drama department offers training and experience in all the arts, crafts and techniques of the theater—and entertainment. Courses include theory and technique of acting, play reading, speech for the theater, theatrical make-up and stagecraft.

The drama department has been especially instrumental in the past year in producing numerous plays, such as Antigone by Jean Anouilh, Tartuffe, The Winslow Boy, The Goodwoman of Setzuan, Teahouse of The August Moon and Shoemaker's Holiday.

For aspiring disc jockeys, the radio and television broadcasting department operates KCSF, the college radio station.

JOURNALISM INFORMS

The college newspaper, The Guardsman, is a member of the Associated Collegiate Press and has received 32 All-American ratings in 46 semesters of membership. The Guardsman is a weekly newspaper entirely produced by journalism students, who plan and direct all phases of the newspaper publication.

The Guardsman is a vital organ of communication of the Associated Students, serving the best interests of the college to its students. The newspaper also invites students' opinions through the letters to the editor column, the Ram's Horn.

ORIENTATION EDITION

This special edition of The Guardsman is published exclusively for entering Freshmen and is the result of joint efforts of both the outgoing and incoming members of the editorial staff.

ON BEHALF OF the administration and faculty, it is my pleasure to extend a most cordial welcome to the Spring, 1965, entering class. We are pleased that you have decided to continue your education here. May I assure you that we stand ready to assist you in every possible way.

YOU MUST REALIZE, however, that this is a cooperative undertaking to which you must contribute your full share if it is to be successful.

JUST A FEW YEARS AGO, students entering college could be quite certain that the world they were preparing to enter, upon completion of college, would not change much during their lifetime. This is no longer true for we are living in an age of change brought about by technology and automation.

CONSEQUENTLY, young people today must be better prepared than ever before if they are to succeed in this changing world.

THE PERSISTENT EXERCISE of a little extra effort is one of the most powerful forces contributing to success. This persistence will, no doubt, allow you to meet the challenges of this atomic, automated era.

Time And Place, Cost And Deeds Of Campus Life

For anticipators, worry warts and organizers, seven important items of interest come under the heading, What Every New Student Should Know.

For those interested in details, freshman registration for honor students will be held at 1 p.m. Tuesday, September 7; for all others starting at 8 a.m. September 8 and continuing through Friday, September 10, and there will be no late registration.

For the chronic worrier and others who may wish to know the worst at the onset, the first midterm ends on October 22 and the second on December 3. Final examinations will be held from January 20 to 28.

Since it is not possible to learn without books and supplies, it might be helpful for all new students to know that the college bookstore, the Ramporium, is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. with the exception of Fridays, when it closes at 3:30 p.m.

Because the campus can be a cold and windy place in the fall, and because the cafeteria is not always the ideal place to study it might help also to know when the college library is open.

The library is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. during the day Monday through Friday, and from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays.

To broaden their education, students who do not have classes during College Hour, from 11 a.m. to noon Thursdays, have an opportunity to attend class or club meetings in assigned rooms, lectures on various topics, to see films and to participate in rallies or dances.

The cafeteria in Smith Hall serves breakfast from 7:30 to 10 a.m. and sandwiches for lunch from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. when the snack section closes. The hot lunch section of Smith Hall, however, is open from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.

To accommodate a growing student population, Statler wing, the annex to Smith Hall, offers hot entrees in vending machines. The wing is open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

'Big Six,' Council, President's Cabinet Play Important Roles In Student Government System

Student government at the college can best be explained by first noting three distinct groups which play a part in its makeup.

First, there is what is referred to as the "big six." Included in this group are the Associated Student President and Vice President, the Associated Men and Women Student Presidents and the Sophomore and Freshman Class Presidents.

Each is elected by the students-at-large semesterly. However, only one of the "big six"—the Vice President—may vote on the official governing body of the association.

ON BEHALF of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco, I would like to extend to you our warmest wecome.

CITY COLLEGE has much to offer you, the incoming student. Both academic and extra-curricular activities on this campus rate among the finest in colleges throughout the Bay Area.

DURING YOUR STAY at City College, we hope that you will take an interest in the many activities offered by the Associated Students. These activities are supported by the proceeds from the sale of Associated Student cards. As your president, I urge you to purchase your membership card today.

YOUR MEMBERSHIP in the Associated Students will also make you eligible to participate in student government, which has recently been gaining greatly in scope. It is our hope that you will seek to develop your leadership potential through participation.

AGAIN, it is my pleasure to welcome you, and I hope to meet each of you either as classmates or as coworkers in the many activities offered by our college.

Dennis Sweeney,
President, Associated Students

STUDENT COUNCIL COMPOSITION

This body is known as Student Council. Its members, all of whom may vote and introduce formal motions, include seven representatives of the Freshman Class, seven representatives of the Sophomore Class and the Vice President.

Each is also elected by the general student body each semester.

The AS President presides over all meetings of council and may vote in the case of a tie.

RESPONSIBILITY, AUTHORITY

Student Council is responsible for and has final authority in the supervision of the affairs, policies, properties and conduct of the Associated Students of the college.

"Associated Students" means those registered students who have in their possession a current AS card available at the beginning of each semester for $5.

One of council's major dutles is that of allocating funds to official budgeted organizations on campus for the semester succeeding its term of office. For example, last spring council allocated almost $38,000 to operate student activities for last semester.

TWENTY COMPRISE CABINET

After Student Council comes the third and final division known as cabinet.

Cabinet members may either be appointed or elected by the organization he represents at Student Council meetings, or appointed by the AS president. Like the Associated Men and Women Student Presidents and the Freshman and Sophomore Class Presidents, cabinet has a voice but no vote on the official body.

A question frequently asked is: Are the "big six," council and cabinet all that make up the college's student government system? The answer is no!

PARTICIPATION OPEN TO ALL

All students here are eligible and invited to take an active part in their student government system and are welcome to voice their opinions on campus issues at appropriate times in an appropriate manner.

Council meets from 12 noon to 1 p.m. each Monday and Wednesday in bungalow six, which is directly behind Cloud Hall and the nearest bungalow to Arts Hall. The doors are open to all interested students.

The college offers units in four areas of student leadership. SL G2. is designed for those students interested in the management of club activities. SL G8 is open to students desiring practice in the organization of assemblies, forums and rallies.

Those students interested in Student Government will be encouraged to enroll in SL G10. This course is primarily for Associated Student officers but is open to others. Student leadership, G16, is for members of the band.

Meetings are held in accordance with Robert's Rules of Order.

IBM Reveals Coed Shortage

Used to be that a guy could find a coed to date on the campus without a lot of looking, but no more. The IBM machines told a sad but true tale last semester; fact is, there were 2456 extra men at the college.

With the total registration odds at 5982 men to 3526 women, there was little wonder why the pickin's were getting rather slim. Day attendance odds stood at 4650 to 2624.

There was, however, a slight chance for an enterprising young man to gain an advantage for himself. The statistics recording age ratios of men to women showed that, in the 20- to 21-year-old age group in night classes, there were 160 men to 216 women at the college.

The biggest part of the day student body at the college fell into the 19-year-old age group, with a ratio of 1258 men to 946 women, which is probably why the bookstore didn't sell shaving cream.

The two extremes were 12 men and 5 coed 17-year-olds, and 29 men and 75 women in the past 40 group, the only other male advantage situation. Last fall's registration statistics carried six 16-year-olds at the campus, who probably fell into the 17-year-old group of last semester, if their neighbors let them grow up.

San Francisco public high schools accounted for 4353 students. The larger contributions were as follows: Lincoln 122, Washington 114, Lowell 106, Balboa 96, Galileo 78, Mission 62, Polytechnic 55, Wilson 47, Commerce and Adams 41.

Private high schools in San Francisco accounted for 55 students last semester. The combined influx of students from O'Connell and Gompers high schools numbered 10 students, while Continuation was represented by two students.

Hong Kong, Germany and the Philippines had the largest contributions to Alemany Gap's two-year college, with 55, 47 and 40.

Students Adapt, Not Conform To New College Environment

THE TIME HAS COME when a high school education is not enough. Be it technological advancement or just plain status, employers now require a college education before they even give the job-seeker individual consideration.

Students do not usually like to admit that the reason they are attending college is to be eligible for better jobs and therefore more money. They prefer to quote the more lofty ideals of the desire to seek the Truth—or education for the sake of education alone. There are those who are actually here for this reason and no other, but they are few and far between.

But whatever a person's reasons for continuing his education, one dominant fact remains. He is doing it on a voluntary basis; the time of compulsory education has passed. Anybody on this campus can leave at any time. He will not leave a gap. Annually increasing enrollments show that there will be two new students to take his place.

Entering college means entering a new environment. A person has to adapt to an environment—he does not have to conform to it. There are few rules and regulations to follow at City College, but these few must and will be adhered to.

The two-year college is the backbone of California's system of higher education. It offers relief to the already over-crowded State colleges and universities and it helps the student complete his lower division requirements of a college education with a minimum of cost. It makes possible the dream of a college education to all with the ability to receive one.

But when somebody foots the bill, it is only right that the receiver of the benefits recognize certain obligations. In the case of City College, the city of San Francisco takes care of the major burden of expenses with state funds taking care of the rest.

For their effort, the city and state ask but one thing—that the student receive the best education possible under existing circumstances. Upon graduation, the student is not required to pay back anything. He is not even required to remain a resident in the area that was taxed the heaviest for his education.

The two-year college is a tried and true route to the universities. The time will come when it will be the only route, because of increasing enrollments. A college education is here for the asking, but it is up to the individual to work for it. Learning is never easy, but that is what is offered here. Good luck.

Map Shows Areas For Student Cars

AS Members Have Parking Rights Here

Approximately 1800 parking spaces are available for students driving to the college, provided that the cars parked in these areas have a valid parking permit on their windshields.

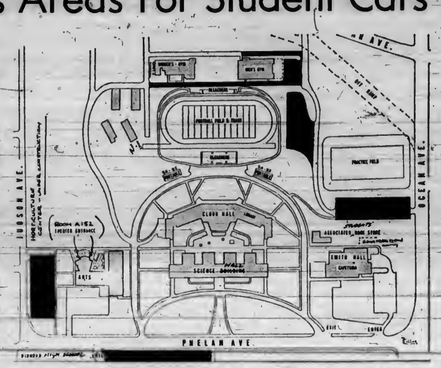
Parking permits are issued by the Campus Police department to those students who have joined the Associated Students. Cars parked in the student parking lots without the permit are subject to citations.

Five student parking lots east of Phelan avenue are as follows:

Parking lot B, the blacked-in area on the map between the football practice field and Smith Hall (cafeteria), is a student parking lot. Entrance to the lot is from Ocean avenue. Walking time from the center of lot B to the flag pole in the center of the main courtyard is three minutes and 20 seconds.

Parking lot C is the area between the football field and track and the practice field. Entrance to this lot is also on Ocean avenue and through lot B. Walking time from lot C to the flag pole is three minutes and 35 seconds.

Lot D is the area next to and along side the men's gymnasium. The spaces against the curb are for physical education instructors only. Students parking there will be tagged. Walking time to the flag pole is four minutes and 35 seconds.



Lots F and G encompass the area between Arts Hall and Judson avenue. Entrance is from Judson avenue. Walking time from the combined lots is clocked at three minutes and 25 seconds.

The "Big Daddy" of all campus parking lots is the north reservoir which can accommodate 1000 cars.

From the reservoir, across Phelan avenue, it takes four minutes and 40 seconds to walk to Science Hall.

All other lots are for faculty or guest parking.

Although the ticket is issued by the Campus Police, it is the same as any citation issued by the regular San Francisco Police force. The fine is payable to the Hall of Justice.

BLACKED-IN AREAS OF MAP denote areas where students with permits may park. On the right, parking lots B, C and D. On the left, parking lots F and G, along Judson avenue. The Big Daddy of all is the reservoir.

Sights To See Around Roller Coaster Campus

City College, located on San Francisco's Hill 29, has seven permanent buildings, only one of which, Science Hall, dominates the top of the incline.

Although true, this is little consolation to the incoming student who may have a high registration number and a comparatively late registration hour.

And a typical class schedule can pose problems.

At 8 a.m. the young student finds himself in front of Science Hall, the major building on the crest of the hill. He proceeds to climb the three flights of stairs to his first class on the third floor.

The 9 a.m. carillon rings, and he dashes from his third floor class and realizes that he has only 10 minutes to reach his next class—physical education.

He then staggers down the three floors of Science Hall, walks out the east door and finds himself in a large courtyard with Science Hall behind and Cloud Hall directly in front of him.

He continues to walk east through Cloud Hall and finds himself at the crest of a downward hill which will eventually take him to the men's gymnasium. Upon descending the incline beyond the stadium, there are two large buildings in front of him.

Coeds enter the building on the north, so he assumes that the place for him is the structure on the south.

At long last, 10 a.m. rolls around and he notices that he has a long-sought-after break. Where does he go?

He decides he needs nutrition and begins to climb the hill from which he descended just 50 minutes earlier.

At the top of the incline, he turns south and walks down a hill where he finds Smith Hall and the new Statler wing directly to the left of it and set further back.

After sipping a cup of coffee in the fountain section of Smith Hall and somewhat rested, he decides to explore. Outside he finds to the immediate east the Ramporium, the Associated Student bookstore. This structure is not considered permanent because of future building plans.

At the chimes for the 11 a.m. class he realizes that he has to trudge to Arts Hall.

Now, he makes an about-face, turns to the north and starts the journey back up the hill that took him to Smith Hall, across the middle of the courtyard and then down the hill on the north side of Hill 29.

There stands Arts Hall, soon to be expanded to house photography, advertising and graphic arts.

Redwood Ram Stands Guard At Main Campus Entrance

The Redwood Ram, the best known symbol on campus, stands guard at the main approach to the campus, serving as a meeting place for students and a reminder of college spirit.

Created in 1939 by sculptor Dudley C. Carter, the Ram made its debut under the admiring glances of the crowds visiting the California Handicraft Exhibit of San Francisco's Golden Gate International Exposition of 1939 on Treasure Island, where it was carved.

Following the fair, the Redwood Ram was formally presented in 1940 to the late Archibald J. Cloud, then president of the college, by the late architect Timothy Pfleuger as Carter's gift to a new and expanding institution.

After an unfortunate five-year stay in the men's gymnasium, forced there by lack of a suitable place to display its beauty, the Ram was moved from place to place as new buildings came and temporary ones went. When the West Campus was abandoned to become reservoirs, it was decided that the present spot was best.

There, on January 3, 1956, at about 10 a.m., the Ram was permanently mounted on a specifically designed pedestal provided by the engineering department.

Carved from a redwood stump, the figure took about 16 eight-hour days of work to complete, and it was carved with a double-bladed axe, some chisels and lots of skill. The complete statue, which was painted Red and White, the college colors, in 1947, weighs about a ton.

Recently, because of an excess of paint that had been splattered on the Ram, his standard Red and White color has been chipped off.

Its future is still to be determined.

Priceless Rivera In Arts Hall

College Boasts 'Biggest, Best'

A masterpiece by the late Mexican artist, Diego Rivera, self-described as the "biggest and the best," adorns the east wall of the theater lobby in Arts Hall, after lying hidden for nearly two decades before a fitting site was found.

This great masterpiece, a mural, entitled, Marriage of the Artistic Expression of the North and South On This Continent, was given to the college after being painted as part of the living arts displayed at the Golden Gate International Exposition of 1939 on Treasure Island.

While being moved to the college at the close of the fair, the mural was insured for $50,000 with Lloyd's of London. It is now insured for $125,000. In the art world, however, "priceless" would be the expression used to indicate its value.

When it arrived at the college, no facilities were available to accommodate the huge mural which is 22 feet high and 75 feet long.

The mural was placed in a protective case and stored in sections near the men's gymnasium where it lay for 18 years.

As the plans were being drawn in 1958 for what is now Arts Hall, provision was made for the mural to be mounted in the theater lobby of the building.

And so with the completion of Arts Hall, the outstanding mural, which is a priceless property of the college, was again displayed after its long period of dormancy.

The mural is divided into panels and in the center one is a serpent-fanged machine god. Around it are inventors, statesmen, personal friends of Rivera and shots from some of his favorite movies.

In the far left panels of the mural, Rivera has created an Aztec motif.

Moving to the right, such great men as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln are painted.

THE WORLD-FAMOUS MURAL, BY THE LATE famous Mexican artist Diego Rivera, is mounted on the east wall of the theater lobby in Arts Hall. A section of the priceless masterpiece, entitled, Marriage of the Artistic Expression of the North and South on This Continent is shown here.

In the approximate center of the mural, sculptor Dudley Carter is shown carving the Redwood Ram, which, also a "relic" of the 1939 Golden Gate Fair, is now permanently located on the campus near Smith Hall.

The Ram was moved to its present location in 1956 where it has staunchly endured vandals and weather.

Below the Ram, Rivera is seen with his wife.

Rivera also placed dictators Stalin, Mussolini and Hitler in his mural.

Twice Olympic diving champion Helen Crlenkovich, then a City College student, is in the mural as she seems to glide silently above the bay waters and the city of San Francisco.

Finally, on the extreme right of his masterpiece, Rivera showed inventors Thomas Edison and S.F.B. Morse, and Robert Fulton and his steamboats.

The overall theme of the mural was to, and does, depict Pan-American unity.

When asked why he painted himself holding hands with movie star Paulette Goddard, Rivera explained, "It means closer Pan-Amercianism."

Success Story — The History Of City College

THIS PORTRAIT OF PRESIDENT Archibald J. Cloud, first president of the college, 1935 to 1949, and President Emeritus, 1949 to 1957, was taken by Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor. A color photograph, it now hangs in the library.

San Francisco The Campus For 1470 Argonauts In 1935

City College of San Francisco (then named San Francisco Junior College) became a reality August 26, 1935, when the first student body met in the War Memorial Opera House to be addressed as "Argonauts."

Between opening-day formal speeches, 1470 students and 72 faculty members read a newspaper bearing the name Emanon—(try it in reverse).

A high point in the speeches was to become a familiar reminder from pioneer President Archibald J. Cloud: "A college is more than buildings . . ."

There were many buildings, yet each was borrowed.

Morning classes met in the University of California's Extension Building at 540 Powell street, afternoon classes in Galileo High School, where administrative offices also were located. Beyond these bases, classes requiring special facilities found them in from 18 to 25 buildings throughout the city.

An automobile tour of 18 of these sites, made in 1938 by an Associated Student President and a Guardsman reporter, clocked two hours and 35 minutes driving time exclusive of parking mileage and stops at the 18 locations.

Thus, without a campus of their own, the early student bodies could rightly call the city itself their campus, Union Square their recreation center between classes, cable car rides around and over Russian Hill to Galileo a stimulating diversion.

Within 30 days after opening ceremonies, the Argonauts had organized the Associated Students, drafted a constitution and elected officers; named their newspaper The Guardsman; adopted a mascot, the Ram; chosen colors, Red and White, and adopted a motto, Ut Adolescentes Vitae Educantur which, translated from the Latin, means That Youth May Be Educated To Life, all through the democratic process—the vote.

One year later, 40 acres of Balboa Park were acquired as the site for a permanent campus, and on April 25, 1937, Science Hall construction, in the form of ground-breaking, began.

A special bond issue, necessary to qualify the school department for federal funds was passed by San Francisco voters—and the two gymnasiums were assured. So, in 1940, 3000 students occupied their own campus—soon to be dubbed pneumonia hill by the more cynically minded.

For three semesters the new campus, the college's own campus after five years of wandering, was at peace, or at least fighting only for familiar items such as adequate parking facilities.

Until December 7, 1941.

Although enrollment ebbed to fewer than 1000 in 1943, the war years saw the college not only maintaining its two basic curricula, university parallel courses and technical training programs, respectively, but also meeting wholeheartedly every effort to aid in the World War II effort.

Summer sessions were inaugurated, victory gardens of vegetables dotted the campus, evening classes were established, and a variety of specialized programs was provided to service units in San Francisco as the need arose.

Through it all, even though necessarily on a limited basis, the traditions, the activities, the spirit established by the Argonauts in 1935 of accepting any challenge continued.

The West Campus — 1946-1954

THESE 14 BUILDINGS, constructed with parade ground area in foreground for the US Navy Waves' separation center, were once standing on the present site of the south reservoir across from Science Hall. The college used these buildings as its West Campus from 1946 to 1954.

City College had a West Campus from 1946 to 1954.

Buildings, 14 including a gymnasium-turned-auditorium all originally constructed for Navy Waves and situated where the south reservoir across from Science Hall now stands, were used by the college.

With ex-GIs swelling enrollment past 5000, the West Campus era saw major events in college history.

Foremost was the change of name. The hated "Junior" was officially killed and on February 12, 1948, it was City College of San Francisco.

Activities were at their height. Music—Christmas concerts drawing capacity crowds in 1000-seat auditorium . . . drama—Shakespeare, top-drawer . . . Man Who Came To Dinner the same . . . Ramporium established . . . The Guardsman published twice a week . . . campus-wide participation in the music-drama production of Vagabond King . . . 4000 total audience.

And Archibald J. Cloud, retiring as President in 1949, gave this thought in a valedictory message: "Education is not a destination—it is a journey—always, we are en route."

Campus Hits Big Time With 'Lee' Miss America

Although the college had previously made news nationally, notably when it was listed by Look Magazine as one of the top ten two-year colleges in the country, nothing put it on the map more dramatically than the triumph of Lee Meriwether—City College student, 1954—Miss America, 1955.

The two years marked the trek eastward to the college's permanent campus, a move that had visual evidence shortly after Louis G. Conlan "came home" as President of the college where he had been a member of the pioneer faculty.

Within two years after his appointment, President Conlan led a building program that was to stretch to the present time. The "war babies" were soon to reach college age, and at City College, as well as throughout the nation, accommodations were being made for their education.

The two-year college, largely a product of California, had proved itself and proved to the nation that every person was to be afforded the opportunity of a college education without tuition.

Construction and occupation were the earmarks of the period started in 1954. Cloud Hall: curiously, dedication ceremonies on April 25 marked an anniversary—17 years to the day after ground had been broken for the construction of Science Hall.

Smith Hall construction, to house the famed hotel and restaurant department and the cafeteria it operates, was started not only in the Cloud Hall dedication year but also in the same month.

Completed in 1956, and already outgrown as a cafeteria what with steadily increasing enrollments, Smith Hall occupancy was followed in 1959 by the start of construction of Arts Hall and the college stadium.

Arts Hall, 1961—for the first time City College had a real theater, not too large, it is true, but nonetheless a theater, possessed of the most modern equipment possible—and comfortable seats.

Music, art, closed-circuit television, ceramics—each had quarters conducive to carrying on the tradition of artistic achievement bravely begun by the Argonauts in 1935.

Building of a sort not anticipated by San Francisco's school department created a minor furor in 1962 when a freeway tentacle chopped off a corner of the campus. The corner just happened to be the site of the horticulture center, built in 1947.

In 1964, however, a new center was completed along with its greenhouse and room for 30,000 plants rescued from the old greenhouse.

Students entering this Fall, 1965, will push the total number of students who have enrolled here past the 145,000 mark.

From Powell street and Galileo High headquarters to Balboa Park and the temporary West Campus—City College is the San Francisco School Department's top Success Story.

Works Of Art Adorn Campus

MANY ORIGINAL WORKS OF ART adorn the walls and halls of City College in addition to the Diego Rivera mural and the Redwood Ram.

Usually the first to catch the eye of the visitor because of their location just inside the main entrance to Science Hall, are the twin murals by artist Fred Olmstead, depicting a student engaged in study, (top left and bottom right).

Painted in 1940 and 1941, these impressive works were, almost unbelievably, finished by Olmstead in his "spare time," while he concurrently worked on two stone sculptures now in the courtyard facing Cloud Hall.

The two figures, among the last commissioned by the Federal Work Projects Administration, were set in place in 1941, shortly after completion of Science Hall.

Facing each other, they are the heads of Thomas Edison, (top right), and Leonardo da Vinci, (lower left), meant to represent Theory and Science.

For the record, Edison is on the north side of Science Hall's courtyard, while da Vinci stands on the south side of the court.

In keeping with the impressive murals created by Olmstead, is Stanley Sadler's mural depicting the evolution of type and journalism from the invention of type by the Chinese to the latest presses and newest processes, (top center).

The mural is fittingly mounted in room 345 of Science Hall, near the graphic arts laboratory, the advertising art department and the office of The Guardsman, official publication of the college.

Not exactly an art treasure but deeply revered by faculty and students is the college's motto, The Truth Shall Make You Free, from the New Testament, John, VIII, 32.

Other works of art adorning the college's walls include two 40 by 50 foot mosaics by Herman Volz, outside the north and south walls of Science Hall, a portrait of Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, first President of the college, located just inside the entrance to the library in Cloud Hall.

Gridders, Booters Aim For Crowns

Rams Hope To End 8-Year Title Drought

The Ram football team will be competing again this semester for a championship title that has eluded the gridders for the past eight years.

The last Ram title came in 1957, when former grid mentor Grover Klemmer piloted his team to the old Big Eight championship tied with Santa Rosa, Modesto and Stockton.

Since the inception of the sport here in 1935, the Rams have won or tied for titles in 1937, '40, '46, and '48. In 1948 the Rams posted the second undefeated season in the history of the old Northern California Junior College Conference.

Currently, Contra Costa is the ruling champion of the Golden Gate Conference with a record of three straight title seasons.

Last year the Rams posted a 4-2-1 record. They were tied for third with Merritt College.

Piloting the Ram assault this year will be coach Art "Dutch" Elston.

As a player, Elston, upon graduation from the University of Southern California, joined the original San Francisco Forty-Niner squad in 1946. Elston, despite his seemingly small size of 5-10, 190 pounds, starred as a center and linebacker for three years before turning to the coaching profession.

The Ram football team will enter the current season with high hopes for their first Golden Gate Conference championship.

"We tied for third last year and we should have a much stronger team this season. I don't know too much about the other clubs, but I believe we have the potential to win the crown," Elston stated in a recent interview.

"Chabot and Contra Costa tied for the conference crown last year, and we beat the former, 19-12, and blew a close one to the latter," he added.

Tackle Mike Taylor heads the list of candidates for post-season honors.

Taylor will be followed by halfbacks Ron Fassler and Chris Ransom. Fassler was a second-team All-Conference selection, both offensively and defensively, last year.

Others ticketed for honors could be end Eural Smothers; tackle Joe Ross, a 250-pounder with fine straight ahead power, and guard Rich Colombo.

Others expected to return and aid the championship drive are defensive backs Joe Callan and Bob McDill, offensive backs Bill Gianquinto, Craig Rodecki and Dennis Sullivan, and linemen George Brandis, Chris Davis, Gene Maher, Suaese Malae and Laisene Malauulu.

Coach Elston also picked up a pair of transfers along the way, quarterback Bob Lee, Arizona State, and tackle Chris Panagotacos, S.F. State.

Soccermen Possess State Championship

The Ram booters have lost only three games during the past five years and are presently the State Junior College champions.

The locals now compete in the Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference, the league which was formed in 1963, after the Rams were booted out of the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer League following the 1962 season.

The Rams then were the only two-year college team participating in the soccer loop and had been the top contender in the league from 1959 on. They had to settle for first-place ties in 1960 and 1962 with the University of California Bears and the Stanford Indians, respectively.

The mighty California Bears had been consistently beaten by the Ram eleven, and, since soccer is a major sport in "Bearsville," consistent beatings at the hands of a two-year college team so threatened the Berkeley program that the loop participants met and formally declared that the Rams were to be "banned."

Last year the "home town gang" had a 12-2 record. The two losses came via Stanford and National Collegiate Athletic Association quarter-finalist, San Jose State.

The Rams were without their forward stars, Alex Volikovsky and Jon Fromer part of this season, which reduced the feared Ram punch and caused their 8-2 loss to Stanford.

The game against San Jose was one of the better games of the past season, but here also the locals missed a star inside as the team's top scorer, Alex Mendieta with 28 season goals, had to play out the game at half speed with his right knee heavily taped.

The final score was 4-2, with the Spartans getting their insurance goal in the last seconds of play.

In conference action, the Red and White swept through an undefeated season with six decisive victories against no losses. The Rams defeated runner-up San Mateo on the Bulldog's home arena by an overpowering 7-0 score.

In the State Championship contest at Balboa Stadium in San Francisco, the Rams defeated the Southland invaders, Victor Valley, 8-0, to capture their second straight State Junior College title.

Three Ram players were placed on the two-year college All-American squad. Defensive genius Mike Beltran and forward Volikovsky were given first team honors, while the Rams' top offensive threat, Mendieta, was selected to the second team.

All-Conference honors went to five Rams, Beltran, Mendieta, Fromer, Andy Naborig and George Fernandez.

Local Squads Vie In Tough Golden Gate Conference

Except for the soccer team, the City College of San Francisco Rams are currently members of the Golden Gate Conference which was founded in 1962 and is composed of the Contra Costa Comets in San Pablo, College of San Mateo Bulldogs, Chabot Gladiators in San Leandro, Diablo Valley Vikings in Concord, Foothill Owls in Los Altos Hills, Merritt Thunderbirds in Oakland and the San Jose Jaguars.

City College's own Louis F. Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education, is the conference's commissioner. He was elected to the post three years ago following the demise of the old Big Eight League. The former Dean of Instruction here is the first and only head of the four-year-old Golden Gate Conference.

The City College Soccer squad belongs to the Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference which includes College of San Mateo, Menlo College, Diablo Valley and possibly Pacifica.

RA Offers Varied Sports Program

The college's Recreation Association offers at least a dozen different activities each semester to interested students and recognizes outstanding participants in each sport with block, shield or star awards—at its semi-annual banquet.

Among the activities offered are coed archery, badminton, bowling, folk, social and modern dancing, fencing, golf, swimming, tennis, volleyball, and men's and women's basketball and softball league competition.

The RA fencing team has fared spectacularly in competition, including last spring when City College became the first two-year college to win the Northern California Intercollegiate Fencing Association championship.

Loss Of Veteran Stars Dims Hopes Of Cross Country Club

Despite relatively successful cross country clubs in the past, City College's perpetual hopes for a championship in the Golden Gate Conference do not look promising for 1965, at least as of now.

Coach Lou Vasquez will be without the services of Rick Klemmer, his number one man for two years, and Mike Conroy, who was a very capable member of the club as well.

However, all the other members of the squad are eligible to return and with one year's experience should improve their performances.

City College has not won a championship in cross country since 1961, in the now defunct Big Eight Conference.

Although slipping to a third place finish in 1962, the Rams took second place in the NorCal Championship Tournament as they had done during their last championship season the year before.

Since their induction into the Golden Gate Conference in 1962, college cross country teams have failed to attain their former heights of success.

A third-place finish was the best the Ram performances could bring them in 1963 and they slipped to fourth in the following season and were able to come up with one win in 1964.

Returning veterans who are expected to bolster Ram hopes for a successful season are Les Arnold, Chris Ferrigno, Gil Kroeger, Bill Long, Bob McGuire, Joe Singer, Rich Cuadra and Dennis Shea.

Singer, the big disappointment for Vasquez last year, and McGuire are expected to be two of the mainstays in the 1965 club with Kroeger and Arnold right behind them.

Intra Action Set In Three Leagues

The Associated Men Students sponsor intramural basketball competition each semester within three leagues, Independent, Fraternity and Club, leading to an overall championship.

To participate in the games, usually played Tuesday and Wednesday nights, the teams must comply with specific regulations.

These rules specify that all players must have Associated Student cards, that teams must file entry petitions, and all players and teams must observe any additional rules posted by Associated Men Student officers throughout the season.

At the season's end, winning teams and individuals are awarded trophies and medals on Sports Night.

Last year, winners of the individual leagues were, the Freshman Club of the Club league, Alpha Kappa Rho of Fraternity league and the Irish of the Independent league who also won the tournament championship.

In the spring student-faculty game, the faculty beat the Irish, 18-16.

RAMBLINGS Many Rams Advance To Future Sports Stardom

By Mike Smith

THERE IS a "popular" misconception that City College does not have many good athletes because "all" of San Francisco's future champions have gone to other colleges via scholarships.

This is not true, because many of the All-City winners from the high schools enroll at City College hoping for a chance to use the college as a stepping stone to a scholarship or a have made it, and a good many are on their way.

The latest in this long line of ex-career in professional sports; some Ram stars is San Francisco Forty-Niner fullback Gary Lewis who was named the "Back of the Year" when he was a Ram in 1960.

Another name from the grid world is the future National Football League Hall of Famer, Ollie Matson. The veteran fullback went on to fame from City College to University of San Francisco, and later starred for many years with the Chicago Cardinals and the Los Angeles Rams.

Another pair of ex-Ram gridders who are on their way up are Utah's Ron Coleman and University of California's Dave Urrea. Coleman won a scholarship to Utah. Last year Urrea was chosen as one lineman-of-the-week.

Several former Ram baseball players have become professionals. In the past three and a half years, seven members of the Ram nine have inked major league contracts. They are George Aivarez, Butch Bussanick, Rich Farrell, Frank Gable, Russ Kunkle, Rich Nold and Walt Williams.

Presently almost half of them have had very successful seasons in the minor leagues. Just last year, the National Association of Baseball Writers gave Nold the 1964 Most Valuable

RICH NOLD won 20 games for Washington Senator minor league club.

Player award of the New York-Pennsylvania League for his 20-8 pitching record. Nold also set a new league mark of 268 strikeouts in 242 innings.

Then there is Kunkle, who batted a .350 clip for the Sarasota White Sox in the Florida Rookie league last winter.

Williams, who played for the Rams in 1963, compiled a .318 batting average for the Winnepeg Cardinals of the Northern League.

The latest signing, last April, was that of Alvarez. The Houston Astros plucked him from the Ram baseball squad with the season here only one-third of the way completed.

In soccer, the college has become one of the strongest in the nation. Since 1959 coach Roy Diederichsen's squads have either won or tied for the championship. A couple of former Ram booters, Gary DeLong and Al Korbus, while playing for San Jose State, were chosen for the United States Olympic team.

There have also been some fine boxers produced here. A few of them are Bobby Scanlon, lightweight contender; golden gloves champ Frank Suega, and Gil Gallegos, representative in the last Olympic boxing team.

In basketball, coach Sid Phelan has emerged as one of the nation's top coaches. He has led his teams to three conference titles in the past four years. Diablo Valley cage mentor, Charlie Karp, once said of Phelan, "Sid has the best offensive mind in basketball in the United States."

Several ex-Ram basketball players who played under Phelan made it "good" elsewhere. Two examples are Elton McGriff and Brad Duggan. In San Francisco State Duggan led the Gators in scoring two years in a row. McGriff, who played for Creighton University, was one of the key men in that team's drive to the 1963-64 NCAA Regional basketball title.

Tennis player Bob Siska used his talent to take him to Wimbleton, England, for three straight years. He eventually won the Junior Davis Cup. At the age of 16, Siska went four sets with Rod Laver.

One former basketball star from this college can be found right on campus. He is Ralph Hillsman, currently Dean of Men. Hillsman led the Rams to their first basketball championship in the mid-thirties as captain of that team.

BOB SISKA played here in 1962-63 when the Ram net teams won State titles.

City College Enrollment Sets New Record High

VOLUME 61 SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA — WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1965 NUMBER 1

Registration Hits 10,797; Major Complaint—Parking

Enrollment at City College swelled past the 10,000 mark this semester when total enrollment for the semester reached 10,797.

Of these students, 2220 are enrolled in the college's evening program, leaving daytime enrollment of 8577, an all-time high.

Registrar Mary Jane Learnard disclosed that this semester's increase of 1289 over the spring semester was the greatest jump in enrollment the college has witnessed since 1946. Miss Learnard stated that the average increase in each preceding semester was approximately 400 students.

At this point in the semester last year, the total enrollment was only 9776 and last spring it declined to 9508

Problems resulting from the increased enrollment are widespread.

The students' major complaint involve the great difficulty in trying to find a place to park. The counselors and advisers have been finding it exceedingly difficult to counsel so many students.

Instructors have been finding their classes far more crowded than they were in the past.

Miss Learnard stated that there are many reasons for the sudden upswing in enrollment.

The fact that the University of California and many other four-year universities have made their freshman entrance requirements more stringent has caused more recent high school graduates to turn to City College.

Also a greater percentage of high school graduates is now entering college, not to mention the fact that there are just more students now than in the past.

Miss Learnard also noted, that a greater number of students were readmitted to the college than in previous years. This, she speculated, was because of the recent increase in Selective Service call-up.

Because the classrooms are becoming so crowded, a new administration building is in the planning stages so that Science Hall can be used exclusively for science classes. Currently, a great many administrative offices are housed in Science Hall.

The new building will go up next to Smith Hall and will be the location for all administrative and student offices with the exception of the nurses office and the offices of the Deans of Instruction. —R. K.

Vietnam Veteran Speaks Tomorrow

The International Relations Club will present an Open Forum On Vietnam during College Hour tomorrow in C-258.

The guest speaker will be Captain Charles P. Kottich, who is presently assigned as a staff officer in the operations branch of the Sixth Army Headquarters at the Presidio in San Francisco.

After serving duty overseas, Captain Kottich was assigned to the Third Infantry at Fort Myer, Virginia and after an assignment at Fort Hood, Texas, received orders to Vietnam.

In Vietnam, he was assigned as senior adviser to the 31st Vietnamese Rangers. He lived with the Vietnamese unit and accompanied them on all their operations. He returned from Vietnam last November. With his Berlin and Vietnam experience, Captain Kottich has had the opportunity to see the communist approach at first hand.

For his services in Vietnam, he has been awarded the Bronze Star for Valor.

Council Reverses Decision, Votes Down San Francisco Mime Troupe Appearance

By Richard Heintz

Student Council last week reversed an earlier decision and voted against Associated Student sponsorship of a show that would have brought the San Francisco Mime Troupe to City College.

The motion to bring the mime troup's minstrel show on campus was voted down, 5-6-0.

Norman Brown, a student belonging to but not officially representing the Negro Student Association on campus, requested that council reconsider its previous decision to bring the show on campus because he believed the troupe's use of blackface on stage to be offensive to Negroes.

Brown stated that the use of blackface "is something that the Negro has been struggling to abolish for a long time. To the Negro, a black face is something sacred and of which he is proud."

He added, "I am surprised that Student Council would bring such a thing to City College."

After hearing his statements, council voted to reconsider the earlier decision, 6-5-0.

Dennis Sweeney, Associated Student president, opened the meeting to discussion at which time it was revealed that a contract which Lincoln Pain, council member heading the committee to arrange for the troupe's appearance, had signed with the troupe was invalid as far a Student Council was concerned because Controller Oscar E. Anderson's signature, a requisite for expenditure of student funds, had not been obtained.

The validity of the contract was questioned when Stan Angel, Associated Men Student president, asked whether Student Council had the right to rescind an agreement made with the troupe.

Knowing that Anderson's signature was not on the contract, Sweeney declared it invalid and hence not binding to Student Council.

The rest of the discussion relative to reconsideration of presentation of the mime troupe's minstrel show included a variety of opinion ranging from whether the mime troupe represented art to whether the use of blackface was a necessary part of America's heritage.

Brown clarified the issue when he said that if there were a show on campus depicting white Fresno transient workers, "there would be great opposition to it on the part of white students."

Other business brought before council included the announcement that three council seats are vacant, two for freshmen and one for a sophomore. Petitions to fill the vacancies were to be filed last Wednesday with council voting by secret ballot after press time this week.

Sandy Sager, however, stated that unless she received more petitions she might extend the deadline for filing.

The two freshman seats were vacated by Chris Bilby and Carol Craig, while the sophomore seat was vacated by Lyn Barker.

It was also discovered at the meeting that the AMS does not have a constitution. The question of its existence arose when Angel asked council to approve appointive AMS officers, among whom was one lone coed.

Immediately, Earl Braverman, AMS president last semester and now Sophomore Class president, stated that an AMS constitutional by-law does not allow coeds to hold office in the AMS.

Angel replied, "There is no constitution, and therefore there are no by-laws."

Since neither David Minkin, Council of Organizations chairman; Jim Wyatt, student government adviser, nor Angel could certify definitely as to the existence or nonexistence of a constitution, council tabled the motion to approve Angel's fellow officers until the next meeting.

Wednesday's meeting centered around constitutions of organizations in general, and Angel, after the validity of his organization was cleared, was able to win approval of the officers.

It turned out that Braverman had quoted a suggestion on file by a past president of AMS to the effect that AMS should not permit coeds to hold AMS offices. Angel added that the president who had made the suggestion had appointed a coed to office only to have her disqualified.

Faculty Shot!

By Pete Dorn

Most of the faculty were shot last Thursday. Those who survived were seen limping about from class to class with their right arms in slings or dangling uselessly at their sides.

They were each shot with a 600 CCA chick cell agglutinating unit, which is commonly referred to as a flu shot. Most of the faculty members appeared to have taken the shots rather well, having displayed no signs of pain or strain as they filed out of S-190.

There was an honorable way out for any faculty members who wanted to chicken out at the last moment. As the vaccine is prepared from hen's eggs, it could play havoc with anyone who has a history of hypersensitivity to eggs, chicken protein, feathers, and chicken pot pie.

It was somewhat difficult to solicit any quotes as to their reactions from the shots. When a faculty member is asked for an opinion, he is capable of producing Olympian rhetoric, but when he is queried as to the correct spelling of his name and his position at the college and how he would like to be quoted, he clams up.

Best Dressed Coed Contest Tryouts Set Tomorrow

The Best-Dressed Coed Contest will begin tomorrow during College Hour in C-258. Mary Maurer, president of the Associated Women Students, urged all interested coeds to participate.

Thirty coeds will be chosen at this first tryout. On Thursday, October 14, the number will be reduced to 14. The third and final contest will take place on Thursday, November 4, when these coeds will model at the semiannual AWS fashion show and tea, with fashions furnished by Benioff's.

Ten new coeds and four who have modeled in previous fashion shows will comprise the 14 finalists, Miss Maurer said. On the whole, taller models are preferred and possession of an AS card is necessary. The final choice must be of full time students with "respectable" grades.

Applications may be obtained at Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150, or through the women's physical education department. A small snapshot must accompany each application, Miss Maurer emphasized.

Judges will include a faculty committee of men and women and the top four Best-Dressed Coeds in the Glamour Magazine Contest of Spring, 1965. —J. K.

College Clubs To Meet On Tuesday

The next meetings of the College Hour Clubs will be held at 11 a. m. next Tuesday, October 5. A list of the clubs and the rooms in which they hold their meetings is posted in the hall outside the registrar's office.

Club meetings are scheduled on the following Tuesdays during the semester: October 5 and 26, November 2, 16 and 23, December 7, and January 4 and 11. Other events, such as concerts, speakers and rallies will be held on Thursdays.

Until last semester, all College Hour activities were held on the same day. However, conflicts arose between the meetings of the clubs and other activities. It was decided to hold the club meetings on another day on a trial basis

At this time there are 61 organizations, involving 78 faculty and 1500 students. There is a club to satisfy virtually any interest a student may have. Included among them are fraternal, service, professional and special interest organizations.

These groups offer students an opportunity to participate in associations much like those to be found in American society. Students have an opportunity to develop leadership skills and to learn from their sucesses as well as their failures in planning.

H&R, Sciences Gain TV Broadcast Units

The radio and television broadcasting department recently installed a self-contained television setup for hotel and restaurant department lectures and demonstrations.

This information was revealed by Henry Leff, head of the radio and television broadcasting department.

Leff added that the Communications 5-a lectures at Riordan High School would be video-taped to be shown at noon Tuesdays in Smith Hall.

In addition, the Communications 5-b lectures, also located at Riordan High School, would likewise be on video-tape to be viewed on Thursdays in Smith Hall at the same hour.

A mobile television unit which will be used for demonstrations in the science department has been installed thus adding to the conveniences of these departments. This new addition in Science Hall adds to the educational benefits that television has made possible.

College Success Depends Upon Attitudes, Ability To Meet And Accept Responsibilities

THE TRANSITION from high school to college is a difficult one; no matter what the standing of the institution may be. The successful student is the one who is adequately prepared for this step, is mature enough to accept the responsibilities involved and most important, has the attitude to meet the challenge in the proper manner.

While it is unfortunately a fact that some high schools prepare their students more adequately than others for college, each student must use all his available tools to his best ability and continually strive for excellence to get all he can out of his education. After all, that's what college is for.

The first real test comes with the first midterm period. At this time, the student who is really making an effort and is faithfully executing all his assignments is separated from the person who may, for example, be nothing but a so-called "draft-dodger."

At this college, each student has the chance to transfer to the college of his choice after he has completed all the necessary requirements.

This is the time to strive for excellence so that when the opportunity comes to further one's education at a four-year college or university, the student equipped with the knowledge he obtained here, may use it to the best advantage and be assured of success.

Scholastic excellence is only one facet of the story of success. The college makes it possible for a student to broaden himself socially and physically through its numerous on-campus clubs, organizations and athletic competition. Students are urged to partake of these programs in the hope that each one may develop to his full potential.

The Guardsman hopes that all incoming students this semester will get the most they can out of their stay here and wishes all the best of luck.

This newspaper is for you, the students, and the Guardsman welcomes any comments a student may wish to make through letters to the editor, which appear in the Ram's Horn section. Opinions and suggestions from readers and the ensuing discussions are the necessary ingredients for a sound democratic society.

The possible advantages from such discussions will hopefully broaden and enlighten all to the right path of action that may improve the college and its policies. The Guardsman, however, reserves of necessity the right to edit letters in the interests of brevity and rhetoric.

Man Among Men: 'Culture Becomes A Created Monster'

By Gregory Frazier

According to Eugene and Fanchon Mead, sociology and psychology instructors here respectively, "The culture we have created, like Frankenstein's monster, has begun to bully us."

This forceful statement appears in Chapter 1 of the Mead's new textbook, Man Among Men, an introductory sociology text now in use at the college.

Seven years ago following a lecture at Cal's Davis campus, Mr. Mead was approached by Herbert Blumer, editor of Prentice-Hall Inc., and asked if he would consider writing a sociology textbook. Mr. Mead accepted and a contract was drawn which promised a final manuscript in seven years.

After months upon months of grueling work, the Meads produced a book which, according to one critic "... is better written . . . and far more appealing than four such textbooks in five.".

A first printing produced some 10,000 copies for national distribution and a second printing has been tentatively set for this fall. The book is presently being used by most of the sociology instructors at the college.

Profits from copies sold to Mr. Mead's own students will go into a scholarship fund. "The scholarship will provide $100 a year for any student planning to go on to a four-year college and major in sociology," Mr. Mead explained. "Any student seeking the scholarship may apply after completing one semester here."

The Meads recently had an official U.S. State Department house guest, an assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Moscow, who took a copy back to Russia.

An instructor at San Mateo College is using the book, and a copy has been sent to the University of Lahore in Pakistan where the Meads have a friend teaching.

In addition to its superb organization and lucid prose, each chapter of Man Among Men is vividly illustrated by a photographic essay and a literary or historical quote. One of the photographs was taken by Emmett C. Smith, a photography instructor here, currently on sabbatical leave.

"Our intent is to excite the reader's interest in sociology, give him insight into his immediate personal milieu, and involve him intellectually in the larger society of which he is a part," Mrs. Mead said.

"In essence," Mr. Mead added, "the book is an attempt to bridge the gap between the individual and society."

The Meads have already begun the arduous task of revising the book, a project which will take four to five years.

"Upon completion of the original manuscript we threw away three trash cans full of notes, articles and other materials," Mr. Mead said. "Now we must begin the job all over again."

Prentice-Hall has also requested that Chapter 12, Change And Anti-Change, be expanded into another book. "This chapter analyzes forces of change and antichange within a new theoretical framework which avoids the common practice of either equating social or cultural change or neglecting to distinguish between the two," Mrs. Mead explained.

The authors also expressed their desire to thank all of their students "whose interest in current social problems provided much of the initiative necessary to write the book."

The Meads have published their appreciation for all to see. The book is dedicated, "With gratitude and affection to our teachers and our students."

Award Winner

Coed Takes Top Honors In Nationwide Lenox Contest

By Karen Carlson

"Dinner for Two" holds a special enchantment for Marilyn Dong, a student at the college. As the theme for her entry in the National Creative Table-Setting Contest, sponsored by Lenox, Incorporated, it helped her to win first place in the competition and close to $1000 in prizes.

Miss Dong's arrangement consisted of the Olympia pattern of China, Imperial crystal in the Oxford pattern, and Lark sterling silver by Reed and Barton, effectively placed on a gold tablecloth with Chinese red napkins. The only decorations she utilized were two squat red candles and a white cylindrical vase with a sprig of spring blossoms.

Miss Dong was awarded 12 place settings each of the China, crystal and sterling silver used in her entry. Each place setting is composed of five pieces of China, four pieces of crystal and six pieces of silverware.

"Simplicity keynoted Marilyn's theme," according to Frances Lloyd, the home economics instructor who encouraged Miss Dong to submit an entry. Mrs. Lloyd, as Miss Dong's instructor, received 12-place settings of China in her pattern choice, Westchester.

"Home economic students in high schools, two-year colleges and universities all over the nation are eligible to submit entries," Mrs. Lloyd stated. "Of 375,000 entrants, 178 are awarded prizes. This year we won seven prizes, Miss Dong's and six fifth-place prizes."

Mrs. Lloyd explained that Miss Dong, an advertising art major, is the first girl from a major city to have won the competition.

The prize-winning entry was on display at Gump's for one week during July and will probably be shown on campus later in the semester, according to Mrs. Lloyd. An article about Miss Dong and her first place entry was published in Bride's Magazine.

The six fifth-place winners, each of whom received a cup and saucer in her pattern choice, are Pamela Daley, Rosemary Donaldson, Josephine Lei, Joy Luckel, Nickie Pascoe and Agnes Zarate.

Mrs. Lloyd's classes have produced 16 winners in the six years of the competition, including one third place two years ago and several fifth places and honorable mentions, but Miss Wong's first place was a first for the college. The last major prize was the third place won by Frances Hing in 1963.

Daily Schedule Beneficial To Registration

Chaos and confusion, always the case in class scheduling, was practically limited to just closed-class shock, as students and faculty reaped the benefits of new time schedules daily during registration this fall semester.

Most of the bewilderment in previous attempts at timely time schedules was caused by the second and third editions of the schedule, because as classes were closed the originals listed were deleted from newer schedules.

Students used the older schedules, "signed up" for classes already filled, but were unable to pull the class cards at library registration. Consequently, many courses were added by perplexed students at the last minute when their only knowledge of the course was that they were qualified for it. Sometimes even this was a fallacy.

This fall the problem was somewhat solved by drawing lines through the closed classes, rather than omiting them altogether, as in the past. A stricter coherence to use only the latest schedule, closer supervision by advisers, and in some cases just plain luck lent a helping hand.

Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction attributed some of the success of class scheduling to the IBM machine that made the originals and to the speed of the printing sent out to the George Lithograph Company.

Students say: "Registration will never be perfect."

A Parent In College Needs —Fortitude

By B.T.

ANY PARENT who wants to assume the role of a college student must have guts.

He has to be an optimist.

And a stubborn one.

It is unimportant if he understands and likes beatle music, way-out jargon, camp behavior and LSD. He does not have to dig that stuff. Nor does he have to care about holding up troop trains.

He just has to be willing to forfeit precious TIME for important things as sewing monograms on Junior's gym trunks the night before a big exam, (because Junior needs them then)—or cutting out a new dress for Susie's Barbie doll.

Maybe his spouse decides to become one of those bigtime spenders when he needs those study guides for physics, Aeschylus, zoology, and Henry IV. How quickly he learns to voice his needs!

Most student fathers work. So do student mothers. At home.

Little chores such as entertaining out-of-town guests, and cooking with wine keeps her in practice.

Is this long struggle, the adjustments and economic problems worth it? Do parents really make practical use of their higher education?

Who can tell.

Perhaps someday this same proud struggler can help Junior.

Help him type his term papers.

ELECTRONIC AGE

This is the age of tape recorders. These amazing mechanisms come in all different shapes and sizes. Many are being used in classrooms today, both legally and illegally.

For the benefit of those who are unaware of the heavy penalties, AB 1999, Amended 7/17/65 to Education Code Sec. 9202, states:

"The legislature finds that the use by any person, including pupil, of any concealed electric listening or recording device in any classroom of a public school without prior consent of teacher and principal of school having been obtained disrupts and impairs the teaching process and discipline in public schools, and such use is prohibited.

"Any adult who wilfully violates this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and any pupil violating this section shall be subject to suspension or expulsion from school."

● Registration Problems

Editor, The Guardsman:

I was sorry to find when I registered again this year that two of the major problems with the registration system had not been eliminated.

First is the problem of the crowd at the starting point. A crowd of 200 to 300 people is usually jammed against an opening about six feet wide. This makes it impossible for people in the back, who may have numbers that went by an hour before, to get in front.

This year there were about six policemen there to make sure that nobody went under the ropes. It seems that if the crowd were allowed to come under the ropes between any one of the pillars, and the police called out numbers 50 to 100 at a time (instead of 500 to 1500), things would be much better.

The other thing that should be improved is the communication between the library and the rooms where students make out their schedules. If each room and each department in the library had a walkie-talkie telephone, or even a runner, students would at least have a good idea of what courses are left open.

As it is, countless hundreds of students hold up lines and spoil their schedule because the "master copies" on the walls in the rooms where they made out their program were not even close to being correct.

Meanderings

By Mike Smith

COLLEGE LIFE usually generates a contrasting array of personal and multiple dilemmas for a great majority of the students. One of the most frequent problems is the time-consuming situation which confronts all possible draftees.

The present draft law is set to expire in 1967. This is only a temporary ruling that will presumably be lengthened again as it was in 1963. In that year, the Senate rushed the draft extention measure through its chambers in less than ten minutes!

Today the Selective Service System, which has some nine and one-half million potential draftees on the registration rolls, will not call college men in the near future who carry a full-time course of instruction, obtain satisfactory grades, and file a student deferment before the October 15, 1965, deadline.

DEBATES ARE HISTORY

The question of whether the draft should be maintained has been avidly debated throughout this nation's history. Almost every Presidential candidate since 1956 has made personal studies on the matter. In 1964, Barry Goldwater said he would end the draft, and President Johnson suggested he would do the same, but the draft still is with us.

Induction into the armed services prevents many college graduates from getting settled in their careers. Of all those drafted, 97 out of 100 return to civilian life where they have to re-establish themselves in their careers.

Many persons, including Senator Mike Mansfield, believe that the draft should be placed on a volunteer basis, with higher pay.

But in the past, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara has commented on the cost of ending the draft, "If the pay were to be raised to anything approximating a point where it would attract a sufficient number of men, I suspect it would add about four billion dollars a year to the military budget."

Although opponents of the draft have said that this is the age of nuclear weapons and not of foot soldiers, they could not really consent to a mass reduction of the nation's armed manpower.

ALTERNATIVES EQUAL DISASTER

Ending the draft would give the United States only two alternatives in halting aggression. The United States would either have to stop it by using nuclear force, or do nothing at all. Either choice could result in disaster.

This argument to end or keep the draft did not begin in the late forties or even the early sixties. It began more than 100 years ago, when Congress enacted the Conscription Act of 1863 which drafted American men into the Union Army. The only exemption then was a fee of $300 to be paid by the draftee.

Fifty years before the conception of this act, Daniel Webster warned Congress, "If the administration has found that it cannot form an Army without conscription, it will find that it cannot enforce conscription without an army!"

Five months after the Conscription Act was passed by Congress, anti-draft riots erupted in New York City. More than 1000 persons were killed or wounded as the mob of demonstrators actually took over the city. In less than a year, President Lincoln called for a draft of 200,000 men over a three-year period.

In the September 20, 1965 issue of U.S. News & World Report, Associate Professor Ross Wilhelm, University of Michigan, warned that, "The tempers of many college students are high enough over the vicious injustices built into the draft system that there is a potential for violence comparable to the Los Angeles riot on American campuses."

CARD BURNING

At the moment, this expected anti-draft demonstration, despite the fact that a few students have burned their draft cards, can be classified only as a rumor, but one that cannot be ignored. But if the pacifists and campus radicals do stage a mass demonstration against the draft, it could do much harm to the security of the nation.

Five years before George Washington became President of the United States, he said, "It may be laid down as a primary position, and the basis of our system, that every citizen who enjoys the protection of free government owes . . . his personal services to the defense of it."

There should be no logical and existing reason why Washington's words cannot be applied to our generation.

A Gem's Pearl Anniversary

Thirty Years Of News, Sports, Features - Whew!

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of articles on the history of the college as reflected through the pages of The Guardsman.)

By Mike Smith, Managing Editor

The Guardsman quietly celebrated its 30th year of publication late last summer, on August 26, 1965. There were no banners stretched across the campus commemorating the event, and no parties were thrown to glorify the paper's anniversary.

This kind of spectacle is saved for the 50th and 100th years.)

This publication, known as the "Emanon" (which was "no name" spelled backward) for the first two issues, made its debut in a new college at the start of the fall semester of 1935.

The infant newspaper had been hastily put together; there was even one short ad in the second issue pleading for "experienced" sports writers to cover the sports events for San Francisco Junior College—a name, incidentally, that would be changed in 1948 to City College of San Francisco because the "Junior" was considered immature by both students and faculty alike.

The Guardsman pushed for the change early in 1946.

College football and basketball, along with professional baseball, were considered "the sports to watch" in 1935 by a publication called Year Book of National Recreation.

Students attending City College then felt that football was the best sport of them all; and when the call went out to "fill" the first grid squad, 120 athletes answered the call, of which the best 50 were accepted.

But the less popular basketball and soccer teams of the college made sports headlines with their championships. Years later, a 1965 Guardsman poll would show that football was still the favorite sport to watch among students at the college.

In 1936 San Francisco's new two-year college even had its own election scandal, and The Guardsman was there recording the surprising event. It seems that the confusing situation centered on a violation of poll procedures.

"One man," the May 26 Guardsman reported, "stood right at the election booth pointing out candidates on ballots for whom students should vote. "Ballots were not made available until 3:30 p.m. for the afternoon voting; and the polls were opened only because The Guardsman reporters persuaded the election commissioner, with the aid of college President A. J. Cloud, to make ballots available."

The college was to learn, very early, that The Guardsman was not just a subject called journalism confined to one class room, but that it was an active eyewitness of campus activities.

The Guardsman also played a vital part in expanding the college's allotted time between classes. At the beginning of the fall semester in the new science building during the year 1940, students were allowed only five minutes to get from class to class. One month after a Guardsman drive for more time between classes, a ten-minute period was enacted.

Prior to 1940 the five year-old newspaper was published from Galileo High School where afternoon classes were held. At that time students were distributed in as many as 23 locations about San Francisco. Some of the college "units" were San Francisco State College Extension Center on 540 Powell Street; Mission High School, and the downtown P.G.&E. building.

When it came to sports, the Rams played at various spots such as Golden Gate Park, Balboa High, Seals Stadium and Kezar.

As the enrollment steadily increased from 1440 in 1935 to over 3000 in 1940, it was realized that selection of a permanent location must be made with dispatch. After looking over a dozen sites, the City Board of Education finally settled on 38 acres on the present location where the college now stands.

Cars, Cycles Up Permits To 2600

As the population of City College increases so do its parking problems.

Lawrence R. Lawson, supervisor of the Campus Police, stated last week that 2200 parking permits were issued during the first two weeks of this semester. This is an increase of over 400 permits above the total for last semester.

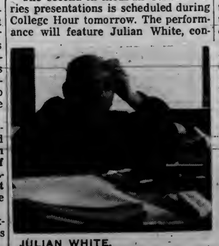
Lawson also stated that the Campus Police expect to issue approximately 400 more permits before the end of this semester.

To cope with the increasing problems of a crowded college, the Campus Police have added 20 new men to their staff. The addition will raise their total to about 36 officers, roughly the same size as the Sausalito Police Department.

Two of the campus laws which the Campus Police stress are that no motorcycles are to be parked anywhere except in the section of A lot next to Smith Hall, and that no student is to drive or park in Cloud Circle.

The new Chief of the Campus Police this semester is John McHenry, whose brother, James McHenry, is also on the force.

Coeds To Attend Vallejo Conference



Coeds interested in attending the Alta California Associated Women Student Junior College Conference on Saturday, October 2, can do so by applying to Dean of Women Mary Golding in S-150 by this Friday, October 1.

The conference, to be held at Vallejo College, will feature a number of workshops centered on The Arts In Being A Woman, Dean Golding explained. Keynote speaker is June Diemers, a professional counselor from Napa.

The conference will open at 8:30 a.m. with registration and adjourn at 1:30 p.m. Transportation will be via Greyhound, with Vallejo students providing transportation to and from the bus terminal in Vallejo.

Concert Pianist Julian White Will Perform During C-Hour Tomorrow

The second in the Fall Concert Series presentations is scheduled during College Hour tomorrow. The performance will feature Julian White, concert pianist, and will be presented in the theater under the sponsorship of the Associated Students and the music department.

JULIAN WHITE.

White, who resides in Berkeley, has devoted his life to music. Born in Chicago, he gave his first recital at the age of 6. He began composing at 8 and was in time awarded a Julliard Scholarship. He graduated from Julliard in 1958.

Presently White is a member of the faculty of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, a member of the University of California Music Extension faculty and Professor of piano at California State College in Hayward.

White will present selections from Haydn, Hindemith, Bartok and Schubert during the 45-minute concert. The concerts are paid for by the AS and there is no admission charge.

'Playboy' Opens Fall Productions

The Playboy Of The Western World, by J. M. Synge, will be presented in the theatre, November 3 through 6, as the first drama production of this semester, director James Haran announced today.

The east, which was chosen from approximately 40 applicants includes: John McCready, Anna Einhorn, Al Hughes, Mike Dobinski, Anne Crichton, Jerry Whelan, Steve Howes, John Adams, Diane Nichols, Margaret Calhoun and Barbara Trimble.

The play's original debut at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, was distinguished by six straight nights of rioting during the performances, Haran said.

The audience took objection to references to the Church and Holy names in the play, and some considereed it "a slander upon the fair name of Ireland," but when the line, "What'd I care if you brought me a drift of chosen females, standing in their shifts itself" was reached, it is reputed that part of the audience started throwing chairs.

However, "Playboy" was quickly recognized as one of the most poetic and lyrical pieces of comedy ever written, and the rhythm and exuberance of the language follows Elizabethan tradition of the grand style.

Sororities Open For Membership Through Friday

Rushing activities for City College's two sororities, Theta Tau and Phi Beta Rho, which began last Monday, will close Friday, according to the Inter-Sorority Council.

Scholarship is the main factor for eligibility, and every coed admitted as a member must be carrying at least 12 units or more with a grade average of at least a C, council officers said.

Even though a large emphasis is placed upon scholarship, a social purpose is also prominent. Coeds with similar tastes and interests comprise each sorority, which contains about 20 members each at present.

In addition, each group participates in some charitable work, wherein each member is required to contribute five hours of service. Currently Phi Beta Rho is active at St. Joseph's Orphanage, while Theta Tau contributes its time to Shriner's Hospital.

A tea will be held for the registrants on Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. in Statler Wing. A chance to meet active members and get acquainted with the program is provided here.

On Sunday, October 12, smaller groups will meet in individual member's homes from 2:30 to 4 p.m. and 4 to 6 p.m. These "firesides," as they are called, are intended to help prospective members to become better acquainted with the sorority.

Tuesday, October 26, is the day when prospective pledges will meet in member's homes again at a coffee preference hour, after which the Inter-sorority Council will express its preferences to Dean of Women Mary Golding on Wednesday, October 27. Each candidate who is eligible and attends the sorority functions will then receive an invitation on Friday, October 29.

Budget Hearings Open This Friday

No definite deadline has been set for filing of spring semester budgets, but hearings will be held every Friday from noon to 1 p.m., beginning next week.

The various campus organizations will submit an itemized list for the spring semester budget and the Student Council will then review them, Merritt Barnes, finance chairman, explained.

Official activities on campus are allotted money by request, and the request is considered by the Student Council with the advice of Oscar E. Anderson, controller.

For last semester's budget, $41,983.76 was allotted, and Associated Student President Dennis Sweeney said that there is an estimated $2000 more available for the supplementary budget next spring because of a recent all-time high in AS card sales this semester.

Barnes has instituted a new bookkeeping system devised by one of his two assistants, Janet Hinterman. The Student Council will now send a statement to the budgeted organizations to show their expenditures and balances.

The hearings are expected to be finished before Christmas vacation when the Student Council will vote on the amount of the budget.

1966 Programming Begins This Week

By the end of this week students will be able to start programming for the spring semester, 1966.

"Students must be sure to keep their appointments," counselor Walter McCloud said. "To miss them might mean a delay in a student registration until the very last hours," he added.

This is because there are some 500 students assigned to each counselor; therefore, those who will not be able to keep their appointments were advised to notify their counselors two days in advance.

In matters of registration times, sophomore students and students with high grade point averages will come first.

The registration number itself does not indicate the time to register, but McCloud said the schedule will probably be posted by the end of November.

'Best Team Potential'--Schwartz

Rams Meet Mustangs In Pre-Season Windup

The Ram football team opens its 1965 home schedule at 2:30 p.m. Friday against the San Joaquin Delta College Mustangs.

Ram hopes are high according to head coach Arthur "Dutch" Elston and line coach Alex Schwartz. "I think this could be the best ball club I've had since coming here in 1962," Elston stated.

"This team has the potential of being the best team the college has had in ten or twelve years," Schwartz added; "it's up to them, they can be very good, if they want to be."

"San Joaquin Delta has always given us a rough game and we can expect more of the same Friday," Schwartz emphasized.

The Mustangs opened their season with a 7-0 win over San Mateo.

This year's Mustangs are a big, hard-hitting team. The defense is spearheaded by tackle Tim Kelly (6'2"-230), and end Bob Heinz (6'6"-260). The Mustangs' only touchdown was scored by wingback Steve DaValle, but Clyde Moland also produced some heetic moments for San Mateo defenders.

All the Rams realize that the potential is here for a successful campaign, and early practice sessions have been packed with rugged battles for every spot.

Eural Smothers and Reeves Moses, a transfer from Oregon, have the edge at ends, but Dwight Tucker, Bruce Rosenberg and Don McGee are close behind. Veterans Mike Taylor and Joe Ross are a formidable duo at the tackle spots, but transfers Chris Panagotacos, Mark Sultana and Jerd Lapham will all see plenty of action.

Another pair of veterans is currently leading in the race for the starting guard berths. But both Rich Colombo and Dave Malae are being pushed hard by Art Luna, and veteran defensive end Chris Davis has added his quickness to help solidify a one-time trouble spot.

Mike Dunn has the starting call at center and is ably backed by defensive starter Orrie McRae.

To date the starting backfield is composed of Bill Gianquinto at quarterback, Ron Fassler and Chris Ransom at halfback, and Dennis Sullivan at fullback.

Transfer Bob Lee and newcomer O. J. Simpson, however, are pushing hard for starting berths, while Craig Rodeick, Glen Baker, John Morello, Milt Franke, Fred Lovelle and John Valero are keeping Fassler and Ransom hustling.

Friday will be the Rams' last chance to experiment before opening the 1965 season at home, on October 8, against the always tough Foothill Owls.

The season schedule:

Foothill	here	October 8
Chabot	here	October 15
Oakland	there	October 22
Contra Costa	there	October 29
San Mateo	here	November 5
San Jose	here	November 12
Diablo Valley	there	November 20

RA Sets Three Sports Days For Semester

Recreation Association activities will include three sports days this fall, RA President Pam Maul announced today.

The first playday is scheduled for October 23 at the Monterey Peninsula College. The second will take place here on November 6 and the final sports day will be held at Diablo College December 4.

Among the sports clubs available are RA fencing, badminton, volleyball, bowling and modern folk and social dance.

Club applicants can sign up in the women's gymnasium, Miss Maul said.

RAMBLINGS

Gridiron Hopes High; Soccer Title A Cinch

By William Pates

WELL, it's that time of year again.

Yes, it's that time of year when head football coach Arthur "Dutch" Elston and associates attempt to mold a group of former All-City award winners, and various one-time prep football enemies into a cohesive force hopefully capable of bringing City College its first conference football championship since 1958.

This conglomerate mass of football knowledge isn't expected to attempt this feat all on its own, however. The newcomers will be joined by a group of lettermen who suffered no greater humiliation than a 14-0 shut-out at the hands of cochampion Contra Costa last year.

The Rams compiled a 4-2-1 record in 1964, giving them a tie for third place. This is somewhat comforting when one considers their record after one month of contention was one win, two loses and one tie.

Nevertheless, the San Franciscans won themselves two small bits of consolation by overwhelming two of their last three opponents, San Mateo and Diablo Valley, by 46-12 and 41-15 scores, respectively.

Perhaps, one could sluff off last season's "poor" start as one befitting a slow starter, but things are expected to be better this year.

There has been a favorable influx of talent this spring which is expected to bolster the Rams' expected contention.

The "offensive load," which was primarily carried by Chris Ransom, Ron Fassler and Bill Gianquinto among others in the past, will no longer have to suffer under such a limited support.

Amongst the group expected to expand or strengthen the Rams' offensive attack is a former All-City quarterback from Lowell who arrives here by way of Arizona State, Bob Lee, and a Galileo fullback, O. J. Simpson, a 1964 All-City first club selection.

Lee, who at the present time is still running the second string club, is expected to threaten Gianquinto for the starting quarterback spot and has a 50 per cent chance of succeeding.

Lee was one of the reasons for Lowell reaching the playoffs in 1961 and 1962 as well as enabling them to win a "defensive" championship in 1961, only to see a tie in 1962 go down the drain on a fouled-up conversion.

In 1962 alone Lee threw for nearly 1100 yards which gives him somewhat of an edge over Gianquinto.

For two of the three years O. J. Simpson played prep varsity football, he worked on winless teams which compiled a 19-game losing streak that stretched back to 1961 before they exploded.

Simpson was a part of that explosion.

He had a great deal to do with the Lions' compiling a 5-4 season record, their best in more than ten years.

The power-driving, 185-pound fullback is the first Galilean to gain a spot on an All-City team since Joe Borg in 1958 and this has got to have some significance regarding his ability.

It is hoped that he will make himself known if the time comes.

* * *

In the mean time, soccer coach Roy Diederichsen and his crew will walk through the motions of winning the college's seventh straight soccer championship even without the help of All-Americans Mike Beltran and Alex Volikovsky.

Offensive standout Alex Mendieta, responsible for 28 Ram goals last year, will return to help in the drive.

* * *

Jim Swan, who replaced John Anastasia as Oakland Merritt College football coach, is the only new head man in the Golden Gate Conference gridiron coaching lines this season.

* * *

The formation of the three-year-old Golden Gate Conference did little to disrupt rivalries as former Coast Conference combatants Foothill, San Jose City and Diablo Valley colleges still match one another as do San Francisco, Oakland, Contra Costa and San Mateo, who formerly competed in the now-defunct Big Eight.

CLASSY LINEUP FOR GRID SEASON. It looks as though football rooters will have to keep their eyes focused on more than just the Rams' winning ways this year. Song-girls (l-r) Carol Giovannetti, Carol Anselmi, Carol Craig, Kathie Daugherty, Chris Scales and Marilyn Erkkila hope to keep right on smiling throughout the entire 1965 football season.

Vasquez Predicts Rough Season; Depth Lack Hinders Comeback

Coming off one of the worst seasons in cross country competition when the squad finished a lowly sixth place and was plagued by injuries and other hindrances, coach Lou Vasquez will be trying to pull his squad of spikers into contending condition for a fresh assault on the Golden Gate Conference title.

"It'll be tough," Vasquez said; "teamwise, I'm not so sure where we stand. Injuries and other hindrances have combined to give us a lack of depth."

But the outlook isn't completely bleak. Vasquez is excited over three incoming freshman spikers in addition to two returning spikers who may turn the tide, and bring that added depth.

The incoming freshmen are George Furguson from Sacred Heart, Clint Rigley from Galileo and Don Boyle from Lowell, all of whom Vasquez terms as "pretty good."

Two returning men whom Vasquez expects much of are Joe Singer and William Long, his number three and four men.

In the 1961 season, cross country mentor Vasquez, who has been responsible for the teams since his arrival here in 1957, coached a squad of "ailing spikers" to a championship.

The Ram spikers and Vasquez duplicated the feat the next year in what was considered one of the toughest conferences in a decade. They finished only second in 1963, a thin point behind San Mateo.

Except for a frustrating 1964 season, the cross country squad has had a relatively successful history at the college and it is not hard to see them contending for the conference title again this year.

Block SF Goals To Fill Semester

The word from Block SF Society adviser, coach Art "Dutch" Elston, is: "We have plenty of activities on our calendar for the upcoming semester."

Elections for officers will be held in the next few week and coach Elston invited every letterman to attend the meetings.

The club has approximately 55 eligible members this semester with 30 of them from Elston's football squad. Meetings will be held every second Thursday during College Hour.

The club's major activity will be to sell refreshments during every game that will be played on the football field or gymnasium. This incudes home games in football and basketball and also all the high school games played on the campus.

The Block SF is sponsor for the semiannual block banquet, at which all the athletes who have earned their letters and jackets during that particular athletic season are honored.

The Block SF is considered a service club, since it usually takes part in the annual blood drive and the members are always ready to answer questions asked by fellow students. It also hopes to achieve recognition for all lettermen.

Los Angeles Valley Vanquishes Local Ram Eleven, 26-0

By Frank Cooney

Van Nuys, Calif.—City College of San Francisco Rams made many mistakes in their debut, and Los Angeles Valley Monarchs quickly capitalized for a 26-0 ego-crusher Saturday night.

But it wasn't so bad for the San Franciscans as the shutout reads. Actually the Rams were in contention until midway in the third quarter, trailing by only 0-7. Then their boo-boos undid them, allowing the Angelenos to spread the difference with 13 points in the last period.

Clever end Terrel Rey, L.A.'s candidate for All-America honors, snared six passes for 130 yards and two touchdowns to spearhead his team's second straight victory.

What hurt the Rams in their attempts to get on the scoreboard were penalties totaling 140 yards. In the first four minutes alone there were 40 yards assessed against them.

Two fumbles and a key pass interception didn't help the cause any.

Noticeably missing in the Ram lineup was speedy halfback Chris Ransom. Chris, along with a couple of other players went for a car ride Friday night.

The ride ended abruptly when the car was struck from the rear. Ransom, the only one injured, required thirty stitches in his left leg and is not expected to rejoin the team for two weeks.

It looked as if the Rams were enroute to change things at the start of the third quarter.

Valley received the second half opening kickoff and was promptly forced to punt on fourth down with twenty-four to go.

Ron Fassler returned the kick to within two yards of midfield and it seemed that San Francisco was in business. Trailing only 0-7, O. J. Simpson kept the pace going with a spurt of twelve yards.

But this was to be all!

The Monarchs held and Bob Lee punted a beauty to the L. A. 5 yard line.

Valley, with their backs to the wall, unleashed a 95 yard drive in 10 plays and scored on a thirty-six yard pass from Mike Rhodes to Terrel Rey.

Commenting after the game coach "Dutch" Elston pointed out that "Our linemen were going both ways and were not getting a chance to catch a breath."

Not only were they tired but after receiving the brunt of things for a major part of the game—nerves were on end.

And so with only 1:52 remaining to be played, Dave Malae, usually the most reserved guy on the team, became offended at a verbal crack by a Valley player and touched off a five minute San Francisco vs. Los Angeles donneybrook.

It's becoming a tradition.

Defeated, but still with a game under their belts, City College of San Francisco's Ram gridders will try to reverse the tables in a final pre-league clash this Friday at 2:30 p.m. on the home turf against San Joaquin Delta.

League play opens against Foothill on October 8 at home.

AMS Sees Extra Track Activity This Semester

Associate Men Students may introduce something new this semester, an intramural track meet, Stan Angel, AMS president, revealed today.

Angel said that the date has not been worked out, but that the only qualification for entering would be the possesion of an Associated Students card.

The deadline for filing applications for the intramural basketball teams has not been set yet, Angel added.

Most of the semester will be centered around the intramural basketball games, again featuring this semester an AMS Sports Night highlighted by the championship basketball game.

Last semester's overall winners were the Irish of the Independent league. In the other two leagues, the Freshman and Alpha Kappa Rho were winners in the Club and the Fraternity leagues, respectively.

There was a total of 19 teams participating in the competition last semester.

Trophies awarded last semester were given to the championship Irish team, the Freshman, Alpha Kappa Rho, and the winners of the boxing matches.

The faculty also won out over the men from student government in a fierce battle, winning 18 to 16.

Toler—NFL Official

Burl Toler, former City College grid great, was selected as the National Football League's first Negro official last summer.

The former Ram center, who is presently assistant principal of Benjamin Junior High in San Francisco, will accept assignment in the NFL as head linesman, the position he held with local high school football games.

Toler teamed up with Ollie Matson in 1948 to help bring City College a championship football squad.

For his outstanding efforts, Toler was chosen for the All-Conference and All-American teams during that title year.

When the spunky Ram center left the college in 1949, he went on to the University of San Francisco where he starred as a defensive line backer in the days when the USF Dons had Ed Brown and Matson in the backfield.

In 1952, Toler was drafted ninth by the Cleveland Browns who immediately traded him to the Chicago Cardinals (now in St. Louis) where he joined his old team mate Matson.

Following an injury Toler received in the 1952 all-star game against the Los Angeles Rams, the former City College Ram was eventually forced to give up professional football as a player.

Five years after Toler's retirement, both he and Matson, along with several other Ram greats, were inducted into City College's Sports Hall of Fame.

Razor-Cut, Blow Wave To Be Featured As AMS Sponsors Hair Styling Exhibition Tuesday

By James Rauh

Style-conscious men students will have an opportunity to observe the "modern look" in hair styling for men when it is brought to the college next Tuesday, Columbus Day, during College Hour in S-136, by the Associated Men Students, in the person of Everett Hendrick, of Everett's Hair Styles, 1418 Ocean avenue.

In a demonstration of the latest hair styling methods, Everett, the name under which Hendrick works at his shop, will put on an exhibition of the newest hair-styling procedure including the razor-cut, blow wave and other tonsorial techniques.

"Many of the students and also the instructors at City College already come here to get their hair cut," Everett indicated.

According to Everett, the complete hair-styling process may include the razor-cut and blow wave, plus a shampoo, styling, hair-coloring, hair straightening or hair curling. His prices range from a $2.50 razor-cut to a $5.50 hair-styling.

Besides working on full heads of hair, Everett and his associate Walter Peters, or Walter as he is referred to in the shop, also cater to those who are without any uppermost embellishments. They set up arrangements for tailor-made hair pieces.

"We will have a complete hair styling set up in S-136 on the day of the demonstration," Everett pointed out. He stated that he will also bring a model with him on which the techniques will be demonstrated.

When asked who made up the majority of his customers, Everett said, "Men from the ages of 18 to 25 make up 80 per cent of the business. The whole idea behind the demonstration is to appeal to the college people."

Everett and his assistant are not only licensed barbers but cosmetologists as well.

"The old style 'barber shop' of today is going to die out and the beauty shop for men will take over," Everett declared.

Everett's assistant Walter remarked, "Men are more style-conscious now than a number of years ago. If there are styles for their clothes then why shouldn't there be styles for their hair?" That's a good question.

Columbus Day Gets Deep Six

Anybody who had purchased any hats, horns or noisemakers with which to celebrate the Columbus Day holiday Tuesday is going to have to put them in cold storage until next year. There will be no holiday on October 12 at the college.

The Columbus Day holiday was sunk as a result of a request that was made by the college's administration to the Board of Education. The request, according to Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, was to change the Columbus Day holiday to a school day and to make December 31 a holiday in its stead.

Student philosophers have theorized that this action grew out of the fact that students cut December 31 anyway, and so the administration, in answer to popular demand, sanctioned the 31st as a holiday so as to ease the guilty consciences of the would-be cutters. —P.D.

Additional Rookies Up Campus Police Force To 41 Men

To handle the ever-increasing problems of the City College campus, 18 new policemen have been added to the Campus Police staff, which now totals 41.

All the rookies are second year criminology students and have studied the rudiments of judo. They do not carry guns but know how to handle themselves in a rough situation.

Campus Police are sworn in by San Francisco Police Chief Thomas Cahill or Deputy Chief Alan Nelder. Although all rookies are officially members of the Campus Police, they must undergo a six-week training period before they are sworn in at the Hall of Justice.

The rookie policemen are James Alcorn, Charles Among, Charles Chiles, Michael Clouse, Carl Frank, Earnest Gilbert, Kevin Kelley, William Matsu, Michael Morarity, Phillip Payton, Joseph Ponzo, Ronald Rogers, Alfred Rodriguez, Robert Ryan, Taylor Satala, Patrick Sullivan, James Yribarren and Ken Dyer.

Every policeman puts in an average of three hours daily patrolling the campus. They don't get paid for this, but they do get paid for working dances, football games, rallies and night patrol.

Most members of the Campus Police plan to make careers in some phase of law enforcement.

Hedds Featured At Sports Rally

The Hedds, a local rock and roll group, will provide the entertainment at a sports rally during College Hour tomorrow, according to rally commissioner Tom Duff.

Football coach Arthur "Dutch" Elston and some of the members of his team will speak at the rally, according to Student Activities Adviser James Wyatt.

Aside from Duff, the Rally Committee includes Carol Craig, Joe Hayword, Earl Braverman and Stan Angel.

Duff is trying to get some jazz combos to perform at the rallies in late October or early November.

The Rams will play their first conference game of the season Friday against Foothill College of Los Altos Hills. The game will be played here and will start at 2:30 p.m.

Ron Fassler are held by The Ram just outside Smith Hall during College Hour about every two weeks, Wyatt said.

Finance Chairman Barnes Explains Budget

By Karen Carlson

Handcuffs, ankle braces, doughnuts and T-shirts are but a few of the things with which Biff Barnes must concern himself.

Barnes, as finance chairman, is in charge of setting up a budget for Associated Student funds for the Spring semester of 1966. It is also his duty to see that financial matters run smoothly this semester.

Thirty-six budgeted organizations on campus receive funds from the AS; total appropriations reached $41,983.76.

Barnes explained that the money comes from the bookstore ($23,000); the sale of AS cards ($18,850) and from vending machines ($4000).

"We sell a lot of AS cards," Barnes continued, "mainly because students can't obtain parking permits without cards. Also, all organizations receiving AS money have to show proof of 100 per cent AS membership."

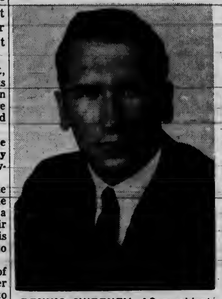
Barnes is assisted in his duties by Janet Hinterman and Rosemary Donaldson.

"Janet helps with the bookkeeping," he stated, "She has devised a new, much more effective accounting system. Rosemary is in charge of the secretarial duties, such as typing."

The budgeted organizations are divided into seven groups: cultural organizations, communications, administration, coeducational sports, men's sports (intercollegiate), student government and miscellaneous. Communications have the highest allocation, with more than $7000 allocated, and coeducational sports receive a scant $1000.

"The budget requests we receive are certainly varied," Barnes said. "We are requested to order diamond needles for KCSF, doughnuts for Associated Men Student functions, ammunition for the Campus Police, and fees for tournaments for the athletic department."

Barnes revealed that the only problem he anticipates is overspending, and explained that he and his assistants are trying to prevent this.



BIFF BARNES proves his versatility in the role of Finance Chairman.

DENNIS SWEENEY, AS president and advisory committee member.

Speech Committee Nominees Win Council Approval

At a specially called council meeting held last Friday, Student Council approved Dennis Sweeney, Ernest Thallinger and Steve Ahern to be student members of the advisory committee on campus speakers.

The appointees were nominated by Sweeney, Associated Student president this semester.

Sweeney gave his reasons for the appointees as follows:

Concerning the appointment of Thallinger, Sweeney said that he was one of the outstanding members of the committee last semester, and since he was also one of the leaders of the Free Speech movement at City College, offers invaluable information.

Sweeney said that he appointed Ahern, Far Western representative of Newman clubs, because he believes that Ahern is a qualified student, with experience in student leadership.

Sweeney appointed himself because he considers himself already greatly involved in student government. "I feel that I am qualified to contribute to the committee's function." he said.

The committee was first appointed last semester following the establishment of the free speech area located on campus near the Ram.

AS Card Sales Reach New High This Fall

Associated Student card sales reached a record this semester, when they passed the 4000 goal set for this fall.

James Wyatt, student government adviser, attributed the early sales spurt to increased enrollment, stating that 1660 cards were sold at the new student orientation program and 1070 more at registration, thus accounting for sales of 2730 cards before classes started.

Student Council Elects Boyd To Fill Vacant Seat, Okays Football Scouting Expenses

By Rick Heintz

Roy Boyd was elected by Student Council last Wednesday to fill an empty seat vacated this semester by a sophomore member of council.

Boyd won the election by amassing the necessary majority of seven votes at an election in which four candidates were opposing him. Two of the candidates were not present.

His nearest opponent was Hugh Haworth, who gained four votes. Lloyd Mann was next with one vote.

The candidates, Bob Davis, Tom Csekey, Mann, Haworth and Boyd, were given a chance to speak prior to voting, at which time council was able to question them.

Doug Bianchi, a member of council, spoke for Haworth, who was not present. When asked why Haworth was not present, Bianchi said, "I believe he was not told when the elections were to be held."

Davis was the other candidate not present, but he did not have a representative there to speak for him.

FIRST VOTE INVALID

Council was forced into two ballotings at the secret ballot election, since Dennis Sweeney, Associated Student president, ruled an invalid election when he discovered that a council member had marked the names of two candidates on the same ballot.

Results of this vote showed Boyd in front with four votes, Haworth second with three votes, Mann and Csekey each with one, and two abstentions.

Council changed its voting on the second ballot, giving Boyd the majority of seven votes, and Haworth the remaining four.

Boyd was then sworn into office by President Sweeney.

Last semester Boyd lost his bid for a council seat on the United Student Representation Party ticket by just 17 votes.

TWO VACANCIES REMAIN

Sandy Sager, Election Commissioner, announced that there were two seats open for freshman members of council and that the petitions are due for these positions one week after the first midterm period.

She also added that there are only two petitions so far for these seats and that one was declared invalid because of a higher position held by the petitioner.

At Wednesday's meeting, Student Council decided to ask Sweeney to nominate members to the advisory Committee on Campus Speakers, with council's approval. The vote was 13-0-0.

The committee will include three student members approved by Student Council, two members chosen by the Faculty Academic Senate and two members by the Administration.

Purpose of the committee is to act as a presidential advisory board relative to all free speech activities on campus, according to a statement in the Report To The President by the advisory committee of Student-Faculty-Administration Representatives completed in June.

CONSTITUTION UNDER REVIEW

Council also decided (10-0-0) to have Sweeney appoint a committee to a study of the AS constitution and make any suggestions concerning its alteration.

Also covered at the meeting was the allocation of $200 to the football squad for scouting expenses, which passed 13-0-0.

Present at the meeting to explain the reason for the request was football coach Art Elston.

Elston explained that the coaches go to some of the games played which involve teams that will face the college later this semester in order to spot the weak and strong points of the other teams.

Elston said, "Since these games stretch as far apart as San Jose and Hayward, the money requested would cover the gas expenses of the scout sent and many times, since the scout would have to eat on the trip, would cover moderate meal expenses."

Biff Barnes, financial chairman, at an earlier meeting gave the financial status of the Associated Students.

24 Coeds Picked In Semifinals Of 'Best Dressed'

Thirty smartly dressed coeds were chosen in the initial tryout of the Best-Dressed Coed Contest held in C-248 during College Hour, September 30.

Mary Maurer, president of the Associated Women Students, announced a change of date for the second tryout. Originally scheduled for next week, it has now been arranged for tomorrow, October 7, in C-104. The outcome of this contest may determine the need for an additional tryout, Miss Maurer said.

Criteria for selection of the coeds were poise, walking, general appearance and grooming. Elimination of the 60 participants was done on a point system by each individual judge.

Among the judges were faculty members Jack Abad, Karl Thursby, John O'Brien, Melia Furgis and Catherine Connolly. Former Best-Dressed Coeds Susan Schwampe and Linda Heiser along with Carol Scriever, a merchandising major and employee of Benioff's, completed the panel of judges.

The finalists are hoping to be among the 14 chosen to model in the semiannual AWS fashion show and tea on Thursday, November 4. They will be attired in fashions from Benioff's. At this time the Best-Dressed Coed will be chosen and presented with a small trophy. Each of the other finalists will receive a pin of recognition.

Following is a list of the finalists:

Joan Mauromatis, Joan Shaw, Joyce Byrd, Cynthia George, Sue Bottarini, Patti Romero, Marianne Wolbertus, Darnita Alexander, Grace Relfe, Shirley Chiu, Donna McLennan, Linda Blalock, Barbara Peters, Carmine Meyer, Sharon Strauss, Sharon Yee, Barbara Kontis, Karen Baugh and Helen Bundros.

Darlene Spicer, Janet Ottone, Lin Reed, Gail Pursley and Anne Lowry.

Sororities Host Coed Rushees At Sunday Firesides

Rushing activities for City College sororities will continue with the annual Fireside meetings Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. for Theta Tau and from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. for Phi Beta Rho, Carol Jiminez, Inter-Sorority Council president, announced today.

Theta Tau's Fireside will take place at the home of its president, Janice Goldberg, 65 Lupine street, Apartment 3, San Francisco, from 2 to 4 p.m.

The location of Phi Bcta Rho's Fireside will be the home of sergeant-at-arms, Nan Korens, 861-25th avenue, San Francisco from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

All coeds who registered for rushing and who attended the ISC tea on October 2 are invited to attend one or both of the Firesides, Miss Jiminez emphasized.

Entertainment, refreshments and a look at the scrapbooks and trophies of the sorority will comprise the program, Miss Jiminez explained that emphasis is put on acquainting each prospective member with the members, and with the purposes and activities of each sorority.

Throngs At Frosh Dance Create Need For Capacity Limitations

LITTLE LESS than two weeks ago, a Frosh dance was held in Smith Hall. Reliable sources indicated that it was the largest attended dance held at the college. Because of the huge crowd, many individuals were left outside as a result of the lack of room. Tension soon developed.

Fire laws had to be enforced and a few windows were broken.

Admission was obtained by presenting an Associated Student card or a registration card plus 50 cents. It would seem that in the future, tickets should be sold before the dances and a maximum number always set.

Fortunately, nothing disastrous took place, but this should be a lesson well learned so that new measures can be taken from now on to prevent recurrence of the situation.

No one here wishes to convey the idea that a well-attended dance is not something of which to be proud.

In addition to the fact that the Associated Students benefit, spirit, which could be improved at this college, certainly is bolstered when a dance is so well attended.

George D. Smith

George D. Smith, famous San Francisco hotelman and builder of the Mark Hopkins in 1925, died a week ago last Friday. Locally, he was the major influence in the development of the college's hotel and restaurant department in recognition of which Smith Hall bears his name.

The famous Top Of The Mark cocktail lounge, an idea of Mr. Smith's, was opened in 1939. He owned and operated the hotel until 1962, the time of his retirement.

The college expresses its sincere sympathy in memory of this great man and the improvements he made possible on this campus.

People Who Kneed . . . Continuing Melodrama

History has it that Daniel Boone moved away because he saw the smoke from a neighbor's house a couple of miles away.

He decided the site was too crowded.

It's a pretty safe guess that if he were around today, he wouldn't be attending City College.

This semester City College has a record enrollment of more than 8500 day students, according to the count received from Mary Learnard, registrar. This is 900 students more than the enrollment at the same time last year.

While the suspense is not evident in these numbers alone, has anybody ever bothered to compute how much extra space all these people will require?

Extra space is needed for the little things that count, such as descending a flight of stairs while others are ascending or inhaling at another one of those door jambs.

One pastime which has become exceedingly prevalent on campus is musical chairs, which any student who has a class with 40 students and only 35 chairs has experienced.

College Hour on Thursdays adds a certain thrill to the problem. Traveling down the hill in front of the Ram brings memories of those "help Billy find his way home" puzzles, in which the only requirement is not to run into a dead end.

But at least in those puzzles there was usually a solution.

A pair of shined shoes is also a direct invitation. No, they perhaps will not be stomped on, but a quick check of them after class will immediately tell a person how many times he was forced off the "spacious-when-empty" footpaths.

Perhaps football offers a hidden benefit other than winning games. Knowing how to use a good straight arm never hurt anyone who's about to be late for class.

The lost space even makes one wonder if there will be enough room to eat lunch in Statler wing, to talk in Statler wing, to breathe in Statler wing or to get into Statler wing.

A rumor has it that signs will be posted by the coke machines in Statler saying, "Tis better to thirst than to decay."

It is suspense like this that can make life on campus more thrilling than it is portrayed in these suspenseful Hollywood cloak and dagger mysteries.

To discover whether this reporter will last out the semester, tune in next week for the continuing episodes of the suspense-packed drama, People Who Kneed People, featuring casts for thousands.

Smart Boy Keeps His Girls Happy

That the walls of Science Hall have ears is mere theory, but that the corridors are used by alert faculty members is a fact.

One faculty member, whose integrity is beyond question, is said to have heard the following conversation:

A male student said to his companion: "I've got an hour break. I gotta go check my proofreader."

His companion replied, "Your proofreader?"

"Sure," the student said, "I've got one girl typing the paper, and one proofreading it. I've got to keep them all happy, so I've got them all doing things for me."

The faculty member commented, "This is one of tomorrow's top executives in training." Too bad there's no "most likely to succeed" contest at the college.

• Student's Logistics

Editor, The Guardsman:

There is much room for improvement in the college's registration procedures. The following two major improvements would eliminate a great deal of the usual confusion:

1. One runner should make frequent periodic checks with each booth to list all closed classes. He then takes the list of closed classes to the Communications Center where a person can announce through classroom speakers: "Attention, room counselors and students. The following classes have recently been closed. Please mark them closed on your study list posted in each adviser room. They are . . . Chemistry 1A . . . Section 10 . . . CLOSED. Etc., etc."

2. Anyone wishing to drop a course for any reason during the days of registration should take his IBM class card to a specified bay (or room) and deposit it with the instructor there. The instructor sends out a runner periodically to replace the IBM cards back into the files in each bay within the library.

If a student runner is not entrusted with the above duties, an adult can as easily be used.

By using these methods of reducing chaos in registration, or using them as a nucleus for other ideas, organization can be implanted into the registration procedure. I feel the current procedures are not adequate, and certainly need revision. What is YOUR answer?

To Tell The Truth

Questions Swamp Coeds In Almost Friendly Booth

When the main campus building on hill number 29 was constructed, a glass cubicle was built beside the main entrance of the building. This tiny room housed the telephone switchboard for the college.

Now this cubicle has been converted into the information booth, and two brave students volunteered to work in it.

These students do everything from answering questions, helping with the work in the registrar's office, giving students copies of summer session grades, to taking telephone messages for instructors. During the first week of classes they gave directions, as well as maps of the campus to students who were lost.

Some of the many questions asked of the Information experts are:

"Where do I sign up for a locker? Where can I get a draft deferment? Where is the swimming pool? What are you doing in there? Do they say you? Can you sharpen my pencil? Can you tell me the plot of this story I was supposed to read for my English class today?"

Another poor student wanted to know, "I have English 1A at 9 o'clock, but I don't know which teacher, and there are four or five sections, which one should I go to?"

"I'm sorry, but you will have to go to each section to see which instructor has your name on his class list," replied the girl in the cage.

Besides being of help to students enrolled in day classes, the information people also answer questions concerning night classes. Dean Jack Billwiller, who is in charge of the night class division, used to answer the telephone in the registrar's office in the evening. He recalled one man who called and asked, "Have you looked at the moon tonight? It looks rather strange to me."

"No I haven't," answered the dean.

"Well would you please take a look at it and tell me if it looks all right to you."

City College is your almost friendly college. The students who work in the information booth will almost bend over backward to answer all questions asked them.

What Ever Happened To Butterfly?

Butterfly has flown the coop, according to mad scientist Judy Winters and her chief apprentice, Harry Mathias.

The experimenter, Miss Winters, decided that for her biology class project she would discover whether Iguanas change color under extremes of heat and cold.

Therefore, the experiment proceeded thusly: The subject, one of three iguanas, is placed into either an incubator or the freezer compartment of a surgical refrigerator for six minutes.

When time is up, Miss Winters, garbed in the traditional white laboratory coat which, naturally, is hanging down to her ankles, and wearing yellow gloves up to her elbows, dives into either the incubator, or the freezer, and extracts a kicking, screaming iguana.

Then, Miss Winters, with zest and fervor of one bent on passing through a new scientific threshold, shrieks, "Oh, Harry open the door quick. He's getting away from me."

So Mathias proceeds, or tries to proceed, to close either an incubator or a refrigerator door and to open the door to laboratory S-314 concurrently, which is no mean trick, if one's lab coat is too short in the shoulders and too long at the ankles.

Finally, Miss Winters plops the unsuspecting iguana under the eye of a densitometer, which measures the brightness and intensity of color.

It was at this point, after several trips, that Butterfly, the smallest, but obviously the most wiley of the iguanas, had it. He bit Miss Winters and scrammed behind the laboratory wall closet.

And apparently that's where Butterfly remains to this day, because the air in the laboratory is still pure, and the cage with the lettuce is still empty.

Rabbi Fine Gives Food For Thought

By B.T.

TODAY IS the Day of Atonement for those of Jewish faith. This is Yom Kippur, the day for fast and prayer.

Yom Kippur is their most holy of days, for even in Israel the Israeli Army serves no meals on this important date.

In deference to those observing this day, The "G" interviewed Rabbi Alvin Fine, who is a part-time instructor here, an active member of the San Francisco Human Rights Commission, a professor at San Francisco State College, and a distinguished television panelist.

Here is some food for thought from Dr. Fine, who chooses his words well before even uttering them:

On Vietnam: "I believe in the right and respect of expressing one's opinion and concern, in an endeavor to influence public policy. Whether national or local, a free people must use its freedom or lose it, but action should be responsible."

On First Anniversary of San Francisco Human Rights Commission: "It is the most important work of our city. We are working in several main areas.

"First, we're trying to achieve in reality equal opportunity for all people, regardless of race or creed. . . .

"Secondly, we are helping to create jobs and to find people within minority communities who are qualified to fill available jobs.

"Thirdly, we're working with private business and public offices to encourage and cooperate in programs to train people."

On Automation: "One of the perils is to dehumanize man by the very things he himself invents, so that individual humans have become factors in the technological management of our society."

On Edncation: "The most important business of our nation is education. A free society, a democratic society, depends on the knowledge and intelligence of the people who make it up.

"One of the responsibilities of education is to preserve the personality and individuality and soul of human beings."

On World Affairs: "My job as a Chaplain in the service during World War II took me to China, Burma and India. It all made a profound impression on me.

"I learned the infinite magnitude of the problems of the Orient. These ranged from famine and poverty to widespread illiteracy and the lack of opportunity of education to improve conditions of human life. Extremely complex conditions made it most difficult.

"The only solution is aid in two forms. Economic, and advice and guidance—with respect for culture and traditions of people; not as know-it-alls, but to show them, by understanding to help them to understand us."

On People: "The most important thing in the world is human beings. All other things must serve human welfare, whether business, government or education.

"Every human being is important. Even a human being who is guilty of a crime, or is guilty of some evil act. We must preserve human life and values."

Dr. Fine attended Reed College in Portland, Oregon, and the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Meanderings

By Mike Smith

ONE AFTERNOON last week, after most students left this campus to go home or to work, there was, standing silently and meekly in front of Science Hall's outside stairway, a shabbily dressed, elderly man carrying a torn and battered shopping bag.

He was slowly running his trembling hand through one of those minute and faded-red garbage cans, tearing open brown paper bags and pulling out bits and pieces of "debris" that City College students had thrown away.

When this elderly man reached the bottom of the trash can, he carefully hobbled over to the next can, opened the lid as if it were weighted down with lead, peered in, and anxiously mixed his hand through another pile of rubbish.

The senior citizen was too occupied in what he was doing to notice that there was a worn-out, tired-looking woman walking past the student parking lot in The Pit across the street from the college.

She was meticulously balancing several large and poorly wrapped bundles in her arms.

Every few moments she would pause, lean against the wire fence and gaze absently down at The Pit spotted with 1964 Chevys, 1963 Fords, Plymouths and Volkswagons.

As she struggled past the parking lot driveway, several cars whizzed by her. One car stopped by the curb to pick up a pretty young coed carrying a notebook and purse which she tossed in the back of the car.

The tired-looking woman with the bundles dropped her purse, but someone walking by picked it up and courteously stuffed it under her arm.

Again up the hill in front of the college, unaware of the woman and her packages, two men, who looked as if they went to high school, were talking about their experiences in the Marine Corps.

One stated that he might have to go to Vietnam in the near future, the other had no idea where he was going.

At that moment, two youths, laughing, came walking down the main stairway in front of the college. One of them mentioned that he had to go to a party that night; then he threw a half-eaten apple into the garbage can and climbed into a waiting 1964 Stingray.

The old man looked on, picked up his bag and opened another lid of another trash can to see what the college people had left him.

Moments later, a nicely dressed woman walked by talking to the small boy who was with her. She looked up at the college doors and commented to the boy, "Someday you will go there when you get big."

The boy then broke away, ran down the street and screamed in laughter which rang out in the air. He quickly returned to the woman with a smile on his face.

Someday he will still have that smile on his face when he walks down the steps of City College or any other college in America . . . (provided he makes it.)

Library Announces New Hour Schedule

Changes in library hours, procedure and personnel have been brought about this semester, according to Claude Silva, dean of instruction in charge of the library.

The library will be open from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, every day classes meet, and from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

"The library is opening 15 minutes earlier in the morning to give students a place to study, but there will be no servicing of books until 8 a.m." Silva emphasized.

Books from the reserve book room will be available for one hour only and may not be taken from the room. A 25 cent fine will be imposed for going beyond the first hour and 10 cents per hour thefeafter not to exceed 50 cents per day.

"The stacks in the reserve book room were closed in order to serve more people," Silva said. "In the past, many students complained of not being able to find a particular book."

There have also been some changes in library personnel. Betty Lundgren, reserve book room librarian, retired last June and has been replaced by Katharine Pedley who is also in charge of the library technology course.

New Book Store

While operating in cramped quarters, the Ramporium is unable to bring new as well as varied materials to students.

"Little beyond required text books and essential college supplies can be displayed at the Ramporium," Richard Main, manager of the campus book store said.

Main has been in charge of the store for 15 years, since 1950, and said the Ramporium has reached its limit of expansion in its present housing.

His experience goes back beyond 1950 however, with eight years previous experience in the San Jose State College book store.

Information concerning operational statistics is taboo. "Our competition would just love to know the financial standing and prospects of the Ramporium," Main said, "so I won't go into that.

"But I will say the Ramporium is still supplying 65 per cent of the Associated Student budget."

He commented on the need of a new and definitely larger housing facility in which to bring the Ramporium's operating procedures up to the requirements demanded by the enrollment at City College.

Main pointed out that plans for a new Ramporium are being discussed in the preliminary stages with architects concerning the book store's structure.

"The new Ramporium will be two times as big as the present one," Main stressed.

He also said that decisions are yet to be made by the various boards involved with such matters and added that it is hoped that by Fall of 1967 or Spring of 1968, the new Ramporium may be in operation.

IRC Plans October 29 Fair, Starts Membership Drive

The International Relations Club's general plans for this semester were outlined at its first meeting September 27.

The biggest event of the semester will be the traditional IRC fair which will be held Friday, October 29 in Smith Hall, and talent, art exhibits, and food will be representative of the various foreign nations with members in the IRC.

Foremost concern at present is a membership campaign which began last Monday and through which IRC hopes to increase its present membership of 50 to 200. Contrary to previous semesters, this campaign will last for two weeks only so that greater emphasis can be placed on the club's other activities.

"The finale to this membership campaign will be a dance with surprise entertainment," Mike Mirabella, IRC president, declared.

On Thursday, October 14, a speaker from India has been invited to discuss the Indian-Pakistan crisis, and this event will be followed by a panel discussion composed of students from India and Pakistan now attending City College.

More significance Mirabella said, will be given to the IRC's club card which costs $1 this semester since card holders will be entitled to special activities and privileges which will not be available or publicized to noncard holders.

This semester's IRC officers working with Mirabella are Hector Cavalla of Argentina, vice president; Hayuta Schabel of Israel, secretary; Bob Simpkins, treasurer, and Judy Willard, historian.

Mirabella added that he is impressed by the enthusiasm shown by the new members and that IRC will reciprocate by offering them a full schedule of activities.

Ushering Passes For Opera House Now Available

Students are now being accepted for ushering duties at the Opera House, according to Mary Golding, dean of women and usher tickets may be obtained in S-150.

City College sends two ushers to each of the performances of the opera, Dean Golding said. "The students have the wonderful privilege of seeing the production free of charge."

Students must arrive an hour and a half before the performance. Meticulous grooming is demanded. Women are required to wear a dark dress or suit and high-heeled shoes and men must wear a dark, nonsport suit, white shirt and a necktie.

Although experience in ushering is not required, the Opera House management prefers students with previous ushering experience.

The schedule of operas to be presented in the near future is as follows: October 7, Rossini's Il Barbiere di Siviglia; October 8, Wagner's Lohengrin; October 9, Verdi's La Forza del Destino; October 10, Die Fledermans of Strauss.

October 12, Rossini's Il Barbiere di Siviglia; October 14, Wagner's Lohengrin; October 15, Mozart's Don Giovanni; October 16, Puccini's Tosca.

Those interested in ushering at these performances can consult Dean Golding in S-150 on Monday or Tuesday of the week of the performance.

Friday Deadline Date For Filing Grad Petitions

It is essential for all interested students to file petitions for graduation in S-121 before the deadline Friday, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar of the college, emphasized today.

Miss Learnard also said that it is extremely important that students have an application submitted by the deadline because it gives the office adequate time to check whether the requirements for graduation have been accomplished. Students who neglected to pick up graduation applications at registration may do so in S-121.

Those who do not file an application on time put themselves in an awkward position because the office, in view of the amount of work involved, may be unable to process the application.

Anyone who is in doubt concerning his eligibility should make an appointment to check with his counselor, Miss Learnard said, and she urges students to comply with this wish because it will save additional work.

Miss Learnard indicated that the importance of an Associate in Arts degree should not be overlooked, for even though a student is planning to transfer to another college, situations could arise that might prevent him from doing so.

IRC Speaker Cites November Decisive Month In Vietnam, Says 'Reds Seek Rice Bowl'

By Bea Takeuchi

November will be the decisive month in Vietnam, Captain Charles P. Kottich, staff officer, Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, emphasized in an Open Forum On Vietnam here during College Hour last Thursday.

"Since the monsoon begins in May there, and during this period, the Communists take advantage of this ideal weather for their guerilla warfare, their big push starts.

"At this point last year, United States combat troops went in to protect the strategic points. This saved the country.

"If requested to do so by the South Vietnamese government, they (U. S. troops) will fight. The communists changed their tactics because of these reinforcements, and are taxing the peasants more heavily, and have become more brutal in South Vietnam," Kottich said.

Kottich gave a brief history of the Communist aggression in Vietnam and described their methods of infiltration and propaganda. He revealed that 500,000 refugees were forced out of North Vietnam because of this big drive, and the need for negotiation which has been refused by Hanoi.

"The Communists want the rice bowl of Southeast Asia. If South Vietnam goes, everything in Asia will go. We are in a better position to defend now than later," he said.

"Everyone wonders why they can't get a good strong government. Well, nobody wants the job if he is going to be disembowled the next morning! Anyone is a target for assassination. Over 5000 hamlet chiefs were murdered by the Viet Cong."

"In violation of the 1962 Geneva Convention, the main supply of ammunition comes through Laos, which was supposedly neutral. The guerillas are not a motley group. They may look that way, but they are the world's finest soldiers, armed with Chinese weapons," Kottich emphasized.

"Many times the U.S., Britain, India, and other countries, were willing to negotiate, but Hanoi insists that the only way is their way—for the United States to completely withdraw their troops first, and let a Communist government exist there," Kottich said, adding,

"This war is not fought on a classic scale. It is fought everywhere. We are not intentionally bombing civilians. As in every war, some civilians who do not evacuate the danger areas, which we designate ahead of time, are bound to be caught in it.

"Communications in these underdeveloped areas are extremely bad."

"Red China has declared that Thailand will be next. They have completely lifted their guise by sending troops from North Vietnam into South Vietnam. They have announced their ultimate goal to take over the world," Kottich said.

Kottich's speech was sponsored by the International Relations Club.

Application For Transfer To UC, State Due Now

Students planning to transfer to the University of California, San Francisco State College or San Jose State College must have their transfer notices in as soon as possible, since acceptance is on a first-come, first-served basis.

This information was revealed today by Howard Schoon, counselor here.

Cards requesting applications for admission to the University of California for the Spring and Fall semesters of 1966 can be obtained from any counselor In Room S-160.

Students wishing to transfer to San Francisco or San Jose State Colleges are expected to go directly to the specified college for applications. If appearance in person is inconvenient, a letter or a postcard requesting an application will be accepted, Schoon said.

He advised that applications for admission be in as early as possible because they are immediately stamped with a number, which is filed numerically. Students with the lowest numbers will be considered for admission first.

Those students wishing to enter in the Spring semester 1966 at S.F. State should apply now. Those who want to enter in the fall should apply by January 1.

San Jose State is accepting applications for Spring, 1966, from October 1 to December 1, and for Fall 1966, from January 1 to March 10.

Local Fraternities Receive IFC Awards

Awards were presented to three fraternities for outstanding scholastic and service achievement at the Inter-Fraternity Council Smoker held in Smith Hall recently.

Alpha Sigma Delta won for outstanding service, Beta Tau for scholarship and Alpha Kappa Rho for basketball.

The semiannual Smoker is held at the beginning of each semester to introduce freshmen to aspects of fraternity life.

There are six fraternities represented in IFC.

The Gem's Pearl Anniversary

War: G'man Pushes Bonds, Conservation

(Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of articles on the history of the college as reflected through the pages of The Guardsman.)

By Mike Smith, Managing Editor

City College was not only to have its difficulties with the rising population in the early 1940's, but also with some age-old problems that would seem always to remain unsolved, such as continuous violations of parking regulations, student apathy, messy conditions made by lunchers in the cafeteria and senseless vandalism.

These problems are old to the college itself; bnt they are new to students and to the ever-changing staffs of The Guardsman, and each generation seems to look upon the problems in a different manner.

In The Guardsman issue of November 5, 1940, an editorial expressed its disgust over a few college students attending here at that time who started a fire in the middle of one of the cafeteria tables. This same type of incident was repeated last semester, but The Guardsman did not appear to be as disgusted as it was 25 years ago.

BURNING—INTENSIFIED

A little over 12 months after the first table-burning incident in 1940, something else was burning—Pearl Harbor. When the college students here returned after Christmas vacation, the Nation was at war.

But more than 400 men students and great many instructors did not return; they had been drafted into or had enlisted in the Armed Forces.

On the front page of the January 9, 1942, Guardsman were rules and regulations for air raids. It was not long before all "luxury" advertisements in the college paper were replaced by war bond and defense stamp promotion.

WAR BOND CAMPAIGN

In the late spring of 1942, The Guardsman started a huge campaign in the college to buy war bonds and stamps. After the staff received permission from the U.S. Treasury Department, there were six more similar campaigns to follow throughout the war years.

During the first Guardsman war bond drive, the local newspapers picked up City College's campaign which was eventually expanded and turned into a rally held at the El Rey theater.

The Guardsman also dropped its twice-weekly publication schedule and came out only twice a month. But this measure was opposed by the college students and faculty alike. Eventually a compromise plan was devised whereby the paper would be cut to half its size (a four column, four page issue), published on a weekly publication.

"SHARE-A-RIDE . . ."

So a weekly Guardsman continued its activities encouraging bond rallies, stamp dances, and "share-a-ride" campaigns.

With gasoline rationed, the college newspaper helped in the organization of car pools. In mid-1944, the cafeteria suffered a penny shortage, and The Gnardsman started a successful drive to collect pennies for the cafeteria.

Mendietta-Led Booters Crush Menlo, Drop Close One To San Jose; Title Hopes Sound

Ram soccer fans can expect another top-notch team for 1965. The Rams opened the season with a surprisingly easy 7-0 victory September 24 over league contender Menlo College, but followed the victory with a tough 4-1 loss to NCAA semifinalist, San Jose State last Wednesday.

Standout for the locals in the Menlo game was Alex Mendietta, who took up in '65 where he left off in '64. Mendietta scored on three separate occasions during the contest.

Pete Rossi, former All-City player from Mission High School, also made his presence felt in his first collegiate competition. He controlled the entire half-field area and also connected on a 22-yard shot.

Eighty-five degree temperatures played an important role in the loss to San Jose State. Although the locals had numerous scoring opportunities, they managed to score only once. The scoring drought was due mainly to the outstanding play of San Jose goalie, Frank Mangiola.

Coach Roy Diederichsen stated after the game, "We played 14 men — 10 players and 4 goalies. Mangiola was outstanding, only once did he not stop our shots." On that one occasion he was helpless as Mendietta's sure foot put a soft tap in the left corner of the net.

Although the Rams outplayed the Spartans in the first half, they took their halftime break on the short end of a 2-0 score.

The Rams took numerous shots at the San Jose goal with the majority of them missing by a hairline. Tommy Samuelson nearly started the scoring off with a cannon-like shot that was stopped on a fabulous save by Mangiola. Later, Louis Golcher missed the wooden framings on a terrific head-shot which came via right wing Ron Van Velthysen.

Seconds later, Mendietta took aim on a 20-yarder which Mangiola again saved, but the ball bounced out of the goalie's grasp and left wing Nelsen Artiga took a follow-up shot, but Mangiola again made the save.

The Spartans scored first on a technical error in the Ram defensive lines. Two minutes later, Joe Sermel made it 2-0 in favor of San Jose. Five minutes into the second half Mendietta scored the Rams' only goal of the day.

Minutes later Spartan All-American Lou Frazier startled the Rams by driving through their entire defense for a score.

In the closing minutes of the game, Sermel got his second goal of the day to make the final score 4-1, in favor of the Spartans.

Returning veterans will have to carry the heavy load until the Rams' youngsters mature. The influx of new talent has always been tremendous, and this year should be no exception, with players coming from as far away as Africa.

This mixture of veterans and newcomers is expected to bring the Rams their third straight state title.

Booters Aim For Third Title Year, Face Vikings Today

Searching for a third straight State Championship the Ram booters face three conference foes in this week's schedule as the Northern California Soccer Conference season gets into full swing.

First to face the mighty Rams is Diablo Valley College in a 3 p.m. contest scheduled for this afternoon at Concord field in Diablo Valley. The Rams are strong favorites in this game. Last year the Vikings dropped both league games with the Rams by scores of 12-1 and 3-1.

Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference runner-up, College of San Mateo, is slated for an October 11 afternoon contest at San Mateo. The Bulldogs should offer more opposition to the powerful Ram attack.

Last year they too fell twice, 4-1 and 7-0, as the City College booters swept to an undefeated conference record.

Rounding out the week's schedule, the Rams travel to Menlo Park for a game with Menlo College, Thursday, October 14.

The Rams, piloted by coach Roy Diederichsen, are an overwhelming favorite to repeat as conference champions as well as State champions. Coach Diederichsen happily boasts of having a 50 per cent better team than last year.

"This year I have 22 good players, as compared to an average of 12 good players a year," Diederichsen said. "Besides having returning All-American Alex Mendietta, the team will boast of three All-City players from Mission High School and one All-City star from New York," he added.

RA To Attend Sportsday At Monterey College

Members of the Recreation Association will attend a sportsday at Monterey Peninsula College Saturday, October 23, Pam Maul, RA president, announced today.

Competition is scheduled in volleyball, bowling, badminton, archery, tennis, golf and other sports. Those interested may sign up for the sportsday at the women's gymnasium now.

Rams Meet Owls Friday

Vasquez Tags Cross Country Squad As League Darkhorse

The City College cross country team may be the darkhorse of the Golden Gate Conference, a very optimistic coach Louis Vasquez said today.

The Ram spikers, hoping to cop the title by upsets, have two tuneups before the season starts. The season actually gets underway Friday, October 15, against San Jose City College.

On Friday, the cindermen are entered in the Golden Gate team race at Golden Gate Park. This specific meet is a team race, not an individual race. The teams entered include all Golden Gate Conference teams and any two-year college that wants to enter.

The following Saturday the team will compete in the Sacramento invitational meet. This meet, although similar to the Golden Gate meet, only differs in that every team from Fresno to Sacramento enters.

As of now Vasquez thinks his two best runners are George Ferguson and Bill Long. Vasquez believes too that he may have three real comers in Greg Bolich, Al Thomas and Don O'Looney.

According to Vasquez, "All three will take time getting into shape, but should come around at the end." These three along with Long and Ferguson could pull some upsets.

The team will meet every team in the conference. In November the runners will try for the Northern California regionals.

Gridders Face Rough Task, Title Hopes Promising

Foothill's Owls invade San Francisco to take on the Rams in what promises to be one of the top Golden Gate Conference games for 1965 on Friday afternoon. It's the league opener for both teams.

Foothill's claim to fame is a 46-20 opening win over American River Junior College of Sacramento. American River never knew what hit them, as the score was 34-0 at the half.

There were many stars for Foothill, but none stood out better than tailback Russ Hodge. Hodge, who also is seventh-ranked in the '65 world track and field decathlon standings, scored three times in the first quarter.

Using his quick start and hefty (6-3, 220-pound) frame to advantage, he twice bucked over from the two-yard line and also sprinted in from 18 yards out.

If the Rams are to win they'll have more than just Hodge to cope with. Don Coppinger is described by coach Bill Abbey as "the school's finest-ever receiver." The 6-0, 200-pound Coppinger caught 18 aerials for 335 yards in 1964.

This season Coppinger joined with Jack Cheney to give the Owls a strong linebacking corps.

Foothill also will present a strong passing game. Quarterback Bill Lerch, a defensive specialist last year, completed 11 of 15 for 209 yards against American River.

On October 15, Chabot's Gladiators take on the Rams in the second league affair for both teams.

With 17 lettermen returning, last year's cochamps again figure to be in the thick of things. The Gladiators have already dumped Yuba College, 14-7, but last weekend were upset by Sacramento City College, 20-7.

Chabot coach Ed Hart recently summed up the league race when he said, "Contra Costa again will be a top contender, Merritt will be improved, Diablo Valley has its best crop of backs in 10 years, Foothill has 16 lettermen returning, San Francisco is always strong, and both College of San Mateo and San Jose City College figure to be improved."

Gridders Trample Mustangs, 26-12, In Preseason Tilt

By Frank Cooney

City College of San Francisco "platooned" its way to homecoming victory last Friday by mauling the San Joaquin Mustangs 26-12.

Gambling with thin bench strength, coach "Dutch" Elston employed a new defensive unit which held the river's end team to a 163 yard net gain.

"This new platoon turned in a great performance," Elston boasted after the game. "Tackles Chris Panagolacos and Jerd Lapham along with ends Chris Davis and Don McGee did a great job of containing the Mustang ground gain.

The "platoon" which Elston spoke of is an entire team which is used exclusively for defense. Another platoon is used for offense.

When a team shuttles its platoons then players on each platoon are able to get an occasional breather.

It was this lack of rest which foiled the Rams on their journey to Los Angeles Valley two weeks ago. In that game the same linemen were playing both ways, so by the time the last quarter came along Valley just rolled right through the Ram's weary line.

The offensive squad made its presence felt with several outstanding long gains.

Ron Fassler, who netted 114 yards, caused quite a commotion among the small crowd of 250 when he juggled a long pass from Bill Gianquinto in the fourth quarter.

Fassler gained control of the skin and outran defenders for an 82 yard score. Earlier in the game Fassler did an eleven yard ballet down the sidelines and barely clipped the corner flag for his first score.

O. J. Simpson accounted for the other two Ram touchdowns.

On the first San Francisco offensive play of the second half O. J. galloped 47 yards to put City College ahead 18-6. In the second quarter Simpson racked up the first S.F. tally with a 24 yard scamper.

Despite all the good news "Dutch" had words of caution for optimists. "After we got going good we started making mistakes. Several times we allowed Delta receivers to get wide open. There is still a lot of work ahead of us."

Petitions For Intra Basketball Due Oct. 22

Deadline for filing petitions for entering the intramural basketball league this semester has been set for Friday, October 22, Stan Angel, Associated Men Student president, said today.

Concerning the intramural track meet which the AMS plans to have for the first time this semester, Angel said that the track meet will be in three specified College Hour periods.

There will also be three different leagues in the track meet as in the basketball competition, the fraternity, the club, and the independent.

The requirements for both the basketball and track competition call for possession of Associated Student membership in either the fraternity or club under which the participant plays, and restriction of play to only one team in any league.

Ram Football 1965 Outlook Still Good

RAMBLINGS

For Cager Success.— Renovation A Must

By William Pates

DESPITE ALL tendencies to the contrary, 1965 isn't expected to be a "building" year for coach Dutch Elston's crew. As a matter of fact, the present squad has been described as being three touchdowns better than last year's Ram club.

A large case of egotism was as much responsible for the Ram humiliation by Terrel Rey and company in Los Angeles as were the 140 yards in penalties, crucial fumbles and a pass interception.

Prior to their initial preseason contest, Elston's "21+" club was involved in a harmless scrimmage in which City College had the fortune to come out on the top of a 63-0 extermination.

If anything, the club was beginning to believe its reviews.

Nevertheless, it can't be overlooked that San Francisco was in the exhibition, trailing 0-7 until midway in the third period, before the Los Angeles Monarchs put it out of reach.

It is hoped that these early season "bugs" will be worked out before this Friday, when league competition is inaugurated with City College facing the Foothill Owls at home.

The Owls have defeated the Rams in their only previous engagements by scores of 19-18 and 15-13 in 1962 and 1964 respectively.

* * *

A GREAT DEAL of renovating will have to take place this upcoming season if the City College Ram basketball team is to return to the heights of the past.

Without the fantastic Jerry Chandler and Art Adams, Sid Phelan's 1965 squad came close to winning the college's fourth straight conference championship, which would have been the sixth in eight years.

Sloppiness in rebounding and ball handling should be passed over as just being part of the game, but it appeared that the Rams lost several contests which they had relatively in hand through these two weaknesses. A certain amount of this trouble was no doubt caused by a forced loss of composure.

The loss of four of the starting "five," especially Henry King and Rich Henderson, should greatly affect the outcome of this coming season unless there is a strong influx of new and better talent.

King represented the main link in the squad's front line as well as contributing much in the scoring column. In the playmaking department Henderson had no equal on this club. Without him the team appeared in dire straits at times.

Forward Mike Cahill, the offensive "gun" of the club in '64 will not be returning and neither will guard Jim Duggan, who took over a starting position part way through the season.

All of these athletes turned in clutch performances vital to the Rams' race for a fourth straight title.

Unless Willie Jones, the guard who lost his starting spot to Duggan, can regain his confidence, he may find himself on the bench, leaving only forward Ed Wilson as the lone club member from last year's "five" who has a fair chance of retaining a starting role.

So there you have it. Only two men who played a great deal in 1964. All positions are open, everybody has a chance.

What is needed? A little bit of everything.

Despite the fact that the basketball season doesn't start for another month and a half, coach Phelan is looking around for potential club members. Anyone who thinks he might want to go out for basketball, is requested to get in touch with coach Phelan during the next month.

Republican Committee Gets Campus OK; Council Tables Table-Setting Allocation

By Rich Heintz

Student Council on Monday of last week voted to accept the City College of San Francisco Committee for Republicanism application for on-campus recognition, 8-0-3.

Questions before the motion was passed ranged from the legality of the organization to its function.

Lincoln Pain, a member of Student Council, questioned its legality on the grounds that he thought the state did not allow representation of a political party on campus.

James Wyatt, student government adviser, informed council that the "law has been changed (in 1961) and the State Education Code provides for representation in secondary schools of political clubs."

He also added that the only real requirement is that the political party represented be on the state ballot.

The function of the organization, according to Paul Shuttleworth, president of the group, is basically to serve as a forum at which the members hope to bring together moderate and liberal Republicans.

"We plan to have good Republican speakers here and possibly have some films."

Pain inquired why the group was not affliated with the Young Republicans, who are not at present on campus.

"Dean Hillsman felt that it would be better," Shuttleworth said, "if the organization were strictly on campus with no outside obligations."

Concerning the financial business of the Associated Students, last week council approved the allocation of $75 to Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society on campus.

Biff Barnes, finance chairman, explained that the money regularly alloted AGS is used for pins, scholarships, chapter and state dues.

Council then passed the motion unanimously.

At the same meeting, council tabled a motion to allocate $196.82, for themselves, in order to purchase a set of Student Council tableware.

Barbara Kontis, Associated Student vice president, requested the money for the dishes, at which time some parliamentary somersalts occured.

Her motion was moved tabled by Ernie Woodcock, freshman member of Student Council.

She then placed an objection to the motion, which failed, 3-7-0.

The motion placed by Woodcock was then passed, 7-3-0, and the issued was tabled.

Miss Kontis, however, brought up the issue again by requesting a motion to take the issue off the table.

This failed, 2-7-1.

Dennis Sweeny, AS president, suspended the rule to allow Miss Kontis a discussion on the matter, with council's approval, 9-1-0.

The main argument for the dishes was that City College should have a set of presentable tableware for the semiannual AS banquet.

Arguments opposed to such allocation centered around the fact that some of the members of council considered such expenditure was indicative of a selfish act on council's part.

Before the meeting was brought back to regular procedure, Councilman Doug Blanche commented that for council to do this "would be immoral."

Public Relations Position Added To Executive Cabinet

Associated Student President Dennis Sweeney announced today that 32 students comprise his executive cabinet for this semester.

Sweeney introduced one new office, that of Public Relations Chairman, in addition to the 30 which were part of the cabinet last semester. Two advertising students, Judy Guild and Joan Shaw, will share the new position.

"All of the officers this semester are extremely capable, very interested in student government and willing to work hard," Sweeney stated. "I feel that the fact that there are so many who are interested indicates a trend toward more paricipation in student government and AS-sponsored activities."

The cabinet consists of three subgroups: the Appointive Cabinet, the Honorary Appointive Cabinet and the Executive Officers.

The Appointive Cabinet consists of the following students, listed with their offices: Helen Ferentinos, recording secretary; Helen Bundros, corresponding secretary; Margie Cheney, presidential secretary; Kathy Kidd, state information chairman; Biff Barnes, finance chairman.

Janet Hinterman, assistant finance chairman; Joanne Johnson, student card sales chairman; Mike Skinner, student card sales coordinator; Daniel Yee, high school liason officer; Tom Csekey, athletics and awards commissioner; Sandra Sager, election commissioner; Gary Freund, parliamentarian.

Christine Scales, student-faculty relations chairman; Glen Fahs, publicity chairman; Dianne Burnick, external publicity chairman; Stella Thalinger, concert-lecture chairman; and Miss Shaw and Miss Guild, public relations.

The following students comprise the Honorary Appointive Cabinet: Council of Organizations Chairman Dave Minkin; Rally Commissioner Tom Duff; Inter-Sorority Council President Carol Jimenez; Inter-Fraternity Council President Chuck Pickens.

Publications Board Chairman Don Patten; Campus Police Representative Robert Tietjen; Recreation Association President Pamela Maul, and KCSF President Paul Dobie.

India Is Topic Of C-Hour Lecture

Janki N. Baht, consul in charge of information for India, is scheduled to address all interested students tomorrow during College Hour in the theater. He will discuss the recent conflicts in India.

Born in Kashmir, Baht received his elementary education and then went on to obtain two master's degrees; one in history from the University of Punjab and one in political science from the University of Bahares.

Lecturing in history and political science for five years at the University of Mysore in southern India, Baht wrote a number of research papers on international relations.

These papers were published in various journals in England and Continental Europe.

Baht worked as a scholar at the Indian School of International Studies in New Delhi before joining the Indian Diplomatic Service.

From 1958-61, Baht was employed as assistant press attache at the Indian embassy in Jarkarta, Indonesia.

He has been consul in charge of press public relations and cultural affairs since November, 1962.

Joseph Jacobsen, foreign student adviser, announced that Baht will conduct a question and answer period after his lecture.

'American Dream' Opens Fall C-Hour Drama Productions

The American Dream by Edward Albee will be presented tomorrow as the first College Hour drama production of the semester, director Walter Krumm announced today.

Cast in the five-member production are Gale Bradley as Mommey, Jamie O'Neill as Daddy, Gail Ross as Grandma, John Leveck as The Young Man, and Lana Tershy as Mrs. Barker.

"The play," Krumm stated, "is a sardonic comedy illuminating middle class values in middle class dialogue, and showing both in ridiculous and shallow terms.

"Written by the young American playwrite Albee," Krumm added, "the play is in very contemporary form, and it borders on the fringe of absurdity."

The setting itself will follow a pop art vein. A red and white candy stripe sofa will be in the center of the set, backed by four white panels suspended across the width of the stage.

A girl's face with a piece of straw in her teeth will be painted on the first panel, and a large H'mmmmm across the other three.

In addition, Krumm stated, there will also be social comment in saxaphone obbligato, provided by Tom Dotzler, drama student at City College.

The original score, also put together by Dotzler, will be interjected at opportune and appropriate times during the dialogue, and particularly at the entrance of The Young Man, the American Dream personified.

"Also," Krumm said, "when Mommy says, 'Would you care to take your dress off, Mrs. Barker?' And Mrs. Barker answers, 'I don't mind if I do,' and does, we are working out melodies for a proper musical accompaniment. In other words, getting a zip out of a sax."

On November 3, the first major production of the drama department, The Playboy Of The Western World, by J. M. Synge, will open.

Palace Gold Room Set As Scene Of Freshman Ball

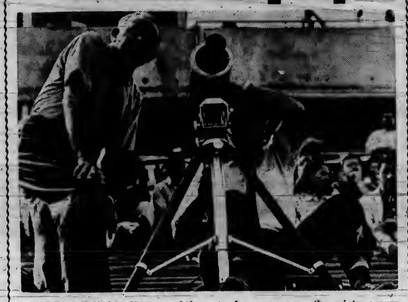
The Sheraton Palace's exclusive Gold Room will provide the atmosphere for Midnight Magic, this year's semiformal Frosh Ball to be held on Friday, October 22, from 9 p.m. until midnight.

Music for the event will be provided by the Dick Crest band.

Admission to Midnight Magic is free of charge, provided of course, that one member of each couple is an Associated Student card holder. Couples who are not members of the AS may attend but will be expected to pay a $2.50 entrance fee at the door.

This rule also applies to students from other colleges as well. Bids will be available beginning today at both the Silver Pole in Science Hall and in Bungalow 5, according to Mike Nygren, Freshman Class president.

Highlight of the evening will be the selection of the beau and belle of the ball, more commonly referred to as the "Cutest Couple Contest."



All interested couples are expected to sign up with President Nygren in Bungalow 5 as soon as possible. The only stipulation concerning the contest is that one member of the couple must also be a member of the Freshman Class.

An overwhelming response is anticipated by the judges, Sponsors James Wyatt and David Spence, Freshman President Nygren and AS President Dennis Sweeney, as exciting prizes and honors will be bestowed upon the winners.

Dress for the ladies is formal, while men will have the choice of either tuxedo or dark suit.

Nygren predicted that "October 22 should truly prove an evening of Midnight Magic, as couples swing to the lively tunes of Dick Crest and his band."

Instant Replay

Henry Leff (left), director of the radio and television broadcasting department, and Victor Vaio, instructional assistant in performing arts, are experimenting with a new electric picture machine that was made, of course, in Japan.

The machine is one of the college's two new Sony video tape cameras. It was used to photograph the Ram - Mustang football game October 1. The experiment proved to be a success; the picture was very satisfactory, according to Vaio, and the football coaches have a film of the game that can be shown on the campus' closed-circuit television to the athletes.

Video tapes are also taken of Communications 5A and 5B classes that are, because of their size, held in the Riordan auditorium. The films are later shown to students who were absent from the classes.

AS Sends 21 Delegates To Menlo Conference Saturday

City College will be represented by 21 delegates at the Area Six Conference this Saturday at Menlo College in Atherton, James C. Wyatt, student government adviser, said today.

Wyatt indicated that resolutions adopted at this meeting will be brought before the state-wide conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association scheduled to meet at Sacramento November 18 to 20.

There are 75 two-year colleges in the State of California. The CJCSGA divides these colleges into 8 areas geographically. City College and the two-year colleges of the greater peninsula are in Area Six. Other Area Six Colleges are College of San Mateo, Menlo, Foothill, West Valley, San Jose, Gavilan, Cabrillo, and Monterey Peninsula Colleges.

Each area meets approximately one month before the state conference of the association is held. Workshops and discussions at these meetings produce ideas on topics of general interest to the association as a whole as well as to individual colleges, often times affecting the student.

At a general assembly all resolutions brought up during the meeting are either adopted and brought before the state convention for further discussion, or rejected.

One resolution adopted at the state convention last year was the innovation of an official seal of the CJCSGA.

Although the college is restricted to sending only 21 delegates to the Menlo conference, "25 to 30 students have already indicated they would like to go," Wyatt said.

Following is the list of delegates: Percy Jones, Glen Fahs, Doug Bianchi, John Becker, Ernest Woodcock, Diane Burnick, Karen Carlson, Mike Nygren, Christine Scales, Gary Freund, Sandy Sager, Kathy Kidd, Ron Appel, Janet Ottone, Stan Angel, Ellie Muntz, Steve Schroffel.

Earl Braverman, Dennis Sweeney, Helen Bundros, Tom Cloney, Dave Hohman, Linda Castro, Eva Dinese Watkins.

Deadline Nears For Fall Scholarships

Scholarships totaling $750 are available to students here this semester who meet requirements of need, ambition and scholarship.

Mary Golding, dean of women, said that applications are due in S-150 by Friday, October 22. Dean Golding heads the committee, composed of instructors and counselors, which decides to whom scholarships are to be awarded.

The Scottish Rite Scholarship is $175 each awarded to four students. "To be eligible," Dean Golding explained, "a student must graduate from a San Francisco high school and must have completed work at the college during 1965.

"The second scholarship available this semester is the Chinese Students Club Scholarship of $50, which will be awarded to a worthy student who has completed 12 units at this college," Dean Golding continued.

Last semester $25,000 worth of scholarships was awarded. A complete list of scholarships to be awarded during the spring semester is published in the college catalogue.

Students may apply for the spring scholarships at any time, but Dean Golding suggested that applications be held until qualification is assured.

Departmental scholarships are available to students majoring in a number of areas, particularly hotel and restaurant and ornamental horticulture.

Fall Guardsman First Class

Associated Collegiate Press rated the Fall, 1964, volume of The Guardsman First Class, in scorebook evaluation received after publication of the final issue last spring.

This brings the overall record in 47 semesters of Guardsman membership in ACP to 32 All-American ratings and 15 First Class.

In the total scorebook evaluation, which includes such sections as news coverage, news style, editorials and columns, sports, headlines, makeup, photography and typography, The Guardsman total score of 3645 missed the All-American score by 55 points, but was 445 points over the minimum of the First Class rating.

Ratings, made semiannually to all member papers of college and university level throughout the nation, are usually received in April for fall semester volumes and late October or November for the spring semester.

Editorial Board members for the Fall, 1964, volume were Fred Weles, editor in chief, now at University of San Francisco; Patricia H. Dutter, managing editor, at San Francisco State College; Ann Weill, news editor, at SF State; Mike Smith, sports editor, now managing editor of The Guardsman; Boyd Burtnett and Bea Takeuchi, staff writers; and Don Patton, editorial assistant, now Guardsman editor in chief.

Burtnett is currently with the San Jose Post Record.

ACP headquarters are at University of Minnesota, and a national convention is scheduled to meet in San Francisco.

Dates for the annual ACP conference, to be held in San Francisco this year, are October 21-23 at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel.

Platform Serves Variety Of Purposes

Hyde Park Platform—Where Have All The Crusaders Gone?

LAST SEMESTER this campus was the scene of numerous political uprisings. The main topic of discussion resulted with the introduction of a completely independent party, Reform On Campus. Commonly referred to as ROC, this group campaigned vigorously for the introduction of a free speech area on campus.

This Hype Park platform, which eventually won approval and was erected near the Ram over the summer, was established to give any student on campus a chance to voice his opinions.

ROC, after a long, hard battle, triumphed victorously and its dream became reality. It was thought by all that the platform would be used to full advantage this semester. As the first three weeks of the semester close, the facilities have been used sparingly.

The area has become a popular place for students to lounge on while eating lunch, for talking, or a good place to meet friends. The Guardsman certainly does not choose to believe that all the determination shown last semester by ROC was wasted.

If newspaper coverage, suspensions and arrests were made in connection with the Hyde Park platform only so it could be used as a student lunch area, the whole purpose certainly seems defeated.

In the coming weeks, it will be interesting to see what developments take place with regard to this issue.

Old Problem Shows Its Face

WITH THE COMING of warm, sunny weather to the campus in the past few weeks, throngs of students enjoy relaxing under temperate skies and make use of the lawn area on the south hill of the campus. With this situation comes a distressing problem—littering.

Granted, whenever large groups gather together in a concentrated area, excessive littering is bound to take place. But in the past few weeks, this problem has reached the point where something must be done.

The campus area in question, one of the main entrances to the college, looks like a garbage dump!

All must stop and realize what type of atmosphere in engraved on the mind of the visitor to the campus. On some days, the grass is literally covered with all sorts of trash and debris.

Visitors would certainly gain the impression that students here don't care what the campus looks like.

A few semesters ago, this problem became pressing to the point where direct action was taken. Signs were posted throughout the campus grounds asking students to dispose of their litter in trash cans available for this use.

Fortunately, enough students apparently recognized the problem and heeded the signs. The excessive littering dropped appreciatively and so the problem seemed solved.

This semester, the custodial and gardening staffs seem to be working constantly to pick up after the careless students too thoughtless to recognize the proper place for litter.

And by the way, the proper place for litter is the trash cans. The cigarette wells, the small square-shaped concrete receptacles located outside all major entrances to the college, are for cigarettes and cigarettes only. No litter should be placed here!

It seems that the no-litter signs used a few semesters ago should be taken out of cold storage, the dust should be wiped off and they should again be displayed. They're certainly doing no good obstructed from public view, and they definitely can't aggrevate the situation.

Students should make every effort to dispose of all litter properly and think before they toss it over their shoulders. Let's make this campus look presentable again instead of appearing like a junk pile.

The only thing to be lost is the litter.

Hard-Won Speech Area— A Symbol Of Cooperation

With the fall semester getting into full swing, one spot on the college campus has yet to gain the college's attention — that is, in so far as its original purpose is concerned.

After much discussion and some rebellion, City College boasts a newly built free speech platform, a symbol of successful student, faculty and administration cooperation. Its use, however, has thus far been varied, only once devoted to speech making.

The story of the speech platform goes back to last spring and has its roots in the University of California free speech movement with its nationwide effect.

During the Spring 1965 semester, offshoots of the UC speech fight began to appear on the City College campus. Various campus groups began the campaign to establish several free speech areas on the college campus.

Soon these groups received substantial student support. Once this support was firmly established, the project was taken up by the Reform On Campus party.

ROC adopted into its platform several free speech points, among these the establishment of a free speech area on campus. This effort was not in vain. Through its voice enough pressure was exerted in favor of action, and this brought about the creation of a Student-Faculty-Administration Advisory Committee.

On the committee's recommendation to President Louis G. Conlan, a temporary free speech area was established last spring.

The present podium, located on the grass strip facing the Ramporium and next to the Ram, is a result of the advisory committee's recommendation. Its use is governed by certain guidelines, set up by the committee, to allow fair and equitable use.

The area is open for student use anytime between 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. on weekdays when the college is in session.

Registered students wishing to use the free speech area are required to signup in advance at the Dean of Men's office to avoid conflicts in the use of the area. This list is kept by the dean and is operated on a first come, first served basis.

Impromptu use of the area by individual students can be scheduled from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each college day on a half-hour time period basis.

Requests for off-campus speakers follow the same procedures set for scheduling impromptu use of the area. A chairman or president of an on-campus organization signs up at the Dean of Men's office for time and place.

All speakers are expected to comply with the policies adopted by the Advisory Committee Representatives. Further information on these policies is available in the College catalogue or in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office.

● Offending T-Shirts

Editor, The Guardsman:

In our degenerate and highly materialistic society, it does not surprise me to see the depths to which a man would lower himself in order to add height to his stack of dollar bills. Certain avaricious profiteers possess a complete lack of ethics when it comes to making money.

The ownership of the California Book Co. has sunk to an all-time low in business responsibility by displaying for sale in the S. F. store window a T-shirt with Participant—1st Annual L.A. Riots printed on it; the letters dripping in red and a smouldering city pictured upon it.

There is nothing humorous about the riots that took place in Watts this summer. Human life was destroyed, a considerable amount of property was lost, the cause of Civil Rights was set back several years and interracial friction was increased.

To find anything even vaguely amusing about the riots is incomprehensible. And to commercialize this atrocity shows that compassion and responsibility have been replaced by avariciousness and stupidity.

Since the owners of the California Book Company apparently cannot be approached morally, they must be approached economically. Therefore, I recommend a complete economic boycott of the California Book Company until the owner proves that he can carry on his business with responsibility.

The owners of the California Book Company would not think it so funny if the riots had errupted in San Francisco and his store was one of the many to be looted and burned.

Student Successfully Challenges Post Office

By Greg Frazier

A 1962 law restricting a citizen's right to receive "Communist political propaganda" through the mail unless specifically requested in writing was successfully challenged by Leif Heilberg, a night class student here.

Heilberg initiated his suit two years ago through the local office of the American Civil Liberties Union after the Post Office Department detained a Chinese pamphlet, printed in Esperanto and entitled, A Proposal Concerning the General Line of the International Communist Movement.

Heilberg, a native of Denmark who was deported from Bulgaria in 1958 for expressing anti-Communist views while attending the International Esperanto Congress, stated that the pamphlet's interest for him was "as evidence of the utility of Esperanto."

Prior to the 8-0 (one abstaining) United States Supreme Court decision which declared the 1962 law unconstitutional, the Postmaster General was required to detain foreign publications designated by customs officials as "Communist political propaganda."

The addressee was then notified that his mail was being held and would be destroyed unless he returned a reply card requesting the mail.

According to a San Francisco Chronicle editorial, "The courts . . . have observed that the names of persons filing requests for intercepted mail were kept on lists that found their way to the House Un-American Activities Committee."

The Supreme Court did not consider the constitutionality of the standards used to judge the literature as Communist propaganda. In its decision, the Court rested "on the narrow ground that the addressee in order to receive his mail must request in writing that it be delivered. This amounts . . . to an unconstitutional abridgement of First Amendment rights."

Marshall W. Krause, who argued the case before the Supreme Court, commented, "The decision takes an important step to insure complete privacy of the mails."

Following the decision, Postmaster General John A. Gronouski stated, "Despite its good intentions, the law has proven practically unworkable and was a harassment to serious scholars and newsmen. Ever since I have been Postmaster General, I have been concerned about the implications of this program on freedom of speech. I am pleased that the Supreme Court has clarified the issue."

The government had argued that Congress enacted the mail curb in the awareness that a postal subsidy in effect was being given the very Communist governments that bar American publications.

An editorial appearing in the San Francisco Chronicle stated that the Supreme Court decision ". . . will be welcomed by all Americans who cherish the freedoms of speech and of the press and who properly challenge the 'Big Brother' activities of over-zealous Government agencies."

Pontiff's Trip Challenge To Disbelievers

By B.T.

THE pilgrimage of Pope Paul VI is a challenge to disbelievers of this scientific age. Even atheists cannot deny the greatness of this one man who has traveled out of his Holy City to seek world peace.

His Holiness has expressed HOPE. His willingness to go to Red China is inspiring and his FAITH in mankind moves even the toughest of men.

"No more war; never again war! Peace. It is peace which must guide the destinies of peoples and of all mankind . . ."

Pope Paul speaks for all religions, without singling out one. He speaks for all men and even to those who do not believe in the power on high.

All religions preach BROTHERHOOD, whether it be Buddhist, Moslem, Jewish, Catholic or Protestant.

To practice brotherhood is the supreme test.

His Holiness, in his appeal to the United Nations, in making this journey is merely proof that he believes that all human beings can be rational.

Pope Paul wants action. Not words.

NEXT TO THE pretender's ability to project himself, the most treasured something in the theater is that precious aid called publicity.

There are drama students who view members of the press with suspicion, as if they were self-appointed amateur critics or the gestapo of the tabloids.

This immediately puts them on guard, for here comes that poison pen, but it's publicity, good or bad.

Only in the interest of publicity did Outpost view the rehearsals of The American Dream, by Edward Albee. Albe is a master of contemporary dialogue.

He wrote Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolfe? which is being filmed with Liz and Richard.

The American Dream is full of symbolism and strong, humorous, interesting dialogue.

Grandma, the complaining old lady, is portrayed by a Negro girl, Gail Bradley. Miss Bradley is very young but has great potential.

Her outstanding characterization of Grandma makes one remember that there is humor in adjusting to old age and its idiosyncracies.

Mommy, an unrealistic female with a psyche that could delight a praetising psychoanalyst at the UC Medical Center, is played by Gail Ross.

Miss Ross is quite convincing.

Daddy is acted by James O'Neill. He isn't a Daddy-O in this play. He doesn't even make a pass at Mrs. Barker (Lana Tersley). O'Neill can say, "Yes, Mommy," with such sincerity that it is almost unbelievable.

John LeVeck plays the All-American he-man, the man with everything AND a tragic flaw. LeVeck is well cast in this role, for he possesses the physical features of his part.

Again, director Walter Krumm has displayed expert selection and direction.

CITY COLLEGE is one of the many colleges in the nation that is located in a metropolitan area such as San Francisco. Many students come to San Francisco specifically so that they can attend City College.

Other students have lived in the city all their lives, and some will never leave because the city is their future. But all of us are in college today for just about the same reason; we are in search of the bright future.

Within these college walls, we want the city to stay around us forever because opportunity knocks louder and longer here than in any other place in the world.

The ancient Greek philosopher, Aristotle, once pondered in about the year 350 B.C., "Men come together in cities in order to live; they remain together in order to live the good life."

The good life? It will not be long before three out of every four Americans will be crowding and bumping each other, looking for the good life, in every major U.S. city. By the year 2000, the Bureau of the Census estimates that 80 per cent of all Americans will reside in a city.

Everytime the population of a metropolitan area rises so does crime, venereal disease, and deadly traffic accidents.

There is dirty air in the city that comes from vehicle fumes, industry smoke and chemical plants. It is believed that this foul air plays a role in heart, lung and circulatory illnesses. But man in the city does not seem to take notice, he just ignores it and sticks a cigarette in his mouth. He is in the city searching for the good life.

Next time you take a drink of water in any metropolitan area remember that it is city water. It is filthy water that has been "treated" after it has been used to wash dishes or to carry away waste materials from some other community.

Sometimes an area's water is used and re-used up to four or five times, and each time it is "treated" by a process that is far outdated for today's water problems.

A big city is also noisy. In fact there is so much racket that the Acoustical Society of America has come into existence for the purpose of studying noise. This organization states that the most annoying noise maker in the city is the blaring horn of the automobile.

The city is full of people who tend to become "high-tensioned" from the noise of the horn alone; and many of these urbanites soon become in need of some form of psychiatric help.

Cities are supposed to be good because they provide places to live for the unfortunate and the unwealthy. But almost all of the "unfortunates" and "unwealthy" are thrown together in one section of the city.

Here they live in an environment that is depressing, frustrating and unmeaningful. Sometimes a human being comes to feel that he is useless, and he is apt to grab for anything, good or evil, that will make him feel like a whole person again.

So is this the city where men remain together in order to live the good life? Is the big city a place where man is going to shape his physical environment into a sparkling future, despite freeways chopping it to pieces?

And will other cities follow the trend of New York where that city is mainly the home of the very rich or the very poor, and where the middle class has moved to its outskirts?

Is the big city evil? Or is progress moving faster than man can handle it?

Close-Up Series Due For Campus Showing

City College Close-Up, the half-hour weekly programs produced by the college and televised a year ago by KPIX-TV, are scheduled for campus showing this semester each week during Tuesday College Hours.

Sylvia R. Leff, producer of the series, released the following list of topics: paramedical (X-ray technology, nursing, medical assisting); dental (lab technician, dental assisting); photography; engineering technology No. 1 (civil, general architecture, construction.)

Engineering No. 2 (electronics, mechanical, design drafting, electrical); advertising art; ornamental horticulture; business (real estate, merchandising), and secretarial, accounting, insurance and criminology.

Approximately 300 women (Marinettes) served in the Marine Corps during World War I.

Scholarship Winner Returns From Cuisine Tour Through New Orleans And New York

Raymond Miller, the hotel and restaurant department's winner of the second annual Ted Patrick Memorial Scholarship, returned from his week-long cuisine tour through New Orleans and New York in August highly impressed with the food in that area, according to Lawrence B. Wong, H&R student placement director.

Miller, a fourth-semester student, was guest of some of the most famous restaurants in the two cities.

Among them were Brennan's, Antoine's, The Commander's Palace, and the Pontcharine Hotel in New Orleans; the 21 Club and the Four Seasons in New York.

"Miller visited these places to observe their techniques of food preparation as well as to enjoy the food," Wong said. He was very well received and highly impressed with the excellent food, service, cleanliness, and latest developments of automation in food preparation.

Wong commented that Miller had learned that a strong demand for qualified people in the field of food preparation exists.

The all-expense paid trip is an award sponsored by Ernie's Restaurant in memory of Ted Patrick, late editor of Holiday magazine. The scholarship goes each year to the outstanding student chef in the college's hotel and restaurant department.

Wong also announced that closed-circuit television is now being used in classes of the H & R department.

"This new system of teaching the techniques of food preparation met with the approval of both the students and the instructors," Wong commented.

Directed at the instructor's table, the camera projects an amplified picture of the action on two screens located on each side of the theater demonstration room in Statler wing.

Wong said that this method of instruction allows students to observe in greater detail the close-up operation.

Artist-Reporter To Speak On Vietnam

Howard Brodie, reporter and artist for the Associated Press, will be the guest speaker for the advertising art department Friday at 10 a.m. in S-136.

He will discuss his reporting and art assignments in Vietnam.

Brodie covered World War II for the San Francisco Chronicle and the Korean War for Collier's Magazine. He also has written many books about art.

Other speakers scheduled almost every Friday this semester, include famous artists, photographers and printers. Art majors are given an opportunity to see the works of the famous artists during the speeches.

An Art Club has been formed in the art department. Membership is open to second year advertising art students and to photography and professional art majors.

The Art Club will sponsor an Art Festival which will be held in the courtyard in December. The work of faculty members and students will be on exhibit. The profits from the festival will provide scholarships for art majors, a club spokesman said.

Budget Requests Due Tomorrow

The deadline for the filing of the spring semester budgets is set for tomorrow, and the hearings for the budgeted organizations will begin the following day.

Representatives of the budgeted organizations will be notified a week before they are to appear before the Student Council, declared Janet Hinterman, assistant finance chairman, and she added that the Student Council hopes to review at least five organization budgets at each hearing.

The hearings are expected to last through the second week of December.

Half Ton Of Orchids

A total of 1100 pounds of orchids has been donated to the ornamental horticulture department by the Dos Pueblos Orchid Co. of Goleta, California, Harry Nelson, head of the ornamental horticulture department, announced today.

By spring it is expected that they will be in full bloom. Nelson invited interested students to visit the ornamental horticulture department where they can tour the new facilities.

Ornmental horticulture students are concentrating their efforts on relandscaping the west wall of the ornamental horticulture building and the area around the theater in Arts Hall. Nelson stated that a major problem around the campus this summer was created by vandals who tore out most of the new plants worked on last semester.

To add beauty to the campus, it is hoped that when the orchids bloom in the spring they will serve as a live greenhouse exhibit.

Ornamental horticulture department students have won many awards and look forward to next spring and the annual Spring Garden Show which they enter yearly.

Transfering Students Urged To File Applications Soon

About 900 students here are expected to transfer to other colleges and universities next semester.

Those who plan to go to the University of California, San Francisco State College or San Jose State College were advised last week by counselor Howard Schoon to start filing their applications.

A transfering student is expected to have a work-in-progress transcript which indicates that the student is taking certain courses during the present semester. This form will be released shortly after the first midterm, Schoon said.

Students must also take care of transfering their high school transcripts to the college or university of their choice, because City College does not provide this service.

Engineering students planning to transfer to the University of California at Berkeley will have to take an entrance examination. Detailed information about times and places for the tests are available from Cecil Aggeler, engineering department, or Schoon.

Schoon stressed the importance of following the directions very strictly while filing the application. "Otherwise, applicants may have to face pathetic situations," he commented.

Many students in the past, with their applications forwarded to their chosen college, have settled in dormitories and bought books long before being accepted by the university. Subsequently, they have been rejected, even though qualified, only because they had not followed directions.

Schoon also advised students to apply for transfer immediately to San Francisco State, as well as the University of California, since State is expected to have more applicants even by the February deadline than they can accommodate.

Transfering students from City College do not receive any special consideration because applications are processed only on the basis of first come, first served.

AGS To Be Host Of Regional Confab

The City College chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, national two-year college scholastic honor society, will host a regional AGS convention here on November 13, according to Dolores Talpt, AGS president.

According to Miss Talpt, this convention will be a far greater undertaking than a routine service project.

Miss Talpt said, "We are looking for a new role for the honor student in California . . . City College is our trial experiment—we are trying to change, in one semester, from a relatively inactive organization into one which will exemplify to the other chapters of the convention, the effects of our revolution."

At their general meeting of September 29, AGS members elected Miss Talpt, president; Jobst Singer, vice president; John Le Count, secretary, and Dan Yee, treasurer.

Alpha Gamma Sigma presently has 90 members out of 293 persons, not counting new freshmen, who are eligible for membership.

Any person having a B average or better, or any new student who was a member of the California Scholastic Federation in high school, is eligible; however they must apply for membership. Any interested student can consult Wallace E. Wells, AGS sponsor, in S-160-F.

Ram Sports Stay Alive In Wartime—Barely

(Editor's Note: This is the third of a series of articles on the history of the college as reflected through the pages of The Guardsman.)

By Mike Smith, Managing Editor

Wartime life at the college was not just a stream of "win the war" campaigns and penny drives. Most of the men attending the college were 18 and 19-year-olds. The Guardsman itself had about only four men on its staff.

In the sports world, City College found much difficulty in putting together whole teams and finding other teams for competition. On the football team, only three men had played the sport in high school.

But City College was fortunate enough to have its teams. Most of the two-year colleges and many of the four-year institutions in the Bay Area were forced to cancel their sports activities and schedules.

San Francisco State, for example, as did many other colleges, had to abolish football because of lack of "material." There were only 68 men students on State's entire campus in the Spring of 1943.

Despite Americans fighting a war to protect this country, there were a few people on the homefront, including some from City College, who did not seem to care. There was still vandalism in the college's cafeteria. Pleas from the operators did not halt the destruction of tables and chairs which were impossible to replace during these times.

However, what angered The Guardsman more was not the petty destruction of property on the campus, but a group who called themselves the "Peace Now" movement. (Whether any City College students made up part of this group is really not known.) The people in the organization advocated settlement of all world problems immediately by treaties and agreements so that the war could be called off.

A Guardsman comment on the "Peace Now" movement was short and to the point: "Should such an un-American group as this be allowed to spread malicious talk? We believe their actions to be traitorous and unconstitutional."

Finally after some five long years of fighting and bloodshed, the war came to a close. In the Fall of 1945 the American troops started coming home, and 350 of them enrolled at City College.

About a year after the war, this paper was proud to publish the highlights of a Look magazine article listing the 100 best educational institutions in America. San Francisco's City College was very high on that list—among the first 10.

This particular article made the public realize that a two-year college was not just a "glorified high school" as it was so often tabbed. However, The Guardsman was not only to mention the Look article in the future, but also it was to keep alive a statement made by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944, "The junior college has now become a robust youngster in the family of American educational institutions."

IN 1948, THESE KIDS AND DOGS were quite content in Hurley Village; unlike their parents, they didn't have to go to college.

Years later, another president, General Dwight D. Eisenhower, was to state that the compulsory level of education should be extended to the two-year college level so the youth of the nation would be better fitted to assume its responsibilities when the time came.

Shortly after the end of the war, and up until the early 1950's a great majority of the City College's married population lived in a Quonset hut settlement called Hurley Village, where Arts Hall and the horticulture center now stand.

The married students, their children, and their dogs and other pets were quite content with their lives in the village, and a college-wide project constructed a playground for the children.

But this was not to last long, for Hurley Village was to slowly disappear, first through the Phelan avenue road widening project that was to take place in the early summer of 1952; and campus construction was soon to hang a "condemned" sign on the rest of the hectic and happy community.

Simpson Romps To Record In 31-20 Win

Gladiators Face Rams In 'Must Win' On Friday

The Rams face their second tough assignment in a row when Chabot's Gladiators invade San Francisco on Friday at 2:30 p.m.

The 1964 co-titlists opened their '65 campaign with a 15-8 win over Yuba College. But the Gladiators then made the mistake of traveling to Sacramento City College and lost a tough one, 20-7.

Chabot led 7-6 in the third quarter and apparently the Gladiators were on their way to another score with a first down on the Sacramento 8, but a holding penalty nullified the threat. Chabot also drove to the Sacramento 12 later in the same quarter, but gave up the ball on downs.

Gladiator coach Ed Hart, although disapointed in the losing effort, did not feel that his team was beaten from a physical standpoint. "Sacramento gave us problems defensively, but we were pleased with work of our defensive secondary, which didn't permit the long bomb," he said.

The defense is led by Pat Ozenne and Steve Ponsi, while fullback Fred Cariss seems to be the man to stop on offense, but the Gladiators also have a strong aerial combination in quarterback Jerry Gaylord and end Ron Souza.

Shortly before the win over San Joaquin Delta, Ram Coach Dutch Elston installed a complete two unit system.

The defense was composed of ends Dewight Tucker and Don McGee, tackles Jerd Lapham and Chris Panagotacos, linebackers Chris Davis, Orrie McRae and Lamont Johnson, and backs Reeves Moses, Eural Smothers, Fred Lovelle and Joe Callan.

The offensive starters were ends Bruce Rosenberg and Tucker, tackles Joe Ross and Mike Taylor, guards Dave Malae and Rich Colombo, center Mike Dunn, quarterback Bill Gianquinto, halfbacks Ron Fassler and O. J. Simpson, and fullback Dennis Sullivan.

Some changes had to be made when Taylor reinjured a shoulder during the first quarter and when Panagotacos left the game in the third quarter with a cleat wound in his right hand. But Mark Sultana filled in for Taylor in fine fashion and Ross went both ways in the fourth quarter.

Defensive stars in the 26-12 win over the Mustangs were McRae, Davis, Tucker and Lovelle.

The offense was led by halfbacks Simpson, who gained 115 yards in 11 carries and also had another 40-yard run called back, and Fassler, who scored once from 11 yards out and teamed with Gianquinto on an 82-yard aerial bomb.

Quarterback Bob Lee also contributed with a 42.5-yard punting average.

Although the Rams have the home field advantage for this one, the game must be rated a toss-up on the strength of the Gladiators' strong showing in their first three games.

Star Back 'The Difference' In Upset Over Foothill

By G. Frank Cooney

Halfback O. J. Simpson ran his way into the Golden Gate Conference record book and led City College of San Francisco gridders to a 31-20 upset over the Foothill Owls in Friday's conference opener here.

Simpson high-stepped his way for 207 yards in 16 carries to set a new mark for yards gained in a single game.

Coach "Dutch" Elston summed it into one concise understatement after the game. "Simpson was the difference," he said.

Elston went on to credit the defensive squad, spearheaded by ends Chris Davis and Dwight Tucker, with an "outstanding showing."

The stalwart Ram defense held Foothill, previously ranked number 14 in the nation, to a mere 96 yards rushing.

Despite the outcome, City College lived up to its underdog role throughout the first half. At the intermission the Rams were on the short side of 12-6.

On the fourth play of the second half San Francisco turned the tables when O. J. Simpson broke loose for an encore scoring run of 61 yards. Bob Lee's kick finally put the Rams ahead 13-12.

Simpson had scored in the first quarter on a similar play when he bulled his way over tackle and proceeded on a 57 yard scamper.

Ron Fassler then stretched the Ram lead to 19-12 when he culminated a 67 yard drive with a three yard lunge and a six point landing.

Foothill immediately realized their situation and took the wrappings off of their all around "star" athlete Russ Hodge.

Hodge, whose speed and size (6' 3" 220 lbs.—sub 10 seconds in 100 yards) makes a seven point lead look insignificant, received the next kickoff and trampled on and through 10 Rams before a safety man finally stopped him on the Foothill 40.

Hodge gained 17 yards in the next four plays and the CCSF lead was looking slimmer all the time.

With daylight fading fast on the home turf Pat Kearns brightened up the situation by intercepting a Bill Lerch pass to halt the Owl's threat.

An inspired Ram offense then applied the finishing touches with two more touchdowns.

O. J. played out III of his "three touchdown bonanza" with a 19 yard run that didn't have a script.

In what started as a sweep play around left end, Simpson found himself being forced in the wrong direction. Realizing he would gain less than nothing there, O. J. adlibbed his way clear back around to the right sideline for his final score.

Teamwise City College rushed for 291 yards, passed for 106, and received 19 first downs. Foothill rushed for 71 yards, passed for 146 and got 13 first downs.

Ram quarterback Bill Gianquinto completed 10 of 15 passes and substitue quarterback Bob Lee threw once for a touchdown.

Rams' Offensive Strength Crushes Diablo Valley, 10-0

In a display of strength and coordination the Ram soccer team dumped the Alumni, 3-1, and in league action crushed Diablo Valley, 10-0, last week.

On October 3, coach Roy Diederichsen's fast improving team took on an Alumni team boasting such stars as 1964 Olympians Gary DeLong and Al Korbus. Included on the Alumni roster were five formed All-Americans.

All-American Alex Mendietta scored two of the Ram's three goals and freshman wing Nelson Artiga scored the other, while Korbus was the only graduate to score.

On October 6 the locals never gave Diablo Valley a chance. Artiga opened the scoring in the first minute of play with a shot from the left corner.

Robert "Sapo" Rojas then came off the bench and added two more quick goals to make it 3-0. Rojas nearly scored on two other opportunities and displayed the type of "bench strength" that coach Diederichsen has been raving about since early practice began.

Veteran George Fernandez made it 4-0 on a penalty kick from 20 yards out, and from then on, the locals poured it on the Vikings.

Envir Safir started the second half scoring with a 25-yard shot that hit the upper goal post and bounced in for a score. Mendietta finally hit the scoring column with a penalty shot from the 11-yard line, then added another score on a great assist from Ronnie Van Velhuysen to make it 7-0.

John Kosewic headed a pass from Tom Samuelson toward the goal, and Tony Nerio kicked the bouncing ball into the net. Samuelson, who had switched from halfback to wing, scored the ninth tally.

Benny Boryankano closed the scoring with another penalty shot from the 11 yard line.

Soccer Team Sets Sights On Third Straight Title

Despite their 4-1 loss to NCAA semi-finalist, San Jose State, last week, the Ram soccermen enter their third week of competition as a solid favorite to sweep to their third straight conference and state titles.

Led by All-American Alex Mendietta, the Rams face Menlo College tomorrow in an afternoon contest at Menlo Park.

Menlo College does not offer a strong threat to the City College powerhouse. In the opening game of the Ram season, Menlo fell easily by a score of 7-0.

"Their team lacked any sort of offensive punch," commented Ram coach Roy Diederichsen. "Defensively, the score tells the story," he added.

Following tomorrow's game with Menlo College, the Rams travel to Fresno for a game with Pacific College.

"Pacific is a small Methodist College in Fresno. Their soccer team is limited in selection by its student body size. We do expect to have a good game there, however. What they lack in skill, they seem to make up for with hustle and desire," Diederichsen said.

Rounding out the week's schedule, the Rams return home to Balboa Park and host an afternoon game with Oakland's Merritt College on October 18.

"Oakland will bring with them two of the league's outstanding players. Recently they held a strong San Francisco State team to a 5-5 tie," Diederichsen said.

"Actually I am not at all disappointed with our showing so far. It was unfortunate that we dropped the game with San Jose State, but it was not as bad as the score indicated. We did dominate the first half of play, spending most of the second half experimenting with our players," Diederichsen declared.

"I honestly believe that any college in this area would have a hard time beating this Ram team," the coach stated.

The Ram booters were dealt a blow when Alex Zahjke, All-State halfback from New York, was ruled ineligible because he was registered for an insufficient number of units, head soccer coach Diederichsen disclosed. Conference rules state a player must carry at least 10.5 units of credit; Zahjke is carrying units totaling less than this.

Diederichsen also noted that besides the play of All-American Alex Mendietta, the team had received fine play from both Ronny Van Velthuysen and Pietro Rossi in the first two league games of the young season.

Injuries Hamper Cross Country

The City College cross country team, with three top runners out with injuries, made a disappointing showing in the Golden Gate Invitational October 2, at Golden Gate Park.

Lou Vasquez, coach of the team, said that Alex Vosher, Greg Bolich, and George Ferguson couldn't compete because of leg injuries.

In the four-mile marathon, Foothill's Russ Mahen came in first with the time of 12:05.5, this time was 11 seconds faster than Bob Reeve's of Diablo Valley.

Veterans Bill Long and Joe Singer finished a distant 38th and 49th respectively. Their times were 23:03 for Long, and 24:26 for Singer.

Other Ram cindermen to finish the marathon were John O'Looney, John Conidi, Don Boyle, Clint Wrigley, Chuck Pitt, Bob Quillory and Roy McCarra.

The longest baseball game in the major leagues was played between the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Boston Braves. It lasted 26 innings and ended tied 1-1 because of darkness.

Rams Laugh It Up In Major Triumph

By Randy Koernig

City College's football team is made up of some 60 male students who enjoy laughing and doing funny things. Like last Friday when they upset Foothill College 31-20.

Actually, it was not really THAT funny until the second half when the Rams turned what should have been a close game into a "laughter" as they broke loose for 24 points while the Owls, who had been ranked number 14 nationally, could muster up only eight in the closing moments of the game.

Jerd Lapham, the Ram's big defensive tackle, was the first player to notice the humor of the game when he came off the field giggling after he recovered an Owl fumble early in the third quarter.

The humor continued to mount when coaches Elston and Schwartz ran into the locker room and then proceeded to race each other to the door of the team room to see who would have the honor of opening the door for the ballplayers. (Schwartz won.)

Not to be outdone, coach Elston was the first one inside the room and immediately grabbed a piece of chalk and scrawled, "How sweet it is!" on the blackboard. He then hopped up on a bench and announced, "I guess we showed these guys who's number one."

Just before the coach relinquished the floor to anyone who wanted it, he said, "Just one more announcement," and with that, quarterback Bill Gianquinto chimed in, "Triple session tomorrow."

Shortly afterward, coach Schwartz entered the room, inquiring, "You guys got any cuts or bruises you want the doctor to take a look at?" Halfback O. J. Simpson then pointed toward the corner of the locker room occupied by the Foothill team and shouted, "Send him over there!"

Quarterback Bob Lee was the next one to get into the act as he made his way to the Foothill scouting report tacked to the wall and inquired, "See this? It doesn't mean too much anymore, does it?"

Lee then tore the pages from the wall and deposited them in the garbage can. And with that, the 60 male students who make up the college's football team all laughed.

Opponents Capitalize On Gridder's Errors

RAMBLINGS

By William Pates

Penalties Nullify Crucial Ram Plays

IT WILL BE a game long remembered for its mistakes.

This is about the best description of the error-ridden contest held between the Rams and the San Joaquin Delta Mustangs here on October 1.

In many respects the game was a carbon copy of the disasterous Los Angeles Valley exhibition what with the excessive penalties which hindered San Francisco's offensive and defensive efforts for the most part while giving "aid and comfort" to the enemy.

The only difference was the score and the fact that San Joaquin was somewhat less of an equal opponent which makes the locals' mistakes seem somewhat worse. Even so the Mustangs could have made it real tough if a pass had not been dropped with no one between the goal and the "fumbling" end but grass.

Actually this "fumbling" incident is understandable. For one, the surprised end couldn't believe his good fortune at being left absolutely open, completely untouched in the middle of the field with no one near him. Besides, the ball hit him right in the hands and everybody knows you can't catch a football if it hits you in the hands.

However, several other San Joaquin receivers found themselves virtually alone beyond the Ram defenders and they easily went in for the score.

At various times throughout the contest, crucial penalties killed San Francisco offensive drives, nullifying in several situations substantial gains into Mustang territory.

The defense also let the Deltans off the hook with personal fouls and such after having them in a hole on third or fourth down.

It was somewhat obvious from the start that coach Elston's crew was going to have a tough time rolling over an "obviously" weaker San Joaquin squad.

The first time the San Franciscans got their hands on the ball, they went in for the score—almost. Ron Fassler went over the goal in what may be considered tight quarters and fumbled the ball. It bounced off several Rams hands and was finally pounced on by a Mustang.

They then went on later in the period to score and go ahead 6-0

The Rams came out of it with several "spectacular" scoring plays.

This "error ridden" contest typifies Ram preseason showings over the last few seasons. Unfortunately, it sometimes continues on into the regular season.

Witness the opener against Foothill last year. It was lost, 15-13, on a blocked punt that was run in for the score.

Well, this is football of course. You have to make your own breaks. Unfortunately, City College isn't able to capitalize on opponents' mistakes as much as opponents are able to capitalize on Ram mistakes.

Council Issues Ultimatum To ROC—Stop Campaign

By Rich Heintz

Reform On Campus, a "political party," was given an ultimatum last week by Student Council to stop its "campaigning" or forfeit the privilege of being on the Associated Student ballot in the next general election at City College, scheduled for January.

The ultimatum, requested by Jim Soletti, a council member, carried, 10-3-0.

Soletti said, "Since campaigning is not allowed to start on campus until two weeks before the general election, ROC should be stopped from passing out propaganda and forced to remove a booth which they have in front of Smith Hall."

Lincoln Pain, a member of council and of ROC argued, "This is not campaigning but rather an attempt to gain members for ROC."

"No matter what you may call it," Soletti countered, "it is still campaigning."

Pain moved to suspend voting on this matter indefinitely.

However, Barbara Kontis, Associated Student vice president, made an objection to the motion which carried, 10-3-0, thereby nullifing Pain's action.

Earlier in the meeting council voted, 9-3-1, on a recommendation made by Bruce Fisher, that ROC be considered ineligible for on-campus status.

This recommendation brought up the question of whether ROC was a political organization or a club.

ROC STATUS DEBATED

Fisher, in his motion, stated, "ROC has established itself as a political party by sponsoring candidates in the last election."

Pain felt that council was "railroading" ROC since none of the council members has read ROC's constitution which would show that ROC is a club.

"If the club has a political platform, then it is considered a party," Fisher argued.

Student Council presently is composed of three ROC members and ten United Student Representative Party members.

Other council business included the announcement that political parties and independents must register with the Election Commissioner, Sandy Sager by Monday, November 15, in order to appear on the ballot, according to Associated Student President Dennis Sweeney.

CONVENTION DATES SET

Sweeney added that the political conventions are now set for 7 to 10 p.m. Monday, November 22, and Tuesday, November 23, in Statler wing.

"These are the nights which have been reserved so far," Sweeney explained, "but there can be another date reserved if necessary."

Council, in other action, gave the Negro Student Association at City College on-campus status at last Wednesday's meeting.

Dave Minkin, Council of Organization's chairman, requested the motion since "the Negro Student Association has removed the discriminatory clause in its constitution which was present last semester."

Doug Bianchi, a member of Student Council, stated, "As long as the organization has shown interest in the Associated Students, council should give them on-campus status."

Miss Kontis announced that any organization that wants to have a date placed on the spring social calendar must be present at a meeting this Friday in Bungalow 5.

Student Council also unanimously approved a fund-raising rally for the City of Hope, which will be sponsored by Beta Tau fraternity November 18.

A motion which had been tabled two weeks ago that would have given $196.82 to Student Council itself was passed last week, 10-2-1.

DINNERWARE GETS OK

The money was requested by Miss Kontis to complete a set of dishes for Student Council to be used at Student Council banquet.

Ernie Woodcock, the council member who had originally tabled the motion, was the one who moved it taken off the table.

He explained his action, "Since a financial report by Biff Barnes disclosed that council was not spending over its budget in comparison with other semesters, there was no reason not to allocate the money."

COO THWARTS ROC

At a Council of Organizations meeting last Thursday, ROC's application for on-campus status as a club was thwarted when COO representatives defeated its request by a roll-call vote, 26-4.

Discussion was similar to that which previously developed in Student Council, namely whether ROC is a club or a political party.

Debate over the issue highlighted both COO meetings of last week, but a vote was not called until Thursday.

On-campus status, gained by COO's acceptance of an applying organization's constitution and charter, is necessary before the organization gains the privilege of a place to meet on the campus.

Sweeney Clarifies Council Ultimatum To ROC Leadership

By Karen Carlsen

Associated Student President Dennis Sweeney has been under more pressure than usual at recent council meetings.

Sweeney, who has the power of the veto, declined to use it when council passed two related resolutions at a recent meeting.

The first forwarded a recommendation to the Council of Organizations that Reform On Campus not be granted on-campus status, due to the fact that ROC is established as a political party.

VIOLATIONS CITED

The second resolution ordered ROC to desist from any campaigning, since to campaign at this time of the semester is in direct contradiction of election rules.

"A major problem here is a mistaken image of student government," Sweeney stated.

"Last semester the administration made it clear that the voice of all students is the Student Council. Unfortunately, some groups feel that more will be accomplished through action that is independent and deliberately goes to make it look bad. Rules nearly scored on two other opportunities and displayed the type of "bench strength" that coach Diederichsen has been raving about since early practice began.

"We aren't trying to eliminate people who are interested in student government, but we do feel that an organization should abide by the rules and decisions of the AS. The organization in question (ROC) has even gone so far as to threaten to bring the Civil Liberties Union into the controversy."

USRP STATUS

Sweeney theorized that if ROC were to be granted on-campus status the United Students Representative Party would be forced to organize during the entire semester, rather than just during election time as it now does.

"USRP, now just a convenient coalition of clubs for two weeks each semester, has the potential of being even more powerful than COO, since all campus clubs and organizations are, by definition a part of USRP," Sweeney explained.

Possible solutions to the problem as suggested by Sweeney are reorganization of ROC as a club under a different name, and changes in present election rules.

Frosh Ball Set For Friday; Couple Contest Still Open

Midnight Magic, theme for the annual Frosh Ball, to be held on Friday evening from 9 to 12 p.m. in the Gold Room of the Sheraton Palace Hotel, is making "tremendous headway," according to Frosh Class President Mike Nygren.

Other Frosh Class officers, Vice Presidents Janet Frazier and Ernie Woodcock, Secretary Janice Goldreich, Treasurer Sandy Seger and COO Representative Roy Barnes, "are leaving no stone unturned in preparation for the event," Nygren said.

MIKE NYGREN, Frosh Class president.

The officers are particularly excited about the traditional Cutest Couple Contest, which has not had as large a response as had been anticipated. Petitions, however, are still being given out in Bungalow 5 and the Silver Pole in Science Hall.

It has been rumored that one of the prizes to be awarded the winners of the Cutest Couple Contest will be an evening for two at the hungry i. Judges James Wyatt, David Spense, Frosh President Nygren, and Associated Student President Dennis Sweeney will be responsible for the selection of the recipients of the prizes.

In response to the several inquiries Dean Mary Golding has received pertaining to the type of dress to be worn for the occasion, the dean made the following statement:

"The ball is semiformal. However, women who own full-length formals are planning to wear them; men who own 'tuxes' will also wear them. Cocktail dresses and suits will be very much in order. The general atmosphere created will be dressy."

Manners And Morality— New College Themes?

Who said they couldn't legislate morality?

The following is Assembly Bill No. 1750, Chapter 1970; an act to amend Section 7851 of the Education Code relating to morality training.

"Each teacher shall endeavor to impress upon the minds of the pupils the principles of morality, truth, justice, patriotism, and a true comprehension of the rights, duties, and dignity of American citizenship, including kindness toward domestic pets and the humane treatment of living creatures, to teach them to avoid idleness, profanity, and falsehood, and to instruct them in manners and morals and the principles of a free government."

14 Coeds Chosen As Best-Dressed

Fourteen coeds were selected as finalists in the Best-Dressed Coed Contest during College Hour on October 7.

According to Mary Maurer, president of the Associated Women Students, these coeds will model in the semiannual AWS fashion show and tea on Thursday, November 4, in Smith Hall. Women students are invited to attend The Lady From F.A.S.H.I.O.N., theme of the show.

Local high school seniors and their advisers will also be attending. Fashions will be furnished by Benioff's of Grant Avenue.

Dainita Alexander, Karen Baugh, Sue Bottarini, Helen Bundros, Shirley Chiu, Cynthia George, Joanne Mavromatis, Donna McLennan, Carmine Meyer, Barbara Peters, Grace Relfe, Joan Shaw, Sharon Strauss and Sharon Yee are the finalists.

Inadequate midterm grades could be a disqualifying factor. Consequently, Joyce Byrd, Linda Reed and Marianne Wolbertus were selected as alternates.

Symphony Ticket Deadline Nov. 2

The deadline for ticket sales for the San Francisco Symphony Forum is Tuesday, November 2.

This is the 28th year that the Symphony Forum has been offering season tickets for half price.

Orchestra seats are priced from $20.00 to $33.25; grand tier and dress balcony are $33.25; balcony circle are $22.50; and balcony from $22.50 to $20.00. Tickets are available on a first come, first served basis, and are available at the finance office in Smith Hall. The price is for the entire 20-concert series.

The symphony begins its 1965-66 season on December 1.

COO Hosts Queen Contest, Parade

A car parade featuring five football queen nominees will be part of the rally for the football game between the College of San Mateo and City College, according to David Minkin, COO chairman; the rally will be held during College Hour November 4 at the Ram.

Minkin emphasized that October 22 would be the deadline for procuring petitions for the queen nominations. Petitions can be obtained in Bungalow 5. The queen will be officially crowned at the game, which will be played at San Mateo November 5, beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Former COO Chairman Barbara Kontis said that COO and the Social Committee are no longer joint organizations. "The countless number of persons attending the meetings has caused too much confusion," Miss Kontis explained as the reason for the change.

COO has abandoned the practice of automatically appointing the Associated Student Vice President as COO chairman. Future chairmen will be voted into office by the club representatives in the organization.

Closed Circuit TV Starts October 26

City College Close-Up, a TV series produced and shown through the cooperation of KPIX-TV last fall, will be shown here on closed circuit TV for the benefit of those students who want to know more about their college.

Sylvia R. Leff and Carl Coleman, public affairs director of KPIX-TV, produced the series in which more than 150 industry leaders, Bay Area educators, college faculty members, working graduates and students participated.

The series will separately examine the various departments of City College in ten programs which will be shown on Tuesdays during College Hour.

The first program is on the Photography Department and can be seen next Tuesday in C-245. The faculty participants in the first show are Beverly Pasqualetti, Charles Lamp, Emmett Smith and Kenneth Molino.

The departments covered by the series include photography, engineering, criminology and advertising art.

An instructor will be present at each program to answer questions during a question-answer period, Mrs. Leff said.

Laughter, Cat-Calls Typify First Fall 'Free Speech' Rally

By James Rauh

In what was scheduled to be a rally sponsored by the Hillel Foundation, protesting the controversial war in Vietnam, the free speech platform's foundations shook with laughter and ridicule from the more than 1500 students who attended the discussion during College Hour last Thursday.

Richard Rico, chairman of the Contemporary Affairs Forum, managed to get things underway by introducing Frank Bardacke, a graduate student at the University of California.

"The only way we can understand the situation in Vietnam," he stated, "is that everything we do that's right, is right, and everything we do that's wrong, is right. Everything they do that's wrong, is wrong, and everything they do that's right is wrong."

Bardacke, amidst booing and jeering, pointed out the reasons for America's presence in Vietnam. "We are fighting in Vietnam because of Communist concentration camps, secret police, brutality and the absence of free elections. The fact is that the U.S. carries on these activities anyway in order to protect the South Vietnamese."

He was then literally heckled off the free speech platform.

Rico, disgusted with the attitude of the crowd, offered the platform for debate. One student did mount the stage, to the great applause of almost all present.

"Over at Cal," he said, "they call themselves intellectuals, but over here at City College we have men."

Following the standing ovation for the unidentified student, Ed Vickery, of the Haight-Ashbury Vietnam Day Committee, stood up to speak his piece on the subject of Vietnam.

Vickery, a former Marine and political philosophy student at Stanford University, said, "In the forces all you are taught to do is kill; in fact it's the only skill I learned in the service."

As certain sections of the crowd began to whistle From The Halls Of Montezuma, Vickery added, "I have a great deal more respect for a man who stands up and says 'no' to the draft, than one who goes willingly."

So ended the first free speech rally of the semester, concerning a controversial topic, at the college's new platform.

85 Students Take Advantage Of Work-Study Offer

Eighty-five City College students are participating in the federal economic opportunity programs during the Fall semester, according to Joseph Amori, director of placement here.

Initiated during the Spring semester 1965, the college work-study program offers financial assistance through a campus work assignment in one of 50 departments, ranging from hotel and restaurant to ornamental horticulture.

Students may work a maximum of 15 hours per week or 70 hours per month for which they receive $1.42 per hour.

In addition to the campus work assignments, 30 students have been assigned to eight non-profit organizations in San Francisco where they assist the regular agency staff in performing clerical, teaching, and recreational assignments.

The following agencies are participating in the program: Brandeis Day School, Y.W.C.A., and six recreation and community centers affiliated with the Booker T. Washington Center.

A special crew is working with Harry Nelson, chairman of the ornamental horticulture center, in a campus-wide beautification program. Plans call for a general cleanup, landscaping, planting and maintenance. The areas surrounding the horticulture center and the hotel and restaurant complex are the primary targets.

Amori advised students interested in being considered for jobs in the economic opportunity program to report to the placement office.

Rapid Transit Might Solve Parking Problems—In 1968!

WITH THE CROWDED conditions prevalent at the college this semester, problems of transportation and parking have taken their toll on the college student and have strained the campus parking facilities to the extreme.

Students who are not fortunate enough to own cars find themselves leaving for the campus earlier in order to be assured of space on the municipal railway carriers. This semester, one must usually wait for two or three cars before being able to board.

Once inside, the ride can be termed unbearable with pushing, shoving and desperate attempts to avoid landing on someone's lap.

The only possible advantage here is the fact that often, with such a load of people coming on at one stop, many are not "able" to present their fare to the motorman. It is also very popular these days to board at the back door, and this little maneuver, predominately unnoticed by the motorman, runs into quite a saving on fares.

Now for the fortunate student who owns his own automobile; the advantages here are numerous except for one major problem that confronts the driver when he reaches the campus. The parking facilities, although expansive, still seem limited with the large influx of morning traffic.

When one does find a parking space, it is usually quite some distance from the campus proper, and so, many walking-sprinting sprees are necessary to make that 8 a.m. class.

Continued high enrollment seems to be the norm for future semesters, but thankfully, a possible solution to this problem of transportation and parking seems near.

By 1968, the Bay Area Rapid Transit District will operate its facilities within the metropolitan area. BARTD lines are scheduled to make stops in the environs of the campus in about three years, and this will, hopefully, relieve the perplexing problem.

Granted, three years is a long time to wait, but in the meantime, students might as well make every effort to endure the situation. Cooperation and tolerance are the necessary ingredients to cope with the problem. Let's hope everyone makes use of them; otherwise, the problems skyrocket to greater heights.

Albertson, Scott And Sheen Score Hit With The Subject Was Roses

The year is 1946 and the setting is a small, middle class apartment in New York's Bronx district. The atmosphere is gay and electric as a proud man and wife welcome their son home from the battle ground.

This is how it began when the original Broadway production of The Subject Was Roses, by Frank D. Gilroy, made its debut at the Geary Theater in San Francisco October 11.

The title role of John Cleary, portrayed by Jack Albertson, presents a man rich in tradition and pride, both for his small successes in life, as well as his intense pride in his son.

Martha Scott portrays Nettie, John's wife, who loves her son and husband deeply but blindly lavishes her major affection on her mother.

The end result is self-discovery through the help of her son, Timmy, who is instrumental in bringing the family closer together.

Martin Sheen, as Timmy, manipulates his parents through the dangerous waters of life to a joyous and satisfying catharsis.

The drama itself, while somewhat shallow in parts, contained no major dramatic flaws and certainly delved deeply in the basic and perplexing problems of life, a subject with which everyone must deal.

Roses has won the coveted Pulitzer Prize and was voted "Best Play of the Year" by the New York Drama Critics Circle and will run here through October 30.

Its real life drama, so convincingly portrayed, seems to assure it of continued success.

The play is available to students at a special rate of $2.65, tax included. All that's required is student identification.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

• Ideas Encouraged

Editor, The Guardsman:

I read with interest the contribution to the Ram's Horn in the October 6 edition and hasten to add that we welcome all suggestions which would improve the registration procedure.

There was a time when we did broadcast the changes via the public address system to the adviser's rooms. Faculty and students alike found this highly distracting and the procedure was discontinued. This is not to say that we could not try it again.

I hope that the letter referred to and this one will encourage more "good ideas" from the students.

• Verbiage On Vietnam

Editor, The Guardsman:

Vietnam is the most serious foreign issue facing the American people today. It is therefore necessary that we have as much accurate information as possible about the history of Vietnam, and of the role of American troops there.

Unfortunately, little accurate information was forthcoming from Captain Kottich in his talk on Vietnam. His statements could not be questioned, for he allowed only five minutes for discussion.

Captain Kottich stated that after the French were defeated in 1954, the Geneva Treaty divided Vietnam into two countries, the North and the South.

He then said that in 1956, after Ho Chi Min (leader of the North) saw that the government of the South was a permanent government and was not going to crumble from within, he infiltrated the South with the intention of overthrowing the Diem government. The U.S., then, sent support to Diem.

Now, while it is true that the country was divided by the Geneva Treaty, it is also true that within two years there were to be held free elections, which would unify Vietnam. The Saigon government (Diem) never allowed these elections; it knew it would be defeated by Ho Chi Min.

Instead, he bitterly suppressed by force all opposition to his government, and called on the United States for aid. It was at this time that the national Front (Viet Cong) came into being in the South, supported by the North.

Its object was to gain the freedoms that were guaranteed at Geneva, the freedoms that Diem has suppressed. Captain Kottich left out entirely the fact that democratic elections were never held.

Bad Guys, Accidents Harass Campus Police

If in a barrel of apples there is a rotten apple, it will soon spread its decay throughout and contaminate the entire lot; if the rotten apple is conscientously removed beforehand, the loss is curbed.

Some of these "rotten apples" are responsible for the many problems the Campus Police have had to contend with thus far this semester, such as auto-tamperings, a category that covers petty thefts of batteries and hubcaps, on-campus drinking of stronger beverages than can be obtained from the vending machines, glue-sniffing—the rage of the junior high set, two stolen motorcycles, hundreds of parking violations, a pedestrian-car accident, and even a psycho case in the reservoir parking lot.

(Besides rotten apples there is a nut in the bottom of the barrel, probably went berserk trying to locate his car!)

"Bruised apples," the ones responsible for minor traffic parking tickets, are usually restored to their former untarnished state after their citation is paid at City Hall—providing they adhere to further regulations.

This reporter managed to fall into this bruised apple category, but his wings were straightened out when he paid his two dollars.

(Parking on the grass didn't help; he was still late for his 8 o'clock class!)

Campus Police Chief John F. McHenry stated, "We have had more incidences occur during this midterm period than in the entire spring semester, including 13 traffic accidents, which is the usual average for a full semester."

Chief McHenry, Deputy Chief William Palmini, Assistant Deputy Chief Robert Tietjen and 38 patrolmen are planning on picking a lot of "rotten apples" out of the barrel this semester.

Spaghetti Gets Go—Canapes No In Smith Hall

Hamburgers and hot dogs are the favored meats on campus and American foods are preferred over fancy dishes. Spaghetti is the most demanded hot plate and well-liked vegetables are corn-on-the-cob, peas and beans—in that order.

"Breakfast is a scrambled eggs and hot cakes affair," said Edward Nylund, who prepares the breakfast menus for the cafeteria. He finds that bacon or sausages are also in wide demand.

John W. Dunn, who manages the lunch menus for the cafeteria, commented that the cafeteria serves 4000 students and faculty daily—1000 for breakfast, 1000 for lunch and 2000 at the fountain.

"We cater to everyone," Dunn said, adding, "our prices are lower than any other college in this area because we have only 18 paid employees."

The staff is composed largely of students and faculty who are not paid for their services.

Panic, Fear Play Big Role In Dropoutsia

By B.T.

THIS IS dropout time, or midterm neurosis time. It is the time for miscellaneous anxieties, from A to Z. Algae to Zeus, Amino Acids to Zen, Applejack to Zombies.

Students are forced into intensive last-minute study, hours of wakefulness, and a mounting fear of something. Many panic and impulsively drop out just before midterms, or shortly thereafter.

Perhaps educator-writer John Keats' The Sheepskin Psychosis, can best explain the dropout problem. "Neither college nor society has an Instant Rationalization ready at hand to explain the dropout.

"Both deny him a right to seek happiness in his own way, even if it is necessary to his health and sanity for him to quit college," Keats wrote.

In this revealing book, he emphasizes that excessive parental pressures, fear of the draft and "no place to go" are a few of the reasons why young students go to college.

"Dropouts," he wrote, have a tendency to overcompensate," driving hard toward education now that they have left college.

"The beatnik pad or the Spartan apartment is normally filled with paperback books of irreproachable quality, and the job-holding dropout often embarks on more intensive reading than regularly enrolled students are required to undertake."

He also discusses the sex attitudes of college students under the chapter, Desire Under the Elms. He quotes a San Francisco professor as saying, "The sad thing is that so many of these kids act just like old married couples."

"It would seem that the major problem stems from the fact that the collegiate world is a corral full of erotic adolescents," states Keats.

He also writes of why sophomores "slump," the validity of the grading systems of teachers, the dean of admissions, Greener Pastures, choosing colleges and some alternatives to college.

"When they look outside the college walls, they see policemen setting dogs on Negroes, a society full of wars and jails, in which the greatest rewards are reserved for those who manufacture, advertise, and market mass-produced junk and physical ugliness; and some of them reject it.

"If you are to tell them they will need a college degree in order to compete in this sick world, they will reject the college degree or they will go to the other extreme of going on to graduate school in order to stay in the academic womb forever," he wrote.

According to Keats, College is somewhat "oversold."

His alternatives are not new to society. They are just overlooked by many who are swept up in the tide called midterm exams.

'Two-Platoon' Football Strategy Pays Off

Coach Elston Beefs-Up Bench; Result—More Exciting Action

It is a fortunate football coach, who, in times of dire need, can turn to his bench for help.

Coach "Dutch" Elston became fortunate on Friday, October 1. That was the day Elston picked to install his new two-platoon system. His experiment proved a success as the Rams defeated San Joaquin Delta, 26-12.

The Rams had opened their 1965 season on the road with an 0-26 loss at the hands of the Los Angeles Valley College Monarchs. Elston had essentially relied upon 15 individuals to carry the burden for the entire team.

The two-platoon system consists of 11 men playing offense and 11 different men playing defense. This way the offensive men can rest while the defensive men are playing.

Elston was not the first to use the platoon system. For years it was the system employed by major four-year colleges. But in the early 1950's the four-year colleges changed to a limited substitution type of football.

Limited substitution caused many spectators to turn to the more exciting "pro" game. Naturally, some individuals are more gifted on offense than on defense, and the reverse is true.

Most coaches kept their best defensive players in the game, and this created many nonexistent offensive units, with neither team playing exciting football.

Recently the four-year colleges went back to the nearly-free substitution rule in an effort to make the game more exciting. Two-year colleges have always kept the rule in existence giving more individuals a chance to play and develop.

When the Rams proved they had much-needed "bench strength" they became a more complete and more exciting football team.

THE DEFENSIVE PLATOON rests while the offensive team plays.

Meanderings

By Mike Smith

AS IT SO often has been said, our government is not one of men, but one of laws.

Article Six, Clause Two of the Constitution states in part:

"This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof . . . shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution of laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

LETTER AND SPIRIT

In essence, this is the letter, and the spirit of the law. No one person or group is exempt from it; not even the individual who practices civil disobedience by trying to halt a troop train on private property because he considers the Vietnam war to be illegal and immoral.

In such an attempt to interfere with the transference of troops with a purpose to draw attention to an unpopular cause, a law has been broken. It is as simple as that.

And the anti-Vietnam cause is unpopular because, according to a September, 1965, report of the Harris Survey, 68 per cent of the nation believe that anti-Vietnam war picket groups are more dangerous to the country than any other political or professional group, within the United States, excluding American Communist Party members and people who do not believe in God.

Furthermore, only five per cent of the nation consider the anti-Vietnam war pickets more helpful to the country than any other professional or political group. Out of this five per cent, a fractional few are breaking the law because they consider it their right to demonstrate in any manner they choose, regardless.

DISRESPECT FOR GOVERNMENT

Such persons, and many of them are college students, are being disrespectful to our government, to our soldiers fighting in Southeast Asia and to our laws.

These picket groups receive a great deal of coverage in the city newspapers—which encourages them all the more. The general public who read the papers get the impression that this is something done only by college students.

One main reason why so many Latin governments fail is that their students riot and demonstrate, and sometimes overthrow them, every time they disagree with those in power.

However, disrespect for the law is not only involved in political issues and situations, it is just about everywhere — including to a degree, City College.

POLICE PRIME TARGET

The college's Campus Police force is often a prime target for criticism and snide remarks. A great many students at the college seem to think that this law force is a big joke, and they react accordingly.

Long before City College had a Campus Police force, students used to block driveway entrances and exits of parking lots, and park their cars on the sidewalks. There was no one around to control these minor infractions which caused big problems.

Today, and for a good many years, the Campus Police keep the parking lots clear from obstruction, and guard the cars and property within, from theft. They also maintain order at the dances, games and other college functions. If they were not really needed, they would not be here.

RESENTMENT OF AUTHORITY

But some students just resent authority. On one occasion, a campus cop politely asked a group of people to move from a particular section of the cafeteria because it was closing. This group steadfastly refused, and when they did move, they gave the campus cop a particularly bad time.

The Campus Police force is not here to harass the students of City College, and students are not here to harass them.

They are the law officers of the future, and this college as well as the rest of the nation are fortunate that there are men who are going to make a career out of protecting those very people who hate and distrust them.

A traffic light is just about the simplest law of all. It is there to protect you against the other guy, as well as to protect him against you. Practically every other law has the same goal.

Laws are necessary because they alone can preserve our freedom. That is why it is not so funny to laugh at those who consider the law serious.

Marching And Stage Bands Merge For Junior Rose Bowl At Pasadena

By Viggo Petersen

A merger between the marching band and the stage band is currently under consideration for representation of City College at the Pasadena Junior Rose Bowl and Disneyland, according to Art Samuel, director of both bands.

All two-year colleges from California are represented each year at the annual pageant; however this year, unlike previous years, the Associated Students will not be represented competitively, according to John Dunn, hotel and restaurant instructor and former director of the bands.

The Ram Marching Band was disbanded 15 years ago but was reactivated 12 years later under an unusual recruiting program initiated by Dunn who undertook leadership of the bands on a part-time basis.

Since there was no marching band to perform at football games, enthusiasm for the game became somewhat mediocre. Spurred on not only by his love for football but also for the spirit of the game, Dunn volunteered himself as cheer leader.

When this was met with jeers and cat-calls from the rooting section, Dunn simply asked if there was anyone in the audience who would like to give him some competition. A couple of volunteers stepped forward and consequently were selected to lead the rooting section in games to come.

Formation of the marching band and the assembly of song girls underwent the same procedure. When a handful of student musicians performing at games were also met with jeers and cat-calls, they were also asked if perhaps they felt their talents were superior.

The marching band is currently made up of 15 members all of whom have undergone strict auditions from Samuel, who took over the job from Dunn on a full-time basis. The band has attained enough prestige so that it now accompanies the football team both at home and road games and has represented City College for the past two years at the Pasadena Junior Rose Bowl.

Samuel stressed the fact that anyone interested in playing for the marching band or the stage band must audition with him and have had, preferably, experience with some musical instrument. All instruments are welcome, he said.

21 Students Win $4900 Worth Of H&R Scholarships

The awarding of 21 hotel and restaurant foundation scholarships was announced recently by Lawrence B. Wong, secretary of the H&R foundation scholarship committee.

Presentation of the awards, amounting to $4900, was made at a special assembly of the H&R department in Smith Hall October 6. Still more than $2300 in scholarships and prizes are to be made in December or during the Spring semester.

Eligible for the scholarships were any second, third or fourth semester H&R students carrying at least 12 units.

"The basis of selection was made on scholastic achievement, student leadership, performance in industry, performance in the department and personal need.

Following are the recipients of this semester's scholarships and the scholarship they received:

Howard Blethen, $250, Harvey M. Toy scholarship, fourth semester; Thomas Marquoit, $500, Harvey M. Toy scholarship, third semester; Michael Vidal, $500, Harvey M. Toy scholarship, second semester.

Walter And Everett Explain Latest Masculine Grooming

By John Lee

Twenty-five or thirty style-conscious men students watched an on-campus demonstration of the latest techniques of men's hair styling during College Hour on Columbus Day, October 12.

The demonstration, which was sponsored by the Associated Men Students, was given by Everett Hendrick and Walter Peters of Everett's Hair Styles, 1418 Ocean avenue.

Both Everett and Walter, the names which Hendrick and Peters work under at their shop, demonstrated the razor-cut and the blow wave set on live models selected from the audience.

On display at the demonstration were the latest grooming aids for men which included a non-greasy hair cream and a light hair spray designed for men only.

Everett remarked that the main consideration in styling a man's hair is that the hair cannot be combed against a natural wave without damaging the scalp.

Walter, who held the floor for the first part of the demonstration, stated that premature grayness is primarily a result of an iron deficient diet, and that baldness is due to poor blood circulation in the scalp.

Walter also said that men will wear their hair longer in the future because longer hair can be styled many different ways. However, he did not think that shoulder length hair would be a major style for men in the future.

Edison's New Look

Thomas Edison has a new look for Fall, 1965. That devilish green tint that fills his eyes is the result of vandalism by an unknown party. Some say the world is brighter on the other side of the street but to Edison, the courtyard statue, the world is green, man, all green.

Car Needs Permit Or Gets Citation

A total of 719 parking citations has been issued as of October 5 by the Campus Police, Bill Palamini, deputy chief of police, stated last week.

He explained that the greatest number of citations issued was the result of students parking in the faculty areas by Arts Hall and Smith Hall.

When asked what was being done to end the lack of parking spaces this semester, Palmini disclosed that the Campus Police are working with the city to obtain the second reservoir for student parking.

Palmini revealed that a rooftop patrol on campus buildings has been established again this semester to catch any tampering with cars and to control traffic.

Requirement of a valid parking permit for students desiring to use campus parking lots is now in effect. Permits may be obtained during College Hour in C-119.

Delaware was the first state to be admitted to the Union on December 7, 1787, and Hawaii the last, on August 21, 1959.

The Gem's Pearl Anniversary

Years Of Success For The Guardsman, College Sports

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a series of articles on the history of the college as reflected through the pages of The Guardsman.)

By Mike Smith, Managing Editor

The 1946-1949 period were great years for the Ram sports world. The track, basketball and football squads all won titles, and a couple of teams did it more than once.

After a 1947 football championship, The Guardsman began anxiously pushing for the college's own stadium. Although plans were to be drawn up in 1949 for a football field and a swimming pool, the grid stadium would not be built until 1960, and the on-the-campus swimming pool would still remain only a seemingly hopeless dream.

In 1948 the Ram football players saw no reason why they could not repeat their title of the past year (which they did) because a certain high school great had just enrolled in the college. This grid athlete had broken San Francisco's prep scoring record in 1947 while playing for Washington High. His name was Ollie Matson.

A more notable person came to City College the same year Matson enrolled, and The Guardsman was proud to announce it: Joe Rosenthal, whose claim to fame was his picture of the Marines raising the U.S. Flag on Iwo Jima, was going to teach photography.

The big story of 1948 was not Matson or Rosenthal though. It was the feud between the Student Council and the college's literary magazine, Forum. At one council meeting, the elected officials decided to cut the Forum funds to less than had been allocated the year before. The slice was favored by a 8-7 vote.

Most members of the Forum staff felt that they did not have enough funds to put out the magazine. The publication's adviser, quickly blasted the Student Council:

"The recent action taken by the Student Council regarding their refusal to appropriate sufficient funds for the publication of Forum Magazine was not only a flagrant example of this student government's attitude toward the cultural elements of this college, but also a blatant use of democratic procedures."

Following the Student Council blast, a petition to review the dispute with more than 1000 signatures, was submitted to the council. The council did review the dispute, and came up with a solution to the problem. Special tickets were put on sale for advance finance of Forum which was promised later. The plan worked very well.

The year 1949-50 was the beginning of a new era for The Guardsman, City College and its new president, Louis G. Conlan.

It was a period during which the college and its newspaper celebrated their 15th anniversary and it was a time the college achieved more national fame when its name was entered in the Encyclopedia Britanica Yearbook of 1950. It was also the year the Ram basketball team went to the National Junior College Basketball Finals in Kansas City.

Unfortunately, the initial year of the new decade was also a time when the campus was literally smeared with red and white paint by vandals; and it was a year of the first football game riot (at Monterey College) in which students from City College were involved.

The first two years of the fabulous 50's were somewhat discouraging ones for The Guardsman. In 1950, because of the Korean War, a budget cut reduced the paper's publication schedule from twice-a-week to weekly, a schedule the paper continues today. But one bright light shone when the Fall 1950 volume marked the 14th successive time The Guardsman won the All-American award, the highest rating possible a newspaper of this kind can achieve.

OLLIE MATSON helped the Rams win their second successive grid title in 1948.

Choral Concerts Start Thursday In College Theater

Despite an anticipated small audience, the college choral group will present the first in a series of College Hour concerts tomorrow in the college theater.

The program is directed by William Grothkopp with piano accompaniment by Robert Sheldon of the Conservatory of Music.

Featured soloists from the Men's Glee Club are Donald White, bass; Steve Bowes, baritone, and Walter Hight, tenor.

Soloists from the Women's Choir are Gail Kubik who will perform an American folk song sketch called Little Bird, Little Bird and Heiter Villa-Lobos who will sing The Sewing Girls.

The A Cappella Choir will close the program with Handel's Music, Spread By Voice which, according to Gilda Galope is "an experience to sing as well as to hear."

Miss Galope, spokesman for the concert publicity and program committee, said that in past semesters the choral performances were attended by very few students. She attributed this audience scarcity to the fact that most people were just not aware of the concerts.

However, with the help of the rest of the committee namely, Shirley Shim, Miss Galope hopes to have given enough publicity for a better turnout at tomorrow's performance.

Changes In C-Hour Meeting Rooms Set

Eleven clubs will have new meeting rooms during College Hour next Tuesday, October 26.

Ram Gridders Smother Gladiators, 41-6

By G. Frank Cooney

A dazzling ground game coupled to a net-like defense led the City College of San Francisco gridders to a 41-6 uprising over the Chabot Gladiators in last Friday's getaway game.

For the second time in as many games, O. J. Simpson belted his way for three touchdowns. Simpson carried nine times for 129 yards.

This latest victory makes the Rams "the team to beat" in the Golden Gate Conference.

Although the final score leaves evidence of a "laughter," a laughing situation did not materialize until late in the game.

Leading only 13-0 at the half time intermission, the Ram lead was sliced to 13-6 soon after the third quarter got underway.

Quick to realize the situation was O. J. Simpson, who had already scored twice for the Rams.

On a third and two play the call went to Simpson who bolted his way over right tackle into daylight. From there O. J. got terrific blocks from Dennie Sullivan and Chris Davis and swerved down the left sidelines to outrun Gladiator defenders for a 71-yard score.

This was the third time in three games that Simpson scored on the Ram's first offensive "set" in the third quarter.

Defensively the Rams allowed the Gladiators to chalk up 238 yards rushing. But whenever the chips were down the Ram line thwarted off the Chabot attackers.

At one point, with the score 20-6, the Rams frustrated a Chabot drive on the Ram six yard line. On two other occasions the Gladiators were halted inside the twenty.

Chris Davis and Dwight Tucker contained Chabot quarterback Jerry Gaylord so that he could get off only three completed passes. The Gladiator aerial attack netted a mere 8 yards.

Another factor in holding Chabot's Gaylord was tackle Jerd Lapham, who threw the quarterback for big losses several times.

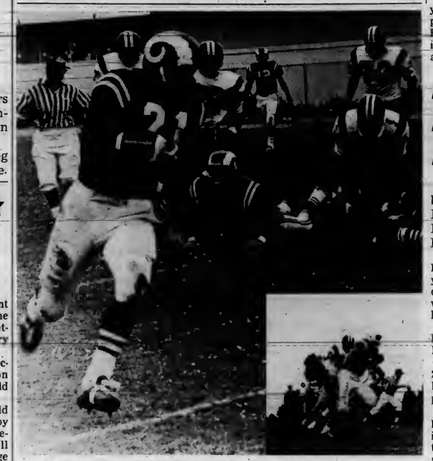
The game finally broke wide open in the fourth quarter.

Bill Gianquinto, who completed four of nine passes for 81 yards on the day, sent Ron Fassler streaking. Bill then dropped a perfect pass over the defense. Fassler romped in easily.

Gianquinto then held on the PAT try. The point was good — but Bill wasn't.

On the play a Gladiator bounced on Gianquinto's foot and a large bruise resulted. Bill is expected to be all right for next week's game.

Bob Lee then took over an inspired offense and things just wouldn't slow down. Lee capped a 51-yard binge in eight plays with a one-yard dance in which he lost the ball in mid-air but recaptured the skin for a score.



The last Ram score of the day was definitely the most dramatic.

With the clock showing only 46 seconds left Boh Lee, with the strong wind at his back, unleashed a bullet towards Reeves Moses.

Moses made an unbelievable, one-handed, behind the back stab at the ball and held on. Fred Loville then passed to Lee for two points.

San Francisco churned out a game total of 420 yards, with 265 on the ground, and 155 in the air.

Although Chabot racked up 238 yards in their rushing attack, their passing game was stopped cold by the Ram defense. The Gladiators turned in a net total of eight yards for their aerials.

Spikers Place Tenth At Sacto, Meet Diablo Next

The City College cross country team, with two of its top runners still out of shape, managed to finish number 10 out of 18 teams entered in the Sacramento Invitational meet, held October 9 in Sacramento.

The main reason for the team's performance was that Greg Bolich, one of the top runners on the squad, dropped out of college. Bill Long and Alex Vosher were one and two, respectively, for the Rams.

Coach Lou Vasquez pointed out that Vosher was still out of shape, but he and George Ferguson should be a pair of fine runners.

The cindermen will meet a very tough Diablo Valley team today. According to Vasquez, Diablo Valley is rated second in the Golden Gate Conference behind Foothill.

Diablo Valley boasts two very strong competitors in Dennis Schanz and Bob Reeves. Backing them up are Ron Elliot, Dave Maguire and George Kennedy.

The Gladiators have already taken a triangle meet with Hartnell and West Valley.

Vasquez is optimistic, however, about the Diablo Valley meet. "With Vosher and Ferguson out of shape our only chance is to run the best we ever have," he commented.

AMS Begins Track Program, Petition Deadline Friday

Stan Angel, Associated Men Student president, announced today that the deadline for filing intramural basketball, and track and field team entry petitions is this Friday, October 22.

For the first time in intramural activity history, the AMS organization will attempt to install track and field competition into its program.

As in basketball, track teams would be composed of teams represented by either the Fraternity, Club or Independent leagues. The track meets will be held during three specific College Hours on dates to be given in the near future, Angel said.

All general rules that apply to the intramural basketball squads will also apply to the track squads. Furthermore, no varsity track members will be allowed to participate.

One of the main reasons the track program was enacted was to introduce and encourage more men to go out for the sport in the spring. Among the events in the track department will be the 220, 440, 880 and the mile.

As usual all basketball games will be scheduled on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Four games will be played each night, in the men's and women's gymnasiums, with game times beginning at 7 and 8 p.m.

During Sportsnight, the top basketball teams of each particular league will vie for the championship. There will also be boxing matches held this same night. The exact date will be announced later.

Monterey Hosts Sportsday Fest

Members of the Recreation Association will have a chance Saturday to participate in a Sports Day at Monterey.

Free transportation to and from Monterey will be provided. There will be buses leaving the college at 5:30 a.m. and they will return at approximately 5:30 p.m. Members must bring their own lunch, swimsuit and Associated Student card, RA President Pam Maul emphasized.

Many activities will be offered for those members wishing to participate. RA members will have their choice of coed volleyball, archery, badminton, tennis, golf, swimming, bowling and fencing.

RAMBLINGS

Gridders Different Team Against Owls

By William Pates

WHAT A difference a week makes!

The Ram grid team that battered the nationally-ranked Foothill Owls here October 8 bore little resemblance to the squad that staggered to victory over a palsied San Joaquin Delta club October 1.

Penalties and the like, so consistent in their prevalence against the Mustangs, were conspicuous by their absence.

A scrambling defense, which seemed incapable of completing a set of downs without a penalty the week before, limited the Owls to 96 yards on the ground, although the leaky secondary allowed Owl quarterback Bill Lerch to complete several long gainers.

All defensive errors were nullified by the fine running of O. J. Simpson who set a Golden Gate Conference record for the most yards gained in a single contest with 207 in 16 carries.

Simpson established himself, at least for the time being, as the club's number one offensive weapon as he made "td" romps of 57, 61 and 19 yards, respectively. The 19-yarder was especially impressive as a great piece of heads up football.

Simpson was penned in against the sidelines, reversed his field and easily went in for the score behind a contingent of Ram linemen.

In all the City College offense picked up 390 yards, 207 of those by Simpson alone, compared with the Owls' 243-yard total.

IT TOOK CITY COLLEGE 17 long, hard years to win its first soccer championship and the 1965 club isn't about to give it up yet. There is a lot of catching up to do.

These few facts just about sum up the college's present status in the field of soccer competition.

Since the first title was captured in 1959, Ram soccer teams have averaged but one loss a year and have either won or tied for the conference championship.

City College soccermen will be attempting to win their third straight state soccer championship this year, hopefully against the same Victor Valley College squad they romped over for their two previous state titles.

The team that won't be beat can't be beat—except by a better team.

League-Leading Booters Face Vikings In Rematch Today

Riding the wave of a four game winning streak, the Ram soccer team will host a disappointing Diablo Valley squad in an afternoon contest at Balboa Park.

The Vikings received a 10-0 shellacking from the powerful Ram offense in their first meeting of league play October 6. Today's contest figures to be a repeat of that meeting.

Following the Diablo game, the Rams travel to Sacramento for an October 22 game with the new University of California at Davis team. The contest will mark the Rams' first look at the Aggies in this young 1965 season.

Oakland's strong Merritt College will then round out the Rams' week schedule with an afternoon contest at Balboa, October 25. This contest lost some of its meaning last week when it was announced that Oakland had been using high school players as part of the team.

Such violation of league rules would mean that the Vikings are declared out of official conference competition, Ram coach Roy Diederichsen disclosed.

The Ram booters disposed of strong league contender College of San Mateo, 4-1, October 11.

The Rams are thus on top of the league as expected with an unblemished record after four games. San Mateo usually offers the locals its best competition on the two-year college level.

All-American Alex Mendieta highlighted the offensive game by scoring all four of the Red and White goals. Envir Safir and Pietro Rossi were the Ram defensive standouts.

The first goal was scored on a Ron Van Velhuysen pass which Mendieta put into the net. Mendieta made it 2-0 on a direct kick over three Bulldog defenders. San Mateo made it 2-1, but Mendieta raided the hosts twice before the end of the game.

Mendieta's third score was a 12-yard shot in the lower left corner of the Bulldog defender.

The Rams', and Mendieta's, last goal came on a 20-yard boot that skidded the top of the wooden framing and bounced in. Ben Boryankano, San Francisco's South African import, was a great asset to the Ram offense in the second half as his fine passing set up many Red and White scoring opportunities.

In a game last Thursday at Menlo Park the locals made it 4-0 in Conference action by defeating the hosts, 6-2, after being held to a 2-1 score in the first half. The Rams played disorganized soccer and did not measure up to their standards in any way during the first half of action.

Safir with a tally, and excellent passing was the key man in the Ram victory. Safir scored the first Red and White goal on a perfect pass from All-American center Mendieta.

Menlo made it a brand new game on a shuffle in front of the Ram goal. Rossi made it 2-1 in the visitors' favor on a hard ground shot through the line of Menlo defenders.

In the second half, the locals played up to expectations, as they scored three goals in less then four minutes on the helpless hosts. George Fernandez made it 3-1 on a lob pass from Safir. Seconds later Boikinyo took advantage of a loose ball in front of the Menlo goal and put it safely in the opposing nets.

Tom Samuelsen, playing with a sore leg, made it 5-1 on another beautiful Safir feed. The hosts answered with a drive through the confused Ram defense to hit paydirt. Mendieta ended the day's scoring with a 25-yard shot that skidded along the ground, hit the lower part of the goal post, bounced off and went into the nettings past the chanceless Menlo cage defender.

Bob Lee then took over an inspired offense and things just wouldn't slow down. Lee capped a 51-yard binge in eight plays with a one-yard dance in which he lost the ball in mid-air but recaptured the skin for a score.

The last Ram score of the day was definitely the most dramatic.

With the clock showing only 46 seconds left Boh Lee, with the strong wind at his back, unleashed a bullet towards Reeves Moses.

Moses made an unbelievable, one-handed, behind the back stab at the ball and held on. Fred Loville then passed to Lee for two points.

San Francisco churned out a game total of 420 yards, with 265 on the ground, and 155 in the air.

Although Chabot racked up 238 yards in their rushing attack, their passing game was stopped cold by the Ram defense. The Gladiators turned in a net total of eight yards for their aerials.

Rams Will Face Tough Merritt Defensive Unit

An evenly balanced Ram football team will take on arch-rival Merritt College of Oakland at Frank Youell Field at 2:30 p.m. Friday.

In their first league encounter, the Rams outgained the Foothill Owls, 397 yards to 243 yards, and rang up 19 first downs to the visitors' 13. The defense was also impressive, especially in the later stages.

Ram Halfback O. J. Simpson established a new league single game rushing record of 199-yards in 15 carries. (Ram statistics credited Simpson with 207-yards in 16 carries). Simpson also leads all scorers with 18 points.

DAVIS REPEACES COLOMBO

In the league opener the offensive line started slowly but became quite impressive in the later minutes of the third quarter. Tackle Mike Taylor and guard Rich Colombo were both playing with injuries that would have kept lesser men out of action.

It might also be added that defensive end Chris Davis filled in for Colombo while the latter was getting his wounds treated by the Rams' new trainer, Norm Travis.

To give all the credit to the offense would be unjust. They capitalized several times on situations set up by an alert Ram defense.

Tackles Chris Panagotacos and Jerd Lapham each recovered Owl fumbles, while defensive back Pat Kearns intercepted a pass to set up the Rams' fourth score of the day.

The whole defense was outstanding but none deserved more credit than defensive ends Davis and Dwight Tucker. Tucker and Recves Moses accounted for seven of the Rams' 11 pass completions.

In Merritt, the Rams will face a tough defensive unit, and an offensive unit that is still a puzzler. The Bears opened their season with a 19-12 victory over West Valley College.

They then traveled to Norwalk, California, and took on Cerritos College, number two ranked in the National Grid Wire. Merritt lost, 33-0, and it is believed that the game had a psychological effect on the team.

Merritt opened its league season with an 02 loss to San Mateo, a team Merritt was favored to beat. The game was the lowest scoring game in league history.

LEAGUE RESULTS CONFUSING

Results of the first week of league play confused many coaches and players alike.

Diablo Valley College, which was ranked 12 nationally, traveled to San Jose to take on the winless Jaguars. But the Vikings got the tables reversed on them and lost, 20-12.

Chabot beat Contra Costa, 7-0, in a real tough game of breaks.

The Contra Costans hadn't won a game but gave the Gladiators all they could handle before losing their first-string quarterback early in the third quarter.

For Foothill, after losing to the Rams, 31-20, it will be an uphill battle. The Owls were ranked second nationally after their opening victory over American River, but slipped to 14 in the ranking before the league opener.

But Foothill coach Bill Abbey remarked to Ram coaches after the game: "Don't slip, because if you do, we'll be right there along side of you."

Indian Consul Baht Discusses War Over Kashmir

By Giuseppe Greco

A dissertation on the causes of the Pakistan-Indian war was held in Science Hall October 14, when Janki M. Baht, Indian consul for public relations, produced reasons on behalf of his country to explain the answers of the rather complicated situation created recently by Indian and Pakistan clashes.

"Perhaps one of the strongest causes of this war has been the basic difference of ideology between the Indian and Pakistani people, but I see the claim of India upon Kashmir as a constitutionally legal right," Baht stated.

Baht referred the audience to some background to pose the problem in an easier and clearer way to understand.

In the 1850's India was socially, economically, politically and ethically divided under the rigid rule of the English governorate which was safeguarded by a military force.

Various attempts at mutiny were started now and then by Hindus and Muslims during the nineteenth century, but the movement for independence did not really start until the early 1900's; already the English were prepared for a transfer of power, even though the Indians were politically split in two factions. But problems of giving power to still politically unprepared people subsisted.

After World War II an English cabinet committee was sent to India to discuss the possible political and constitutional future of the country.

In 1947 India became politically independent but, because of clashes between Hindus and Muslims, Pakistan became a completely independent state, though geographically divided in two—West and East Pakistan.

In between lies a fertile valley, Kashmir, about 1000 miles long and 200 miles wide, and during the following years, several conflicts were fought over it.

Kashmir had common borders with each nation. In this very mountaneous country people had struggled for independence since the 1930's and while the Indians were fighting against the English, in Kashmir people fought against the oppression of rulers and maharajas.

"Many indeed were the land owners and unbearable were oppression and injustice," the India consul declared.

After the partition of India, Kashmir happened to be the theater of contention between India and Pakistan. In that instance the maharaja was forced to make an important decision: he must join politically and constitutionally, either India or Pakistan.

India agreed to this with only one exception. Kashmir had to release all political and religious prisoners.

Meanwhile, disorders were registered in Kashmir, instigated—so was the common belief—by Pakistani elements. Consequently the maharaja of Kashmir asked India for military aid. The Indian government replied that no help would be granted until Kashmir signed the agreement.

Kashmir became an integral part of India, while Pakistan strongly denied the responsibility for the late uprising; but Pakistan troops were localized on the boundaries of Kashmir and Pakistan. The excuse was self-defense.

Finally the United Nations sent observers. The tension was at last released, until August 15, 1965. That very day probably 3000 troops passed the line and penetrated Kashmir.

Because of the difficult geography of this region, these troops would infiltrate everywhere so that it was extremely difficult to localize them. On September 1, Pakistan troops attacked India with full force.

At this point, Baht emphasized the fact that legally and constitutionally, Kashmir is part of India because of the agreement of 1948.

"Indeed," he said, "Kashmir is built upon indissoluble democratic principles."

The maharaja of Kashmir was deposed in respect of this dogma and replaced by a local government which does not have much power—concentrated instead in the hands of the prime minister—and a local legislative assembly.

"Therefore, a democratic system has been established," Baht related, "even though it has often been said that these people are not fit for democracy."

To prove the contrary, Baht produced facts. Every man and woman over 21 years of age has the right to vote, he explained, and in 1961, 61 million people went to vote in Kashmir.

Asked what had happened to East Pakistan, Baht replied, "No military action has been taken in consideration of the fact that this part of Pakistan has practically no military force, and therefore is unarmed and defenseless."

The consul's visit here was sponsored by the International Relations Club which has scheduled a panel discussion of the subject during College Hour tomorrow. Panel leaders will be students from India and Pakistan.

'South Pit' Conversion For Parking Facility Infeasible

By Thomas Young

Hopes for an additional parking facility in the reservoir on the south side of the pit were quashed last week when Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, declared the proposal infeasible.

He said it would be very difficult to develop a parking facility such as the one in the north side reservoir.

"Conditions would make it extremely dangerous to drive along the narrow roadways rimming the reservoir, for the possibilities of cars going over the edge would be too great," Anderson asserted, "and the expense of building entrance and exit ramp facilities would be too costly."

In a recent city bond issue however, the City Water Commission received money to use in filling and making use of the south reservoir, he added.

"The commission," he said, "aware that it must cover the reservoir to prevent unwanted foreign matter from entering, expressed an interest in using the top of the coverage for recreational facilities such as tennis and basketball courts.

"But," he added, "the college hopes the commission will be willing to build at least half of the covering structure strong enough to be used as a parking lot and let the other half be used for recreational facilities."

Anderson also drew attention to the fact that if a structure strong enough to be used as a parking lot were to be built over the present reservoir parking facility, enough space could be regained from its slanting walls to increase the present capacity by at least 500 cars.

"Whatever is done toward added parking facilities," Anderson commented, "the college will possibly have to assist financially with the Water Commission in what is decided."

Eto, Japanese Koto Player, Entertains In Theater Concert

Kimio Eto, world famous koto player, will present a series of selections in the theater during College Hour tomorrow.

Eto, who is blind, has been playing the koto since he was 8. At the age of 11 he wrote his first noteworthy composition. A year later he received his teaching mastership from the late Michio Miyagi.

Eto is a three-time winner of his nation's highest award for koto composition and artistry. He is also a life member of the Imperial Court of Musicians.

Among his best known performances were an appearance at Carnegie Hall, a solo recital at the Philharmonic Hall of Lincoln Center, the world premiere performance of Henry Cowells' Concerto for Koto and Orchestra as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra, and concerts with the Honolulu and Seattle Symphony Orchestras.

The koto is a 13-stringed Japanese instrument, comparable to the western piano. Presently the instrument is called a zither. It originated in Japanese mythology, in reference to the legendary creation of the Japanese sun goddess.

It is now increasing in popularity all over the world, especially in the west, with the renewed popularity of the guitar.

Eto has been acclaimed "the finest koto ist of his generation" by the Nippon Times.

San Jose State Abandons Engineering Qualifier

Engineering students, transferring to San Jose State College as juniors, are no longer required to take the qualifying examination given by the division of engineering there, counselor Howard Schoon reported yesterday.

Schoon explained that San Jose requires all entering students to take the American College Testing Program battery of tests, better known as the ACT, before entering that college.

Two transcripts are still required for admission; one high school transcript and one from City College.

Schoon emphasized that students should send transcripts from any other colleges they have attended, such as summer session at San Francisco State, to San Jose State soon.

"Students planning to enter San Jose State are judged for admission from grades received at City College," Schoon said.

Convention Delegate

Ken Molino, the college photography department's photo journalism instructor, was invited last week to participate in the Eighth Annual National Press Photographers Association Photo-Journalism Seminar.

The seminar will be held in Burlingame on November 6 and 7.

Molino's subject will be Editor or Customer. He will show the difference between photography for editors and photography for customers.

Molino, a former student at the college, was President of Alpha Gamma Sigma in 1953, and was also a commencement speaker.

As a photography major here, he gained practical experience working as a photographer and as Feature Editor and Assistant Managing Editor of The Guardsman.

Formerly, Molino was with the San Rafael Independent Journal. He presently operates his own commercial studio.

This seminar is also known as the Flying Seminar. It covers the United States but does not visit the same city twice during three years.

Men from all over the country will speak, representing such organizations as General Electric, NBC-TV, National Geographic Magazine and United Press International.

The list of topics to be discussed includes Tools And Techniques, Don't Be A Button Pusher, and TV Photo-Journalism.

Registration fee for students is $3.

Symphony Ticket Sales Set Record

Although 75 season tickets to the Symphony Forum have already been purchased by students at the college, the largest number ever sold to students here, a limited number of tickets is still available for sale, according to Meyer M. Cahn, music instructor.

The tickets, which are available in the finance office in Smith Hall, are at half price for any interested student who wishes to attend the San Francisco Symphony season at the War Memorial Opera House.

The symphony series features many famous works and concert artists including an all-Brahms program on the opening night, December 1, the world premiere of the John Kennedy Symphony No. 1 on January 5, conductor Igor Stravinsky on February 23, and world renowned violinist Isaac Stern on March 9.

The symphony series will continue in 1966 with a variety of performances including not only concerts but guest artists as well. Famous selections of such master as Tschaikowsky, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Prokofieff, Mozart and Brahms are scheduled.

The deadline for purchase of tickets through the Symphony Forum is Tuesday, November 2.

Ad Art Schedules Curtis

James Curtis of the H. S. Crocker Company, will be the guest speaker for the advertising art department at 10 a.m. Friday in S-136.

Curtis will discuss creative planning for printing. His occupation, that of estimator, is one of the many fields which an advertsing major may enter.

William Svabek, graphic arts instructor here, is in charge of speaker arrangement for the advertising art department.

Council Picks Delegates To State Capitol Convention

By Rich Heintz

Three representatives, Biff Barnes, finance chairman; Tom Cloney, a member of council, and Mary Mauer, Associated Women Student president, were appointed last week at a Student Council meeting as delegates to the California Junior College Student Government Association State Convention scheduled to meet in Sacramento November 18 to 20.

The representatives were chosen by a secret ballot election in which all the representatives of the Associated Students, who were present, voted.

Other nominees for the appointments were Earl Braverman, Sophomore class president; Joanne Johnson, AS card sales chairman, and Stan Angel, Associated Men Student president.

Dennis Sweeney, Associated Student president, withheld the name of an alternate who would substitute for anyone of the representatives who might not be able to attend the convention.

Before the election, Doug Bianchi, council member, asked Sweeney why there should be a secret ballot.

"The manner in which delegates are appointed," Sweeney replied, "depends upon the discretion of the chairman."

Most of the candidates, before a vote was called, based their qualifications upon past records of participation in student government and experience at previous Area Six conferences within CJCSGA.

In other action, Student Council denied a request by Angel to allocate $79.42 to the AMS, 3-5-2.

The supplementary budget request, Angel said, was for an intramural track meet which was not included in last semester's AMS budget.

Angel explained that, "the track meet would be open to any student on campus who possessed an AS card and who had signed up previously."

Ernie Woodcock, council member, pointed out that "the interest this semester is not that great in the intramural competition."

Angel was questioned about the turnout so far for the basketball league competition.

"There are presently only nine petitions in to compete in the league," Angel said, "and it looks as though there will be no Fraternity league competition."

He added that there was a total of 21 teams competing in the league last semester.

Jim Soletti, council member and also chairman of the committee appointed to revise the AS Constitution, announced that the committee has decided to rewrite the constitution completely rather than add amendments to the present one.

Sandy Sager, election commissioner, announced that she has received four petitions for the two vacant seats on Student Council, which will be voted on next Monday.

'Reformers Risk Loss Of Freedom' —Stanford Dean

Students who seek social or political reforms are forced to make commitments, which in turn restrict their intellectual freedom, H. Donald Winbigler, dean of students at Stanford University, told Area Six delegates at a meeting at Menlo College October 16.

Dean Winbigler was the keynote speaker at the conference, a regional part of the California Junior College Student Government Association.

Student government and its policies were the subjects for Dean Winbigler's address, during which he said, "I'm like the Baptist minister who, before starting his sermon, stated that he would like to say something important.

"At Stanford we have what could be called the cream of all student governments. Our government governs only student affairs and student activities.

"If students get involved in political reforms, they remove themselves from the rest of the students for reasons of their own personal satisfaction.

"Some students have an idea that they can force their ideals on others, but it is not right for those students who believe so wholeheartedly in an ideal to trample on the rights of others, Winbigler emphasized.

San Francisco delegates were Dennis Sweeney, Associated Student president; Earl Braverman, Helen Bundros, Tom Cloney, Dave Hohman, Eva Dinese Watkins and Linda Castro.

Percy Jones, Glen Fahs, Diane Burnick, Ernest Woodcock, Mike Nygren, Gary Freund, Sandy Sager, Kathy Kidd, Ron Appel, Janet Ottone, Stan Angel and Steve Schroffel rounded out the delegation.

Other colleges attending the Area Six conference were San Mateo, Menlo, Foothill, West Valley, San Jose, Gavilan, Cabrillo and Monterey Peninsula.

Area Six officers, all from the host college, Menlo, who officiated at the conference were Jerry Guffey, president; Joe Lerer, vice president; Alan Brown, secretary; Ted Betz, treasurer, and Rich Pfitzer, parliamentarian. No resolutions were adopted for future consideration.

Democracy: The Opportunity To Express Opinions Freely

DEMOCRACY MEANS rule by the people; it protects the rights of all the people. Democracy gives people the freedom of speech and with it comes the opportunity to speak on any issue without being prosecuted. At a rally here sponsored by the Hillel Foundation two weeks ago, this right was ridiculed.

Frank Bardacke, a graduate student at the University of California invited here by an on-campus organization, made his way to the platform and tried to explain why he believes the reasons for America's presence in Vietnam do not make sense. Audience response was rude, fraught with booing and shouting.

He and other invited speakers were literally driven from the free speech platform by heckling.

It would seem that this type of response was nothing more than juvenile behavior on the part of students. Attitudes of this type are extremely prevalent in our society today and each time they occur, a small portion of what we call democracy is taken away.

It is accepted in a democracy that dissenting opinions and attitudes by others should be expressed publicly. But the methods of response, used by students of this campus October 14, were certainly not admirable.

This type of attitude has never solved any problem in the past and only tends to worsen a situation. Therefore, it is time that students on this campus wake to the problems as they present themselves and, instead of dealing with them in a haphazard, childish way, take the true course of action that brings results, not delays.

When people resort to egg-throwing as a means of expressing their feelings, everyone must take a long, hard look to find out why.

A recent editorial in the San Francisco Chronicle commends the city's police department for allowing a "peace march" to take place recently. The halting of a march by the Oakland police department was not commended.

To solve any type of problem, both sides of the dispute must be recognized. Only one side was "heard" on this campus.

With this type of reception, only more determined efforts—efforts that in many cases escalate to undesirable proportions—develop, and the result is a situation needed by no one today.

In the future, all speakers accepted on this campus should be given equal rights, no matter what their appearance, their opinions and/or the topic of discussion. Careful, thoughtful examination usually leads to a reasonable solution and today, what we need more than anything else is the right answer.

The speech platform erected on this campus was put there to allow students and others to express their opinions. No one has the right to infringe on these rights; for without them, democracy cannot exist.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

• Jab At Immaturity

Editor, The Guardsman:

A shocking thing happened at City College today (Oct. 14). I was awakened to a rushing wave of urgency. I suddenly became conscious of a repulsive truth. I have sat through innumerable lectures which have expounded the dangers of complacency in a democratic society.

Regretfully, I'm guilty of disregarding these warnings. The jeers and egg-throwing at a rally October 14 were significant enough to reveal to me that there is something drastically wrong with our society.

These signs of social deviation angered me enough to make me aware of the decadent nature of my own apathy. Until now my opposition to the war in Vietnam had been compounded with the same irrational emotions as the hecklers that so repulsed me.

Judgments made with somewhat the same misconceptions of good and evil. A brand of morality predicated by the authoritarian figures I have come to follow. Personality variants have led us to differing conceptions of the means to justice, but the paths to both moral stands were strikingly similar.

I have had great doubts as to the validity of my position because of this. The hecklers helped to clarify the morality of my decisions, raising them from the realm of intuitive judgment to that of a conscious rationale. For the first time, I clearly see the subversions of man and his society.

Paradoxically they are his misbegotten creatures. All important, I begin to see them, and ask why.

What motivated these self-righteous exponents of "horse-opera"; justice? Erroneously situated, could these egg-throwers push the button as easily as they hurled their eggs? It seems well within their insensitive means to lower the scale of human dignity one step further from the debasing act of egg-throwing at and calling to the ugliest indignity—genocide.

It wasn't such a great transition for the German people of the Thirties. In a time when it is far too easy to destroy, we cannot continue with the socially compulsive drive to rid man of the complexities of his environment.

The simplicity of pushing the button has been given us. The answer is accounted for, but with no question. An answer that has no question? It is an answer for those that fear to question.

Fear has pushed its way into our every process of thought. How, and at what point has society created these trembling figures so afraid of the majority of their own minds? Is mental anguish that gruesome a confrontation that it is to be ignored?

My appeal is simple: Watch them. Prepare yourself with a conviction that is wholly yours. The frustration of our position will be that much more tolerable.

• Another Jab

Editor, The Guardsman:

I have never seen such a bunch of sissies as I saw sitting on the grassy slope jeering October 14. That "audience" serves more than anything to verify the analysis that ROC and other groups have made of this "campus."

Relief For Campus Police Is Just A Parking Lot Away

The Campus Police officer, this semester, has been subjected to more headaches with relief harder to find.

With the campus bulging out all over, a new high of 2200 parking permits was issued by mid-September, 400 over last semester, and such a record has not helped the law's condition.

The police directing traffic on campus are the first barriers confronting the pain which seems to creep up on them from all directions.

The first signs of worry start around 8 a.m., weekdays, on the main avenues of attack leading to the campus.

The tension-pressured nerves, Judson, Phelan and Ocean avenues, all flow into the main center of relief, the four student parking areas.

But these centers of relief, the parking areas, are gradually becoming inadequate as these pain-causers are building immunities against any relieving agent.

Or simply, the cars are starting to out-number the parking places.

Pressure increases, according to Larry Lawson, criminology instructor here, when on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 8 a.m., 1100 extra students at that time of the morning flow on campus from the G5A-B classes.

To help buffer the stress, the Campus Police have placed eight men around the campus at this time in the morning to help pedestrian traffic.

One, for example, is at the entrance to Cloud Circle, two at the California Book Co., one at the Riordan crosswalk.

An added ingredient to this buffer combination is in the two tablets which the campus police can drop on their desks for added relief.

One tablet contains the reports by the officers, testifying to the fine cooperation they have been receiving from students; the other shows how traffic tickets issued on campus so far are of no great increase, despite the greater number of cars.

But no mere buffering compound could help "like Extra Ceddlin room would." —R. H.

Campus Name Game Exercise

With campus enrollment near 11,000, the City College roster this semester offers a wider variety of name-game selections for enterprising students trying to make the right contacts in life.

Those who seek to advance in politics, might find it useful to look up Robert Kennedy, R. Nixon, Ronald Reagan or John Warren. If these names do not fit their style, there are eight Washingtons, four Adams, one Taft, one Polk, six Hayes, 68 Johnsons but only one Lincoln. No Goldwater is listed.

Speaking of Lincoln, the campus boasts two Ferraris, six Fords and one Olds.

Those heading for Hollywood can pick up pointers from J. Nabors, J. Lewis or George Burns. Richard Kimble has been reported to be on campus, but he is keeping out of sight.

For those who are looking for employment, the campus offers 12 Bakers, 13 Butlers, five Carpenters, 13 Cooks, three Farmers, two Porters and three Singers.

On the international scene there are four Abdullahs, 93 Wongs, 15 Rodriguez, Three French, two Giovannoni and four Castros.

Smiths and Joneses? There are 68 Smiths, 44 Jones and 102 Lees.

For the pious, there are five Lukes, one Matthew, four Moses, one Abe and lastly, one Amen. —A. R.

Draft Ups Thirst For Learning

By Peter Dorn

IT'S DIFFICULT TO actually prove the accelerated military draft is responsible for the outstanding overall class attendance record that is prevalent this semester; nevertheless, some faculty members do point to the draft as possible attendance incentive.

The number of full-time students and class "stayins" has also, in proportion to enrollment, increased over that of the previous semester; but again, there is no proof that the draft was a catalyst to this dilatation in the quest for higher learning.

One could as easily say that the extension of Colombian coffee bean production is in proportion to, and, hence, is probably responsible for, the increase in insomnia cases in this country as he could say that the draft has brought about intensive study habits.

Whether Juan Valdez and all the others like him should be strung up or not must be answered in the heart of each reader, individually.

Of course, Juan Valdez doesn't have to stay up on that hill all his life and sort out coffee beans with his hands; he has other alternatives, and he knows it.

He can quit his "national defense" job and still avoid induction by feigning idiocy, epilepsy, or homosexuality, or by presenting phony affidavits of afflictions from a friendly doctor.

But, after weighing all the possibilities for dodging the National Guard, Juan feels that he might just as well stay up on that hill as long as the local draft board keeps looking for cannon fodder, after all, his position in the coffee bean game is really quite honorable, as opposed to the alternatives that he has.

He's contributing to his nation's economy, he's learning a trade, and he's keeping millions of Americans up all night with insomnia. They can go draft someone else.

Ill-Informed Bay Pickets Hamper Peace

By B.T.

IT IS DIFFICULT to ignore the frightening events that have occurred in the East Bay. It is even more difficult to try to understand WHY so many college students choose to forget the meaning of patriotism.

Is a person square if he's loyal to his country?

WHY do students try to interfere with troop movements? Why do some students persist in defying the laws and burn their draft cards? Does this open defiance prove anything to loyal citizens?

College students are supposedly the enlightened individuals who are sharp enough to recognize double talk and fancy words. On both sides. They are supposed to be liberal thinkers who display intelligence.

Why then, are they unable to sift out evil antipatriotic ideas? Can they not recognize the fact that some of these ideas are sometimes taught under the guise of armchair philosophy?

Surely, they are mature enough to know that there is no Utopia. Or is it excitement and adventure they are looking for?

If so, these students should take time out for reflection and allegiance.

During World War II, a man named Ernie Pyle attracted a large audience with his newspaper columns. He reported the war from the battle zones. His work was simple and clear, and he won the Pulitzer prize.

Pyle wrote of the GIs, and he wanted to be the last war correspondent. What he saw of war filled him with repulsion.

"For some of us, the war has already gone on too long," he said, "our feelings have been wrung and drained; they cringe from the effort of coming alive again. Even the approach of the end seems to have brought little inner elation. It has brought only a tired sense of relief.

"I do not pretend that my own feeling is the spirit of our armies. If it were, we probably would not have had the power to win. Most men are stronger. Our soldiers still can hate, or glorify, or be glad, with true emotion.

"For them death has a pang, and victory a sweet scent. But for me war has become a flat, black depression without highlights, a revulsion of the mind and an exhaustion of the spirit.

"It is the emergency of war our nation's powers are unbelievable. The strength we have spread around the world is appalling even to those who make up the individual cells of that strength.

"I am sure that in the past two years I have heard soldiers say a thousand times, 'If only we could have created all this energy for something good.' But we rise above our normal powers only in times of destruction," Pyle wrote.

He was killed on the Pacific front. His words of two decades ago are very real today. There was, and is no question about loyalty and treason—only duty to one's country.

Fault-finders and confused people can only hamper or delay a peace. A handful of ill-informed people can only undermine the morale of our troops.

Meanderings

By Mike Smith

THIS MONTH, college students across the nation once again staged their protests and demonstrations against the United States and its defense of and presence in South Vietnam.

The hard core of these marchers, the critics of our social mores, the modern rebel, would have you believe that he is a rebel with a mission, a mission for betterment of all mankind.

He presents to society a physical picture of himself which is repugnant. He is against all convention, and he defies authority, telling us that there is a better way. But he continues his way of life as an outside rebel by being unnecessarily unwashed and unkempt in appearance and mannerism.

It becomes rather obvious that this type of individual's only real ambition is not to persuade or even agitate for the changes he espouses; his real mission is to insure his life as a rebel and to ignore the one attribute that most of us have always to be aware of, responsibility.

There is a difficult but sensible way to be a nonconformist.

Conformity in itself is not always desirable. Laws are changed gradually, and the betterment of mankind is a slow, evolutionary process evoked in slow, painstaking methods within the framework of our society, which constantly sifts out the good and the bad.

The legislator who fights his cause and loses is a nonconformist. He lost. The salesman or clerk who argues his cause with his boss at that very moment is a nonconformist; he is rebelling for the moment, and this causes friction.

The union negotiator is a nonconformist—and look at all HE has wrought.

This process goes on all the time, but it does not make the newspaper headlines because most of us are rebels in many ways, constantly fighting for better things. But if we were to discard authority and band together as "conformed beatniks" against all injustices fighting the great crusade, then the weight of responsibility is ours no longer.

VISTA Recruiters Draw Heavy Student Interest

By Karen Carlson

A recruiting team from VISTA, Volunteers In Service To America, visited the college last week and left with an excellent impression of the students here.

Forty students from the college signed for applications. Hundreds took printed material and an estimated 250 saw a 15-minute movie on VISTA.

For the uninformed, VISTA is one of the major antipoverty programs established by the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964. It offers an opportunity for men and women from all economic, geographic, social and age groups to join the nation's war on poverty.

George Cook, recruiting team leader, was enthusiastic with the reaction of students here to VISTA goals.

"The reaction here was sharply contrasted to that of the students in a Texas university which we visited last week. They wouldn't even look at our material, let alone show interest in participating in VISTA," Cook stated.

Cook explained that 75 per cent of those applying who have had any college experience are accepted. "In other words, if half of the students here who took applications actually apply, it is likely that 15 of them will be accepted.

"A six week training program precedes 46 weeks of direct service. Volunteers are trained to work in urban and rural America, with migrants and Indians, with the mentally handicapped or with the Job Corps.

"Pay is minimal. Volunteers are paid enough to live at the same level as the poor with whom they are working, generally $75 per month. Hours are outrageous, conditions terrible, but the volunteers still come.

"Obviously, VISTA offers some compensation to the volunteer—a child's smile, a shy 'thank you' and a great deal of pride in accomplishment," Cook said.

COO Seeks Acts For Variety Show This November

Under the direction of Terry Faulkner, vice chairman, the Council of Organizations will present a competitive display of talent in its annual variety show in the theater Friday night, November 12.

In addition to the talent show, the COO is also sponsoring the annual football queen contest, whereby each campus organization submits a nominee. The coronation is scheduled for the San Francisco-San Mateo football game here November 5.

The queen candidates will be chosen on the basis of general appearance, poise, personality, smile and walk, according to COO Chairman Dave Minkin.

The best-decorated car in the Inter-Fraternity Council-sponsored parade will present the five queen finalists in a rally held the preceding day.

For the variety show, each of the 35 campus clubs is eligible to submit entries for auditioning, and organizations are encouraged to sponsor more than one act.

First, second and third prizes will be awarded the club sponsoring the most talented act in the minds of the judges in committee, who will be comprised predominantly of instructors from the drama, art and music departments, Minkin said.

'Close-Up' Invades Engineering Dept. At C-Hour Tuesday

City College Close-Up, a series designed to tell the campus community about the various types of career preparation available at City College, will examine the Engineering department on Tuesday, November 2, in C-246 during College Hour.

The series is being re-shown over closed circuit TV at City College for the benefit of those students who may need help in deciding what occupational field to enter.

Faculty members will be present to answer questions.

Many industry leaders, faculty members and working graduates participated in the series.

Engineering will be covered in two half-hour shows over a period of two weeks so that all the aspects of the department can be fully explained.

The sections of engineering which will be covered on November 2 are architecture, building and contracting, civil and general engineering.

Industry leaders will discuss job opportunities and personal qualifications while the faculty explains the course content and working graduates evaluate their City College training and give advice to future job-seekers.

The faculty participants in the first section of the show are Cecil Aggelr, Wallace Sellman and Donald Bryant.

Playboy Opens Four Day Run Next Week

The Playboy of the Western World opens at 8 p.m. next Wednesday in the theater, as this semester's first major drama production, director James Haran announced.

The play, an Irish comedy in three acts written by J. M. Synge, has had many stormy receptions in its history.

During the play's first tour of America, in 1911, disturbances among the Irish occurred in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

The Boston and New York audiences contented themselves with throwing eggs and tomatoes, but the statelier citizens of Philadelphia took legal action. The case was laughed out of court.

Benioff's Styles Featured At AWS Fashion Show-Tea

Preparations are in progress for The Lady From F.A.S.H.I.O.N. to be held on Thursday, November 4, in Smith Hall.

Fourteen coeds chosen October 7 in the Best-Dressed Coed Contest will be modeling fashions from Benioff's of Grant Avenue.

Stan Angel, president of the Associated Men Students, and fellow officers will act as escorts for the models. All women students are invited to the semiannual Associated Women Students fashion show and tea, according to Mary Maurer, president of the AWS.

Plans are being carried out by various committees.

Chairmen of the event are Emma Salisbury, decorations; Sheridan Parker, clothes coordinator; Barbara Kontis, entertainment; Susan Schwampe and Carole Scrievers, fashion coordinators; Rae Oretski, Dolores Talpt and Alpha Gamma Sigma, food; Pamela Maul and Recreation Association, hospitality; Sandra Gallagher, invitations; Rosita Pearson and Martha Romero, models, and Carolyn Williams, photography.

Completing the roster of chairmen are Lula Tubbs, program; Linda Blalock, publicity; Carol Jiminez and sororities, sewing; Carol Carruba, Nancy Pappin and Newman Club, set-up; Janet Copriviza, registration; and last but far from least Judy Barling, clean up chairman.

'Loneliness' Next In Film Series

An 18-year-old slum boy from England who is sent to reform school and becomes the school's top runner, is the theme of a British film, The Loneliness Of A Long Distance Runner, to be shown tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the college theater.

Contempt for authority is shown in the boy's tragic life through flashbacks on the day of the big race. The boy's surprising decision brings the film to a powerful climax in relating to social problems and ethics in contemporary society.

Stars include Tom Courtenay, Sir Michael Redgraves, Avis Bunnage and others. The movie is based on a short story and screenplay by Alan Sillitoe. Michael Redgraves and Avis Bunnage.

Free tickets may be obtained from Walter Krumm, C332-C, James Haran, Victor Valo or English instructors.

IRC Fair Date Changed To Dec. 3 In Smith Hall

The 12th annual International Fair, sponsored by the International Relations Club, will not be held on Friday, October 29, as it was originally scheduled.

Because of some conflicts in the IRC schedule, the Fair, which will be held in Smith Hall, has been moved to Friday, December 3.

Joseph Jacobsen, sponsor of the IRC, said that the Fair will be in two sections; a stage show in Smith Hall and a display of foreign delicacies in Staller Wing.

Nevada Day, Holy Eve Scrapped For Goodies

By Pete Dorn

There are just a couple of days left before October 31 comes 'round again. The 31st is, as everybody knows, Nevada Day. Nevada entered the Union on October 31, 1864, as the 36th state and has contributed legalized gambling and instant divorces to the American way.

In addition to being Nevada Day, October 31 is also known as Holy Evening because it preceeds All Saints Day, November 1.

A group of manufacturers in the glutinous confection trade, combined with the costume fabricating interests and pumpkin farmer groups, have capitalized on Holy Evening, which was changed to Halloween.

These interest groups have indoctrinated the masses between age groups 3¼ to 27 to believe that the night of October 31 is the appropriate time to go around disturbing households in a quest for handouts of huge amounts of goodies.

Goodies are defined as any confectionery such as licorice, marmalade, caramel, candy bars, lemon drops, lollipops, chewy delight, jujube, chewing gum, bubble gum, bonbon, taffy, butterscotch, peppermint, chocolate, fudge, pastry, pudding, ice cream or custard.

The bicarbonate of soda and the stomach pump industries would undoubtedly gross far larger profits than the candy interests after Halloween if any substantial per cent of the goodies was actually taken internally. Fortunately, 95 per cent of all goodies is discarded into trash receptacles on All Saints Day by the 27 to 89-year-old age groups.

IT'S THE SAME OLD BIT every Halloween; ghosts and goblins, together with other fearsome creatures (like the little brat who lives next door and who is gonna get his this year), go ghouling around in a quest for kicks.

Lively Ones Perform At Sports Day

A Recreation Association Sportsday will be held here Saturday, November 6 from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., according to Pam Maul, RA president.

Sportsday will include competition in vollyball, archery, badminton, bowling, folk and modern dance with teams from 13 two-year colleges participating. There will also be a luncheon in Statler Wing, and entertainment will be provided by The Lively Ones.

The RA has various athletic clubs which meet and train under the supervision of physical education instructors. These clubs then compete against those of other colleges.

"City College usually does extremely well," Miss Maul said. Last year the college took the top college award.

"The volleyball and bowling teams always take first or second places," Miss Maul added; "and archery and badminton, although not very active in the past, are also expected to have a good competition."

Folk and modern dance competitions will be judged by specialists, Miss Maul said. These specialists will also demonstrate and teach different folk and modern dance techniques to the spectators.

The managers of the competing teams are Gardeno Josc for archery, Sharon Harris for badminton, Miss Maul for bowling, Sally Moore for folk dance, Dagmar Bahr for modern dance and Jim Torpis and Larissa Diatschenko for volleyball.

The Gem's Pearl Anniversary

Intramurals—Hot Headliners In 1935

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth of a series of articles on the history of the college as reflected through the pages of The Guardsman.)

By Mike Smith, Managing Editor

When The Guardsman was first published in 1935, and for the next 17 years, the sports page devoted much of its attention to the college's intramural activities and events. It wasn't too often that a varsity team grabbed any of the sports' headlines.

However, in 1952 The Guardsman sports staff pulled a switch, and the varsity sports were considered more important and became the headline stories.

The following year The Guardsman had a kidnap to write about. Only it was not a kid that was stolen, but a real live ram; and it was not just any ram, it was the College's mascot. The animal was "taken" from its home behind the cafeteria. After a "city-wide" search, the ol' ram was returned to campus.

During the spring of 1955, City College celebrated its 20th year in a very big way. It had a festival with floats included. The parade of floats and lines of cars began on Junipero Serra Boulevard, traveled up Ocean Avenue, and turned down Phelan Avenue to the front of Science Hall.

Two years later, The Guardsman had something else to celebrate, the newspaper's editor, Mike Berger, took first place with his editorial, Self Government Here Will Die If AS Neglects Voting Rights, in a nation-wide Best Editorial of the Year Contest.

Another great feat came for the college this same year when the Ram's basketball star, Bob Tealer, set a scoring record by accumulating 46 points in one game at the San Jose Junior College Tournament. Last spring, Tealer was elected to the City College Sports' Hall of Fame which was started by The Guardsman in 1957.

CITY COLLEGE'S live ram mascot was "kidnapped" in the early 1950's.

As long as City College has been in existence, its students have always had trouble in finding some place to park their cars.

During most of the 1950's the parking problems grew worse and worse and the population of the college grew more and more.

One of the major complaints of the day was that "there was no parking space available from here to Playland for those students whose classes started after 8 a.m."

The Pit across from the college was a reservoir and no one obviously could park there. Excluding a stretch along Phelan and Ocean avenues, parking near the college was virtually impossible — and the complaints were loud.

However, by November, 1958, the reservoir had been drained, its floor was laid with asphalt; and it was opened to City College students as an additional parking area. The complaints stopped.

The new parking lot had room for more than 800 cars. One month following its initial opening, The Guardsman decided to see how successful the new lot had been. On one December day, The Guardsman counted the number of cars in the lot. To their surprize there were approximately 36 cars in the entire lot. It was also noticed that there were more sea gulls flying above the lot than usual. Could it be?

Gridders Roll Past Merritt, 34-0

Gridders To Test Strength Against Comets Friday

Contra Costa's Comets, last year's cotitlists, host the Ram football team in a Golden Gate Conference game at 8:00 p.m. Friday.

After two weeks of competition the conference race seems more jumbled than most experts figured it would be at this stage. Foothill and Chabot were expected to be the league's two top teams.

Foothill followed an opening 31-20 loss to the Rams with a 21-14 dumping at the hands of San Jose City College. Meanwhile, Chabot opened with a 7-0 win over Contra Costa but then the Rams squashed the Gladiators, 41-6.

San Jose City College and the Rams were currently tied for first place with 2-0 marks after two weeks of play, while Diablo Valley, Chabot, San Mateo and Oakland were tied for third with 1-1 marks.

Foothill and Contra Costa are currently bringing up the rear, but should definitely not be underestimated. The Owls might not lose another game, and the Comets are capable of giving everyone they play a rough time.

Two changes were made in the Ram defensive unit for the Chabot game. Pat Kearns, who has performed well coming off the bench, got the call at one cornerlinebacker spot and John Morello started on the other corner.

Morello suffered a broken finger during a practice scrimmage before the San Joaquin Delta game and received medical clearance just three days before the Chabot game.

Chabot moved the ball fairly well against the Rams, although they got on the scoreboard only once. But the Ram offensive unit again showed improvement from the previous week.

Six men are largely responsible for the strong offensive showing: Center Mike Dunne, guards Dave Malae, Rich Colombo, Chris Davis, and tackles Joe Ross and Mike Taylor.

Ram halfback O. J. Simpson continues to burn up the conference statistical race. The shifty Simpson gained 371 yards in 30 carries and scored six touchdowns in the first two league games.

Chabot Coach Ed Hart was quoted in an east bay paper as saying his club was beaten by the Rams, but that the local club lacked class. Some observers wonder what kind of a club the Gladiators have if they were beaten by 35 points by a "class-less" team?

Conference Champ Hosts Prune Bowl

Six Golden Gate Conference teams still have good chances of becoming the host team in the 1965 "reactivated" Prune Bowl.

Foothill College and College of San Mateo hold the only post-season victories in the recently restored game. San Mateo edged Allan Hancock, 6-0, in 1961 while in the now defunct Big Eight Conference, and Golden Gate Conference entry Foothill smashed Santa Rosa, 41-6, in 1962.

As of this writing, Contra Costa and Foothill, both winless in conference competition, are the only teams virtually out of the running, while City College of San Francisco and San Jose City College have the inside track.

The conference representative could be decided when the two meet in San Francisco on November 12, in what looks to be the "Golden Gate Conference Game of the Year."

No date for the game, to be held in San Jose State's Spartan Field, has been set.

The conference schedule closes on November 20 and the bowl is expected to be held during one of the following two weeks.

The conference winner and the Prune Bowl Committee will then meet to select an opponent.

Golden Gate Conference Commissioner Louis Batmale stated earlier last week, "The opponent will be a California college, possibly from a neighboring conference, such as the Golden Valley Conference, so that a possible rivalry can be established."

Oops! A Touchdown?

RAM QUARTERBACK BOB LEE (14) LOSES THE BALL—momentarily as he crosses the Chabot goal line for the local club's fifth score of the day. Lee quarterbacked only two drives against the Gladiators, but both went for touchdowns, one due largely to a great catch by Reeves Moses. Lee completed 3 of 6 passes for 74 yards and one touchdown. Lee, who also does the Ram punting, kicked three times against Chabot for a 48.0 average and his league average of 44.8 is much better than the league record of 39.4. —Guardsman photo by Rod Galli.

Opponents Fail In Attempts To Stem Soccer Title Wave

The Ram soccer team racked up two more victories by trouncing Pacific Bible College, 6-2, October 14 on the host's turf in Fresno and slipping by Merrit College, 7-5, in a game played on a slippery Balboa field October 18.

The Rams still cherish an unblemished league record after five contests and lead the loop with San Mateo as runnerup.

Alex Mendieta scored three goals against Pacific Bible College, while Ron Van Velhuysen, George Fernandez and Ben Boikanyo accounted for one each.

Boikanyo broke his leg and he will be lost for the rest of the season.

The local eleven played their worst game to date against Merritt. The Ram defense just fell apart midway through the first half, and Oakland offensive players were left uncovered over and over again.

Van Velhuysen came through with a tally five minutes after the starting whistle. He romped through on his left wing side on a solo ride and punched the ball "leather" past the helpless Oakland goal keeper.

Seconds later, Mendieta scored his first goal of the day on a direct kick from 20 yards out.

These two quick tallies seemed to set the stage for a local romp, but the visitors shortly afterward scored twice on Ram defensive errors.

Tommy Samuelson made it 3-2 in favor of the Red and White on a shot which skidded past the upper goal post. Mendieta then made it 4-2 in favor of the locals but saw the lead diminished to zero before the end of the first half of play.

In the second half, 20 minutes of play elapsed before the visitors finally broke the ice and went ahead for the first time, 5-4. It took the Rams ten minutes to make it a brand new game on a penalty kick from the 12-yard line by tally ace Mendieta.

Samuelson again hit the upper goal post with a shot which passed above the Oakland cage defender to put the Rams back into the lead. Minutes later, Van Velhuysen made another solo drive and faked the opposition goalie for the final score.

The Ram soccermen extended their winning streak to five straight in conference action when they demolished Diablo Valley, 9-0, in a game played here last Wednesday.

The local defense was sturdier than usual, and Connie Shishkin, Mike Montez and Frank Gagliardi must be recognized for keeping the Diablo offense away from sharp Ram goalie, Rudy Espenosa. Coach Roy Diederichsen emptied his bench at the end of the third quarter and gave his starters a well-deserved breather.

It took 15 minutes to break up the ballgame, but Samuelson finally succeeded. Mendieta then made it 2-0 on a pass from Envir Safir. Minutes later Safir scored on a pass from Samuelson.

In the second half the Rams added three goals during a two minute span. Samuelson made his second tally on a feed from right wing Van Velhuysen.

Mendieta also scored his second goal of the day on a 25-yard boot along the ground which found its home in the Viking defenders' right corner. Van Velhuysen made it 6-0.

Ram Soccer Team Aims For Finale As Solid Favorite

With five conference victories behind them, the City College soccermen head into the final phase of the 1965 season in the same position they held at its start, solid favorites to wrap up their third straight Northern California Junior College Soccer Championship.

The Rams finish out their schedule this week by hosting Santa Clara and San Mateo.

Santa Clara, a nonconference foe, will face the Rams next Tuesday, November 2. The clash will probably be a tune-up for the final game against San Mateo. Santa Clara dropped a 6-0 match to the Rams last year.

"This year we do not know too much about Santa Clara. The only thing we have to go by is their 5-4 defeat at the hands of Chico State College," Ram coach Roy Diederichsen commented.

The season's big game will have to be the San Mateo encounter slated for November 5 at 3 p.m. The Bulldogs are the present conference runners-up and gave the Rams a tough fight in dropping a 4-1 decision, in what was the Rams' "best game to date."

Coach Diederichsen noted that the team has let down since this contest.

"The team has not looked too competent in the last few games. The men have been having too much of a picnic. One gets the impression they are just going through the motions. They will have to play seriously from here on," he said.

As an example, Dierichsen pointed to the Rams' game with Oakland's Merritt College. "With two minutes left to play we trailed, 5-4. Only a penalty shot by Alex Mendieta, and a quick score by Thomas Samuelson gave us the needed margin." Diederichsen said.

Last week The Guardsman mentioned that Oakland's Merritt College had violated conference rules by using "high" school players. The actual violation was due to the use of "night" school players.

Smothers, Gianquinto, Rosenberg Star; Rams 3-0

By Randy Koernig

Defensive halfback Eural Smothers turned two pass interceptions into touchdowns as City College rolled over Merritt College, 34-0 at Frank Youell Field last Friday. The victory was the Rams' third in a row in conference play and fourth straight overall.

Smothers' first interception came after 3:12 of the second quarter had elapsed and his scoring romp covered 60 yards. This was the Rams' third score of the afternoon. The San Franciscans first got on the board with 6:47 of the first quarter gone as Ron Fassler capped about a 70-yard drive as he smashed over from the one.

With only 57 seconds remaining in the first quarter, Ram quarterback Bill Gianquinto went in from a yard out for the second score of the afternoon. Gianquinto then connected with end Bruce Rosenberg for a two-point conversion. At that point the score was 14-0.

Shortly afterward, Smothers made his presence known by running back the first interception for a score and again Gianquinto and Rosenberg again teamed up for two more points, boosting the score to 22-0.

There was no scoring in the third quarter but with 14 minutes remaining in the game, Gianquinto and Rosenberg got together in spectacular style as they engineered a 69-yard pass play for a touchdown with Rosenberg outrunning two Merritt defenders for the final 20 yards.

There was 4:46 showing on the scoreboard clock when Smothers picked off his second pass of the day and then scampered 35 yards to paydirt. It was Smothers' second scoring jaunt that put the lid on all scoring for that day, although minutes later the fleet and deceptive Smothers almost made it three interceptions for the day.

Statistics were not too terribly impressive as the Rams unofficially netted only 50 yards on the ground. Ron Fassler was the leading ground-gainer with 38 yards. He was followed by Dennis Sullivan who had a total of 18 net yards gained.

One of the most surprising aspects of the game was the fact that O. J. Simpson, usually the backbone of the Rams' running attack, was held to only one yard on the ground. Also the Ram defense, which has been stifling opponents, was more or less absorbing the Merritt attack.

Quarterback Bill Gianquinto enjoyed his best game this season as he hit seven out of seven passes for 112 yards. Altogether, Ram quarterbacks connected for 186 yards.

Cross Country Men Lose Race; Coach Predicts Surprises

The City College cross country team, still without the services of George Ferguson, was edged by San Mateo, 29-26, and fell to the hands of San Jose by the score of 42-26 in the first triangular meet of the season.

The meet was held at San Jose.

Bill Long finished the race as top man for the Rams, but wasn't in much contention throughout the race. Alex Vosher and John O'Looney finished second and third, respectively.

Lou Vasquez, coach of the team, pointed out that O'Looney ran his best race ever, and Vosher came on very strong at the end. Vasquez said, "The big problem was that there was too big a gap between our runners."

Bill Sandeval of San Jose came in first.

In the triangle meet, Vasquez was encouraged by the performance of James Thomas and Alex Stefanovich. "These two came through very well and with some work they could become a pair of comers," Vasquez said.

A pulled muscle is the reason Ferguson was out of this meet. Vasquez warned that the return of Ferguson and the steady improvement of Thomas and Stefanovich could improve the team greatly. He also pointed out that when Ferguson gets into top form "he could be one of the top runners in the conference."

The team had a meet scheduled for October 15, against Merritt, but it was cancelled. The Rams' next opponent is second-rated Diablo Valley.

Vasquez considers the Vikings are very tough. However, he was quick to point out that with Thomas, Stefanovich, and the return of Ferguson to back up the top three, there may be some surprises.

Statistics Make O. J. And Co. Record Bound

By William Pates

FROM ALL indications, the Ram football team, and O. J. Simpson in particular, are headed for a record-breaking season in 1965.

This year's team which was expected to have quite a bit of trouble in defeating its first two opponents, walked away with substantial victories in both instances.

A good deal of this was due to the outstanding play of halfback O. J. Simpson who has performed much better than could have ever been expected.

After but one conference game Simpson had already broken one record and is on his way to breaking some others.

Against the Foothill Owls the powerful halfback romped for 207 yards in 16 carries (or 199 yards in 15 carries depending on whose statistics you believe).

Nevertheless, Simpson broke the individual single game rushing record of 189 yards set by Travis Williams of Contra Costa against Chabot College last year.

It appears that O. J. is likewise going to break the individual scoring record and the individual seasonal rushing yardage record too.

Williams holds both of the aforementioned records. After two conference contests Simpson had scored six touchdowns and is easily within reaching distance of Williams' seasonal record of 10 six-pointers.

With 36 points to his credit O. J. is well on his way to at least tying Williams' individual scoring record of 68 points, set in 1963.

Williams individual rushing record for one season of 835 yards is also within hailing distance of the "star" City College back who has collected 328 yards or 336 yards—again depending on whose statistics you believe—in two conference contests.

As far as the team's offensive unit as a whole is concerned, they too could conceivably break some conference records.

The season rushing record of 1621 set by Contra Costa in 1962 is within striking distance as is the total points record of 165, again as set by Contra Costa.

Of course, statistics do not a championship make. Just ask a local football coach whose 1964 football squad led the Academic Athletic Association in nearly every statistical category, but was bombed out of the playoffs.

We don't wish to be the first to brand Dutch Elston's club with the "kiss of death," but it has been stated by a member of the football team, who shall remain anonymous for obvious reasons, "If we beat Chabot, we'll take it all."

A statement to the effect that the Rams are the "club to beat" in the Golden Gate Conference is a "kiss of death" whose potency is second only to making the cover of Sports Illustrated.

Let us pray.

Riot-Inciting 'Playboy' Hits Campus

Christopher Mahon, a not-so-pure, honest or religious Irish peasant, murders his father in the three-act comedy, Playboy Of The Western World. The play caused six riots when it was performed in Dublin in 1907. A counter-riot in favor of the play was staged by students from Trinity College.

The drama department will take a chance and stage this play, the first major fall semester production, opening this evening in the theater. Turn to Page 3 for further details of the action.

London Fog Fashion-Tea Motif

'Best Dressed' Tops AWS Show Due Tomorrow

By Judy Klink

Traces of London fog will mingle with San Francisco's atmosphere as the doors open to The Lady From F.A.S.H.I.O.N. at 3 p.m. tomorrow in Smith Hall. Rigid self-control is the only admission requirement for all women students.

The London Look will be used as a motif, and James Bond posters will enhance the black and white surroundings. Emma Salisbury is in charge of the foreign intrigue department.

Such intriguing surroundings plus the latest in fashions from Benioff's may cause mild hysteria during the Best-Dressed Coed Contest sponsored by the Associated Women Students.

Mary Maurer, president of the AWS, will open the program with a welcoming address. Helen Benioff will be commentator of the fashion show in which the following coeds will appear:

Dainita Alexander, Karen Baugh, Sue Bottarini, Helen Bundros, Shirley Chiu, Cynthia George, Joanne Mavromatis, Donna McLennan, Carmine Meyer, Barbara Peters, Grace Relfe, Joan Shaw, Sharon Strauss and Sharon Yee.

Alternates for the models are Joyce Byrd, Linda Reed and Marianne Wolbertus.

In order to appease the stimulated appetites, an enticing menu has been prepared. Among the delicacies will be 500 lemon cookies, 400 Cream Puffs a la George, 300 small Danish pastries, 400 Petits Fours, 400 brownies, 400 small macaroons and 30 gallons of orange juice.

Hostesses for the event are Sheryl Clarke, Shirley Gatson, Mae Williams, Beverley Talliver, Sylvia Miller, Vicke Snigno, Linda Zohn, Linda Hom, Rodjie Smith, Elaine Manato, Donna Finney and Carolyn Bonner.

Modern dancing by Rose Cazdin, Karen Edgecombe and Sharon Swift will provide an interlude of entertainment.

Dopaid White and William Richardson will also be on hand to sing two songs from the Fantastiks. Nick Jordan will furnish background music for the fashion show.

Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, will present the Best-Dressed Coed for Fall, 1965, with a trophy and pin. Recognition will also be given to the new woman student with the highest grade point average for the first midterm period.

The Inter-Sorority Council Scholarship Award has been presented biannually since 1961. Carole Jiminez will present the student with a continuing trophy and a charm bracelet.

The cafeteria will close at 1:15 and Statler wing at 1:30 p.m.

Campus Police Threaten To Cite Phelan Ave. Violators

Citations will be issued to drivers making left hand turns across the double yellow lines and cement divider blocks on to Phelan avenue or into Arts Hall parking lot from Phelan, Larry Lawson, chairman of the criminology department, warned last week.

Attention was brought to this regulation after a citation was recently contested at the San Francisco Municipal Traffic Court.

The notice issued by the court reads as follows:

"Any cars proceeding south on Phelan avenue and making a left turn into the Arts Hall parking lot is subject to a traffic ticket. In addition, any cars leaving the parking lot and making a left turn to proceed south on Phelan is also subject to a traffic ticket."

Most violators of the regulation are not seeking to park but merely turn across Phelan avenue into the lot to drop off a passenger and then leave again, the police department acknowledged.

"But," said Sergeant Keller—badge number 6527—"there are those who are late for class and turn into the lot to park. They are not only violating the traffic court regulation but the campus parking regulation by chancing to park in the lot while in class and hoping not to be cited."

The Campus Police department said students should take note of this and that the same regulation holds true for faculty members as well as special permit holders using the lot.

Another parking problem that has been brought to the attention of the Campus Police, Sergeant Keller added, is from residents on the immediate side streets who complain about student automobiles blocking their driveways.

Sorority Hopefuls Face Grueling Week Of Initiation Activities

Pledge Week, with its varied and unusual activities, is taking place this week as a period of initiation and "depreciation" for prospective members of campus sororities.

Monday and yesterday pledges of the two college sororities, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau, wore uniforms of their respective sorority and performed certain duties. A similar program faces them again tomorrow.

Part of these duties is a meeting every hour at the flag pole on campus. In addition, each pledge must sign-out before she may leave the campus.

Classes and study time are not intended to be curtailed this week. Hence, pledges are expected to spend all spare time in the library.

The one hour of service to the college also required of the pledges will be spent by serving refreshments at the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea tomorrow.

Participating in these events, which are extended to both sororities, is necessary to membership. The performance of them, however, does not immediately qualify the applicant for membership, as the actual pinning will take place later in the year.

The service and social activities characteristic of Pledge Week are designed to acquaint the pledges with the traditions, purposes and ideals of the sororities and permits the pledges to become close friends with the full-fledged sorority members.

Coeds participate in Pledge Week as the result of attending several rushing functions, maintaining the academic qualifications and filing a petition with Dean of Women Mary Golding.

As a climax to all the rushing and pledging activities, the Inter-Sorority Council Cotillion, a formal ball where prespective members of both sororities are presented, will take place on Friday, November 19.

'65 Football Queen To Be Named At C-Hour Tomorrow

The football queen and her court will be presented at the Council of Organization rally during College Hour tomorrow at the Ram - speech platform site, David Minkin, COO president announced yesterday.

The five finalists will be chosen from the 11 candidates nominated by various college clubs.

The candidates and their sponsoring clubs as listed by Minkin, are Elaine Bower, Deseret Club; Lynn Bottarini, Alpha Sigma Delta; Jan Raabe, Newman Club; Vickie Snider, Associated Men Students; Sharri Cornsweet, Beta Tau; Barbara Brisco, Alpha Phi Omega; Dolores Talpt, Alpha Gamma Sigma; Pat Robson, Sophomore Class; Marilyn Erkkila, Rally Commission; Carol Anselmi, Engineering Society, and Joy Green, Recreation Association.

The finalists will be chosen on the basis of general appearance, poise, personality, smile and walk by a faculty committee prior to the rally.

The queen will be crowned at the San Francisco - San Mateo football game, which starts here at 2 p.m. Friday.

The rally will continue with a car parade during which the best-decorated car will be selected by the Inter-Fraternity Council. The best-decorated car will then be used to present the queen at the rally and the game.

Constitutional Revision In Process At Council

By Rich Heintz

Procedure for adopting a new Associated Student constitution for City College was the main topic covered last week in Student Council.

The debate was brought up by Ernie Woodcock, a member of council, who questioned whether it was necessary to have an Associated Student card to vote for the AS Constitution in the next election, and whether it was mandatory to have a two-thirds majority to ratify the constitution.

Jim Soletti, council member and chairman of the constitutional committee set up by Dennis Sweeney, Associated Student president, replied, "There was a policy set up in 1957, which allowed any student to vote without possesion of an AS card.

"At that time this was done to create more interest and bigger turnouts (in the AS elections). It is true that this is not strictly by the book, and not legal in that sense.

"In order to set the records straight," he added, "this election will be the same as in the past, until the new constitution is accepted."

Soletti also said that the present constitution was passed by a two-thirds majority of the voters but that requirement is not binding now.

A point of clarification was made by Sweeney, who said that the decisions which the constitutional committee makes are not binding.

In order business, after some hesitation, Student Council referred to a committee a request to increase the allocation of traveling expenses from the present seven cents per mile to ten cents. The vote was 9-1-2.

However, as discussion went on after the adoption of the motion, Barbara Kontis, AS vice-president, pointed out that council had allocated money "without knowing how much they had really allocated."

Biff Barnes, finance chairman and originator of the motion, added that the motion to refer the request to a commitee "was a good idea, since some research needs to be done."

Arguments against this motion centered around the belief that the costs of operating a car per mile is not determinable.

However, Sweeney said, "A rate can be figured out by blue book values and insurance rates. I think that the present rate is approximately nine cents per mile."

Sweeney added that he will form a committee of anyone who is interested in this matter."

Earlier in the week, council members were reminded by Sweeney that they are required to attend all official meetings of council, and that three absences from these meetings without valid excuse is grounds for dismissal from Student Council.

Sweeney stressed the fact that all special meetings which require the attendance of council members falls under this rule.

David Minkin, Council of Organizations chairman, announced that the list of on-campus organizations will be compiled this week.

Special Election Called To Fill Council Vacancy

A special election will be held Wednesday, November 17, in Student Council to fill a recently vacated council seat, Sandy Sager, election commissioner, announced today.

The vacancy was created when sophomore member Doug Bianchi filed a leave of absence last week.

"Candidates for the vacancy should file their petitions no later than next Wednesday, November 10," Miss Sager said.

Requirements call for current enrollment in at least 12½ units, maintenance of a 2.0 grade point average and completion of fewer than 60 units.

Miss Sager also issued a plea for volunteers to serve on the Election Committee for the January Associated Student elections.

ACP Convention Features 'Partial Censorship' Topic

Four members of the editorial board of The Guardsman represented the college at the national convention of the Associated Collegiate Press, held recently at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel.

The four delegates were Don Patten, Mike Smith, James Rauh and Karen Carlson.

In a series of sessions on freedom and responsibility of the college press, a number of problems such as censorship, financial dependence on student government, and pressures from news sources was subject to discussion.

The conflict between truthful reporting of the "whole story" and partial censorship by controlling factions was brought out by the Alabaman editor who was instructed not to print an important story because it contained elements of segregational action on the part of administrators.

He expressed a feeling which has confronted many of those present when he asked, "What do I do? I want to graduate but I also want to fulfill my moral responsibility to readers."

A series of sessions on specific problems of two-year colleges was also attended. Staff organization, careful scheduling of news assignments, and pressures were discussed.

Beta Tau To Sponsor Pledge Week Dance Featuring The VIP's Friday

Beta Tau will sponsor the end-of-Pledge Week dance Friday when couples will dance to the VIP's in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to midnight, James Wyatt, student government adviser, announced today.

"This dance is open to anyone accompanied by a City College student and should offer every student a chance to become acquainted with the various fraternities," Wyatt said.

Inter-Fraternity Council Pledge Week activities started yesterday with a track meet where the pledges competed against each other for honors. Other events were pie-eating, egg-tossing, balloon-blowing and relays.

A rally is scheduled in College Hour tomorrow during which the football queen and car contests will take place. In each decorated car will ride a potential queen. The judges will choose a winner for the best-decorated car as well as the football queen.

The queen, who will ride in the winning car, will reign at the Bulldog-Ram football game Friday.

Chuck Pickens, IFC president, stated that Statler wing will be open from 7 to 11 a.m. during Pledge Week. The purpose of this is to pledge the prospective fraternity and sorority members. At this time the student body is invited to observe pledging rites.

"It is our hope that the feeling that fraternities and sororities are select and secret groups be removed from the minds of many men and women who attend City College," Pickens added.

Fraternities participating are Zeta Phi Sigma, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Phi Beta Delta, Alpha Kappa Rho, Beta Tau and Alpha Sigma Delta.

Outdated College Bookstore In Dire Need Of New Quarters

WITH REGARD TO the campus bookstore, the Ramporium, the time has come for action, not talk. The present facilities are extremely outdated and unless something is done, the college stands to suffer greatly.

It does not make sense for a college with an enrollment in excess of 10,000 to provide a bookstore filling the needs of little more than half that number.

At each semester's beginning, conditions inside suffer paramount overcrowding. Many students, in order to avoid endless lines, are forced to go elsewhere for texts and supplies. This loss of business is a serious matter when one considers that the Ramporium supplies 65 per cent of the Associated Student budget.

Many extras, other than supplies for the classroom, are not available because there is simply no place to display them. What is the purpose of a bookstore? Simply, it should supply ALL the needs of its customers, not just the essentials.

When it comes to the point where many articles are not available because there is no display room, the situation is way out of proportion.

It is obvious that the Ramporium has reached its limit of expansion in the present housing.

Many buildings on this campus have expanded to meet the needs of future students and high enrollments, but the bookstore has remained unchanged since it was erected.

Storage is another problem. Books in demand diminish in supply as fast as they can be ordered because there is no adequate place to store them. How successful can an education be without the proper textbooks?

This statement may appear to be ridiculous but it proves a point. A college bookstore is an integral part of any campus and with an inadequate one such as is available here, we can only lose.

Therefore, the only question that remains is when? When will construction begin on a new bookstore? When will action be taken? There has already been too much delay.

Let's pave the way for this badly needed building immediately. The problems it faces are many fold and must be met soon if we are to handle the growing needs of this campus now and in the future.

Is Brainpower Disgraceful?

IS MEMBERSHIP in Alpha Gamma Sigma, the scholastic honor society, considered to be embarrassing? Is membership degrading to the individual? Few people realize the desperate plight of AGS. At present, there are only 30 out of 293 eligible members participating in AGS activities.

It is difficult to understand what really causes this lack of interest. There seems to be no logical explanation. Maybe it's the fact that all AGS eligible members are so antisocial that they don't wish to meet fellow members and get together now and then.

This is a rather harsh statement but with this poor a showing of interest, there is very little else to believe. Perhaps if there were more attractive prospects to be derived from AGS membership, more might be encouraged to join.

Just possibly, eligible members don't realize the value of AGS membership when it is included on their transcripts for transfer to a four-year college.

Easy Money In The Basement

By Peter Dorn

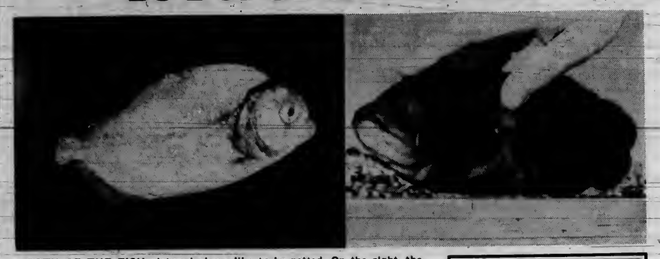
EVERYBODY likes to take a chance; everyone is a gambler in some way. There are, however, various intensities of the gambling fever.

Some sports take long weekend journeys for the purpose of hauling their money to Nevada and depositing it there, while others are content to play the game in the basement of Science Hall.

The college has provided machines which are similar to the slot machines found in the best of casinos on the North Shore.

Although the college slots aren't as elaborate, nor do they pay off as well as the professional slots, they do provide the thrill of the sport and the element of chance that the gambler seeks.

THE ARMLESS BANDITS of Science Hall are rigged to pay off about 7½ per cent of their gross take; this payoff is substantially lower than the casino machines give out, and something should be done about it, because college students haven't the money to play with that the casino tourists have.



However, luckier students have been known to hit a Coke machine for a soda and seven nickels off a quarter bet. These days are, unfortunately, scarce. The best game is provided by the candy machines, which may pay the selected candy bar plus a bonus of a return of the full purchase price after a pull on the coin-return knob.

Lest anyone be intoxicated with the vision of easy money, in all fairness it must be reiterated right here and now that one can't beat the house. Any student with even an elementary indoctrination in economics should be able to see that, in order to survive, the house must take in more than it pays out.

LAST MONTH'S HEAT wave drove a different type of student into the college's Little Reno. These tyros were a serious lot, probably a part of the first group of men in the Bay Area to receive the new asbestos draft card, who actually wanted to purchase some cold soda without a lot of falderal. What they wanted was a sure thing.

The only way to get a "sure" soda around here is to go down to the cafeteria counter and buy one. Outright.

Student To Give Aquarium Demonstration Next Tuesday

Dale Scott's mother operates a fish market, but don't expect to eat her fish; rather, expect them to eat you if given the opportunity.

Mrs. Scott owns B&H Tropical Fish Supplies and has more than 100 different species of rare tropical fish. Among them are the voracious South American Piranhas, which have been known to reduce a steer or an unlucky man to bare bones in a matter of minutes.

A Piranha, plus seven or eight other varieties of tropical fish, will be exhibited during the November 9 College Hour in S-209, when Scott, a student at the college, will demonstrate their proper care.

"Tropical fish are now rated as America's second most popular hobby, led only by coin collecting," Scott stated.

Prices, dependent on rarity, range from small change to several dollars per fish.

Asked about the legality of owning or selling Piranhas in the United States, Scott replied, "We have no written proof about the pros or cons of selling Piranhas!"

Scott explained that the Merchandising Club is sponsoring the demonstration as a test of student interest here.

Scott also said, "I plan to give away one Siamese Fighting Fish, which is one of the top favorites in the nation."

One tank of fish will be on display before the demonstration, and Scott will set up another during the show to let onlookers see how it is done.

● Dinnerware Over ROC

Editor, The Guardsman:

It seems appropriate at this time to note the juxtaposition of certain problems facing the Student Council. The way in which they shrugged off so lightly the question of the on-campus status of ROC while allotting almost $200 for dishes for the council banquet seems indicative of their effectiveness as a governing body: in contrasting relevance to student affairs to the unnecessary triviality of dinnerware, the council leaves much to be desired.

Reporter Probes Into Stanley Mudde Mystery

By Greg Frazier

After months of intensive, tedious and oftentimes dangerous investigation, a reporter has uncovered what well may be the most bizarre story ever told on the pages of The Guardsman.

Acting on a tip from an anonymous informant, the reporter went to a little used section of Science Hall located on the third floor of the north wing. There he encountered a padlocked door which he pried open and entered.

Inside was a storage room with boxes stacked about and a small broom closet. The reporter entered the closet and was confronted by a ladder, attached to the wall, and leading up to a trap-door which was also padlocked. Again the reporter pried the lock and climbed through the trap-door.

Here he found himself in a dim corridor, lighted only by a single candle. Taking the candle, the reporter started cautiously down the corridor toward what appeared to be a black void in the distance ahead.

Progress was slow and deliberate due to the flickering darkness and the huge cobwebs strung like wires across the corridor, barring his way. The candlelight caught the dull reflection of a black metalic square a few feet ahead. Another door. Steel, triple padlocked, seemingly impregnable.

Taking his prybar, the reporter labored over the three locks, breaking them in short order.

There, cowering in a corner of a tiny cubicle, shielding his eyes from the glare of the candle, was the ghostly figure of Stanley Mudde, the long lost Bell Ringer of City College.

A rank stench invaded the reporter's nostrils. The floor of the hole was littered with bones and feathers and tiny, scattered drops of blood, some wet, some dry. In the corner opposite Mudde were a few wisps of moldy straw and an ancient hour glass. From a hole carved in the stone ceiling hung a greasy rope which led to the belfry.

"What want?" blurted Mudde, still crouched in the darkness of the corner.

The reporter's horrified gaze returned to the decrepit wretch. The place was like a crypt in which Mudde was its sole occupant. Bits of rotten rags half covered his skeleton-like body. His head sat precariously on his bony shoulders as if the flick of a finger would send it crashing into a thousand pieces on the slimy floor.

"Want what?" he said.

"Your name is Mudde?" the reporter asked intrepidly.

As if insulted, Mudde sprang at the reporter ferociously, snarling and growling like a mad dog.

The reporter wheeled, and dropping the prybar With a clatter, ran out the door, slamming it and sealing behind it the secret of the Little Old Bell Ringer, Stanley Mudde.

Choral Group Performance Rings Rafters

By B.T.

IF THE RECENT choral concert here proves anything at all, the coming Christmas concert should be even greater. Students and faculty should not miss this part of the good life—and it's free!

The towheaded four-year old son of one of the conductors was so delighted and enthralled with the singing, that he forgot himself. He joined right in and sang from his mother's lap. His mother, both amused and startled, put her hand in front of his mouth.

This little "chip off the old block," whether he knew it or not, was expressing the feeling of the audience. A person must agree that after seeing students come together in so many group ventures that seemingly bring less pleasure, this joint venture in music is worth every note.

Credit goes to the City College choir, Women's Choir, Men's Glee Club, piano accompanist Robert Sheldon, soloists Walter Hight, Stephen Bowes, Don White, and to the conductors, William Grothkopp, Jr., and Richard Fenner. And also to a group on brass instruments.

The hard work and efforts of all were revealed when they blended their voices together to literally "make the rafters ring" during one recent College Hour, at the theater.

Their version of There's Nothin' Like a Dame, and the popular Tonight, brought goose pimples to many in the audience.

The Women's Choir sounded like angels, and the soloists will surely be "discovered" someday by talent scouts.

Maybe it's corny and square, but this is the good life.

IT IS EVIDENT that a person with a low grade point average must be able to afford staying in college. Only students with high grade point averages can qualify for loans.

A disappointed student walked out of the Dean's office one day, crying in anguish, "I've got but $5.72 in my purse, and I was told that I didn't qualify for the National Defense Loan because my grades went down."

This student worked for room and board, and depended upon a small allowance from her people. In her disappointment, she was almost compelled to quit classes to take on full-time employment.

How many students are in this predicament now?

How many know that there is a student employment office at the college? Before a student becomes impulsive and drops out, it is suggested that he seek a part-time job.

Sometimes full-time work may not be as "pleasant" as struggling and worrying about staying in college.

THE PLAYBOY OF THE WESTERN WORLD, by J. M. Synge, is on tonight starting at 8 p.m., in the theater. James Haran, director, mentioned that all brogue will be eliminated. Something about syntax, and local sentiment.

This should be VERY INTERESTING. See it. It closes on November 6.

The next production by the drama department, Trial By Jury, will be staged in December.

Meanderings

By Mike Smith

EVERY November, just before or after an election day, a question often asked is whether the voting age should be changed from 21 to 18. It would be easy to answer such a question in the affirmative. But it is not quite that simple.

We need reasons as to WHY.

To start off with, we could use the old theory which has been echoed countless times since 1815. If a man is old enough to fight for his country, he should be old enough to vote. But we won't.

We could cite examples of married couples, both of whom are under 21. They could conceiveably have a family before they could vote. Yet they have to wait until they are of voting age before they can mark the ballot box for or against candidates and issues that affect them and their families. However, this argument too has been brought up numerous times.

We could always cite incidents such as former President Dwight D. Eisenhower urging Congress to lower the voting age to 18 throughout the country, or the late John F. Kennedy's special appointive commission of voter registration and participation studies recommending that the voting age be lowered to 18. But this is past history, and nothing has become of it.

NEW ARGUMENTS CROP UP

There are always these following arguments that have cropped up recently:

1. Today's education standards are high enough to produce intelligent young people qualified to vote.

2. In this age of increased communication, young people get a much deeper and broader education than ever before.

3. The 18 to 20-year-old set today is more aware of national and world events than any other generation of teen-agers before them.

These opinions have not, however, changed any voting laws concerning the youth even though they were expressed by Senator Margaret C. Smith and the late Adlai Stevenson. Governor Nelson Rockefeller tends to agree with them, and Barry Goldwater has always said he wished the younger people could vote.

However, there are those who disagree with a lowering of the voting age from its present minimum.

Senator Richard Russell of Georgia (one of the two states with the 18 voting age qualification—the other is Kentucky) believes that young people are not responsible enough, and that if a national reduction in voting age did go into effect it would lead to agitation for lowering the age in other matters such as liquor sales and admittance to race tracks.

Nevertheless, in the city of Atlanta, Georgia (including Fulton County), there exists a school program which enables seniors in high school to register for the vote. In the past year, according to Leon G. Hay, Chief Registrar of the Fulton County voter registration office, Atlanta has registered approximately 5000 18-year-old students in the city's high schools.

NO DEMANDS BY GEORGIA YOUTH

And there is not any great agitation for the matters and demands Russell believes would arise if all 18-year-olds in the nation could vote, and Georgia's youth in the 18-to-20 bracket have been voting since World War II.

In a statement by Harry S. Truman in the February 1964, issue of Senior Scholastic, the 32nd president of the United States would tend to agree with Russell's side of the argument:

"A man ought to have a greater education, particularly in the history in his country, before he can vote. I do not think he has the knowledge at 18. Twenty-one is a better age, 24 would still be better." Ironically, Truman is the only modern American President who did not graduate from college.

There also have been warnings from historians and politicians that lowering the voting age to 18 might allow a dictator to rise to power by capturing the youthful minds and then misusing them. Hitler got into power in this manner, and so did Mao Tse-tung.

Then on the other hand, there are many non-dictatorial nations in South America and Latin America that have given 18-year-olds voting rights. Are these teenagers and youths any more responsible and mature than teenagers and youths in California or Rhode Island, or any other State?

There still are many other arguments, pro and con, that have been used throughout history. But 18, 19, and 20-year-olds still cannot vote. Why?

Smith Hall Site For AGS Convention On November 13

The City College Chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, statewide two-year college honor society, laid the groundwork last Tuesday for the northern regional AGS convention which the society will co-host with Chabot College Saturday, November 13.

Smith Hall will be the site of the convention and its theme will be Alpha Gamma Sigma: Problems and Potential. The program will begin at 9:30 a.m. with registration and coffee hour, after which Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will greet the delegates.

Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, will deliver the keynote address entitled, Is The Scholastic Honor Society A Relic Of The Past?

Delegates will meet in three separate groups or "workshops" for the purpose of discussing recommendations and resolutions concerning AGS at the chapter and regional levels and the potential role of AGS.

Captain Ed Moore, author of A Mouthful Of Bridgework and a longtime Golden Gate Bridge employee, will be the luncheon speaker.

Reports from the various workshops will be heard in the afternoon, followed by a general assembly, closing remarks by Dolores Talpt, AGS president, and adjournment at 3:15 p.m.

Next Spring, on April 23, AGS will also host the state convention, according to Wallace E. Wells, AGS adviser.

Commenting on the "deplorable fact" that only 30 out of 293 eligible members here are actually participating in Alpha Gamma Sigma, Wells said:

"Aside from an accute sense of personal accomplishment, a certain amount of prestige and the advantage of documenting one's membership in AGS on college records, the society needs more attractive inducements to recruit new members."

"It seems as though students are either more interested in maintaining high grades or are anti-social scholarship winners," Miss Talpt added.

These eligible students with a B average or better, or any new student who was a former member of the California Scholastic Federation in high school were urged by Wells to apply for AGS membership by consulting him in S160-F. —G.F.

Succulents, Cacti May Repel Vandals

For the third time in two years, the area around Arts Hall is being landscaped, Harry Nelson, instructor in the ornamental horticulture division, revealed here recently.

The two previous plantings fell victim to vandalism and lack of care during the summer months.

As a result, succulent plants and cacti are being planted because of their hardiness and their "spines" which enable them to "fight back" against vandals.

Of the 120 English Laurel plants placed near Arts Hall last semester, only two survived the summer months.

Nelson stated that the horticulture division would offer summer session classes next year so that there will be students to provide care for the plants.

As soon as the grounds on the north and south sides of Arts Hall are thoroughly wet from the rains, lawns will be started.

Neither San Francisco State nor the University of San Francisco seem to have a problem with vandalism. The problem appears to be confined to the local public school system.

Bookstore May Be Enlarged Soon

Although student needs have outgrown the present bookstore, there is hope of a new, bigger Ramporium in about the Fall of 1967 or Spring of 1968, Richard Main, bookstore manager, said today.

"There's hardly space here for anything else than what is absolutely necessary, because the Ramporium is now too small to meet the needs of the students on campus," he explaineed.

Main said plans for expanding the present bookstore before next semester's big rush are going on now. Bookshelves that will contain more books and occupy less space will be brought in, providing about 50 linear feet of space to the presently overcrowded Ramporium.

'Playboy' To Open Tonight

First Major Fall Semester Play To Run Four Nights

The Playboy Of The Western World, a comedy in three acts by J. M. Synge, opens as the first major drama production for this fall semester for a four-performance run at 8 o'clock tonight in the theater.

The play's original production at the Abbey Theater, in Dublin in 1907, was marked by six nights of riots. The main objection was that the play, through its language and its character portrayals, shattered the popular, romantic image of the Irish peasant as a pure, honest and religious man, director James Haran stated.

Complicating the disturbance, Haran added, were students from Trinity College who, on the third evening, staged a counter-riot in favor of the play, which riot was louder and more destructive than the original uprisings.

Action of the play is situated in a public house in a remote section of Western Ireland at the turn of the century. A timid young man, Christopher Mahon, the hero, enters and reveals, subsequently, that he has just murdered his father. The reaction of the inhabitants to this statement is quite novel.

Later events, plus the hero's lyrical tongue and poetic speech, raise him to such a pitch that he can perform the deeds he claims, and he convinces everyone and himself that he really might be a "playboy" after all.

In the role as the Playboy, Christopher Mahon, is John McCready, and playing opposite him as the feminine lead, Pegeen Mike, is Anna Einhorn.

The other members of the cast are Michael Dobrinski as Shawn Keogh, Anne Crichton as Widow Quinn, Jamie O'Neill as Michael James, Jerry Whelan as Old Mahon; Steve Howes as Philly Cullen, John Adams as Jimmy Farrell, Diane Nichols as Sara Tansey, Margaret Calhoun as Susan Brady, and Barbara Trimble as Honor Blake.

The setting and costumes, Haran stated, will be in simple and realistic lines, and will keep strictly to the manner of that era.

An Irish brogue, however, Haran said, will not be used by the actors for the sake of clarity and understandability of local expressions and idioms by a modern audience. However, the inverted syntax of the lines should give the speech the necessary lilt and rhythm, Haran said.

The technical staff, supervised by Victor Valo, drama technical director, will be composed of Adrienne Reilly, stage manager; Harriet Reich, lighting; Jackie Dermis and Paula Hudson, costumes, and Phyllis Melmon, properties.

Tickets for the play are free and may be obtained from any English or drama instructor, or from the drama office in Arts Hall, Haran added.

ANNA EINHORN appears as Pegeen Mike in J. M. Synge's three-act comedy, The Playboy Of The Western World, which opens tonight.

Kathy Foley, Bob Zamora Cutest Couple At Dance

Kathy Foley and Bob Zamora literally waltzed away with trophies presented them as the Cutest Couple at the Frosh Ball October 22, while an estimated 250 couples looked on.

Prizes awarded the runners-up were dinner for two at Joe's, the hungry i, the Purple Onion, and the Hyatt House. The Cutest Couple won an evening of dining and dancing at Bimbo's 365 Club.

The manner of selection by the panel of student and faculty judges was such that the 20 couples entered in the contest paraded the dance floor, so that by a process of elimination, five remaining couples would stand as semifinalists.

The winners were photographed as they received their prizes.

Inept Students Face The Music

Of the 8600 students enrolled here, 1200 students are on probation from last semester, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of student welfare.

These 1200 students must raise their grades to an acceptable level or be dropped from the college, Brady said.

In addition to the students on probation, there is another group of about 1500 students who received a grade average of below C- for the first midterm. Brady announced that these students would receive letters to report to him to determine the cause of their bad work and to try to raise grades.

There is also another group of about 100 students who have received all F's for the first midterm. Most of the students in this group registered but apparently have not attended classes.

Brady now faces the task of reviewing the cases of each student on campus to determine their achievements.

And, according to the college calendar, today is the last day to drop a course without penalty.

Post Office Cuts Down On Help For Christmas Season

New hiring regulations, which were recently announced by the Postmaster General and the Civil Service Commission, have drastically reduced student job opportunities for Christmas work in the Post Office.

According to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, very few new employees will be hired for the 2300 jobs available.

Amori added that the Post Office jobs are the most sought-after Christmas jobs for male college students, because of the high pay of $2.29 per hour. As a result, he said, many students will be hard-pressed to find jobs this Christmas.

The new hiring regulations provide that first consideration for the Christmas jobs goes to veterans, second preference to last year's workers, and third consideration to those applicants who have already passed the Civil Service Post Office examination which are scored in Washington, D. C.

After the above three categories have been exhausted, the remaining jobs will be given to new applicants, who must then pass the Civil Service examination.

Amori explained that the regulations were passed to speed up mail handling and cut personnel costs, by using fewer, more experienced employees.

He added that all the students who worked satisfactorily for the Post Office last year should have received a notice from the Postmaster inviting them to return this Christmas. Students are expected to reply immediately if they are interested.

Other students interested in Post Office jobs can file for them in S-188.

The Gem's Pearl Anniversary

Rams Threaten UC 'Status' In 1962

By Mike Smith, Managing Editor

For quite some time, one of the things City College students were proudest of was the fact that they represented the only two-year college which had a soccer squad in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference competing against such teams as University of San Francisco, Stanford, San Jose State, San Francisco State and the University of California.

By 1962 the soccer squad, coached by Roy Diederichsen (who had just led the tennis team to its first state title in the same year) had gained national fame as being just about the best college soccer squad around. In the four years previous to 1962, the Ram booters had either won or tied for the NCISC title.

At the close of the '62 season, the University in Berkeley had succeeded in its second attempt to throw the Rams, who had tied with Stanford for the title, out of the NCISC.

The California people claimed that soccer was a major sport at their university, and to continue playing a "junior" college would "Jeopardize" their program.

If this were not bad enough, in 1964 the mighty golden bears were to ask this college for the soccer trophies it had won in the NCISC. The mighty golden bear request was summarily and flatly denied.

As the 1960's rolled along, the changing times affected the college and its paper. Late in 1964, the Beatles were invading the nation; but they were not alone.

One of the shaggy-hair group's biggest competitors is the Dave Clark Five. In the Fall Semester of 1964, Guardsman Editor Fred Wales obtained an "exclusive" interview with Dave Clark and his gang when they were in San Francisco for a Cow Palace engagement.

The interview was printed only in The Guardsman.

However, the paper's exclusive stories of on-campus "activities"-received a great deal of competition during the Spring semester of 1965. The competitors were the local newspapers, television and radio stations; and the "activity" was a free speech type movement by two newly formed groups called ROC (Reform On Campus) and ACT (Active Campus Today).

Eventually the ACT organization disappeared from the college for violating campus rules and ordinances. However, ROC went on to run a presidential candidate in the Associated Student elections — and City College soon gained an on-the-campus free speech platform which was construcyed in front of Smith Hall.

ROC's opponents, two old political parties of the college, United Student Party and Student Representative Party, united forces to defeat the ROC presidential nominee. The Guardsman was there covering the whole event—but so was just about every major news media in San Francisco.

The year now is 1965, and The Guardsman is still recording the events of the college and its history. At this writing the Ram football squad is undefeated in the Golden Gate Conference—and if it can go all the way it will be the gridders' first title since 1957.

Coach Diederichsen's soccer squad appears to be headed for its third successive state soccer title; and last year coach Grover Klemmer's golf squad won its first championship in ten years.

Last month a new group, City College of San Francisco Committee for Republicanism applied for on-campus recognition. The application was accepted. A week later, ROC was warned by Student Council to stop illegal campaigning.

(This concludes a series of six articles of 60 semesters of City College and its newspaper. Thirty years is a long time, but this gem is shooting for a golden anniversary, and who knows, The "G" might be around to celebrate a centennial anniversary.)

Simpson Sets Record As Rams Win

Comets Dimmed, 36-8, As O. J. Scores 24 Points

By Randy Koernig

O. J. Simpson shattered a Golden Gate Conference scoring mark last Friday night as the Rams scattered Contra Costa's Comets, 36-8, at Richmond High. The victory left the Rams with a 5-1 mark for the season while boosting their league record to 4-0 with three games remaining.

Simpson, the dynamic halfback, scored four touchdowns, good for 24 points, thus erasing the previous GGC single game scoring mark of 18 points which Simpson held jointly.

Simpson is also currently tied for the national scoring lead among the junior college ranks as both he and John McGaffie of Laney College have tallied 72 points on the year.

San Francisco started out the contest in usual form, taking the opening kickoff to midfield and moving 50 yards in nine plays with Ron Fassler going over for the score from two yards out. It took the Rams only 5:16 to get their initial touchdown.

Simpson scored his first touchdown of the night late in the first quarter as he capped a 78-yard drive by bursting over from the one. Bill Gianquinto then threw to Eural Smothers for two points.

With the San Franciscans leading 14-0, the Comets' offensive attack came to life as the East Bay team drove to the Ram five yard line before the defense dug in and kept them from a score. On the first play after the Rams took over at the five, Simpson took a handoff, danced through the Comet defensive line, then rambled 95 yards to paydirt.

Just before the intermission Simpson scored his third touchdown of the ballgame as he scored from three yards out to give the Rams a lead of 28-0. The play capped a 78-yard drive.

Contra Costa finally got on the scoreboard in the third quarter as they sustained a drive which ended with fullback Jack Hayland punching over from the four. Halfback Jack Kish then added two points via a running conversion.

Later in the third quarter Simpson put the lid on all scoring for the contest as he ended another sustained Ram drive by scoring his record-breaking points from three yards out. Bob Lee then passed to Dwight Tucker for two and the score stood at 36-8.

Statistically, the Rams were something just short of awesome. They rolled up 19 first downs to Contra Costa's 14. However, the yardage statistics were far from close as the Rams totaled 515 yards, 310 of them on the ground and the other 205 via the air.

By comparison, Contra Costa netted only 229 yards, getting 117 rushing and 112 passing. Most of the Comets' rushing yardage was stacked up on long runs by their very fleet backs.

The game may not have been as close as it was had it not been for penalties. The Rams were penalized 13 times for 135 yards.

Changed San Mateo Offense Out To Ruin Local Eleven

City College of San Francisco, in sole possession of first place in the Golden Gate Conference football race, again faces tough opposition in resurgent College of San Mateo, here at 2:30 p.m., Friday.

City College took over first place when Chabot's Gladiators knocked off previously undefeated San Jose City College, 26-7.

A team with a nonexistent offense can cause many headaches for a coach. Just ask San Mateo's Cliff Giffin.

The Bulldogs had scored only 15 points in their first four games of '65. They lost their opener to San Joaquin Delta, 7-0, and followed that with a 14-6 defeat at the hands of Pasadena City College. But the Bulldogs then rebounded with a 2-0 win over Merritt College, and then lost to Diablo Valley, 21-7.

On October 23 Coach Giffin stopped having headaches, at least momentarily. His Bulldogs knocked off Contra Costa, 27-18, and moved into a three-way tie for second place with San Jose and Chabot.

San Mateo's 2-4 record could have easily been 6-0 had the offense started to generate some scoring punch earlier in the season. If the Rams aren't up for the game they can be easily knocked off.

The conference race produced a few surprises last week along with the most exciting game of the year, to date.

San Mateo's new-look offense was led by halfback Bill Laich who scored 18 points to tie Ram halfback O. J. Simpson's former single-game conference scoring record.

In other action, Foothill handed Diablo Valley a 27-22 loss when the Owls scored on a fourth-down pass with two seconds to play.

City College's Rams can conceivably clinch the conference crown if they can remain undefeated until November 12 when they host San Jose City College. If they can then knock off the Jaguars, every conference team except San Francisco will have two losses with but one game to play.

Undefeated Booters Expect To Snatch Title In Friday Finale

"Impressive" best describes the record the Ram soccer team has compiled in the last two years. With this year's team heading into its final game of the 1965 season against the Bulldogs Friday, the team has shown the college the type of soccer they have now become accustomed to.

In 1963 the Rams joined, and captured the newly formed Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference. Their 10-0 season record gave them the conference's first title honor.

A 4-2 triumph against Victor Valley College brought the team and the college its first state soccer championship.

In its second year in the NCJCSC, the Ram 1964 squad again proved to be too strong for the other conference members. Breezing through an undefeated conference record, the team boasted a 12-2 season total.

The Rams also repeated their State championship title bid with an 8-0 dumping of a highly thought of Victor Valley team.

As the 1965 team heads into its final season game, coach Roy Diederichsen feels confident of the team's ability to extend its record to three straight years.

Last year the team defeated San Mateo, 9-2, in its season finale. This year's team holds a 4-1 victory early in the season. The Friday game, scheduled for Balboa Park, figures to be a roughly contested battle.

Looking forward to the San Mateo game, coach Diederichsen noted:

"The deciding game in the conference will be held Friday at Balboa. San Mateo must beat us, in order to tie. We need only obtain a tie. The Bulldogs have lost a 5-6 game to Oakland; but their coach tells me his boys have given him 100 per cent effort."

Of his own team, Diederichsen commented, "I am still not receiving full effort from any member of the squad. In the Santa Clara game I alternated our first and second teams each quarter. The players had a real workout. The final score was 9-0."

The Ram booters added three more victories in a span of five days to run their season record to an impressive 11-1.

The Red and White traveled to Sacramento October 22 and defeated the Cal Aggies, 6-1. In a game the following Monday the Rams disposed of former league member Oakland, 3-0. Last Tuesday the locals romped over the University of Santa Clara by a lopsided score, 9-0.

Leading the Rams in the Oakland conquest were Ram captain and All-American center, Alex Mendieta with two tallies and Tommy Samuelson with one score.

Leading scorer in the Santa Clara battle was Arthur Ganoza, a promising rookie, with three paydirt shots.

The local defense seems to be much stronger since the first Oakland combat and this could be taken as a preparation for the State championship against the Southern California victors.

RA Hosts Bay Area Playday; Students From 11 Colleges Will Join In Competition

By Karen Carlson

A large turnout is expected for the Recreation Association Sportsday to be held here Saturday, according to Pam Maul, RA president.

Miss Maul estimated that 250 students will attend the event. Representatives from Hartnell College, City College of San Jose, College of Marin, College of San Mateo, Cabrillo College, Diablo Valley College, Contra Costa College, Foothill Junior College, West Valley Junior College, and Chabot Junior College are expected.

A busy schedule is planned, beginning with registration at 8:30 a.m., with competition in archery, badminton, bowling, folk and modern dance, tennis and volleyball planned for the morning hours, Miss Maul explained.

Bowling will take place at Westlake Bowl; however, all other activities are scheduled for the men's and women's gymnasiums.

"RA is composed of a number of specialized clubs," Miss Maul explained. "These groups, one for each sport, are joined only by those who like the sport and want to compete in it. Because of this, RA is able to do very well in competition with the other colleges."

Competition will be followed by lunch and presentation of awards in Statler Wing. From 12:30 to 2:30 p.m., the Lively Ones will play for those who want to dance.

Miss Maul commended her fellow officers and the club managers for their cooperation in the planning.

In addition to Miss Maul, RA officers are Phyllis Nabhan, vice president; Gay Kurrell, secretary; Rose Donaldson, treasurer; and Janet Silva, historian.

RA managers and their respective sports are Sharon Harris, badminton; Dave Longa and Miss Maul, bowling; Genaro Jose, archery; Jim Sorplo and Lorissa Diachanesco, volleyball; Sally Moore, folk dancing; Dagmar Bahr, modern dance; and Bob Zamera, social dance.

There is still room for a few more students from this college to participate.

Viking Track Team Shuts Out Rams At Diablo Valley

With its first ten men finishing in order, Diablo Valley massacred a very weak City College team, 15-50, in a cross country meet held October 20 at Diablo Valley.

Once again the San Francisco team was without top runners. Still out was George Ferguson with a pulled leg muscle. Alex Vosher and Bill Long ran in the meet but were suffering from the flu.

Coach Lou Vasquez said, "Diablo Valley was an extremely strong team and shut us out for the first time in recent years." As it turned out, John O'Looney finished as top man for the Rams, a distant eleventh behind Diablo Valley.

Leading the Viking onslaught was Bob Reeves in the time of 16:10. Following in a distant second was Ron Elliot who clocked a 16:49. Dennis Schanz held off George Kennedy for fourth place.

O'Looney's time was 18:04, good for eleventh place. Vosher and Long were second and third respectively, for the Rams, but far behind the pack.

On October 28, the team meets Merritt and Foothill in a triangle meet. Vasquez is very doubtful about the Foothill team. He said, "Since we were shut out by second-rated Diablo Valley, we're in for trouble against first-ranked Foothill."

However, he is optimistic about the Merritt squad. "They are an average team and with some good breaks we can win," he commented.

This week the team will have Clint Wrigley and possibly Ferguson back in action.

The following week the team faces University of San Francisco, Contra Costa and Chabot. U.S.F. is not in the conference, but, according to Vasquez, "We almost have to go out of the conference to win a meet." Vasquez thinks that with all of the runners in good shape the Rams could win the meets with these teams.

Two Intramural Leagues Merge

In intramural action this year, the Fraternity and Independent leagues will be combined into one eight-team conference known as the Fraternity-Independent League, Associated Men Student President Stan Angel announced last week.

However, although this will be only one league, at the end of the year the Independent team with the highest record will vie for the title with the top Fraternity team.

The Club league will be composed of the following seven teams: Ram Ski Club, Newman Club, Guardsman, Sophomore Class, Filipino-American Club, and the newly formed Negro Student Association.

Tonight, November 3, marks the second night of Intramural basketball action. Last night marked the initial opening of the AMS-sponsored activity. The AMS track program is scheduled to start in the near future.

RAMBLINGS

Major Overhaul In Store For Cage Squad

By William Pates

WITH FOOTBALL season but half over, Coach Sid Phelan has already begun his annual reconstruction program for the 1965-1966 Golden Gate Conference basketball race.

Phelan has but one starter returning from last year's starting team and only two other men who played a great deal last season.

This is nothing new to the offense-minded coach who has been faced with the same problem nearly every year with this turnover being especially harmful.

However, there appears to be a very talented influx of rookies who are expected to strengthen the veterans' power.

It is expected that the 1966 club will have greater depth than has been seen in quite some time. With a turnout of better than 45 men, the coach had a good deal of talent to choose from.

Phelan hopes to cut the squad to 20 with a fluctuating "five" moving back and forth between the varsity and junior varsity clubs.

"Many of the men have already cut themselves by not showing up for practice and midterms should take care of the others," the coach commented recently.

Ed Wilson, only returning starter, will be getting a good deal of competition for one of the forward spots from Eugene Williams and several other newcomers.

Charlie Parks, who was somewhat of a disappointment in 1965, has improved and "few people should beat him on the boards this year" Phelan commented.

Willie Jones who lost his starting guard spot to Jim Duggan is "the best floor man" at this time, continued Phelan.

Despite the loss of Henry King and Mike Cahill up front, the Ram club is expected to be just about the same in rebounding strength. The guard positions will be filled by several competent men although none is expected to surpass the play of Rich Henderson.

Before the preseason schedule could even get under way, City College lost the services of an outstanding two-time All-City guard from Sacred Heart, Vance DeVost.

DeVost was a very fine outside shooter as well as being an outstanding floor man and ball hawk.

It is hoped that there will be someone among the tryouts who can fill in.

At this time preseason favorites have not been picked, although the Contra Costans are expected to be stronger than their championship team of last year and Merritt is building a stronger club around its talented Billy Robinson.

AGS Hosts

Local AGS Hosts Conference This Saturday In Cafeteria

The City College chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, California scholastic honor society, will host the northern regional convention of the organization Saturday in Smith Hall.

Among the colleges to be represented at the convention are American River College, Chabot, Foothill College, Diablo Valley, San Joaquin Delta College, Monterey Peninsula College, Allan Hancock College, Sacramento City College, Sierra College, Fresno City College, West Valley Junior College, Yuba College and Reedley College, Wallace Wells, AGS adviser here said.

The convention is being staged in preparation for the State convention, scheduled for April 22 and 23, 1966.

Delegates to the convention will meet in three separate "workshops" for the purpose of discussing problems and making resolutions to aid Alpha Gamma Sigma chapters on the local, regional and state levels.

Lloyd Luckmann, City College's coordinator of instruction, will deliver the keynote address to the convention during the coffee hour at 9:30 a.m. His topic asks, Is The Scholastic Honor Society A Relic Of The Past?

The conclusions reached in each of the workshops will be reported in the afternoon, followed by a general assembly and closing statement by Dolores Talpt, AGS Chapter president at the college.

Anyone with a B average or better, or who has been a member of the California Scholastic Federation in high school is eligible for membership in AGS and is welcome to participate in the coming convention, Wells added.

"Although some 293 students at the college are eligible for membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma," Wells declared, "there were only 30 active members in the organization one week ago.

"Membership has increased somewhat since last week's editorial in The Guardsman," he stated; "five new members have already signed up."

Wells urged interested students to obtain the necessary information concerning membership in AGS from him in S-160F.

Monday Deadline For Registration Of Campus Parties

All campus political parties planning to endorse candidates for next semester's election must register by next Monday, November 15, with the election committee, commissioner Sandy Sager announced today.

Miss Sager explained that three or more persons who wish to band together for mutual support may form a political party which must be open to all Associated Student members.

She said that nomination convention dates have already been set for Reform On Campus and United Students Representative Party. However, if a third party should be formed, the Election Committee will provide a third convention date.

The conventions will be held Monday, November 22 and Tuesday, November 23 from 7 to 10 p.m. at Statler wing.

Independents may seek the endorsement of any campus organization, Miss Sager said.

A candidate must be currently enrolled in a minimum of 12 units and have a 2.0 grade point average by the end of the first midterm.

The elective position and their qualifications as stated in the AS constitution include AS President and Vice President, both of whom need a 2.3 grade point average and at least 42 and not more than 60 units.

Presidents of the Associated Men Students and the Associated Women Students must have completed at least 30 and not more than 60 units with a grade point average of 2.2.

At least 28 and not more than 60 units are required for the Sophomore Class President in addition to a 2.0 grade point average.

Freshman Class Presidential candidates need a 2.0 grade point average and 14 but not more than 27.5 units completed.

There are 14 council seats, seven of which go to sophomores who must have completed 28 but not more than 60 units at the time of taking office.

The remainder of the council seats go to freshmen who must have completed 12 but not more than 27.5 units.

Candidate petitions are due by Friday, December 10.

Vacated Seats Filled At Special Council Session

By Rich Heintz

Two new members of Student Council, Linette Wong and Gary Hoffman, were chosen last week in a special election to fill the last Freshman seats open on council.

Hoffman and Miss Wong were two of five candidates competing for the posts. The others were Glen Fahs, publicity chairman; Christopher Loo and David Lambert.

The minimum of seven votes required to be elected to council was attained by Hoffman, while Miss Wong received eight votes. Fahs received five votes with Lambert getting the remaining vote.

It was a secret ballot election, with only Student Council members voting.

At last Wednesday's meeting of Student Council, an amended resolution to allow political parties on campus "the right to present issues concerning the college campus or student body one week before the party conventions," was passed, 8-7-0.

The vote on the resolution was originally tied, 7-7-0, and required the vote of the chairman, Dennis Sweeney, Associated Student president.

Originally, the resolution, proposed by Lincoln Pain, Student Council member, read that the political parties on campus should be allowed to present issues to the student body throughout the entire semester.

But an amendment proposed by Jim Soletti was passed, 7-6-1, changing the time period to one week before party conventions.

AMENDMENT DEBATED

Debate over the amendment, which lasted close to 40 minutes, or almost the entire meeting, ranged from topics on student apathy to "dictatorship" and "coeducational locker rooms."

Pain felt that if the resolution was amended, it would be "ineffective."

He also declared that the council members "sit here like fourteen little dictators. We must hear how the students feel on issues all through the semester."

Soletti supported the amendment, saying, "The resolution which Lincoln (Pain) makes is good, but first of all, debate of issues all semester can hurt good campus issues which might be voted down just because of friction between the parties."

"And secondly, any student has the right to come to council and discuss issues. Discussion of the issues all semester by the parties is not necessary."

FREE LUNCHES, LOCKER ROOMS

Bruce Fisher, a member of council, also argued that "many of the students just don't care and are just interested in getting grades, and this to them is an education. Let's face it, all that most students want are free lunches and coeducational locker rooms."

Soletti also argued, "The vehicles for student voices are already present. There are three alternatives which any student has. He can talk at the free speech area, come to a council meeting or write a letter to the Editor of The Guardsman.

Sandy Sager, election commissioner, announced that there will be a special election held on Wednesday, November 17, for the Sophomore seat open on council, with petitions due Wednesday, November 10.

Miss Sager added that those who have filed petitions for sophomore seats open earlier this semester need not file again.

LATE ELECTION QUESTIONED

Tom Cloney, council member, asked why the election was going to be held so late, "almost three weeks away, since it doesn't make much sense with the semester almost half over by then."

"There is a rule in the Associated Student Constitution which states that notice of an election must appear in The Guardsman two weeks prior to the election," Sweeney explained.

This election makes the third special election held this semester.

Sweeney appointed a committee to look into the gas mileage problem.

The gas mileage problem is concerned with how much the AS should allow for traveling expenses. The present rate is 7 cents per mile.

Administrators Find Proposals Unsatisfactory

By Gene Rosendahl

Two proposals were rejected by the deans of instruction and the deans of student personnel at the Northern California Junior College Administrators Convention, held at Fresno, October 26 to 28.

The first proposal rejected by the deans concerned the changing of title number five of the administrative code, which presently places two-year college students on probation if their grade point average falls below a 1.5.

If passed, the proposal would have placed students on probation if they fell under a 2.0 average.

The deans voiced a strong protest against the new proposal and expressed satisfaction of the present title number five. Some of the colleges represented indicated they had tried the 2.0 standard, found it unsatisfactory and had abandoned it.

The other rejected proposal concerned the closing of the two-year college "open door policy" to high school graduates. This proposal would have called for admission of high school graduates only in accordance with test results such as the A.C.T. or E.T.S. (college board tests).

Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction here who attended the convention, voiced his opinion on the new proposals.

"It's still up to the State Board of Education concerning the passing of these proposals, but our feelings are against the changes," he said.

COO Varieties Set For Friday

The Council Of Organizations will hold its talent show this Friday. The theme chosen is Fall Variety.

Tickets have been on sale since last Friday at the Silver Pole, Bungalow 5 and by individual salesmen appointed by COO.

Tickets are 75 cents with an Associated Student Card and $1 without, according to Terry Faulkner, COO vice chairman.

Final auditions for the show were held Monday in the theater, with all attending members of COO serving as judges. Those trying out were sponsored by campus organizations, although persons participating in the acts did not need to be students.

Litter Plea Effective

The litter clean-up rally of October 28 achieved the purpose for which it was called, according to James Wyatt, student government adviser.

The sole purpose of the rally was to focus attention on the fact that after every rally, a great amount of litter on the lawn gave the campus a very bad appearance.

A litter committee, largely responsible for the clean-up, includes Glen Fahs, Lana Tershy, Cynthia Colt, Linda Castro and Melvin Casali.

"We feel, however, that it is not the job of a committee or the custodians to clean up this area. It is the job of every student to clean up after himself," Wyatt said.

There was an agreement made that if the results of the rally were not satisfactory, the next rally would be cancelled or postponed.

"The response was excellent," Wyatt commented. "The place was virtually spotless."

Wyatt believes, however, that there will be a tendency to slowly, but surely, backslide into the original situation. "We will, therefore, keep emphasizing the problem of clean-up each week," he stated.

In the future students will be urged, after each rally, to clean up their area before leaving the lawn.

Classes Suspended For Veterans Day

Classes will be suspended tomorrow in observance of Veterans Day.

November 11 marks the 47th anniversary of the cessation of hostilities in World War I and of the signing of an armistice between the Allies and Germany.

Immediately after the war, November 11 was set aside by the United States, Great Britain and France as a day of remembrance for those who had given their lives in the war. It was called Armistice Day.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed a bill June 1, 1954, designating November 11 as Veterans Day and proclaiming it as an occasion for honoring veterans of all wars.

Classes are scheduled to resume Friday, November 12.

Carmine Meyer Wins Best-Dressed Coed Competition

Eight hundred women students attended The Lady From F.A.S.H.I.O.N. November 4, in Smith Hall when Carmine Meyer was selected Best-Dressed Coed for Fall, 1965.

Runners-up for the contest were Shirley Chin, Cynthia George and Joanne Mavromantis.

Also receiving recognition at the event was Marilyn Boynton, who achieved the highest grade point average for the first midterm period. The Inter-Sorority Council Scholarship Award is given biannually to a new woman student. Miss Boynton, who is majoring in letters and science, will have her name engraved on a perpetual trophy and was given a charm bracelet.

Previous recipients of the award have continued to receive recognition. Kathyrn Kafafian, who won it in 1961, made Phi Beta Kappa at the University of California last spring.

Joan Brannigan, 1963 ISC winner, was awarded the Dorothy Mercer Memorial Scholarship for English majors at University of California at Berkeley. Rosemary Casdin and Diane Werthen received the Mercer award last year.

The semiannual Associated Women Student fashion show and tea were enjoyed not only by City College women. Three hundred high school seniors and their advisers also attended. All public high schools in the city were represented.

The next major activity of AWS is recognition awards night, scheduled January 7 in conjunction with the Recreation Association and ISC.

Guardsman Rates First Class In ACP Evaluations

Associated Collegiate Press rated the Spring 1965 volume of The Guardsman in the First Class category in its semiannual evaluations.

The ACP rates papers on news coverage, news style, editorials and columns, sports, headlines, makeup, photography and typography, according to Don Patten, Fall 1965 editor in chief. In the 48 semesters The Guardsman has been a member in ACP it has received 32 All-American ratings and 16 First Class ratings.

The low score for All American was 3800 points, while the spring Guardsman received 3600 points which put it high in the First Class division, which had a low score of 3300 points.

The editorial board members for the Spring, 1965, volume were Patricia H. Dutter, editor in chief, now at San Francisco State College; Peter Dorn, news editor, now feature editor of The Guardsman; Michael Smith, sports editor, now managing editor; Michael Barber, feature editor, now at State; Ivan Temes, staff editor, now on the Examiner staff, and Donald Patten, managing editor, now editor in chief.

ACP headquarters are at the University of Minnesota.

Horticulture To Make 'Annual' Arts Hall Landscaping Effort

THE HORTICULTURE DEPARTMENT has decided to try, for the third time, the job of landscaping the area around Arts Hall and needless to say, this part of the campus is an eyesore with regard to landscaping.

The Arts Hall and horticulture complex is the newest building development on campus, but the grounds surrounding it remain the same as they did long before anything was located in this area. As such, the location takes on a vacant-lot appearance.

This project of landscaping is the third try for the ornamental horticulture department. The two previous attempts were foiled by negligence and lack of care for new plantings during the summer months. Unfortunately, vandalism was another of the contributing factors for the lack of landscaping.

It would seem logical that students from the college were not responsible for this thoughtless behavior. Surely, college students are not so immature that they must resort to childish valdalism for a pastime.

It is hoped that this third attempt at beautification will be the final, and successful, time that this project must be undertaken.

There is no reason for plants to die simply because they have not received the proper care and attention.

Apparently, steps are being taken so that next summer this situation won't present itself. However, the problem of vandalism is somewhat more tricky. This is indeed a distressing problem, and a solution cannot be easily reached.

The two other colleges in the city do not seem to have this problem. Apparently, the tendencies toward useless destruction occur only within the local public school system.

No one here attempts to venture a guess as to why this is the case, but whether the vandalism is from local sources or not, the overall picture of the college certainly can't be complimentary.

'Cause Every Litter Bit Hurts

THE RALLY held two weeks ago on campus starring the Flintstones came to a very successful end. The rally area, which in the past has been left in a deplorable condition by students in attendance, was almost totally litter-free, thanks to the constant urging of a few interested students.

A special litter committee was recently formed to cope with the pressing problem on this campus. Quite obviously, this organization was much more than simply a get-together of students who did nothing but talk.

Action was taken and results were obtained. Those responsible for this feat are to be highly commended as is the entire student body. This was truly a job well done.

Looking back over the first few weeks of this semester and the excessive litter problem it presented, great strides have obviously been taken in the right direction.

Pride in one's campus seems to be coming back strong to this college and all should have a feeling of accomplishment.

College Sends Out Midterm 'Greetings' To 50 Students

"The President of the United States wishes to extend to you his greetings," is an often read phrase for many these days.

Some of the men students at City College have already received this letter—only camouflaged in a different form.

There are 950 students, men and women, at the college this semester who failed to maintain a 2.0 grade point avcrage for the first midterm period, according to John Brady, coordinator of student welfare.

"These students will be sent a letter of warning, requesting that they come to my office," Brady explained.

The warning states that if the student continues his low average for the rest of the semester, he will not be permitted to return to the college next semester.

Any man student who can read between the lines can almost see the barracks.

A student in this situation would have to face the readmissions board in order to return to the college. Of the total number notified, 211 students have already appeared before the readmissions board and are attending the college under individually specified conditions set by the board.

"Considering that this semester has the highest enrollment of students, this (the total number of letters sent out) is good," Brady stressed.

Perhaps even with the larger enrollment, the chill of the draft has caused that many more students to shut the doors to their rooms—and to study.

The Aloha—Harmony Cash Cannot Buy

By B.T.

THE CURE-ALL for this chilly November weather is a trip to Hawaii, land of crazy surfing, bikinis, hula girls and lazy living.

They just made a big to-do about celebrating Aloha Week(s) with the usual outrigger canoe races, pageantry, parades, traditional dances, flowers, music, food and drink. But every week is really Aloha Week in Hawaii.

Enjoy and relax, but take lots of money. Pebbles and glass beads just won't do. No camping is allowed, except upon official camping beaches. There is a vagrancy law.

There are no billboards, nor are there quaint little donkeys to guide tired tourists on dirt roads. There are car rental agencies, busses, tours, road maps and freeways.

Gambling is verboten.

Road maps are a must. Like Southern California and its housing project emphasis, where orange groves are being eliminated to make way for more "little boxes," Hawaii is the same-o, same-o.

However, Hawaii has millions of termites that give the wooden structures the go-for-broke, chew-em-up treatment. Pest control is a big industry in paradise.

A maze of one-way streets in downtown Hololulu is sometimes very confusing. Also, hundreds of parking meters now line up like little soldiers along the sidewalks.

Natives and wiser tourists shop at the huge new shopping centers outside of downtown Honolulu. These centers include huge supermarkets with cut-rate bargains, and big discount houses that sell everything from dried squid to color television sets.

Some tourists are disappointed to see that Hawaii, on the surface, is but an extension of California, only with a predominantly oriental population. It is no different, they say, except for the outrageous prices.

Yet they return, time and time again. Why? Because they see in Hawaii something that money cannot buy—the Aloha—the harmony that exists among the races and the outsiders who are WILLING to assimilate.

They see that there are no ghettos. They see a racial awareness, but not the painful race prejudice that exists in some states. Early in youth, a native of Hawaii learns how to differentiate between each race.

He learns to infuse the culture and habits of all nations. He grows up in a world that is a mixture of worlds. This he accepts without question, because it is a part of his environment.

Yet he is action-oriented, in a way, fiercely loyal to his people and land. Perhaps statehood has improved the economic situation, but they see that it has not taken away one ounce of Aloha.
